West selected the diamond 4 as his original lead. Declarer refused the finesse as one of his high clubs would take care of the diamond Q. He therefore won the first trick with the diamond A and cashed his three clubs, tossing the diamond Q. Then the spade 9 was led and West, reading it for a singleton and East for four, went in with the K. He had no better return at that point but another diamond, which South ruffed. This was followed by a spade ruff in the South and a diamond in the North.

Declarer then tried out trumps and played for the drop, capturing the Q. When the diamond J was cashed, declarer had made the slam, although he felt he was not entitled to bid it.

Press Sees Door To Peace As Still Ajar

LONDON, Sept. 28—(CP Cable).—The British morning press, shocked by the violence of Hitler's Sportspalast scpeech, to-day still clung to a shred of optimism.

They noted Der Fuehrer did not change his demand or did not advance the deadline. In the three short days before Oct. 1 they hoped someone might evolve some way to persuade Hitler to take peacefully what Czechoslovakia, France and Great Britain offered him in the plan Prime Minister Chamberlain flew with to Berchtesgaden 10 days ago.

In an ironic referenec to Hitler's speech of "historic significance" the Daily Mail (Independent) observed that he said nothing to halt the drift towards war.

"The British people, led by Mr. Chamberlain will work to the end to avert conflict," the paper said. "But let none mistake this inherent love of peace for weakness. Britain, if she is called upon to defend fredom and justice, will do so with unflinching courage and unconquerable tenacity. Let none doubt either that the British dominions and colonies would rally immediately to the support of the Mother country. A united Empire would fight to the last penny and the last man, and that Empire would once more be victorious."

On to the Danube?

The Times (..Independent) said Hitler did not seem absolutely to have closed the door to negotiations, but asked:

"What are the ultimate intentions of the Nazi regime towards the Czechoslovakian naton? Does the memorandum mean that they are determined to get a stranglehold? Are they seeking to murder the nation because it is in their way? And then strike on, reaching forward to rich prizes of Danubian and Balkan guranaries? Those are the questions which loom so large behind the immediate issue."

Mammoth Orchid

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28—(AP).—One of the world's rarest mammoth orchids—an orange hued bloom with petals three feet long—has been added to the widely known collection of the Missouri Botanical Gardens. Dr. Robert Everard Woodson, Jr., obtained in the Panama jungles from which he just returned. The species known as "Chinelas," has been found only three times in the last century, he said.

RESCUED MAN AND BOY.

SUDBURY.—Police Sergeant Leo Campeux plunged through dense smoke in a home here yesterday without a mask or handkerchief as protection and rescued a man and 12-year-old boy. A burning chesterfield in A. Savard's residence produced the smoke.

Warns Poland

Soviet Russia, through Vladimir P. Potembin, ABOVE, first assistant commissar of foreign affairs, warned Poland to keep her hands off Czechoslovakia. Potemkin served notice on the Polish embassy that the Soviet union would cancel the non-aggression pact if Polish troops invade Czechoslovakia. Some observers saw in the move an indirect warning that the red army would be thrown into action if there should be simultaneous German, Hungarian and Polish assaults on Czechoslovakia.

Fateful Farewell In Godesberg

Tossed For 24 Hours 3 Fishermen Saved

PORT WELLER, Ont., Sept. 28. (CP).—Exhausted after being tossed around on the choppy waters of Lake Ontario for nearly 24 hours, three Port Dalhousie fishermen were brought ashore here today by Captain Tommy Carson of the freighter Coalhaven. The men had been unreported for 20 hours.

Their 31-foot long open boat which had been buffetted by the waves throughout the night was towed ashore and moored in the harbor here. Water which flooded the cylinders caused the breakdown of the engine early yesterday afternoon when the three, Harry Reece, Joe Lenart and Felix Zalus lifted their nets eight miles off Port Dalhousie and prepared to head for home.

Harry Reece said they were picked up by the freighter about 15 to 20 miles off Port Dalhousie.

"If some one had not come along pretty soon it would have been too late. We were just about all in,' he added. Captain Carson fed the trio, who had been without food since yesterday morning. Waves 10 feet high smashed the boat during the night.

Britons Man Office Aircraft Guns, Dig Shelter Trenches In Parks Plan Moving Children To Country

By Pat Ussher
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Sept. 28 (CP Cable).—Britons feverishly pressed ahead to-day with air raid precaution, determined to be ready if the worst came to the worst.

Anti-aircraft guns were mounted on some office and apartment buildings in London.

The building exhibition in London found itself inundated with orders for air raid shelters. One organization reported inquiries exceeded 50 daily. A bigiron and steel ...n ran a prominent double-column advertisement for steel shelters in some papers.

Digging of trenches proceeded throughout the night in Hyde Park, Hampstead Heath, and other open spaces in London.

The safety of school children was the subject of conferences between parents and the school authorities. An official said: "Plans for the evacuation of children under the authority of the London County Council are all ready. Children will be evacuated in school units. The schools will know today from which London station they will set out in time of emergency."

Heavy Call For Gasoline

The demand for gasoline rose sharply, companies reporting they were piled up with orders from garages, particularly in the London district. There has been no hint as yet from the government concerning possible restrictions.

Plans were under way for the removal of art treasures from London galleries in the event of an emergency and the basements of some galleries were strengthened for storage purposes.

Policemen went from door to door with instructions how to darken windows in air raid black-outs. Patients able to continue convalescence at home left hospitals.

Everything imaginable was turned into air raid shelters. Workers sealed the wine cellar at Windsor Castle. They started making a shelter out of the mews of Buckingham Palace. They barricaded railroad tunnels, old caves along the south coast, church crypts, bank vaults.

Plenty Of Volunteers.

In a single night Englishmen sought to prove the boast "We don't need conscription." Sound trucks appealing for "anybody who can swing a pick and shovel" brought men flocking to the parks.

No arrangements were made to feed these people, but they were fed. Women came from neighboring houses with steaming pots of tea and bread and butter. New relays of shovellers took over as each group stopped for rest.

Volunteers in cities reported to public buildings for work on auxiliary fire brigades. In one city, the Royal Engineers got sandbags ready to protect works of art.

In another, workers started painting over street lamps. In a third, light current was reduced by half.

People in London hurried to buy reserve supplies of canned foods, flour and sugar. Rents of country cottages, which normally drop at this time of the year, have gone up.

Movie theatres noted a slump. One play announced it would not open because of the international situation. The play was titled, "Bobby, Get Your Gun."

Narrow Depression In Pavement Marks Course Of Old Flume

A SLIGHT, narrow depression in the pavement across Water street, north of King street, is believed by City Engineer Parsons to mark the course of an old flume water course diverting an outlet from the creek into the river. Persons driving over the strip would hardly notice it, but it has caught the specialist attention of Mr. Parsons. The Sandford Fleming map of Peterborough, drafted in 1846, in the City Engineer's office, indicates that a dam was built across the creek on the north side of King street, and a flume was laid on private property where the Black and J. J. Turner and Sons buildings now stand, and crossing both George and Water streets to Fortye's mill on the bank of the river at the foot of King street. There was a wharf at the east end of Charlotte street, and along the creek from Jackson Park to the river were a cloth factory, a distillery, foundry and several tanneries; and also Spaulding's brewery at Townsend and George streets, opposite Canada Packers Limited.

Another map produced in 1875 designates Point St. Charles as being the property of C. J. Blomfield. On the earlier map of 1846 it was called hospital point because it was the location of a temporary hospital for the care of small pox patients during a severe outbreak in the old town.

Starlings are believed to have carried the hoof and mouth disease into Britain.

'PARADE OCCUPATION' OF EGER, ASCH AREAS RUMORED RESULT OF MUNICH CONFERENCE

Poland Waits Answer By Prague

Deny Note Ultimatum And Hint Benes Favors Revision

WARSAW, Sept. 29.—(AP). — While the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia was being discussed at Munich, Poland awaited to-day a reply to her note sent to Prague Tuesday outlining concrete proposals also for territorial revision to settle the Polish minority question.

The Foreign Office denied reports that the note had anything in it in the nature of an ultimatum.

The note, which proposed a method of reaching a Polish-Czechoslovak agreement, was dispatched in conjunction with President Ignace Moscicki's answer to a letter from President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia. Benes was said by authoritative sources to have agreed "in principuple" to territorial revision.

Roosevelt, Hull Feel Peace Near

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(AP)—President Roosevelt and State Secretary Hull were represented by informed officials today as feeling reasonably confident that some orderly settlement of the Sudeten problem would come from the four-power conference in Munich today.

There was a noticeable lessening of the tension evidenced in United States Government circles earlier in the week when to many there seemed scant hope of averting war.

Officials said the United States would not have a diplomatic observer at the conference, but that the Embassies in London, Berlin, Paris and Rome would keep informed as to its progress.

They indicated the United States would refuse—if it were asked— to accept any responsibilities arising from the meeting such as arranging for the transfer of the Sudetenland, or a portion of it, to Germany and for the transfer of populations.

Munich, Sept. 29 (AP)

HERE'S HOW the four chiefs of western Europe looked today when they arrived for the historic conference:—

Chancellor Hitler—The proud and dignified host, dressed in a Nazi uniform, stepped off the train smiling as he arrived with Premier Mussolini after a ride together from Kufstein station near the former Austrian border.

Mussolini—The Duce's heavy features were solemn and expressionless. He wore a gray Fascist corporal's uniform.

Premier Daladier—Stepped from a plane shortly before noon with set, determined jaws. He rushed through formalities of reviewing a guard of honor and then went to a hotel to rest.

Prime Minister Chamberlain—Received a big ovation of "heils" when he arrived by plane at the same airport a half hour later, he smiled in greeting Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop.

Thamesford Toy Gun Bank Bandit Misses Aide, Gets Run Down Scattering Bills Along The Road

THAMESFORD, Sept. 29—(CP)—Robert Cook, 26, Brantford, was captured and jailed today following his hold up of the Thamesford branch of the Royal Bank with a toy pistol today.

The bandit, who herded the bank staff into a vault and got away with between $1,500 and $2,500, was captured by the teller and a garage mechanic running down the road toward London, more than half a mile from the bank.

He had doubled back after running up the 10th concession from the bank. Police believed he failed to contact an accomplice who must have been waiting with a car somewhere in the vicinity.

He was taken to the Ingersoll jail by Traffic Officer A. Lawrence and Chief of Police Callander of Ingersoll and will appear in Woodstock Court tomorrow to face a charge of armed robbery.

G. E. Hessenauer, manager of the Royal Bank Branch in Thamesford told the story of the holdup.

No Customers in the Way

As the bandit entered there were no customers in the bank. The staff consists of the manager, W. Horne, teller and R. G. Colbert, ledger keeper.

Mr. Hessenauer was standing between his office and the accounting desk when the young man stepped up and ordered him to hold up his hands.

"I mean it, this is a real stick up," were the words as remembered by Mr. Hessenauer.

"He went over toward the tellers cage, still keeping me covered closely but also with the teller within the range of his gun. I told Mr. Horne he had better pay over some money. Mr. Horne did, we don't know how much yet but it was between $1,500 and $2,500.

Moscow Chiefs Suspicious Of Conference

MOSCOW, Sept. 29—(AP)—Russia, watching the four-power Munich Conference from the sidelines, took the pessimistic view today that Prime Minister Chamberlain was only strengthening Chancellor Hitler's hand by attending the parley.

This view was expressed in the Government newspaper, Izavestia, in a Geneva dispatch which assumed added importance because of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff's presence there. The dispatch called the idea of the Munich Conference "monstrous" and said France would pay a high price for her participation.

"Up to now British concessions to Hitler have been torn from the living flesh of Czechoslovakia," it said. "At this conference of four France inevitably will pay for her friendship with England."

In Soviet circles there was a tendency to regard the conference of the heads of the German, French, British and Italian governments as an intensification of efforts by "Bourgeois imperialist statesmanship" to strike a bargain with aggressors at the expense of small countries.

The Soviet position has been that conferences should be for the purpose of uniting peaceful nations against aggressors—not attempting to bargain with aggressors.

Soviet circles took the view that the Munich meeting might satisfy Premier Mussolini as a step to the four-power pact he has advocated.

Port Hope Man Is Held For Robbery

BURK'S FALLS, Ont., Sept. 29.—(CP).— Arrested after a 24-hour search through thickly wooded country around this Northern Ontario centre, a man giving the name of Wilfrid Sheppard, 21, of Port Hope, Ont., appeared yesterday in court at Parry Sound and was remanded until Oct. 7 on charges of robbery and assault.

The hunt started late Tuesday after a man beat and bound 19-year-old Merle Brownlee at Pickerel Lake Camp, nine miles east of Burk's Falls, and fled with $30 from the camp store till.

Jack Ratz, owner of the store, told police the girl had been left in charge of the store while he and his wife drove to Burk's Falls. When they returned they found the girl tied to a bed, badly beaten and with her eyes blackened.

Ratz said Sheppard came to the camp Monday and was put to work doing odd jobs. Ratz told police the girl said Sheppard entered the store Tuesday and assaulted her when she refused to hand over the money in the till.

Plan Aimed To Show Hitler Master Of Territory Predominantly German

Replaces Dictator's Triumphal March Idea Of Army Grabbing Whole District; Four Leaders Continue Second Discussion

MUNICH, Sept. 29 (AP).—A German Government spokesman said tonight the government heads of Germany, Great Britain, Italy and France had practically reached an agreement in their conference on the future of Czechoslovakia and means of assuring Europe's peace.

He said, however, that one difficulty remained: The question of just how quickly and how far the Czechoslovak Government must withdraw its troops from the Sudeten regions in order to satisfy the German demands.

The spokesman said the outlook was fundamentally optimistic. He said two Czechoslovak envoys had arrived late in the afternoon so they might take back with them by air to Prague maps showing the exact plan for the Czechoslovak evacuation.

Chancellor Hitler and the Premiers of Great Britain, France and Italy still were negotiating in the glistening Fuehrerhaus at 8.10 p.m. (2.10 p.m. E.S.T.)

The spokesman said he believed documents embracing agreements which he expected to be reached tonight would be signed tomorrow at the latest.

This indicated the hope that the Prague Government, to which the virtual agreement of Hitler, Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier and Premier Mussolini was to be submitted, might send an acceptance tonight.

LEADERS CONFER ON INTO THE NIGHT

The German spokesman said they might dine together and then go on with their talk.

Conceivably, he added the "big four" might soon turn their discussions over to technical experts to work out the last details, with agreement on main problems achieved.

The spokesman disclosed that Vojtech Mastny, Czechoslovak Minister to Berlin, and a Prague foreign office official named Masarik, had reached Munich from Prague late in the afternoon. He said they would take back with them by airplane maps showing the exact plan of the Czechoslovak withdrawal and the Nazi occupation.

The spokesman, when asked whether Mastny and Masarik had been invited into the conference room, said he did not know but that he presumed they would be informed of the decisions, possibly by some committee.

The main thing, he said, was that Prague must know as soon as possible just what must be evacuated so that the military authorities concerned could make immediate preparations for withdrawal so that no blood would be spilled on either side.

MUNICH, Sept. 29 (APP).—Informed German sources said tonight Chancellor Hitler had agreed the German army would make only a "parade occupation" of the Eger and Asch regions, extreme western Czechoslovakia, on October 1 and 2.

Other sections of the Sudetenland are to be occupied only gradually, these informants said, under a tentative agreement said to have been accepted by the Fuehrer in place of his original intention of having his armies march in Saturday with flags waving.

This token occupation, however, would show symbolically that Germany had become the master of the regions of Czechoslovakia whose population is predominantly German.

This disclosure came as Hitler still was in conference with the Premiers of Great Britain, France and Italy in the parley from which Europe hopes for assurances of its peace.

The German Chancellor and the Prime Ministers of Great Britain, France and Italy parted at 2.45 p.m. (8.45 a.m. E.S.T.) but arranged to resume their discussions, on which hangs the question of war or peace for Europe, at 4.30 p.m. (10.30 a.m. E.S.T.)

NEW PLAN FOR GERMAN OCCUPATION

But during the suspension British officials told of a new plan for German occupation of the Sudetenland that had been submitted and indicated belief it would be accepted.

German official hopes for peaceful agreement were shown when a government spokesman suggested that correspondents come to the Fuehrerhaus, scene of the conference only an hour after resumption of the talks was scheduled.

As the German delegation saw it the following was likely to be the final outcome of the negotiations of Chancellor Hitler, Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier and Premier Mussolini:

1. The German army, with the approval of the other big powers, would enter only the Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia as a demonstration of their cession on October 1.

2. In the so-called doubtful areas, in which population is divided about equally between Sudeten Germans and Czechs, contingents of the British, French and Italian armies would safeguard a plebiscite, from which there would be no appeal.

3. Plebiscites also would be conducted in Czechoslovakia in which the population is preponderantly Polish or Hungarian.

The occupation of the Sudetenland would be gradual.

A German Government spokesman did not know at the moment whether foreign armies — either Polish for the Polish-speaking districts or Hungarian for the Hungarian areas, or British-French-Italian forces—would supervise the plebiscites there.

PLEBISCITE RESULT BINDING ON CZECHS

4. The results of all plebiscites would be binding on the Czechoslovak Government.

5. Germany would become a co-guarantor with the

Little Current, Ont., Sept. 29.

THE WEATHERMAN will have to steer a middle course to satisfy Ontario weather prophets who agree only on one point, that there'll be plenty of snow next winter.

There's no argument there, Manitoulin Island Indians admit, but they don't see eye to eye with the prediction of Rev. A. J. Bruce, Copper Cliff, Ont., cleric recognized widely as a weather prophet, that it's going to be a tough, cold winter with plenty of "40-below" days.

Nature, the Indians say, backs their forecast of a mild winter. Proof: This week's brilliant display of "northern lights"; appearance of strawberries in bloom, dandelions and wild flowers out of season and, topping it all, there has been no gatherings of birds yet for their southern hibernation.

Carolina Tornado Rips Charleston Leaving 22 Dead, 300 Hurt In Visit That Lasts One Minute

CHARLESTON, S.C., Sept. 29 (C. P.).—A tornado hit historic Charleston with sudden and vicious fury at about 8 a.m. to-day, killed at least 22 persons and injured probably 300 more in a welter of wreckage that was spotted throughout the city.

The sudden storm of not more than a minute's duration in any one place, was paced by a torrential downpour as it swept down with devastating destruction in various parts of the city.

Of the 22 reported killed, 15 were negroes. The dead were not immediately identified except these four white persons:

Mrs. Ruth Mehrtens, 26; Irvin H. Mehrtens, three; Hiriam Zeigler, 14, and Floyd Singletary, nine. They were killed when their house collapsed in the twinkling of an eye.

Women In Hospital Under Police Guard

TIMMINS, Ont., Sept. 29 (CP)—Mrs. Marie Roy of Timmins is under police guard in hospital here today after she and her crippled son were rescued yesterday from nearby MacDonald's Lake. No charge has been laid against her.

The woman and her son were dragged from the lake by Baden Powell, Toronto commercial traveler, whose aid was asked by a daughter of Mrs. A. Peltomaki, MacDonald lakeshore resident.

Mrs. Peltomaki told police she saw the woman and her son get out of their automobile after it had stopped on the shore not far from her home. She said they walked into the water.

The son was released after treatment but Mrs. Roy is being kept under observation.

Mobilization For France If Talks Fail

Paris Decree Orders Instant Action; Continues Preparing

PARIS, Sept. 29 (AP) — The French government was empowered by decree today to mobilize the entire nation for war at a moment's notice, should the Munich conference break down.

While Premier Daladier met with Chancellor Hitler, Prime Minister Chamberlain and Mussolini in Munich, the decree appeared in the official journal.

It authorized the government to proceed at its discretion with integral mobilization of man power, industry and finance throughout the nation.

The decree said only "execution of measures contained in the law of July 11, 1938, is authorized" but that law provides for complete mobilization in time of war, or danger of war.

The law also includes general mobilization of armed forces, and Premier Daladier now is in a position to order it when and if he considers it necessary, without further legal steps.

The law brings every citizen in France, men and women, under direct orders of the government and empowers the cabinet to take control of all industrial resources for purposes of national defence.

The bill was passed by parliament last March. It provided for requisitioning the services of all men and women not directly engaged in military service and of any industrial enterprise regarded as essential for the needs of the nation. It also provided for the co-ordination of all economic activity in the hands of a single ministry.

The law effects all French men and women over 18 years.

Peace Drive Squelched

The government used war time police power today to check a campaign for "peace at any price" waged by the Rightist former premier, Pierre Etienne Flandin.

Police ripped down the posters he pasted on city billboards declaring the quarrel between France and Germany over Czechoslovakia was a "despicable pretext" for war and calling on the public to protest.

Issues of the newspaper La Liberte, which reprinted Flandin's appeal, were confiscated and many

Dancer, Ex-Showman Reap Million By Kindness To Old Lady

NEW YORK, Sept. 29—(AP). — It's a story strange as fiction with a typical surprise ending—this true-life tale of how a former assistant theatre manager and a ballet dancer were kind to an eccentric old woman and reaped an estimated $1,000,000 reward.

The woman was 70-year-old Mrs. Edna Morss Allin Elliott, a quaint haunter of film houses who became known as "New York's champion movie fan."

A feminine hermit, she died friendless and alone last Friday in her three-storey brownstone house in West 88th street.

Her will disclosed she had left securities and $80,000 in jewels to Rosalie Spatcher, a ballet dancer, and the residue to William Reilly, former assistant manager of the RFoxy Theatre. They had "helped to make the recent years of my life more pleasant," Mrs. Elliott wrote in her will.

Reilly, whose sudden wealth lifted him from a $52-a-month hospital attendant's post, said attorneys told him the estate was valued at $1,000,000.

Thought She Was Poor

He said when he first met Mrs. Elliott in 1927 he thought she was poor—she wore old-fashioned dresses with leg o'mutton sleeves—and arranged for her to have a front row seat every Thursday when the theatre changed its program. Afterward he would discuss the show with her briefly.

The theatre closed temporarily in 1932 and Reilly lost his job. He never saw Mrs. Elliott again.

Gayest Aurora Borealis In 20 Years Held Omen Of Human Conflict

State College, O., Sept. 29 (AP)

THE MOST brilliant display of Aurora Borealis in the skies in 20 years this week recalled today to those who have studied such things the ancient legend that northern lights forewarn of human conflicts.

Professors Helmut Landsberg and Hans Neuberger of the Pennsylvania State College measured the lights Tuesday night in the college's geographical laboratory and described them as of "unusual proportions."

Dr. Landesberg, commenting on the legend, said:—

"Science is skeptical toward such a belief but there are certain influences in biological events. Investigators have found that about one day after electron showers, such as northern lights, reach the earth the death rate from heart disease suddenly jumps and the number of suicides shows an increase.

Father And Three Children Long Overdue On Boat Trip

TORONTO, Sept. 29.—(CP)—A jobless father and three of his children were reported today eight weeks overdue on a long, leisurely cruise to Newfoundland in a boat built of odds and ends and powered with a $5 second-hand engine.

John Osmond, 16, said today there had been no news of his father, Phillip, his sister, Ivy, 16, and his two brothers, Sterling, 13 and Bert, 11 since they left Eskimo Point on Anticosti Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence about two months ago.

John said he left the party, travelling in a 31-foot craft, at Quebec City nearly three months ago. The little boat, Lydia, is named after Osmond's wife who died eight months ago.

According to sailing men the trip from Eskimo Point to St. John's, Newfoundland's bottle-necked harbor, should take less than three weeks.

Ten Years In Canada

Osmond came to Canada from Newfoundland 10 years ago and until last winter had managed, John said, to keep his family. But things became worse and eight months ago Osmond's wife died.

He decided to return to Newfoundland and being a carpenter, built a boat.

The family left May 27 and their little craft chugged away on the long trip. The decks were laden with the Osmond's few possessions.

"Everything went all right until we got to Brighton Bay," John said. "Then our engine conked out. We had burned a piston at Bowmanville (near Toronto), but I put another one in, but there was no hope for the old engine by the time we reached Kingston. From there on we went by sail.

"Around Cornwall we hit rapids and for a while it was just touch and go. I left dad and the others at Quebec. I couldn't see much sense in me going any farther as I did not think there would be a job for me in Newfoundland. With 25 cents in my pocket I hitch-hiked back to Toronto."

Nazi Chancellor And Duce Talk 70 Minutes Before Others Arrive

Chamberlain Is Given Tremendous Ovation And Asked To Review Guard; Experts See Tough Sledding For Peace

By Melvin Whiteleather
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

MUNICH, Sept. 29 (AP).—Four men in whom lie the hopes of peace for Europe searched today for an escape from the war threats hovering over their conference table.

They were Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain and Premier Daladier of France, speaking for Europe's democracies, and the powerful Nazi-Fascist partners, Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini.

Nazi party headquarters announced the four statesmen began conferring at 1.45 p.m. (7.45 a.m., E.S.T.)

Before that the German Chancellor had been host to his foreign guests at a buffet luncheon in the Fuehrerhaus, his Munich headquarters in which the conference is being held.

Mr. Chamberlain drove directly to the Fuehrerhaus from the airport, not even taking time to go to the Regina Hotel, British delegation headquarters.

EUROPE PREPARES, TAKING NO CHANCES

Even as the conference began Europe was taking no chances that the four would find the way to prevent war.

Before the talks began Hitler conferred privately with Field Marshal Hermann Goering, head of Germany's air force, and Rudolf Hess, Nazi chief of party affairs.

With the conferees were Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, and Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister. Language difficulties were handled by Dr. Paul Schmidt, Hitler's interpreter, and Alexis Leger, French Secretary-General to the Foreign Office.

Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain, the last to arrive, reached Munich by plane at 11.50 a.m. (5.50 a.m., E.S.T.). He received a tremendous ovation as he stepped from his plane

Premier Daladier of France landed in a special plane at 11.17 a.m. (5.17 a.m., E.S.T.), and was greeted by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Premier Mussolini of Italy arrived with Chancellor Hitler, who met his colleagues of the Rome-Berlin axis at the Kufstein Station and talked for 70 minutes with him the rest of the way here They arrived at 10.50 a.m. (4.50 a.m., E.S.T.).

Cheering crowds greeted each arrival Rufolg Hess, Hitler's deputy, went to the Brenner Pass, on the Italian frontier, last night to give the Italian Premier a personal welcome in Hitler's name.

ADOLF SMILES, BUT IL DUCE HAS NONE

Hitler smiled and Mussolini looked solemn as they walked to the station reception room, where they saw bronze statues of themselves amid flowers and red cloth background. Each wore the uniform of his respective movement.

High representatives of the German army, the Nazi party and the Government were present. French and British flags, looking new, and Italian banners, used in previous German-Italian functions, decorated the station. All Munich was gay with decorations.

A military band played, a crowd of nearly 1,000 cheered and a guard of black-uniformed Elite Guards presented arms as Daladier and his aides stepped on German soil. German officials escorted the French mission in four automobiles to a hotel.

Hitler conducted Mussolini to the palace of the Prince Friedrich Karl, where he stopped on his visit a year ago. The British were assigned quarters in the Regina Hotel and the French in the Hotel Vier Jahreszeiten (Four Seasons) Hotel.

Hard Sledding for Peace.

There was an indication that if a peaceful solution is reached in the talks, it would be after tough sledding. A reliable source said German officials were not optimistic this morning, although they hoped for a peaceful outcome.

On the other hand, other informed quarters said President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia last night expressed an optimistic view that the conference would find a solution to the Czech-German problem.

Mussolini was said to be anxious for peace and well informed sources expected him to throw his full influence in that direction, unless his talk with the fuehrer this morning altered that viewpoint.

Chamberlain Reviews Guard

The British premier was kept standing for several minutes in the back of a touring car which took him from the airport, while several thousand Germans, mostly women, gave him a roar of "heils."

Mr. Chamberlain's face was wreathed with smiles when he stepped to the ground to be greeted by Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Ritter Von Epp, Governor of Bavaria and Sir Neville Henderson, British ambassador to Berlin.

A moment later, however, as he was led across to review black shirted SS troopers standing rigidly at attention his smile vanished. With set lip he strolled slowly the length of the guard, looking at each man in the front rank.

Finally he stopped, said a few words of praise through his interpreter to the commander of the guard of honor, and then was escorted to his car surrounded by a cheering crowd.

Amateur photographers among the crowd literally formed a wall of camera lenses around the British Prime Minister, which plainclothes detectives and troops guarding his car did not try to turn them away.

Sits With Ribbentrop

Mr. Chamberlain finally sat down with Von Ribbentrop, who previously had escorted Daladier to his hotel, and left the airport for the city.

A humorous relief to the solemn scene at the station was furnished by the fact that doors to the reception room for distinguished guests were closed so quickly by police that Hitler's personal stenographer and his translator, Dr. Paul Schmidt, could not get through.

They had to leave the station with ordinary people long after the official Italian-German party passed through the police and secret service cordons. Both took the episode in good humor.

Irate Resident Likens Self To The Czechs

An irate resident, claiming the city council is strong on promises but weak on action, brought the Czechoslovakian crisis to his aid when he petitioned the finance committee Wednesday night.

Referring to himself as being "like a Czechoslovakia lost between two big countries," Harry Sowden, George street south, complained once again about loss in property value he claimed to have suffered as a result of erection of a service station.

His cellar has not been dry since the station was built because its land sloped toward his property, he claimed, and wanted to know what the city intended to do because it was to have been erected under supervision of the city engineer by permit. The property's assessment had dropped $300 since the station was erected, he said, and "the city council on the whole has done nothing for me."

Questioned by Ald. McCannan he admitted his cellar had leaked previous to the erection of the station, and that he had dug trenches to permit overflow water to escape, but he claimed the condition is now much aggravated. Ald. R. M. Glover told him that he believed the company will soon level the ground so that the inconvenience will be eliminated. The Mayor and Ald. Glover agreed to approach the company to effect a settlement.

"What about my $300 assessment loss?" asked Mr. Sowden.

"Well, we could easily raise it again for you," cracked Ald. Glover.

Hastings, Sept. 29.

A TANNERY employee at Hastings made a lucky find while on his way to work on Tuesday, but it probably will not do him any good, because he is a teetotaller. A 26-ounce bottle over half full of spirits caught his eye over the edge of the sidewalk at Front and Albert Streets. He did not want to even take a smell of the stuff, so he called a friend who happened near and between the two they agreed it was the real thing.

Prague Agrees With New British Plan

PRAGUE, Sept. 29—(AP).—The Czechoslovak Government announced to-day the acceptance in principle of a new British plan for execution of an Anglo-French scheme to cede the Sudetenland to Germany.

A communique announced that Prague "adopted a positive attitude in principle toward British proposals regarding the execution, by degrees, of delimitation and of transfer of the territories."

The acceptance was made known to Great Britain before the four-power conference opened to-day in Munich. It contained "some reservations," however.

The Czechslovak note did not specify the nature of the new British plan, but it was believed it concerned technical measures for speeding up the cession of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German areas to Germany under an Anglo-French plan that Chancellor Hitler rejected at a conference in Godesberg, Germany, with Prime Minister Chamberlain, September 22.

Tourists Oppose Caging Animals

The Peterborough branch of the Humane Society reports that it has been found that many American tourists are strongly opposed to the practice of keeping wild animals on display at tourist stations and tourist camps. The monthly report of the organization says that recently four carloads of Americans who had intended to spend their vacation in Canada, turned their machines homeward again when they came to a gas station where wild animals were kept in captivity, remarking that they did not care to stay in a country where such practices were allowed.

The inspector has been busy both in the city and surrounding country during the past month, going as far as Hill Head and Warkworth to investigate complaints. Several horses employed in bread delivery here were inspected and where necessary were ordered off work.

Statistics of the month's activities include horses examined, 200; dogs taken to shelter, 8; dogs destroyed, 22; cats taken to shelter, 43; cats destroyed, 42; taken to homes, 1; animals shipped by rail or truck examined, 500; performing animals, 15; complaints investigated, 15; warnings issued, 15; emergency calls, 21; telephone calls, 250.

No Italian Spoken At Munich Parley

BERLIN, Sept. 29.—(AP).—German, English and French were the languages used across the conference table early to-day when Chancellor Hitler, Premier Mussolini, Premier Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain conducted their talks.

Since the Italian Premier has an excellent command of German, no Italian interpreter will be present.

Hitler's English linguist, Dr. Paul Schmidt, who translated during the two Hitler-Chamberlain conferences at Berchtesgaden and Godesberg, will again interpret.

Mussolini also may avail himself of Schmidt's services in conversing with Mr. Chamberlain.

French Ambassador Andre Francois Poncet who has a perfect command of German, on the other hand, has been ordered to proceed to Munich by Premier Daladier.

As the government staked its own hopes for peace on the conference in Munich, Flandin said he would ask a formal question in the chamber of deputies demanding by what right the government violated "liberty of individual opinion." (Parliament is not now in session.)

Many citizens and official circles alike held to the opinion that peace could not be had if the heads of the French, British, German and Italian nations failed to work out an agreement at the conference table.

A Feasible Scheme?

Sources close to the government said France would support at Munich a plan hinging on two points:

1. Germany to be allowed peacefully to occupy small area of Sudetenland as a "symbol" by Saturday, the dealine for receiving all predominantly German areas of Sudetenland set by Hitler, with an international police to assure order and guarantee transfer of the rest of the area, while Czechs peacefully withdraw.

2. German occupation in no sense to be a triumphal march of conquerors, but to be merely a symbol of legal transfer of territory as the result of diplomatic negotiations.

That plan, the government sources said, would satisfy Hitler's demand for immediate protection of Sudeten Germans without placing impossible conditions on the Czechoslovaks and would eliminate the threat of force as a club over Europe.

Despite the real hope apparent for peace, qualified observers emphasized the situation still was very serious.

The government demonstrated this, even after receipt of Chancellor Hitler's invitation to the parley, by calling up reserves of the Echelon Eight which consists largely of flame-throwers, anti-aircraft gunners and similar specialists.

other powers concerned of the independence of what then would be left of Czechoslovakia.

6. Hitler will not insist on the resignation of President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia.

A German spokesman made it plain, however, that Germany expects him to resign voluntarily. "Benes already has his money in Switzerland," he said sarcastically.

7. Germany will reaffirm her guarantee, given by Hitler in his address in the Sportspalast in Berlin Monday night, that no further territorial demands will be made on the European continent.

BLAMES BENES FOR UNDERESTIMATING

Elucidating the German position, the spokesman expressed the belief that Benes had made the same mistake that was made by Kurt von Schuschnigg, the last Chancellor of independent Austria, now prisoner of the Nazis in Vienna.

This was in underestimating the extent of the desire of all Germandom to be united with the Reich of the Nazi regime.

The idea of having international forces police the plebiscites in doubtful areas, he said, was taken from the experience of the plebiscite in the Saar region, as a result of which the Saar returned to Germany in 1935.

As to the regions where the population was overwhelmingly German, he said, there obviously was no need for a plebiscite. He added Great Britain and France realized this. Also, the municipal elections in May and June had shown it.

CREATE STATE LIKE SWITZERLAND

The spokesman said the new, reduced Czechoslovakia would become a permanently neutralized state like Switzerland and Belgium.

Asked whether the question of reparations for damage done by Czechs to property of Sudeten Germans figured in today's talks, the spokesman said, "that's a question for later discussion."

Regarding the German troops' entry into Sudetenland, he said:

"I do hope conditions will be such that they can go in not with steel helmets but with their peacetime caps."

The German army, he said, later would be followed by the Sudeten Free Corps.

Disclosure of the German official idea of a settlement came while the conference was in brief recess. The four had convened in the glistening Fuehrerhaus, Hitler's Munich headquarters at 12.45 p.m. (6.45 a.m. E.S.T.) and began their discussions immediately after a light luncheon provided by the host.

At 2.45 p.m. (8.45 a.m. E.S.T.) Chamberlain and Daladier returned to their respective hotels with their secretaries, evidently for preparation for the later and possibly decisive session of the four-power parley.

CESSION TO GERMANY IS CONCEDED

There appeared to be no further question concerning the cession of Sudetenland to Germany. High German sources said the conference, which opened under the gorgeous pagan panels of the house Hitler built to glorify the birth of his party here, began with that assumption as a basis.

Mr. Chamberlain left his hotel to return to the Fuehrerhaus at 4.26 p.m. (10.26 a.m. E.S.T.) Hitler's brown shirt Nazi guards had to make a narrow lane through the small lobby to permit the British party to leave.

Cheers rolled through the lobby from the crowds densely packed in the street outside. Many of the throng gave the Nazi salute, but still more yelled hearty greetings and kept their hands at their sides.

Mr. Chamberlain appeared in high spirits. He arranged to see Daladier for a brief Anglo-French consultation at the Fuehrerhaus before the leaders of the two democracies reentered the main conference with the totalitarian chieftains. There had been no time for them to meet at either of their hotels.

Daladier Meets Advisers.

Daladier, after a few minutes in his hotel room, went with experts to the hotel dining-room, where six Frenchmen sat at a table in a corner.

The Premier, with his head bent low, talked at length with his aides, who replied in monosyllables.

"Nothing is determined yet," said one of Daladier's aides. "When we go back (to the Fuehrerhaus), we will really be discussing something."

Although Hitler had offered a light luncheon at the Fuehrerhaus, Mr. Chamberlain and his aides had a real British meal of several courses when they got back to their hotel.

"Alliance Means Nothing."

The spokesman who disclosed the official German view of the outcome was asked whether the French might not object to Germany's taking certain Czechoslovak fortifications in Sudetenland in view of the fact that French engineers helped in their construction.

"Do you suppose there are any French military secrets we don't know, or any German secrets the French don't know?" he asked. "In these modern days an alliance with Czechoslovakia does not mean anything to anybody."

The spokesman added the question of overseas colonies also had been discussed during today's opening two-hour meeting, but he did not know how concretely or whether any agreement had been reached.

The spokesmen concluded, just before he dashed back to the Fuehrerhaus:

"I do hope that our foreign guests realized from the heartiness of their reception today, not only that of our officials but also of the population, that Germany wants peace and nothing but peace."

Hastings, Sept. 29.

A TRUCK DRIVER and his companion had an unusual experience here the other day when they succeeded in losing the big van off their truck without even missing it for some time. They were driving through Hastings and at the southerly limits of the town discovered that the superstructure of their vehicle, used for transporting horses, but fortunately empty at the time, had disappeared. Starting back the pair found the missing van in the middle of the bridge in an upright position and blocking traffic. It had evidently struck a girder on the bridge and had been torn from its moorings. The crash must have made a lot of noise but the truckers stated they had failed to notice anything unusual.

"He ordered me to turn off the combination so he could lock us in, two or three times but I told him I would not," Mr. Hessenauer said.

"He jammed the door two or three times and then left, warning us not to get out for five minutes. We gauged his time fairly well and when we thought he was out of the door we dashed out, two going to the back door and one out the front door.

"He was caught at the outskirts of the town. He had gone up the 10th concession and then doubled back toward London and was running along the road when captured," Mr. Hessanauer said.

Cook was captured by the teller, W. Horne and Allister Thon, employed in a neighboring garage. When the bank staff came out of the bank, Thon offered his car and he and the teller overtook the bandit.

As he was overtaken, Cooke is said to have thrown away the money along the road. He also tossed away the large black toy gun which he had used in the holdup.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Sept. 29 (C.P.). — Despite Canadian wheat and flour sales estimated today at 1,000,000 bushels, Winnipeg wheat futures averaged a cent lower with profit-taking induced by optimistic prospects of European peace. At the final bell quotations were 1⅛ to ½ cent lower, October 63¼, November 63⅜, December 62⅝, May 65¾ cents.

Indications that the Czechoslovak-Sudeten German problem would be solved at Munich caused Liverpool to close three to four pence lower.

Cash wheat spreads for top grades Red Springs were ¼ to ½ cent better. Coarse grains were steady near the close.

Orange Corners Girl Honored

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ORANGE CORNERS, Sept. 29. — More than one hundred friends gathered at Brailey's Hall on Friday evening to present a miscellaneous shower to Miss Olive Hutchinson and Stanley McCall, whose marriage takes place this week. Dancing was enjoyed during the evening, splendid music being provided by the Monaghan Mountaineers. Accompanying the many lovely and useful gifts was an appropriate address read by Miss Jean Fowler.

On behalf of his fiancee and himself, Mr. McCall thanked their many friends for the gifts, also those who were responsible for the gathering and entertainment.

After supper the guests were asked to pull the pink streamers at their places, the bride-elect pulling the one that disclosed the gifts, for which she made a suitable reply.

Fortunes were told by Mrs. Walter Magee and games were later enjoyed, as well as a mock wedding ceremony. Miss Mildred Casey took the part of the bride, Jane McConnell the groom, and Mrs. George Tully the officiating clergyman. Guests present included Jane McConnell, Olive Hutchinson, Hilda Howden, Oda Howden, Cora James, Mildred Casey, Hazel Casey, and Kay Tully.

He Would Not Quit

When it was stated in this same space in yesterday's paper that there was still hope of averting world war we admit there was not much confidence that that great hope might be realized. Everything seemed to indicate it could not be so.

The words of Premier Chamberlain kept the dim light from going out. He had negotiated and failed; again he had negotiated and failed. He had not secured the great treasure for which he had searched. But he kept on hoping and he said so. We believe he kept other people hoping. It seemed that he refused to believe that the thing he desired more than anything else in the world was going to be finally dashed from his reach.

At the moment we are still hoping, trusting and praying that the awful thing may pass from us.

The strain on Premier Chamberlain in recent weeks must have been terrific. He is not a young man nor is he possessed of a great reserve of physical energy. It was not as though the problem with which he was dealing was something which he could place to one side at the end of the day's work. It would follow him; it would possess him day and night and what rest he would secure would be the sleep of utter exhaustion. God bless Chamberlain! May that for which he strives and from which he will not be turned—peace—be his to grasp and to hold.

No Contest Needed

Dr. R. J. Manion, leader of the Federal Conservative party, has expressed willingness to accept nomination for the London riding. It is the expressed wish of Prime Minister King that there should be no Liberal opposition in the field, but that of course is something which will have to be settled by the Liberals of London. There is a C.C.F. candidate in the field now and he says plainly he has no intention of dropping out.

In the general election of 1935 London made political history of a sort by having no less than seven candidates. There were actually three Liberals in the field, and J. F. White, who had been the sitting Conservative member for 14 years, failed to get the nomination and ran as a Reconstructionist. There was but one official Conservative candidate, F. C. Betts, and he won by a substantial count. His death while on a fishing expedition near Ottawa makes the by-election necessary.

No matter what happens Dr. Manion ought to be able to win that seat if an election is forced. Any party through its candidate has a right to force an election, but we see no particular reason why that right should be exercised at the moment. London has gone Conservative for the last 30 years and since Confederation only four times have Liberals won and always by small majorities. The sensible thing, considering that the major portion of the life of the present parliament is already spent, would be to allow Dr. Manion to have the seat without a contest.

Grasping For Dollars

A suit which has been hanging fire since 1934 is finally having a hearing in Federal Court at Chicago where promoter Ivan Spears is asking damages of $1,000,000 because he failed to get his hands on the Dionne children shortly after they were born so that he might place them on exhibition at the Chicago Fair of four years ago.

The children were born on May 28, and Spears had a contract in his pocket by May 31, the paper being signed by Oliva Dionne. There was $100 handed to Dionne at the time and he is reported to have remarked that was more money than he had ever seen in his life. If it had not been for the firm hand of Dr. Dafoe that contract might have been carried out or attempted, and the children with but little life in them would have been hurried off to Chicago for the passing thousands to gaze upon.

That contract makes certain that it was necessary for the government to step in and take complete charge. It shows there were two people who should have been blotted out of the picture as far as responsibility and good judgment were concerned—Ivan Spears and Oliva Dionne.

The Reporters Remained

A case which can be regarded as a precedent in court procedure was enacted in county court at Kingston. The presiding judge had given an order that the court room was to be cleared during the hearing of a case in which he anticipated the evidence would be of character not conducive to the moral welfare of those who listened to it. As a result of that the case was to be tried in camera.

When the court was ready to go on with the case two representatives of the Kingston Whig-Standard were present at the press table. The sheriff acting on the orders of the judge, informed them they would have to leave, and if they did not it would be necessary to have a constable remove them.

Then it was that W. M. Nickle, K.C., retained by the Whig-Standard, submitted a statement showing that under recent amendments to the Criminal Code, newspapers are under penalty and instruction regarding what they may publish regarding such cases, and on that account a line had been drawn separating reporters from the general public. When that argument was presented the ruling of the court was reversed and the newspaper reporters remained.

The plea made by Mr. Nickle is in strict accordance with facts. There is probably not a daily newspaper office in the country which has not on file a carefully-prepared summary telling what the amendments to the Criminal Code mean. It is plainly written that it is not permitted to publish in detail evidence which would prove harmful to public morals, and a newspaper which ignores the warning leaves itself wide open to the penalties attached. When the Criminal Code made those regulations governing newspapers it was clearly evident that it was anticipated reporters would be present through all such cases. The action of the Whig-Standard in securing an actual test of the amended code has produced a certain clarity in the situation which was previously lacking. It can now be regarded as a precedent.

Thirteen Long Years

This we take from a report of the General Council of the United Church in session at Toronto:

"For the first time since 1925 a Presbyterian minister appeared in an official capacity at the General Council of the United Church of Canada when Rev. Dr. Stuart C. Parker last night brought greetings from his church."

And from 1925 to 1938 is a long time. As we turn over calendars we call it 13 years.

The reason for it we do not know, but the dull fact is there—for 13 long years there was no official visitation between two great bodies of Christian people.

And it is to these bodies that people look for spiritual guidance and for something better than the world has to offer.

We are glad that some person has at last broken open the long closed path and we can only express the profound hope that the path will now become well marked by being trodden upon by many feet in both directions.

It Was Not Big News

Some newspapers placed very large headings on the news from Ottawa saying that the Canadian Government had decided to support Chamberlain. Really there was no particular reason for that. We doubt if any person seriously considered any other course would be taken.

For days there had been an incessant bombardment of Ottawa calling upon our Prime Minister to do something, and all the time the occupant of our highest public office was more closely in touch with the situation than any man in Canada.

When a crisis arrives we need sane thinking and sensible action. The easily-voiced words of loyalty which come to some lips mean little and are apt to lead to conclusions in which there is no substance. This paper is willing to take the loyalty of the people of Canada as something which has an all-time existence.

When the time came to call the cabinet at Ottawa it was done. If those who were clamoring for action had taken time to weigh all the considerations they would have known that would take place. It was just the natural working out of an orderly plan. Certainly Ottawa stands with Chamberlain. Where else could we stand?

New—But Very Old

The adjective "new" is so frequently applied to Czecheslovakia that it is possible it may clash with the antiquity which is there. It is new as a national unit; it is otherwise old indeed. From notes which were made while listening to an address by an official from the foreign department of the government at a dinner in Prague several years ago, we take these few phrases:

"No collision of the races, cultures and ideas for centuries has been spared this area. Through it passed the Northern frontier of the Roman Empire; over its frontier heights poured the migrating tribes of Gauls, Germans and Slavs. It was here that the incursions from the Orient—those of the Turks and Tartars—were held up. The frontiers as we see them on the map today shook before the battering-rams of conquerors; sometimes these frontiers were thrust forward to the shores of the Baltic, and again down to the Mediterranean. There were the Hussite wars in which a nation of peasants armed with flails succeeded in defending themselves against the whole world.

"The old Czech state has already marked and passed a thousand years of existence. It is a state older than that of William the Conqueror. It is over 600 years since Prague University was founded and it had at one time 10,000 students. It is the oldest university in Central Europe, and yet it is a tragic fact that as far as the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries are concerned the history of this land in cultural attainment was blotted out. At the time Voltaire was writing this nation did not even possess spelling books for its children. Not until a hundred or so years ago did there come a time when the Czech language was revived and we began to write in a tongue that had been dead for 200 years through literary neglect."

It is probably correct enough to refer to Czechoslovakia as a "new" republic but even a cursory perusal of the facts contained in the historic reference given here indicates just how old and battle scarred the place actually is.

He Has No Home

There is something tragic in the way in which families become widely scattered. There is a young fellow Roy Lovett in the hands of police in St. Paul, Minn. Some time ago he was arrested at Seattle and charged with having entered United States illegally. That is the charge he now faces in St. Paul. He joined a circus at Port Arthur and when it came to getting across the border he went to a spot where there was no guard and walked over and afterward caught up once more with the circus where he had a job.

Roy Lovett was born in Preston, Ont., and he was there a few months ago working on a relief job. His father lost his job as a civic employee and finding nothing else had gone to England. His step-mother and a brother and two sisters are shortly going to the same place. Meantime Roy waits to see what the courts will do to him. He cannot go home to Preston because there will be no home there. Often enough tragedy steps in when the bread-winner loses his job.

NOTE AND COMMENT

We cannot see how permanent peace can be hoped for so long as the Masked Marvel continues to wrestle in Toronto.

It is estimated that a low-priced car is now selling at about 20 cents per pound. And how those pounds can pound at times!

Farmers of Kent and Lambton are planting more winter wheat this season, as they find it good for feed. When it gets to the dollar market it is also good for the purse.

Peterborough has the largest population in her history. What really matters of course is that the quality continues to remain high as numbers increase.

When the German Fuehrer said that Germany had an air force capable of defending the country against any and every attack he probably added under his breath, "I hope."

Miller Carl of Stirling has a pumpkin which he says weighs 150 pounds. They are thinking of using it for a corner stone when they build the new school house.

Stratford man speaking in Kitchener said the claim that a receding chin was a sign of weakness was all wrong. A man might eventually have a receding chin from bearing down too heavy on the razor each morning.

Dresden man on the 50th anniversary of his wedding said his wife's good cooking was one of the reasons he had lasted so long. That man even if wed for fifty years should now be drafted into the nation's diplomatic service.

Oliva Dionne, father of the quints, attended a banquet in Sudbury, but the affair was almost over before any one was aware of his presence. It might be better for him to travel as the father of the quints rather than as Oliva Dionne if he desires to attract a little attention.

HE STUCK

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Joe started in the grocery store, he used to work there after four, in summer time the same; when he quit school he went to work, just learning things and how to clerk, the job was rather tame.

¶ But Joe was bright and honest too, he found out lots of things to do, and earned a word of praise; when he'd been there six months or so, it came with glad surprise to Joe, for he had got a raise.

¶ Most other boys picked up to go, they used to talk a while with Joe, he'd never get ahead; where they were going the pay was thick, he shouldn't stay at home and stick, but he just shook his head.

¶ They used to come back now and then, all dressed as bright and flashy men, told how they made it go; and things were going real swell with them, they'd see the store clerk now and then, and rather laughed at Joe.

¶ Of course that's forty years ago, I read the other day of Joe, eight years he's been the mayor; he's got a business of his own, and also owns a pretty home, it's quite a swell affair.

¶ And now and then the boys come back, they say things turned a little slack, they drop in at the store; Joe's quite the man in town just now, and folks have noticed too some how—they don't laugh any more.

When Bombs Fell On London City

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

PRIOR to the Great War which began in 1914 the only people who were killed or suffered physical hurts in wartime were the soldiers in the field and the sailors in ships. There had been no thought of machines in the air that would drop bombs, other than in the fantastic mind of H. G. Wells, and, later on, in the minds of advanced military experts. Even at the outset of the World War the people of London did not expect there would be such a thing as air raids on the city. It was only a year or two previously that Bleriot startled the world by flying 22 miles across the English Channel, and the idea of planes heavily loaded with bombs attacking London seemed too fantastic to believe.

Dispatches from London on Monday told how frantic preparations were in progress to protect the teeming population against air raids; arrangements were made for large numbers of the civilian population to be evacuated; trenches and shelters were being dug in gardens and gas-masks were being fitted.

Everybody in London, and in many parts of the East coast of England, who is a little over 20 years of age remembers the air raids. They can never forget them and if war comes again the next raids will be a thousand times wore. Raids were made on London by day as well as night, although night was the favorite time just when people were going to bed, usually after 11 o'clock, and in the long run several thousands were killed or injured.

The first raid on English soil, which was the first time an enemy had killed an Englishman at home for hundreds of years, came a few weeks after war broke out, when the city of Southend, near the mouth of the Thames, was bombed. That attack was by a Zeppelin. A few nights later a Zeppelin dropped bombs on Shoreditch and Stoke Newington areas of London, took many lives and destroyed much property. But so large is London that the vast majority of the population knew nothing about it at the time, there being no anti-aircraft defences and therefore no firing at the raiders. Reporters rushed around to get the details but the censor quashed all newspaper reports then and on all subsequent occasions. Press Bureau statements merely said raiders had been and that the number of casualties were so-and-so. The object was not to let the Germans know where their bombs had fallen.

LATER ON, raids were by Zeppelins and airplanes. They came on dark cloudy night and then switched to moonlight night so that they had some idea where they were. Just prior to and for a short time after full moon, Londoners had the jitters expecting raids. The Germans on moonlight nights could follow the Thames which shone in the moonlight, and they also had an excellent landmark in the Crystal Palace which, being a mountain of glass, was a bright and unmistakable object. That landmark will not exist for them now; the Crystal Palace was burned to the ground about 18 months ago. Warnings of coming raids were given by Boy Scouts who rode through the streets blowing bugles. When the raiders had gone the Scouts went out again blowing the "All Clear." All lights were turned out in homes, factories, etc.; windows had to be covered at nights with strips of black paper where the blind did not cover, and the street lamps were painted black, only a little bit at the bottom giving any light at all. A white line was painted on the edges of the kerbs to let people know where they were. Tens of thousands of people crowded down into the subway stations, but most people just stayed quietly in their homes in fear and trembling. Those who were remote from the areas of attack went into the streets to watch the battles.

In course of time defences greatly improved. The defence of London started away down on the coast. The balloon system was tried then but only on a small scale and with what result the public never knew. Many planes and a few Zeppelins were brought down or driven back, and on two occasions Londoners saw Zeppelins fall in flames. Guns on motor trucks thundered through the streets; searchlights picked out the raiders, and civilians had the exciting experience of seeing shells bursting in the air and shrapnel fell around them.

It is to be hoped that anti-aircraft defences are more than a match for bigger and faster bombers.

WHERE WILL IT END?

(Brantford Expositor)

NOW that the question of the rights of minorities has been raised in Europe, where will it end? Central Europe is simply a medley of various hostile races actuated by the inborn animosities of centuries. The Czechoslovakian controversy arose out of the demand of Chancellor Hitler, following the absorption of 6,000,000 Austrians, that the Germans in the Sudeten area of Czechoslovakia, numbering 3,500,000, should be placed under German rule and annexed to the Reich. Then there are more than 700,000 Hungarians living in Czechoslovakia subject to Czech rule. In addition, there are 500,000 Ruthenians.

But that is not all. There is a Ukraine minority of 7,000,000 in Poland. This is exactly double the number of Germans living in Czechoslovakia. If Poland demands the surrender of 100,000 Poles in Czechoslovakia, what is to be done about the Ukraine minority in Poland? This same situation exists to a greater or lesser extent in Jugoslavia. It is easy to see, once the cession of territory containing minorities of other races with countries of their mother tongues begins, how it is likely to spread. Central Europe is a hotbed of racial antagonisms that have persisted for centuries. If an attempt is made to redraw the map of Europe the result will be a strange looking affair.

• Canada's Greatest Artist Dead

HORATIO WALKER, R. C. A., probably Canada's most eminent and best known artist, is dead at his home on the Isle of Orleans in the St. Lawrence River near Quebec City. He has lived a large part of his life on the Isle of Orleans where he has devoted his attention particularly to paintings of habitant life.

His father, Thomas Walker, and his mother, Jeanne Maurice, were both natives of England and came to Canada in 1856. The story goes that on landing at Quebec an affable land agent sold Thomas Walker and his brother a plot of forest land at Listowel for all the money they possessed. In any case they settled at Listowel where Horatio was born in 1858. The Walkers got into the lumbering business and made money.

Horatio early showed signs of art talent and his father encouraged him. He was educated at Listowel public and high schools, and in 1873 went to Toronto, where he began the study of art with Robert F. Gagen, then a young painter. Before leaving home Walker's aptitude in drawing was evident, and his first commission was to paint an Orange banner for the local lodge, for which he received the staggering sum of $100.

Visits to Quebec

Walker left Toronto in 1876, visiting the Centennial Exhibition at Philadelphia, and painting some portraits. He then spent a year and a half in Rochester, N.Y., and in 1878 reached New York, where he launched out as an artist, opening a studio there at the age of 20. During an early trip with his father to Quebec, on timber business, the boy had been impressed with the beautiful scenery and quaint life of French Canada, and he then formed a desire to live there. He went up from New York on short sketching hours, which were later expanded into a life work. He sought out the art of other countries and times by visits to the great galleries of Europe, where he was particularly impressed with Turner, Velasques and Michelangelo. Visits to Europe continued to be frequent until 1913.

It was in 1883 that Mr. Walker moved to Quebec and established a home and a studio on the quaint Isle of Orleans. It was then and probably still is, the most unspoiled part of Quebec. It is a glorious spot. He was the only Englishman on the island. There he made his home until his death and probably no English-speaking Canadian so thoroughly understood the habitant.

• Will Canada and U.S. Join?

(Brockville Recorder and Times)

AN OTTAWA MAN has been writing to the American Mercury suggesting the probability of eventual "Anschluss" for Canada and the United States and so confident is he of this taking place at a comparatively early date that he predicts Ontario will cast her 13 votes for Roosevelt if James, son of the Purrent President, succeeds his father as the Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1940.

Other people have been predicting annexation for many years without anything remotely suggesting it actually occurring. Long before Confederation, as a matter of fact, a number of sober and level-headed Montreal business men circulated a petition with that object in view. But Canada has remained British and there is little reason to doubt that she will continue to occupy that alignment unless, of course, there should be a complete Imperial breakdown in which case Canada might prefer independence to absorption by her neighbor. The latter, indeed, seems to have quite enough on his hands without asking for additional territory or trouble.

It is quite possible, however, that future years will witness relationships between Canada and the United States even closer than those which now exist. Speaking the same language, having in large part the same customs and the same tastes, it is inevitable that these two peoples, living side by side, should constantly be drawn more closely together for their mutual interests and protection. But each, we believe, will respect the other's sovereignty and independence and it is unthinkable that "Anschluss," as we understand the term, should ever take place against the wishes of Canadians themselves.

• Mussolini Guessed Wrong Here

(Niagara Falls Record)

MUSSOLINI is giving out a lot of advice to great powers on what to do and what not to do with Czechoslovakia and one would expect to look at his record and find him making a success of conquests by force. But such a picture will not be found in Ethiopia. So far is that country from being safe for civilization that few Italians are going there and now the suggestion is they go to Libya instead. Il Duce has suggested that he will let Jews take their money with them if they go to Ethiopia which, to many people, will be like telling them to go to a still hotter place. Quite frankly, Rome now admits Ethiopia has been a failure from the point of view of a successful colony.

According to a dispatch to a New York newspaper, the Italian government has given up all plans for Ethiopia, for the time being at any rate. The country isn't fully pacified yet. It won't be pacified until the natives have been secured in the possession of their own lands—and there happens to be about twice as many of these natives as the Italian high command had figured.

In addition, the riches that Ethiopia possesses aren't the kind that can be gathered quickly. General Attilio Teruzzi, undersecretary for Italian Africa, remarks that it will be years before the country can be made ready for colonization.

So the colonization campaign is off, and the government is trying to get the people to think about colonizing Libya instead. Which leaves the ordinary Italian who paid for the war sitting right back of the eight-ball, as nearly as it can be figured out from this distance.

It's easy to be wise after the fact, of course. But it doesn't hurt to point out that that sort of thing is what a nation inevitably lets itself in for, when it gives up trying to think and turns all its problems over to a military dictator to solve.

The dictator is certain, sooner or later, to look for some "adventure" that will make people think that their troubles are being taken care of. And the adventure is very likely to end the way this Ethiopian conquest is ending—in general disillusionment.

RELIEF—NO VOTE.

(Aylmer Express)

AT THE ANNUAL meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association in Toronto, we understand that Reeve Taylor, of South Dorchester, will submit a resolution giving authority to municipal councils to dis-franchise all recipients of relief within Ontario municipalities. The situation in some municipalities has become such that every member of the municipal council is on relief. These councillors, while in control of things, are themselves on charity and do not pay one cent to the municipality in any way. They are sitting in the seats of authority and have all the say how the money of the taxpayers (who are keeping them) shall be spent. Such a situation is not right or just, in fact it is intolerable, and surely can be remedied if pressure is brought to bear upon the Government by the Municipal Association. Of course no man nor woman can be prevented from voting for members of parliament, nor for members of the legislature. We understand that no inmate of a House of Industry can vote for municipal councillors; and it seems only reasonable that persons on relief, (really in the same class) should be prevented from voting and from occupying a seat on the municipal council.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

WISDOM hath builded her house, she hath hewn out her seven pillars....

She hath sent for her maidens, she crieth upon the highest places of the city,

Whoso is simple, let him turn in hither: as for him that wanteth understanding, she saith to him,

Come, eat of my bread, and drink of the wine which I have mingled.

Forsake the foolish, and live; and go in the way of understanding....

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: and the knowledge of the holy is understanding. — Proverbs ix, 1, 3-6, 10.

And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God....

And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power:

That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.—I Corinthians ii, 1, 4, 5.

A Bit of Nonsense

Worse.

"Don't tell stories, you naughty child," said her mother.

"But it's true, mummie; it's true!" Betty watched her mother hurry upstairs and then she called out, "April fool, mummie, it's only daddy."

Albertans Ready To Assist Britain In Piping Oil To Vancouver

EDMONTON, Sept. 29—(CP).—Alberta's Turner Valley oil field leaped higher into the limelight today with new British interest born in war threats, court actions, challenging conservation measures, re-pressuring proposals and record crude oil production despite proration.

Reports from London indicated plans for a pipeline from the Valley, 35 miles south-west of Calgary, to Vancouver—about 1,000 miles—were under consideration as part of Britain's permanent scheme.

A German corporation, Tropicorp, Inc., previously made inquries with a view to building a similar line at a cost around $16,000,000, but while oil men balked at the German bid they stood ready to aid British interests.

A pipline across the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific coast from where the oil would be shipped via the Panama canal to Britain is deemed feasible. "We will give every co-operation to the British government," said R. A. Brown, Sr., president of Alberta's Petroleum Producers' Association in pointing out the Dominion and Provincial government would be involved.

A Challenge.

With conservation measures in effect to protect crude all supplies, the court action came as a challenge to the Alberta Petroleum and Natural Gas Conservation Board's order to conserve gas resources as from Oct. 15 next.

Proposal for re-pressuring system that would force gas back into the ground after the naphtha was extracted as it passed through absorption plants involves a pumping system unofficially estimated to cost $2,000,000. It is sponsored by private interests to assure operation of absorption plants.

Reviewing the Turner Valley situation, Hon. N. E. Tanner, Alberta Minister of Lands and Mines, explained that since production began in 1914 to January 1, 1938, Alberta's oil output totalled 13,772,302 barrels of which 90 per cent came from Turner Valley.

Proration of production was instituted September 10, 1937, by the marketing companies on the contention marketing facilities were unable to handle the total production and lack of markets. The first proration rate was 65 per cent of total possible production.

Flow Cut Down.

When the petroleum and natural gas conservation board became operative, it placed production Aug. 15 at 48 per cent. Changing the proration basis, the board on September 3 permitted a flow of about 28,500 barrels and on September 22 further cut the flow to 22,000 barrels daily or to about 48 per cent of the total possible production of approximately 47,500 barrels.

A flow of gas necessary to bring the crude oil to the surface and keep within the proration limit is permitted at each crude well. This total flow is estimated around 90,000,000 cubic feet daily and, as it is required to bring the oil to the surface it is not considered wastage.

Total gas flow in the Valley is estimated around 375,000,000 cubic feet daily. Estimates of gas burned as waste run as high as 250,000,000 cubic feet daily. Most of this gas, the Board estimated, was burned as waste by naphtha wells after extraction of the naphtha in the absorption plants.

The Board issued an order curtailing the amount of gas from naphtha-producing wells to 40,000,000 cubic feet daily—declaring that amount sufficient to provide 20,000,000 cubic feet required by Calgary, Lethbridge and other points and 20,0000,000 cubic feet needed for the industry in Turner Valley itself.

Fear Some Shutdowns.

Private interests, charging that such an order would enforce closing of some of the four absorption plants operating in the Valley, asked the Department of Lands and Mines for time to consider, and, possibly develop a re-pressuring scheme.

The enforcing order was delayed by the Board until Oct. 15.

Under the re-pressuring scheme, naphtha wells would produce gas in any quantities desired. After the naphtha was extracted, the gas would be pumped back into the ground. The gas pressure of the field would be maintained and the absorption plants would continue to operate.

Faced with the Alberta Petroleum and Natural Gas Conservation Board's order conserving gas becoming operative Oct. 15 ,legal action to have the Act establishing the Board declared ultra vires was taken. The action was instituted by Miracle Oils, Ltd., Mercury Oils, Ltd., and Gas and Oil Products, Ltd.

The action, which has yet to come to trial, seeks to have the Board's gas conservation order set aside and declares the $500,000 abductors, Ltd., and Gas and Oil Products, Ltd., would be forced to close with loss of revenue and investment. It also charged the legislation interfered with trade and commerce and stifled competition.

Finds False Teeth Missing After Night In The Cells

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK, musical comedy star of yesteryear used to sing a song that told the world that "there is no time for mirth and laughter, in the cold gray dawn of the morning after."

A local man demonstrated the truth of that mournful number yesterday when after being locked up all night and being fined $10 and costs on a drunk charge, he discovered as he checked out of the police station that his false teeth were missing. His hat was there, his tie was present and correct, his money and other personal property were turned over to him but there was not a sign of the upper plate that should have completed the furnishing of his oral cavity. However, later in the day the disappearing denture was located; it had been left in the guard room on the previous night.

Farmers Urged To Organize

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 29—(CP)—George Wilson, Ontario Farm Products Control Board Chairman, urged Ontario farmers to-day to organize under the Ontario Farm Products Marketing Act to ensure better contracts with processing companies.

He told farmers here he did not think the Government could do anything about complaints Tecumseh district farmers made against failure of the Fine Foods Company Limited to accept corn shipments on contract, but if farmers were organized a similar thing would not happen again. Mr. Wilson is investigating the farmer's complaints.

Hitler's Final Demands On Czechs

Students Well Versed In Facts Surrounding European Crisis

PUPILS at Peterborough Collegiate are better versed in the facts surrounding the European crisis at the present time than were the youngsters of the generation which saw the Great War break out in 1914, according to L. J. Pettit, history department head.

Radio, pictures and movie news all tend to make a youngster more aware of what is happening throughout the world. There is not a great deal of place for questions bearing on the situation during school hours and youngsters are not encouraged to break into history lessons with irrelevant questions, he said. In "current events" discussions, however, they appear to show some knowledge of obscure points in the crisis. So many things becloud the European scene that youngsters and grown-ups alike are apt to lose perspective in viewing the scene. A history course must attempt to teach a youngster a proper perspective and as a consequence, immediate happenings are not to be stressed too greatly, explained Mr. Pettit.

In some other schools teachers are reported to be flooded with questions asked by their history pupils. At Brockville one teacher expressed amazement at the interest and knowledge his youngsters had of the crisis.

Goebbels Sounds Note Of Peace

BERLIN, Sept. 29—(AP).—Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels told a throng of Berliners today he foresaw an amicable solution of the German - Czechoslovak dispute "within a few days."

Goebbels, usually a fiery speaker, sounded a note of peace as he spoke amid deafening "heils" in historic Lustgarten.

He did not mention tomorrow's conference at Munich, to be attended by Chancellor Hitler, Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Mussolini and Premier Daladier, but he declared:

"I, as a man in the know of things, can tell you we neither can nor want to retreat, as the Fuehrer has pledged his word to support the Sudetens, but the solution is imminent."

It was believed, however, he was referring to the Munich conference when he said:

"Herr Benes (President of Czechoslovakia) now will be forced to stick to his promise."

The Fuehrer is on guard for peace in these critical days when the centre of European politics has shifted to Germany, he asserted.

"I ask you Berliners, have you been taught war during the five years of our regime?" he asked and the crowd shouted "no."

Meanwhile, Munich, known as the "city of the movement" because it was there that Hitler's National Socialist movement started, hailed the news of the four-power conference with joy."

PETES' MANAGER LEADS BALL CLUB IN BATTING

Eddie Murphy Hits .545 During Finals

Manager Eddie Murphy is leading the Petes in playoff batting with the fine mark of .545 for seven games. Next in line are Al Clark—now at college—with .461, Bill Calladine with .378 and Chuck Kearns with .351. The Petes have a club batting average for eight playoff games (six with Oshawa and two with Niagara Falls) of .304, as compared with their .241 mark for nine C.O.B.L. scheduled contests during the summer.

... of the local ball players have hit over .300 during the playoffs in the past month or so. Besides those mentioned in the previous paragraph, Les Burton, Lefty McNally and Eddie Whitehill batted .333 while Bob Doll hit .323. Star had .261 and Deadey .250. During the schedule, Lefty McNally topped his teammates with the willow, clouting the ball at a .364 pace, followed by Kearns, Kitchen and Doll in the .300 class.

A Big Reason

This marked improvement by the club as a whole, with most of the regulars hitting better than .300, is the main reason why the Petes won the C.O.B.L. championship from Oshawa and eliminated Niagara Falls in the first round of the O.B.A. senior playdowns. They have also had good hurling and fielding, but they were strong in those departments all year. Their new prowess with the bat marks them as one of the strongest Peterborough ball clubs to ever enter Ontario playdowns, and gives them an excellent chance of copping a Provincial championship this year—provided the boys do not run into a batting clump in semi-finals or finals.

Following are the Petes' playoff hitting averages to date:

Player	G.	AB.	H.	Av.
Murphy	7	22	12	.545
Clark	4	13	6	.461
Calladine	8	29	11	.378
Kearns	8	37	13	.351
Burton	8	30	10	.353
McNally	6	15	5	.333
Whitehill	3	3	1	.333
Doll	8	31	10	.323
Starr	7	23	6	.261
Deadey	3	3	2	.250
Kingdon	4	10	2	.200
Whatley	4	15	2	.133
Cadd	7	26	3	.115
Jakaiby	1	2	0	.000
Kitchen	4	9	0	.000

Lacrosse Final Here Tomorrow

The Inglewood-Caledon Combines clash here Friday (tomorrow) night with the Petes at 8.30 in the George St. arena in the first of their three-game O.L.A. senior "B" group final series. Return game is Monday on the Caledon floor and third, if necessary, on neutral grounds later in the week. The Combines rubbed out East York in group semi-finals while the Petes put out Brooklin in the other semi-final bracket. The winner of this final group series goes in against Wallaceburg in Ontario lacroses finals, there being but three large groups in the province this summer.

A huge crowd of fans is expected to witness the playoff fray here tomorrow night. It should be packed with action and excitement. The Combines play clever, fast lacrosse—not as rough as the Brooklins but still able to take of themselves. They have half a dozen starry veterans, and a number of good young players on the lineup. It is much the same club that ousted the Petes last year in Ontario semi-finals, and the Randle-coached crew intend to get revenge this time. In previous meetings this season, the Petes have had an edge on the Inglewood outfit, but they realize it will be a tough playoff series. Caledon beat East York, 8-3, last night in the deciding game.

SPORTS -DAY BY DAY-

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

MAIN REASON why the Petes won the C.O.B.L. title, rubbed out the Niagara Falls aggregation and are favored to cop Provincial honors in senior baseball circles this fall is their improved hitting. The club had fine fielding and pretty fair pitching all season, but the batting mark was merely .241 during the schedule. And now in their eight playoff games to date—six with Oshawa and two with the Falls—the Petes are belting the apple at a .304 clip! Which is lovely belting indeed. And they are still getting good fielding and first-rate flinging. If they keep clicking like this in all three departments, not forgetting their base-running either, the locals ought to cop the title handily.

* * * * * *

WE HAVE HAD good hitting clubs in the past here, but not in recent years. That's been the big cry by Peterborough fandom—for more hitters on the teams representing this town. Right now, the Petes are probably clicking in all departments better than any of the oldtime local clubs, though this may get us an argument from former players. Well, we love a good argument, provided it's all at 10 paces or more and verbal epithets only being hurled! If the Petes win the title, we can say to the oldsters: "Well, if ya had a better club, why didn't ya go right through?"

* * * * * *

Don't Get Wounded, Pitchers!

EDDIE MURPHY, playing manager of the club, is slashing out singles and doubles at a .545 rate—and that's really smearing the Spalding anywhere, let alone in playoffs. Al Clark had .461 when he left for college, and we wonder if he'll hit that in academic competition. Bill Calladine has a neat .378 to his credit and Chuck Kearns—who has only gone hitless in one of eight playoff encounters—turns a .351 trick. In fact, eight of the Petes hit over .300 so far in these money tilts. So no opposing hurler can look for any soft spots in the local lineup. Even Cliff Cadd, who is down in his hitting, cracks out extra-base blows from time to time to bust up a game. If the boys just keep blasting out that barrage of baseshits for the rest of the season, the fielding and hurling won't worry us any.

* * * * * *

THE FALLS' SCRIBE, defending imports from the St. Kitts' writer, says: "Things were at a low ebb in baseball in Ontario and new faces had to be found. And if one must import, the offence is no greater by reaching over the border than enticing players from another provincial point. Therefore, we were solidly behind Mickey Paige when he secured Harry Wasser and Frankie Mussel, and baseball did not suffer in peninsula ranks when this pair arrived. Whether Clayton cares to admit it or not, Mussel and Wasser have swelled the attendances in every district park, and we imagine the presence of Peterborough imports have had a like reaction in central Ontario circles. So, O.B.A. officers might well be advised to tolerate a few U.S. athletes in order to keep the sport in a high role over here." Quite true, suh.

You Asked For It, T.A.B.A.

STRATFORD NATIONALS took an 8-3 win over Toronto Bright's at Stratford yesterday in the first of their three-game O.B.A. senior semi-final series. Miskimmons, who nearly came here to play for the Petes this year, had a double and three singles in five, as Lefty Carrick outpitched Al Yarnell. Return fray is at the Maple Leaf Stadium on Saturday and Schoolmaster Craig should pitch Stratford to their second straight win, the good righthander facing a flock of righthand hitters. We beat Schoolboy Mussel of the Falls, but might find a schoolmaster tougher to take, eh? The O.B.A. still wants the Petes to play Creighton Mines and give 'em a big guarantee, but the clubs can't seem to get together on arrangements as yet. Something may be settled during the day.

* * * * * *

QUINTE COLUMNIST hits the nail on the head with this: "It begins to look as though the ball moguls are giving Peterborough the works. First, the Petes were to have met the T.A.B.A. winners on Sept. 17th but ultimately they were switched over to the Falls, whom they eliminated. It was previously announced that the Falls-Petes' winner would play Toronto in the next round, but now we find Toronto hooked up with Stratford, which will mean the Petes will be idle till the second week of October. After the manner in which the O.B.A. refused to assist the C.O.B.L. last spring, and coupling the fact along with the side-tracking of the 1938 Central League champions in the current playdowns, we wonder what the future holds for senior ball east of Toronto." 'Tis whispered that the Toronto-Stratford series was in the bag—that is, already arranged—before our bunch rubbed out Niagara last Saturday.

* * * * * *

As The Rugbyists Ready Up

NOTHING MUCH NEW in gridiron circles at the moment. P.C.I. teams are drilling hard all week at the Oval and readying up for their schedule openers in Lindsay this Saturday. And wondering when in the world they'll rid Riverside Park of the ballsters. And our Orfuns, also training nightly, wonder when the blinkin' dickens the ball-playing footballers will be set to turn out with the team. The proposed exhibition fray this week-end between Montreal Cubs and the locals, either here or in Montreal, fell through when grounds weren't available. After deciding to drop the huddle system for a time, Sarnia Imps announce that their veteran quarterback, Alex Hayes, has decided against retirement and will line up with the squad this season.

* * * * * *

LACROSSE FANS will see an O.L.A. senior "B" group final game—and it'll be an Ontario semi-final series—here Friday night at 8.30 in the George St. arena when the Inglewood-Caledon Combines clash with the Petes. Return joust is Monday and third, if necessary, on neutral grounds. The Inglewood-Caledon crew is pretty much the same squad that rubbed the locals out of the playdowns last year and won the title. They have a smart young goalie, two aces in Walsh and Nelson, and a smooth all-around attack that carries them through. Their victory over East York in semi-finals shows they are clicking in top form now. During the season, the Petes played this outfit twice, nosing out a narrow nod at the Caledon corral and winning here comfortably later—when the visitors brought down half a team. What we hope to convey to the Petes' players is that this is an important series and they don't want to figure it's a pipe—just 'cause they wiped up the Brooklin threat. The Combines have class and play lacrosse rather than mixing it up in fist fights, so the Petes want to be hitting on all cylinders. The tilt ought to be a honey and should pack in the fans.

King Edward Team Beats Westenders

King Edward annexed two more league points to their Public School record on Wednesday afternoon, when they defeated the Prince of Wales eleven by 3-0, on King Edward Park. Both teams were evenly matched, with the losers failing to follow up their objective. K. Langton was out of the game with an injured arm.

First Half.

King Edward started up at a terrific pace to force their opponents into their own territory., where Nattress and Frappe responded with clever clearance, but their halves failed to co-operate to make the forward attack successful. The break went in favor of King Edward, when a defence man of Prince of Wales handled inside. Murduff made no mistake from the penalty spot. Encouraged by their success, Palmer, outside left, and Murduff, outside right, carried a continued barrage of shots upon Prince of Wales' goalie, who held them in check. King Edward, 1; Prince of Wales, 0.

Second Half.

From the kick-off, Henry dribbled his way up-field to find Lowes and Lawson intercepting any attempt to break through, which assisted the half-backs in feeding King Edward forwards to perfection. This system compelled the Prince of Wales boys to go on the defensive that finally brought disaster to them when Beatty, in goal, was overworked in saving his charge from the scrimmages that ensued. Palmer placed a beauty over to the goal mouth. Anderson caught the drop of the ball as it touched the ground to give the custodian no chance. The third counter was an easy goal because the custodian never made any attempt to stop a low grounder that hit the inside of the post to roll into the goal. King Edward, 3; Prince of Wales, 0.

King Edward.—W. Curtis, goal; A. Lowes and F. Lawson, full backs; D. McGregor, K. Anderson and G. Blackwell, halves; C. Murduff, G. Reil, W. Ellis, C. Downer and C. Palmer, forwards. Sub.—E. Close.

Prince of Wales.—G. Beatty, goal; R. Nattress and J. Frappe, full backs; D. Batley, S. Detlor and L. Maudsley, halves; J. Saunders, R. Crowe, H. Henry, T. Smith and R. Doughty, forwards.

Referee—Dave Buchan.

Field Day Held By Pupils Of St. Peter's

Keen competition featured every event on the annual field day program of St. Peter's High School which was staged yesterday on the school grounds, and 150 pupils vied for individual honors and fought to bring the major prize, the School Shield, to their respective form.

The program is the highlight of the Autumn term and the pupils turned out in large numbers for every single event. Honors were fairly evenly divided among the different class rooms, but Third Form took the coveted School Shield and two pupils from the winning Form took Field Day Championships. Mary Overend with a total of 32 points won the championship for girls and 16 year old Edward Sullivan, also a third form student, dominated several events to pile up the amazing total of 40 points during the competition, and took the boys' championship.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB. MARTIN

As far the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association is concerned, yesterday was the last day for any scheduled tournaments. Beginning as early as May 24th and carrying right through until September 28th, it has been a very busy season. Two and three tournaments each week and sometimes more, and at all of these games our club has been represented and in the majority of cases were in on the money.

It will all depend on the weather as to what kind of a tournament we will stage tomorrow night—if any.

There were 12 mixed rinks turned out last night and considering the time of the year that was a grand attendance. Three 7-end games were played with the following successful skips: L. Loftus, R. Bunn and T. McArthur.

At Oshawa our club was there with two rinks and H. Freeman's quartette came in third, and each received shirts and ties. He was supported by J. Fitzpatrick, E. Wall and S. Trawbridge.

Down at Havelock again our club was represented by two pairs. It was an invitation affair with rinks from Stirling, Hastings, Campbellford, Norwood, Havelock and Peterborough. The Peterborough pair of Lawrence and Bacon got third place and each received 2 dozen cans of soup.

Stratford Wins First Game From Toronto

STRATFORD, Sept. 29—Husky Al Yarnell was hardly equal to the task of subduing Stratford Nationals in the first game of their O.B.A. senior playdown series with the visiting Toronto Brights here Wednesday afternoon, the Nats defeating Brights 8 to 3.

Opposed to Yarnell was Bob (Iron Man) Carrick, local southpaw ace, who, although hurling the entire game under the severe handicap of a heavy cold he is nursing, limited the Toronto sluggers to seven bingles, including Young's homer in the eighth frame, when the visitors counted two of their three runs. Carrick was not up to his usual standard, as he hit one batter and walked seven, but still was good enough to keep the visiting cloutters them in one frame without a run after first and third were occupied and none away. In nipping that rally Carrick took a hard smash near the mound to star a fast double play and retire the side.

Yarnell was pounded lustily throughout the game, with Irish Miskimmons connecting for three singles and a double out of five tries; while Eddie Radiff, the star of the game, clicked for two doubles and a single out of four tries. Every member of the Stratford Nationals nicked at least one hit of Yarnell, except Kalmusky, and, peculiarly enough, he was the second highest Stratford hitter during the regular Intercounty League season and the leading slugger for his team in the O.B.A. playdowns up to today.

The return game is slated for Maple Leaf Stadium, Toronto, on Saturday afternoon at 2:45, and on the respective displays of the rival clubs the Nationals should wind up the series in two straight. Brights can count on facing Earl (Schoolmaster) Craig, the Stratford veteran ace right-hander in the second game. Manager Roy Downing likely wil lhurl for Toronto.

PLAN RECORD STAKE

HOBART, Tasmania—(CP).—Hobart Greyhound Racing Club will stage a $3,860 handicap in February. It is thought to be the largest stake for such a race ever offered in Australia.

PIRATES MUST BEAT CUBS TODAY TO STAY IN NATIONAL RACE

Gabby Hartnett's 9th Inning Homer Gives Cubs 6-5 Win And Half Game Lead On Pirates

By Drew Middleton
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Just off hand, Mr. Bones, who do you figure the most dangerous club in the baseball business at the plate? Correct. The Boston Red Sox.

There are two big noises in the ivory industry these chilly afternoons. One comes from Chicago where the Cubs are hanging it on the Pirates—they did it 6-5 on Gabby Hartnett's ninth inning homer yesterday and took the league lead—and the other emanates from whichever ball park is entertaining the Red Sox or vice versa.

The Red Sox won another yesterday, 2-1 over the Athletics, which is a mild score for them these days. Mild in view of the fact the Sox are leading the American League in batting with .299 and boast six hitters above the .300 mark.

They have won 17 out of their last 27 and Manager Joe Cronin, nudging the ball at a .325 clip himself, is pretty sure they and not the Yankees will be the team to beat in the American League next year.

"If we had some pitching this year we'd be up there," mourned Mr. Cronin.

This last is a fine bit of understatement. Jimmy the double "X" Foxx is back there banging the ball at a .348 clip. Ben Chapman hovers around .335, Cronin and Vosmik flirt with .325, Pinky Higgins is around .307 and Doc Cramer around .300.

Athletics Fall To Sox

The Sox beat the Athletics yesterday with one of their less glamorous hurlers, Joe Heving. He gave the A's six hits, one of them Frankie Hayes' homer.

Joe Krakauskas, the Washington Senators' lefthander, had one of his infrequent good days and beat the Yankees, 4-1, with five hits. This coupled with the Boston win cut the Yanks' lead to 9½ cents, which, with the pennant won, means exactnothing.

Hank Greenberg got no further in his pursuit of Babe Ruth's home run record despite the 12-0 rout of the St. Louis Browns by the Detroit Tigers. In the fourth American League game, Chicago White Sox downed the Cleveland Indians, 14-11.

In addition to the Chicago-Pittsburgh donnybrook in the National League, the Cardinals outlasted the Reds, 8-7, and Boston beat Philadelphia, 3-1.

Back Home To Coach

Teddy Graham ABOVE, for years one of the National Hockey leagues outstanding defencemen, reverts to his first hockey love this winter when he returns to his home town, Owen Sound, to coach the junior O.H.A. team. It was with the famous Greys of 1924, winners of the Dominion junior title, that Graham first achieved fame on the ice. He has been assisting hockey players in Owen Sound in various way for the past few years.

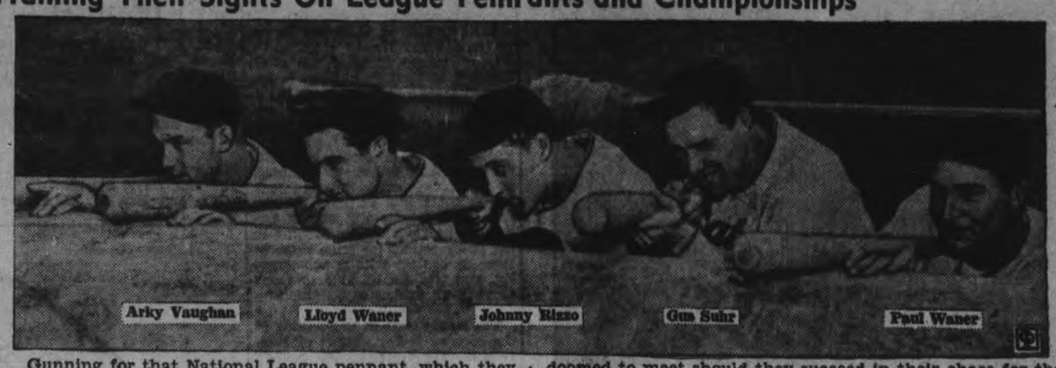
Training Their Sights On League Pennants and Championships



Gunning for that National League pennant, which they have almost, but not quite, in their grasp, are these Pittsburg Pirates as they sight their bats over the edge of the dugout. At the other end they probably have the not altogether pleasant visions of the Yankees, whom they will be doomed to meet should they succeed in their chase for the National League flag. The hard-hitting outfield and the two big guns of the infield are shown here, the Waner boys and Rizzo, of course, constituting the former and first baseman Suhr and Shortstop Arky Vaughan the latter.

Rocklands Fall To Cubs By 21 to 15

(By The Canadian Press.)

The love bug bit Herbie Westman to add a benedict today to the ranks of McGill's Intercollegiate Redmen, as the most noteworthy developments in Eastern Canada's football training season came from Montreal clubs.

Also of note along the football front was the fact that George Pigeon, husky inside who gained all-eastern recognition a few years ago, turned out with Montreal Nationals; that Coach Doug Kerr of McGill evidently has discovered a crack lineman in Howard LaBarge, formerly of Syracuse University; and that University of Toronto suffered the loss of Don Mumford, brilliant plunging halfback.

Westman, a kicking half upon whom Kerr is depending greatly this season, was married last Saturday shortly after the Redmen trounced Montreal's Big Four clubs in an exhibition game. The lanky booter returned from his honeymoon yesterday and said he had no intention of giving up the game this year.

Cubs Barely Make It

The Cubs, ineffectual in their contest against the Redmen, were hard put last night to defeat Montreal Rocklands, an intermediate team in the Quebec Rugby Football Union, 21-15. The game was featured by an 85-yard dash for a touchdown by little Lauri Mathieu, Cubs backfielder.

Kerr shifted LeBarge to the senior team yesterday after the United States footballer had shown his ability in drills with McGill's O.R.F.U. senior squad. On inside wing, LaBarge broke through the opposition line frequently in drill to smash up plays.

Mumford was placed under observation for two days when it was feared he might be suffering from appendicitis. The loss of Mumford came only three days before the U. of T. Blues play Toronto Balmy Beach for the city championship.

Business executives of Germany are having difficulty in finding young people with sufficient knowledge to fill good positions.

HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD.— The reason David Niven rushes in from the "Dawn Patrol" location every night will amaze some of the gossips who have linked him only with such famous beauties as Merle Oberon, Norma Shearer, etc. The handsome young Britisher has a new interest and she is a secretary in the publicity department of the Warner Brothers studio. Her name is Cynthia Drew. She is petite, blonde, and such a looker!

All their marital troubles made up, Tony and Renee De Marco danced at Santa Barbara in what was probably their last engagement in the U.S. for about a year. They sail for London and have bookings over there to last them well into 1939.

Surprising story, that of Orchestra Leader Leon Belasco. For a long time he had a name band, earning big figures. Four months ago, he tired of the grind, decided to be an actor and came to Hollywood. At first, an agent tried to peddle him for a fancy salary. The studios didn't tumble. So what happened. So Belasco, still determined to be a movie actor, recently applied at the casting office at the Hal Roach studio for the role of a taxi driver in "Topper Takes a Trip." The part was filled, but Belasco made an impression. He was given another role, that of the bellboy who is always chasing Constance Bennett in the picture. The job lasts a week and Belasco gets $300 for it. He's happy because he is a movie actor.

Jack Oakie's thin silhouette is still the talk of the town, but Ralph Forbes, working in the same picture, "Annabel Takes a Tour," has done plenty of reducing, too. Thirty-two pounds in seven weeks. It got him the romantic lead opposite Lucille Ball.

The raves about the dances in "Carefree" are sweet music to the ears of Fred Astaire, but, also, in a sense, are a headache. For now he has to top them in his and Ginger's new picture, "The Castles." The star, always a great worrier, has cut his vacation two weeks short and arrives on Monday to begin work on the new routines. Ginger reports for her rehearsals on September 15.

Suggestion to the boys campaigning to let you know that "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment." Why not point out what cheap entertainment they are, too? In England even the neighborhood houses think nothing of charging from $1 to $1.25 for seats. And the first run houses in London get as high as $2.50.

More and more youngsters take things into their own hands these days. Jimmie Mishler, 15-year-old Chicago boy and a fan of Jane Withers since she has been making pictures, presented himself at the Withers' home the other day. He'd come by bus from Chicago to see his screen idol. The Withers' wired his family, showed him the town for a week, and put him on the train, first exacting the promise that he wouldn't come back to Hollywood again.

Looks as if Wendy Barrie may cash in on her year of voice lessons. Billy Rose is paging her for a four weeks' engagement at the Casa Manana. Patricia Ellis has just clicked as a singer there....A Catalina correspondent says if Errol Flynn still wants to know, the yachtsmen who saved him from the sting ray, were Kemp Niver, a deputy from the Los Angeles sheriff's office, and Clare Harp of the Beverly Hills office of the automobile club....Frances Robinson, Universal beauty and at one time reported as romancing with John Carroll, is at Maxie Rosenbloom's almost nightly with Lind Hayes, son of Grace Hayes the comedienne....Alice Faye gave Brother Bill a birthday party and a ring at the Club Mermaid. Sugar Geise was along to help celebrate the occasion....Loyce Whiteman and Harry Barris open October 4 at the Cocoanut Grove where they once broke records....And Jed Prouty, who plays Pa in the Jones Family series, is buying his first home. He and his wife, Marian Murray, have lived for years in apartments and rented places.

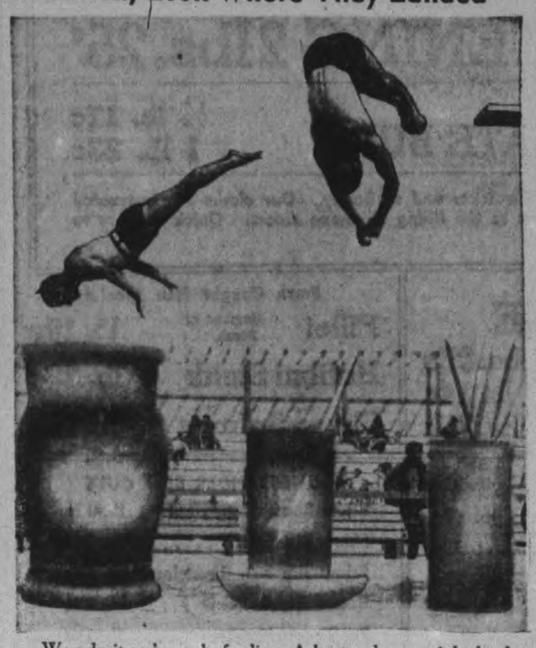
Sensation, Look Where They Landed



We admit we're only fooling. A hasty glance might lead you to believe that these daring young men were going off the high board into a pitcher and a drinking glass. But such is not the case. The glassware is on a table close to the camera and the divers are out over plenty of water to soften their fall. Rather a good effect though. Come again sometime and we'll give another demonstration.

Ontario Ladies Grab Lead In Golf Meet

OTTAWA, Sept. 29.—(CP)—An Ontario team of women golfers, featuring the veteran Ada Mackenzie and her magic putter, will swing around Ottawa Golf Club's lengthy fairways here today with a scant four-stroke advantage over the defending Quebec team in a race for the interprovincial team championship of the Dominion.

The first 18-hole round in the 36-hole medal match was staged yesterday in the rain and Ontario went into the lead with a gross total of 332 strokes. Quebec was second with 336 and the British Columbia foursome third with 357. Manitoba had 364 and the intersectional team of western players took 365. A Maritime aggregation found it lacked a long-hitting game for the rolling fairways and wound up in last place with 392.

Toronto's Miss Mackenzie found the inclement weather to her liking and put on the greatest golfing show of her career. Her finest medal round in any tournament was made yesterday when she one-putted 12 greens for a total score of 73, three under par and five under the course record for women's tournaments at Royal Ottawa.

The other three on the Ontario team played steady but not spectacular golf with Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen taking an 87, Mrs. E. H. Gooderham 83 and Mrs. Nelson Carlson 89. All are from Toronto.

Yanks Best Ball Club He Ever Saw Says Connie Mack With Eye On The Infield

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP). — Connie Mack, whose memory goes back to the Indian wars, says the New York Yankees of this year are the best ball club he ever saw. He probably was looking at the world champions' infield when the thought occurred to him.

In Lou Gehrig, Joe Gordon, Frankie Crosetti and Red Rolfe the bullies of baseball really have an elegant inner works. In fielding skill they are at least equal of either Chicago Cubs or Pittsburgh Pirates, who are heading for a photo finish in the National League. As distance hitters and run producers they are miles ahead.

This despite the fact that both the Cubs and Pirates have better-than-average infields—far the best in the National League this season. Yet it is impossible to rank either with the Yankee four as a possible deciding factor in a World series, where sheer power is all-important.

Some Figures.

The ensuing little table seems eloquent if the eyes bear down on the last two columns to the right—the home runs and runs batted in:—

	Bat. Av.	H.R.	R.B.I.
Yankees:
Lou Gehrig, 1b	.298	29	112
Joe Gordon, 2b	.267	25	96
F. Crosetti, ss	.261	9	56
Red Rolfe, 3b	.310	10	77
Total	.284	73	341
Pittsburgh:
Gus Suhr, 1b	.296	3	62
Floyd Young, 2b	.279	4	78
Arky Vaughan, ss	.330	6	68
Lee Handley, 3b	.275	6	48
Total	.295	19	256
Chicago:
Rip Collins, 1b	.260	13	60
Bill Herman, 2b	.271	1	51
Bill Jurges, ss	.264	1	45
S. Hack, 3b	.317	4	62
Total	.281	19	218

Hard On Pitchers.

Thus it is noted that the Yanks, while hitting less than the Pirates on group average, really have done far more damage to opposing pitchers. In other words, they hit the pay-off punches. Gehrig in six World series has compiled a hitting average of .371, including 10 home runs.

Taking them by position, the Yankees must be conceded the best man at first and second. Chicago fans will debate the nomination of Rookie Gordon over their great second sacker, Bill Herman, but the best opinion is that Herman has slipped a little.

Red Rolfe at third is at least a stand-off for Chicago's Hack. Most baseball men consider him the best in the game. If that is true, then the Yanks need concede only one infield spot to their potential rivals—shortstop. Slugging Arkie Vaughan of the Pirates undoubtedly is a more valuable player than Crosetti, yet the little Italian is such a slick fielder and so fine a lead-off man that Vaughan's margin is less than it looks.

LONDON—(CP).—With a view of reducing the number of scrummages in Rugby League football, it is proposed to try a line-out from touch instead of a scrum 10 yards in-field.

Thirty Cheese Feature Seymour Fair

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 29.—The directors of the Campbellford Fair accomplished something Wednesday that seemed almost impossible. They whooped up enthusiasm for cheese and more particularly the cheese industry.

When you come into Seymour township you are in the heart of the Central Ontario cheese industry. Thirty cheese, as they say on the local sales board, or probably more correctly cheeses, comprised an exhibit in the dairy section of the Fair that certainly deserves special mention.

Incidentally the Campbellford Fair was a big success, splendid weather, big crowds, midway, trotting and running horse races and all that, but all those heartening details are getting away from the Fair's cheese department.

Usually nobody can get enthusiastic about cheese, except perhaps men like Jim Irwin of Belleville, G. A. Gillespie of Peterborough, George Barr of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and others who might be mentioned, including a group of Campbellford Fair directors.

That display of thirty cheeses should be contrasted with Peterborough Exhibition's seven or eight. Even the Belleville exhibition failed to round up anything like the cheese show that was here Wednesday. And what can anybody say in an attempt to rave about cheese. They all look alike and lack, at least to the layman's eye, the personality of peas in a pod. Big round solids smoothed off and trimmed and pressed ready for the boxes—yes and ready to roll over to the British market and the Englishman's dinner table, and then to roll round dollars back to Canada and into the dairy farmer's pocket.

Eleven Factories Compete

That's the vision the Campbellford Fair directors keep before them. They rank the cheese industry as one of the most important in the district, and they regard the cheesemaker as an important citizen. So John A. Murray and Robert McCulloch, the directors in charge of the dairy department, succeeded in bringing together the products of eleven of the factories in the Peterborough, Madoc, Stirling, Campbellford district. In commonplace terms that is giving credit where credit is due, and the Murray-McCulloch success will be one of the most notable achievements in the whole circuit of fair and exhibitions this season. In focusses attention and approval on an industry whose products are of more importance in the export market than all the rest of the Fair put together, and the local directors would probably receive a grateful acknowledgment from George Barr if he had seen that assembly line of cheese or heard about it.

Many Exhibitors

G. G. Stephens, secretary, told the Examiner the entries were more numerous than last year. Some of the exhibitors from the district were: George Gummow of Warkworth, horses; Wm. Elmhirst & Son of Indian River, sheep; R. M. Brown, Peterborough, poultry; Charlton S. Grigg, Roseneath, light horses; Allen Hubble, Havelock, Jersey cattle.

Adam Humphries and Son of Asphodel; C. U. Heath of Stirling; Alex Hume and Son, of Menie, Ayrshire cattle and Clydesdale horses; Lloyd Kennedy of Bethany, light horses; J. W. Jarrell and Son, Cannifton, Jerseys; George Hutchinson and Son, Warkworth, swine and poultry; Peter Jones, Warkworth, Percheron horses; John R. Kelsey, Woodville, sheep; Garnet Kerr of Seymour, Jerseys.

Norman McConkey of Peterborough, Holstein cattle; Allan B. Mann, Bridgenorth, sheep and horses; G. H. Mark and Son, Little Britain, sheep; Mrs. Ira Lowe, Ida; Merrill Brothers, Dartford, Holsteins; W. A. McGee and Sons, Hastings, horses; Craig Nelson, Campbellford, Holsteins; Stewart Nelson of Keene; M. H. Pimmett and Sons, Otonabee; Fred Rutherford of Bonarlaw, Ayrshire cattle; W. S. Shaw, Corbyville, poultry; Ernest Slogett, Campbellford; Mrs. Van Allen, Peterborough, poultry; Alf. Ayre, Hampton, sheep; Thomas Dunham, Campbellford, heavy horses; Leo Fry, Campbellford, horses; and scores of others.

List Of Judges

The judges were: Fred Hubbs of Bloomfield, Holstein cattle; Brodie Ness, Portsmouth, Jersey and Ayrshires; Andrew Knox, Norwood, beef cattle, sheep and swine.

W. J. Abernethy, Campbellford, poultry; heavy horses, Roy Ferren of Cavan; A. Grass, Oshawa, light horses; Sam S. Staples of Cavan, the boys' foal club; Harry Sirrett, Brighton, grain, seeds, vegetables and fruit; ladies' work, Mrs. W. Baker of Warkworth; home baking, Mrs. C. Whytock, Madoc; flowers, Chas. W. Palliser, Campbellford.

Judge Eight Years

Andrew Knox of Norwood has judged the beef cattle, sheep and hogs at the Campbellford Fair for the last eight years without a break. He is a brother of the late William Knox of Westwood and Peterborough, remembered for his contribution as managing director of the Peterborough Exhibition. Andrew Knox was a director of the Norwood Exhibition forty years and never missed one show. He retired two years ago, but still retains his interest in the Seymour Agricultural Society.

Dairy cattle and the various classes of horses were features of the Fair that well repaid all the months of planning by the directors. The exhibits building is spacious and attractive. It was filled with goods yesterday, but the lighting generally would be improved by an increase in candle power. Sheep and swine classes were well filled; domestic products were strikingly numerous; and the art work received a great deal of attention.

And right in the centre of the display building were those thirty fat cheese, the leading money product of the show, associated with the dairy cattle that produced them. Obviously it is a dairy section. You could see that in the bulky classes of dairy cattle, Holsteins, Ayrshires and Jerseys; and only Shorthorns in the beef division; no Herefords and Aberdeen-Angus.

Lindsay Reporter Nearly Drowns

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Sept. 29. — Roy Broom of the Lindsay Warder staff, had a narrow escape from drowning on Tuesday while duck hunting in the lower Scugog. He was sitting snugly in his small boat near the weed beds, when suddenly a flock of ducks swooped down, almost hitting him in the face. In attemptin gto shift his position he fell out of the craft as it toppled over. He wore long rubber boots, and as the night was dark, he had some difficulty in getting his bearings. After battling in the chilly waters for some time, he came in contact with a submerged log, and was finally able to reach shore in an exhausted condition.

The strong man in this section of the country is Len. Yerex of Beaverton. Yerex weighs 265 pounds, and recently he put on a one-man muscle act by lifting 2,800 pounds. He also bent a couple of six-inch spikes with one hand and lifted 138-pound weights above his head with one hand.

James Finklemann, of Toronto, was acquitted by Magistree Gee on the charge of driving a car in a manner dangerous to the public. The charge was laid by Constable Gordon of Fenelon Falls, following an accident two miles west of the village. Finklemann testified that he had hit a hole in the road causing him to lose control of the car. Two companions corroborated his evidence, and stated that Finklemann was travelling about 40 miles an hour at the time of the accident.

Phillip St. John, a well-known resident of Cannington, was laid to rest in that village on Tuesday. He was one of the best-known bowlers in the district, and was a prominent figure at tournaments held at different points in Central Ontario. He was secretary of the Brook Agricultural Society and was a memebr of the Orange Order and I.O.O.F. He is survived by two daughters.

Kingston Lady Faces Charge Manslaughter

Mrs. Caroline Baker, of Kingston pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Mr. Justice Urquhart on a charge of manslaughter Wednesday afternoon and trial by jury is proceeding. The Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., is counsel for the defence and V. J. McElderry, K.C., County Crown Attorney is conducting the prosecution.

The charge arises out of a collision between Mrs. Baker's car and another driven by Nelson Coons of Lakefield at the intersection of Highways No. 7 and 30 at Havelock village, last July 4th when the Coons car rolled over, crushing Elva Preston, rumble seat passenger who later died. Harold Coons, aged 5 another passenger in the rumble seat received minor injuries when thrown clear of the wreck.

Dr. Donald Holdcroft of Havelock told of seeing Elva Preston at the private hospital of Mrs. Cummings, where she later died from hemmorhages of both lungs on July 4 of this year.

L. P. McGillen, reporter called by the Crown told that on July 4 he drove to Havelock with Provincial Constable Gordon Broughton intending to take pictures where a fatality had occurred the night before. He said they had passed a Chevrolet coupe between Peterborough and Norwood which had drawn their attention because they were discussing that particular model. He added the same car passed them in Norwood when they stopped. They arrived in Havelock a few minutes after an accident occurred in which Elva Preston was killed. McGillen identified photographs he had taken of the accident immediately on their arrival. Mrs. Baker he said urged him to call a doctor from Norwood, if necessary, which he did.

Nelson Coons, driver of an eastbound car was the next witness.

In Rumble Seat

To Mr. McElderry, Nelson Coons told that Elva Preston was riding in the rumble seat of his car with his six-year-old son Harold.

"How fast were you driving?"

"About 25 miles an hour."

Describing his approach to Havelock Coons said he saw a car coming from the south.

"Where was she when you first saw her?"

"About 50 yards south of the crossing when I was 250 to 300 feet from the interesection. I was watching the car which did not seem to slow up. I took my foot off the accelerator. The other driver did not look my way."

"Did the other car change speed?"

"No, it continued about 25 m.p.h."

"I blew my horn and swerved to the left but was struck when I got to the northern limit of highway 7," witness said.

"After the impact what happened?"

Car Turned Over

"The car turned completely over then landed on its side. Two men started to lift the car up and I saw some people carrying Elva and Harold to the garage."

Coones testified the Baker car struck his 10 inches back of the front fender.

"Did you notice the stop-sign?" Mr. McElderry asked.

"Yes, it was there."

Cross-examined witness told Mr. Gordon the car belonged to his brother and that the speedometer was not working. He said the coupe was bought in Oshawa two weeks before the accident.

Producing the diagram Coons admitted to Mr. Gordon he was 350 feet from the point of impact and Mrs. Baker was 125 from the point when he first saw her car.

Questioned by the Bench he said he did not realize Mrs. Baker was not going to stop until he was 50 feet from her. To Mr. Gordon's suggestion he should either have stopped or gone behind the Baker car, witness said, "One tries to drive away from danger not into it."

Continuing the Crown's case Provincial Constable Gordon Broughton told of leaving this city and driving to Havelock. "A few miles this side of Norwood I overtook a car driven by Coons. He was going about 35 m.p.h. I stopped at Norwood when McGillen had a call and when we got to Havelock the accident had occurred. He gave a description of the intersection and the location of several signs. A few days later he had the stop sign moved 11 feet farther south.

Under cross-examination Broughton said he had not examined Coon's brakes because the car could not be driven. He ventured the opinion the Coons car had turned over 1½ times before stopping.

Mr. Gordon asked if Broughton had examined the inner tube of the left rear wheel of the Coons car to determine the injury which caused the blowout of this tire. Broughton answered in the negative.

Forcing Opponent Away From Play

PIN BLOCK

Pinner is at the RIGHT, using his knee and body to form a sort of vice in which he holds his opponent. Driver, at the LEFT, forces the opponent sideways and away from the play.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, September 30.

According to the planetary transits, this may be a day in which the mentality will be sharp and alert, which is fortunate, since there are many difficult, perplexing, intriguing and treacherous conditions to cope with. There are signs of fraud, trickery, duplicity, and loss unless extra percaution be taken with writings, documents, and in agreements with certain undercover or secretive slants.

Those whose birthday it is are on the verge of a year beset by many peculiar factors, with confusion and perplexity. They had best use their well-stimulated faculties to unravel or avert sinister situations, schemes or duplicity, with especial care with writings, documents or subtle agreements.

A child born on this day may be of an emotional and imaginative nature, so guileless and confiding as to find itself entrapped in peculiar intrigues or difficulties. But its good intentions and sound aspirations may win the endorsement of important personages. It may have some unusual intellectual gifts.

FACTS ABOUT FOOTBALL

Pin Blocking Is Effective System Of Making Big Gains Through Line

By LEW HAYMAN

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of a series of articles on all phases of football, written for the Examiner by one of the outstanding figures in the fall game in Canada.

Yesterday we went over the shoulder block. Today we'll discuss a block that requires two men, called the pin block and it is used on the line of scrimmage when two men are working on one opponent in opening a hole for ball-carrier. It is particularly effective under C.R.U. rules because it eliminates the possibility of going over the three-yard line in making interference. The average lineman does have that tendency which is probably the reason many coaches have adopted this new pin block. Another advantage is the fact that the action takes place more quickly. This means the ball carrier can hit the line quickly on thrusts and quick openings for the pin block wastes no time. It's boom, boom, as the opponent is pinned away from the man carrying the ball.

In all pin blocks the pinner is the man farthest from the intended opening. Intensity of contact and sustained leg drive are of utmost importance.

I want to impress upon you that the pinner must never go for the original position of the opponent. He anticipates the defensive man's charge and drives his knee to the point where it will meet the opponent.

Don't Lunge

A common fault is for the pinner to lunge and throw his knee any time between his opponent's legs. He must drive with feet apart, inserting his knee as the defensive man starts the move forward.

A pin block cannot be used where the defensive man attempts to play off the shoulder of the driver. Naturally, the pinner can't get his knee over far enough, so instead he throws his body sideways in a long body block at the side of the opponent's thighs. The driver in all cases uses the shoulder block we talked about yesterday, driving up and through the opponent.

Looking at to-day's illustration note the crab-like position of the pinner. He can move forward and backward and at the same time concentrate his power at the contact. This power is obtained mostly by driving the inside (or fleshy), part of the knee against the opponent's leg and at the same time leaning your body inwards, thus making a sort of vice.

Pinner Strikes First

The pinner makes contact a split second ahead of the driver, keeping the head and eyes up, body low and feet spread. In the illustration the eyes of the pinner are down as he finishes the motion. Contact with the opponent is first a trifle high, usually around the hips, and lowers as the driver crashes.

The driver, using a hard, driving shoulder block, is actually the direction man. With this in mind note how he contacts at an angle so that he drives away from the hole and is always between the defensive man and the play. In blocking a man it is much more effective to move him laterally than it is to move him backward. Not only is it easier, but it serves our purpose better for we want him from the path to the goal posts.

With a couple of good men on this pin block you'll make many a big gain through the line. Learn to block all ways effectively. "Be a good blocker and you'll win a place on any team."

SPORT SPICE

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—(AP)—Pittsburgh pro football Pirates are plenty peeved about the rumors that some of the boys were sore at all the publicity for Whizzer White... They even took a vote on it—and now want it broadcast that the Whiz has "100 per cent. cooperation" of every man on the squad... Here's three whoops and a holler for old Gabby Hartnett—who can still forget he's a manager long enough to win a ball game for those Cubs.

Detroit Tigers are figuring on a pennant in 1940, with Schoolboy Rowe coming back and a flock of good looking rookies on the way up. ...But they're about convinced it can't be done for '39...This coroner's vote for the year's best loser goes to George Murphy, who footed the bills on that 108-hole golf affair last week...He dropped about 20 g's—without a single moan...

Swingin' Sammy Snead looked over the field in the United States amateur just before it started at Oakmont, picked Willie Turnesa and Johnny Fischer as the class of the tournament, then announced: "Those other guys play like they had nails in their shoes"...Looks like the Cardinals picked a winner in Chauncey Scott...They signed him from the semi-pros last year, and he only fanned 280 for Paducah in the Kitty League this summer...

Colgate campus these days looks like makings for anybody's ball club what with Dick and George Sisler, Jr., Frankie Frisch's nephew Johnny Luey, Smoky Joe Wood's boy Steve, and Dave Buck, son of the old Giants' pitcher, Howard, all together up there...

Somebody asked Gabby Hartnett if Bill Lee and Clay Bryant wouldn't be awful tired by World Series time, provided the Cubs win the pennant ..."Not those guys," hollered Gabby. "All they need is a good sleep, a couple of steaks under their belts and some batters to stand up in front of 'em"...

HOLLYWOOD — Martha Raye's divorce from Buddy Westmore becomes final today. And that means —if the movie singer hasn't changed her mind—that she'll be getting married again. A month ago she announced she would marry music arranger David Rose as soon as California law would permit.

Trent River Pickerel Tips 8-Pound Mark

TRENT RIVER, Sept. 29.—The honor goes to William Hadfield of Homestead, Pa., guest at Maple Inn, for landing the biggest pickerel this year. It tipped the scales at 8 pounds, measured 29 inches in length, 14 in girth, and was 8½ inches across back of head.

Mr. and Mrs. Hadfield were guided by James Cook and their Monday's catch resulted in two pickerel, two muskies, and four bass. The smaller pickerel weighed 4½ pounds and the muskies weighed six pounds each. This makes the third return trip for Mr. and Mrs. Hadfield to Maple Inn this year, and have proved lucky fishermen each time.

RHEUMATIC VICTIMS

Was there ever a more distressing ailment than Rheumatic aches and pains?

Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Sciatica—what does it matter what you call them? The root cause is generally the same—Uric Acid in your joints—and the usual cause of Uric Acid is a liver that's out of order. Strike a blow at the cause and begin to enjoy real relief.

Take a glassful of water. Stir a ½ teaspoonful of Fynnon Salt into it and drink before breakfast every day. Soon Rheumatic aches and pains will begin to "let up". They'll become less frequent.

Remedy lies in the combination of Sodium, Potassium and Lithium in Fynnon Salt. These elements are similar to those from Mineral Springs which have brought fame to Spas the world over. But spas cost time and money to visit—Fynnon Salt comes to rheumatic sufferers in their own homes. Start today, get relief from rheumatic pains the Fynnon way. At all druggists', 75c a large bottle.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 28.—An estimated attendance of close to thirty-five hundred attended the Fall Fair presented by the Seymour Agricultural Society here on Wednesday afternoon. Castleton defeated Colborne eleven to nothing in one of the featured attractions of the day. It was an exhibition hard ball fixture and was capably handled by Charlie Davidson. It was an interesting affair until the end of the fourth when Castleton went on their scoring spree, rolling up a lead of elecen in the three remaining innings. They found little trouble in hitting Burliegh's fast pitched ball. Reyms was on the mound for the winners.

Rifle Maker Discussed Bren Gun 4 Months Before Hahn Acted

OTTAWA, Sept. 29—(CP)—Four months before Major J. E. Hahn made his first proposal to the department of National Defence, an officer of the Department discussed the gun with the manager of a rifle factory, Mr. Justice H. H. Davis, Royal Commissioner on the Bren gun contract was told yesterday.

The officer was Lieut. M. P. Jolley of the ordnance branch. The name of the factory was not given but Lieut. Jolley on the witness stand, said so far as he knew it was the only one in Canada. It was producing small sporting rifles

Lieut. Jolley was questioned about his visit to the factory by Lieut.-Col. George Drew whose criticism of the contract under which the John Inglis Company, headed by Major Hahn, led to the inquiry.

He said he visited the factory in making surveys of industrial establishments to ascertain their capability of producing supplies of various kinds. He showed the manager a picture of the Bren gun and explained it. They dicussed the possibility of producing it in the factory but both were agreed the machinery there was unsuitable

"At least we may say the equipment was as good as the equipment Major Hahn had at that time," remarked Col. Drew.

Would Hear the Manager

Mr Justice Davis said he would be glad to hear the manager of the rifle factory if he wished to come forward and give his version of the conversation. He asked how large the factory was.

Lieut. Jolley said he thought it employed between 100 and 200 men.

E. J. Powell Honored By Bible Class

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Sept. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. W. A. O'Brian entertained the members of the Young Men's Bible Class of St. Andrews Sunday School of which the host is the popular and efficient teacher, at their home east of the village on Thursday evening in honor of Ernest J. Powell, whose marriage to Miss Jessie Armstrong was an event of Saturday, the wedding taking place at high noon.

Bingo and other games filled out the first part of the evening happily, a sing-song, with Esther Might at the piano, preceding the presentation of a handsome electric floor lamp to the guest of honor. The gift was informally presented, Gerald Todd and Gordon Muspratt expressing the appreciation of "Ernie" by his fellow class members, and mentioning their pleasure in the fact that he was not leaving the community, and they would continue to have him enrolled on the class register.

The groom-to-be having voiced his thanks, and been given a hearty handclap expressive of the good fellowship prevailing in the young men's organization, and in particular in regard to the member about to join the ranks of the benedicts, the hostess, assisted by Misses Leitha Edworthy and Esther Might, served refreshments, and a further social hour was enjoyed before the guests left for home.

WARSAW

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson of the International Harvester Company were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Adamson and little son, Keene, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Adamson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Crowe. Little Marie Adamson also has spent one week with her grandparents, is remaining for a longer visit.

Mrs. W. C. L. Lloyd returned to Toronto last Friday after a week with her sister, Mrs. D. Miller. To Mrs. L. Lloyd, Canada is home after over twenty years in Australia.

Mr. and Mrs. William Graham of Indian River were Sunday guests of Mrs. Robert Payne, also Mr. and Mrs. John Sargent from Peterborough.

Mrs. E. W. Best of Brighton spent last week as guest of Mrs. F. Sidey.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson at Bethel, Keene and Zion on the Keene circuit on Sunday and attended the Bethel service on Warsaw circuit in the evening, and Mrs. Ferguson was guest at the parsonage on Sunday afternoon.

Rev. Mr. Lowry of Toronto, a retired Presbyterian minister gave an uplifting sermon on Sunday evening in the Warsaw Presbyterian church. The hymns sung were old, familiar ones. Mr. Lowry read some selected passages of scripture and told his hearers to read and ponder the fourth chapter of Ephesians, when they went home. There will be no service in that church next Sunday four congregations will meet with Hastings for a missionary rally at 3 p.m. in Hastings. On the following Sabbath, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed, with preparatory service the preceding Wednesday evening.

The pretty little Anglican church was tastefully decorated with flowers and products of field and garden, for the annual harvest home festival. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Brain of Peterborough, and a goodly number gathered.

Bethel United church held Anniversary services on Sunday. There were no services on the other charges. The choirs joint, Zion and Bethel numbers were "Show your Colors", and "In the Morning of Life". Mrs. Chester Hamilton and Mrs. William Miller took the duet.

At the Evening service there was a splendid congregation. Zion choir assisted in the service of praise as in the morning. An interesting feature just after the prayer was the baptism of Margaret Mary infant daughter of Rev. J. W. and Mrs. Wilkinson, by Rev. Mr. Ferguson.

Mr. Fergusons sermon stressed action in the Christian life, actual doing, not merely talking about it.

Y.P.A. Discusses Economic Outlook

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Sept. 29. — The Christian Citizenship Department, Earl Edworthy, convenor, was in charge of the Young People's Union meeting on Tuesday at 8 p.m., the attendance being gratifying and the interest sustained.

The topic, "Unemployment and the Economic Situation," was ably taken by the leader, the question and answer method of approach bringing out many practical suggestions, that it was afterward decided to have written out, read at the next regular meeting, and then passed on to the Y.P.U. Presbyterial Council for publication.

Gordon Might read the lesson, and the president, B. B. Dawson, offered prayer. It was decided to have the usual fall party the Friday before Thanksgiving, and to send delegates to the fall Y.P.U. convention, to be held at Perth on October 14, 15, and 16, when it is expected that eight or nine of the young people will represent the local Y.P.U.

The usual recreational period and sing-song closed the program, and the Mizpah benediction the meeting.

PROSPECTS BRIGHTEN FOR FOOTBRIDGE ACROSS QUAKER DAM

750 Members Are Sought In "Y" Drive

The opening gun in the Y. M. C. A.'s drive for membership that they hope will reach a new all-time high, was sounded last night at a banquet in the association's headquarters, under chairmanship of A. L. Elliott.

The association is driving for 750 members in the senior division, 400 in the junior. If that total is reached it will be the largest registration the association has ever held in this city.

The campaigners were divided into two competing camps headed by H. L. Garner and T. A. Mackay. In Mr. Garner's division were Gordon Manicce, Barney Scariet, —im Goldie, Jack Richardson, Fred S. Potter, John McMillan; in Mr. Mackay's camp were Doug Tanney, Cliff Cadd, Al Holmes, Doug Loomis, Alex Fitzgerald, Dave Rogers.

More than sixty men were present at last night's banquet. Mayor James Hamilton congratulated the Y. M. C. A. on its work, forecast the drive would be a total success. C. S. Cummer, president of the local branch of the association spoke words of encouragement. Chief speaker for the evening was Rev. G. S. Easton, who told of his long connection with "Y" work, and told workers they could render no better service to their fellows than to invite them into the organization.

The first report supper was slated for Monday, October 3, at 6.15 o'clock.

County's Protest Of Garbage Bill Finds Greater Grounds Of Protest

WHEN Reeve James Milby of North Monaghan township approached the finance committee of the city council Wednesday night to protest a bill of $127.16 tendered the county council for a year's collection of garbage from the county court house, he found that others have even greater grounds for protest.

"Our garbage consists of about five cans of garbage twice a week and the city is charging us $127.16 to gather it up," he protested. Ald. James Dutton explained the rate is fixed by property value.

Ald. R. M. Glover came to bat with the information that the old Royal Theatre, long closed, has paid garbage tax for the past twelve years, "and not a scrap has been carried away," he said. Ald. E. R. Wilson went one better with the information that his company, the Peterborough Machine and Lubrication Company, has paid the tax for the past 34 years without ever having had any garbage taken away.

Then City Clerk S. Armstrong told that payment of such tax is required under the Municipal Act and recalled one occasion on which George Street United Church had sued the city for recovery of one of its payments of the tax. The suit had failed, he recounted.

SCOUT APPLE DAY

On motion of Mayor Hamilton seconded by Judge Smoke the police commission at its Wednesday meeting gave the Peterborough Boy Scouts Association permission to hold the annual Apple Day on Saturday, October 15.

WINTER CLOTHING

Chief Constable Newhall's requistion for winter clothing, including a number of greatcoats and fur caps and a dozen pairs of heavy trousers was considered by the police commission Wednesday and tenders will be asked for from local dealers.

ARRANGE FOR FUEL

Judge Smoke and Mayor Hamilton were empowered by the police commission Wednesday to secure twenty-eight tons of coal required for heating the police building and garage during the winter.

PATRIOTIC WIFE

"I asked my wife last night whether it would be all right with her if I joined the army," said today a young married man who lives on Frederick or Margaret avenue, one of those when-end streets, "and she answers right back, "Certainly, it'll be all right with me'. Now, what do you think of that. I don't think she really meant it, but if I thought she did!"

ON INTERDICTED LIST.

Police court proceedings this morning were so short that the regular attendants had scarcely time to get into their regular seats. One man pleaded guilty to being drunk while on the interdicted list and was fined $10 and $4.50 costs and the court was over. Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., was on the bench.

HARVEST FESTIVAL.

There will be a harvest festival social in St. John's Parish House on Friday night, following a service in the church in which Rev. Canon Sawers of Toronto, will be the preacher. The service wil begin at 7.30 o'clock. On Sunday Bishop Broughall of Niagara, will preach harvest festival sermons.

CARS DAMAGED.

Cars owned by Gordon Hudson and J. H. Sanderson of Ida, came into collision on Charlotte street Wednesday and both were damaged. Mr. Hudson, who had been parked, was turning out to go west on Charlotte street and Sanderson was also driving west when the collision took place.

ELIMINATING HAZARDS.

Two proposals to elimintae motoring hazards in this city were proposed to the Board of Works Wednesday night by City Engineer R. H. Parsons. One, which the board pased, will place a new 'slow' sign at the corner of Douro and Armour Road. The other, referred to the city's special parking committee, would make Park Hill Road a through street from one end to the other, except where it crossed Water and George streets.

BOUGHT IN PETERBOROUGH

At the last meeting of the Stratford city council there was a discussion regarding ways and means for increasing business for the Canadian National Railways the large car shops of which are located in that city. During the discussion Ald. McDonald is reported as having said that he wired an order to a Peterborough firm "on Monday morning and it was delivered here Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock by freight. Not many people realize that the railways are giving such a fine pick-up-and-deliver service."

THE LAST RESORT

A customer was overheard in a local department store yesterday to ask a girl clerk, "Well are you ready to send your boy friend to war?" "No sir," she shot back,—"I know of a spot back of Apsley I'll send him first—Why I'd even marry him if I thought it would keep him home."

CUTTING CORN CROP.

Farmers are busy these days digging pctatoes and cutting corn as variations to plowing and the other seasonal work. The corn is a heavy crop generally throughout the county. Harry Vansickle of Rush Point, Belmont Township, produced stalks this week that measured 14 feet 3 inches.

OPEN STANDS.

On motion of Ald. James Juby at Wednesday night's Finance Committee meeting, the city's by-law governing placing of foodstuffs on open stands in the street will be reviewed. Ald. Juby objected to food being so exposed, and would have all removed.

BLOCKING OF SEWERS.

Because lawn grass and leaves plug catch basins in the city's sewers residents will be asked not to rake such refuse to the edge of the streets for flushers to carry it into the sewers, it was decided at Wednesday night's meeting of the Board of Works. Not only that, such procedure is in violation of a city by-law, members said.

DEMAND FOR SUGAR.

Several grocers report a rather heavy demand for sugar during the last ten days. Sales of one hundred pound bags have greatly exceeded the normal business. One man said his sales totalled more during these days than for the past seven or eight months. Anticipation of the possibility of war and the soaring of prices as in 1914 prompted the recent buying.

GUIDES ENGAGED.

Guides at Hiawatha are all engaged for the opening of the duck shooting season on Saturday, Hanlan Howard told The Examiner today. Available cottages have been taken, and with many black ducks and teal seen in various bays of Rice Lake recently it is expected that local and visiting shotgun men should get a big share of birds over the week-end.

NO POLIOMYELITIS

Dr. G. Murray Fraser, M. O. H., is feeling relieved these days in the prospect that the year is going to pass the danger season of late summer and early autumn without one case of infantile paralysis. It has been the most satisfactory feature of public health in Peterborough this year. At present there is an occasional case of scarlet fever, but otherwise the city's health condition is exceptionally favorable.

DETERMINE RATING

Financial rating of patients admitted to Queen Mary Isolation Hospital in future will be determined immediately after they have entered. Ald. Walter Stocker moved such a motion at the finance committee's meeting Wednesday night after he had explained that up to the present time it was not known whether a patient was indigent and a city charge until long after he had left hospital. Other hospitals learn such facts immediately, submit bills to the proper authorities as soon as possible, he explained.

GRANT MADE TO ORFUNS

The Peterborough Orfuns are richer today by $200, given to them by the city council at a meeting of the finance committee Wednesday night and charged up to advertising in the manufacturers' committee headed by Ald. R. M. Glover. Full support of the new senior team was given by members of the council, all of whom agreed that football should receive every encouragement. The sport is going to give Peterborough valuable publicity this fall, said Ald. Glover and the others agreed. Probable broadcasts of the games will see a great deal of free advertising, they agreed.

MEETINGS ARE LARGE.

Members of the City Council got back into form on Wednesday night as committee meetings took on a fall complexion. In summer months the meetings are brief, but as winter creeps on they become longer and longer as increasingly knotty items came up for discussion. Wednesday night's meetings of the Finance Committee, Board of Works, and Fire, Water and Light Committee lasted from 7.30 until 11 o'clock. Meetings just before estimates for the year are struck, are most dreaded by councillors and reporters alike. Some have been known to last until after midnight. Councillors are lucky, because they can then retire, but reporters have stories to write after all is over.

REPORT TO BE STUDIED

A detailed report by City Treasurer Morley Shaver on "Sources of Municipal Revenue" compiled at a recent convention he attended, was held over for study at a special meeting by members of the finance committee sitting Wednesday night. The report was considered so important and complete it merited special consideration which pressure of immediate business did not permit at a busy meeting.

COLLECTING TAX ARREARS

Taxes owed the city by H. J. Withers, garbage collector, aroused members of the finance committee Wednesday night and they took severe measures to collect them. On motion of Ald. Walter Stocker it was decided to apply part of the money Withers receives each month for garbage collection against his debt to the city. "He owes us about $800 and here he's getting between $800 and $900 a month from the city," said Ald. Stocker.

Kiwanis Spent $1,800 In Past Year

The doors of the Armouries swing open to-night at 7.30 on Kiwanis' Annual Carnival. The high light of the carnival this year will be the draw for the Dream House. This draw will be made on the last night of the show, Friday, at 11 o'clock.

In asking for the support of the public for the carnival, Kiwanians are not unmindful of the success of previous shows. They feel that it is but fair that the citizens generally should be given some intimation as to the disposal of the cash proceeds.

The Health Camp.

Last year's fair netted roughly $1,800.00.

Of this amount, Jackson Park Health Camp, Kiwanis' major community activity, running for eight weeks during the past summer cost $1,269.25. Some of the larger items included in this amount were: Bathing suits $15.00, paint, lumber, etc. for general repairs $80.93, milk and eggs $198.00, groceries $57.70, meat $39.41, bread $60.61, ice $11.40, medical and hospital $55.00, transportation to and from camp $193.50, nurse, cook and girls' and boys' supervisors $443.34. The club was saved an additional $200.00 expenditure by the generosity of firms and citizens who donated Ovaltine, Crown Brand Corn Syrup, Peanut Butter, Cereals, Vegetables, Ice cream, Candies, Fruit, etc.

Wading Pool.

A year ago the club with the cooperation of the city authorities erected the wading pool in King Edward Park and a check for $580.00 was sent to the city in payment. This money was also taken from the proceeds of last year's carnival.

The public generally will be interested in the following letters received by the club—one from a little girl who was at the camp this year and the other from a mother whose children were also cared for at the camp:

"I sincerely wish to thank you for the wonderful opportunity our children have had this summer to enjoy themselves at the Jackson Park summer camp. Not only for the good time but for the good food and medical attention they received. I am very grateful." This letter from a mother.

And this one from a little girl: "I wish to thank you for the wonderful time we had at camp this year and all the other years. I have been going to camp for four year. I wish to thank you too for the treats we had and only wish the camp could have lasted longer."

In asking support for their carnival to-night and to-morrow night Kiwanians feel that the two letters above speak volumes. They expect a record attendance.

Young Man Would Prefer Tank Or Airplane To Handling Bayonet In The Next War

A YOUNG MAN of military age was soliloquizing yesterday on the branch of military service he would prefer. "I don't think I'd mind the air force, and I'd even consider a tank, but one thing that doesn't appeal to me is a hand to hand scuffle with them bayonets. Supposing you hook up with some guy that's twice your size. Why, you're right behind the eight-ball. You've got two strikes on you when you go up to bat. Those big guys should all be handicapped about twenty points in that round, but they're not. Get them up in the clouds in a plane, and you've got that big guy down to your own level. Isn't that a fair way to look at it. If Mackenzie King says "Bob, the jig's up" or words to that effect, I'm going to hold out for a plane that can do about 250 an hour at the very least.

Another thing about the bayonet business is that it would make you feel like a pig, you know one of those wild boars they go hunting in Germany and India with big long spears. Just think of passing out like that. The fellow who invented the bayonet has an awful score chalked up against him; worse than the inventor of poison gas and barbs on fish hooks. There is nothing aesthetic about it. On the other hand supposing you're up 10,000 feet and an anti-aircraft shell blows you and your kite to bits, there's something spectacular even nonchalant about the end of things; and you've given the ground crew a show. Besides you never knew what hit you. There's a whole lot of things to be said about getting a plane, but I couldn't think of one nice thing to say about a bayonet. So pass on that stuff. You remember that Guyenmeyer, the French air ace, became a legend in the other big war. He went out one day and was never seen again. Did you ever hear of a bayoneteer becoming legendary? And you never will. That's troglodyte stuff, and I'm not having any of it."

Rioting In Czech-German Crisis

A policeman floors a demonstrator during the rioting which followed a "save the peace" demonstration at Trafalgar Square, another demonstrator shouts in the background while mounted police stand by. The peace demonstration was held while British and French statesmen were discussing Hitler's demands made of Czechoslovakia and handed to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain at Berchtesgaden. The rioting started when the demonstrators started a march on Downing street where the statesmen were in session.

Archbishop M. J. O'Brien Is Made Roman Count On 25th Anniversary

KINGSTON, Ont., Sept. 29.—(Special).—With due pomp and ceremony and in the presence of high dignitaries of the Catholic Church including, archbishops, bishops, monsignori, priests and members of religious orders present as well as a vast congregation of laity, His Excellency Most Rev. Hildiebrand Antoniutti, Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland, who has just arrived at Ottawa to assume his diplomatic post as papal representative, was received Wednesday night in the Metropolitan Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception by His Grace Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., LL.D., Archbishop of Kingston.

The occasion of the visit of His Excellency was the celebration of the 25th anniversary of Archbishop O'Brien who came to Kingston nine years ago from Peterborough, where he had been St. Peter's Cathedral curate, Church of the Sacred Heart parish pastor and then Bishop of the Diocese of Peterborough.

The giant cathedral was arrayed in all its glory on this auspicious occasion with brilliant lighting, Papal and British flags. The scene was a brilliant one indeed.

Addresses Presented

Following the reception to the distinguished papal representative the clergy of the Diocese of Kingston presented an address and a purse to Archbishop O'Brien after which the laity of Kingston did likewise.

A very large delegation of parishioners of the Church of the Sacred Heart of Peterborough presented to His Grace an address of congratulations and good wishes of His Grace's former parishioners and from his home town where, as he expressed it, he was brought up with many of those present from Peterborough on this occasion.

The Peterborough delegation, as had two preceding ones, entered the sanctuary where the address was read on behalf of the Peterborough parish by Stanley Bogue and a spiritual bouquet was presented to His Grace by Vernon Grady and Oscar Chenier on behalf of the children of Sacred Heart School, Peterborough, and St. Joseph's School, Otonabee.

On behalf of the Cubs and Scouts of the Sacred Heart parish, Peterborough. Donald Corrin presented His Grace with a gift also.

His Grace in replying to the addresses and presentation made to him spoke in touching reminiscent veing of his former home in Peterborough where he grew up as a boy and went to school there became the curate of the cathedral and finally became Bishop of the Diocese.

Worn Ring 25 Years

His Grace spoke feelingly of the co-operation which he had always received from the people of Peterborough. In the course of his remarks relative to Peterborough, His Grace said that when he was made bishop he was presented with a ring by the people of Sacred Heart parish which he has continued to wear to this day.

He gave assurance that though removed from Peterborough, the ties which he held so dear to it had not been broken and he looked back with fond memories of his days in Peterborough.

He announced that he would say mass next Sunday in Sacred Heart Church. His Grace warmly thanked the children of Sacred Heart parish for their spiritual bouquet.

In the course of the brilliant ceremony on behalf of His Holiness Pope Pius, Rt. Rev. Monsignor Umberto Mozzini, secretary of the Apostolic Legation at Ottawa, read the declaration announcing that Archbishop O'Brien had been made a Count of the church with the privilege of assisting at the Pontifical throne. His Excellency the papal delegate conferred the honor upon His Grace following the reading of the declaration.

Inspector Seeks Salary Increase

Ald. Walter Stocker crossed with Ald. James Dutton at Wednesday night's meeting of the finance committee, when an application for increase in salary by Sanitary Inspector Ronald MacPherson came up for discussion.

MacPherson asked that his appointment be confirmed at the approaching end of his first year "on approval", and that his salary be increased from $1,200 to $1,500 a year. A letter from Medical Officer of Health Dr. G. Murray Fraser, gave strong recommendation of Mr. MacPherson, said he had done excellent work and shown much progress in capability.

"That's the first I have heard of either of those letters and I'm chairman of the board of health," said Ald. Stocker. "That's the kind of cooperation we get around there."

Ald. Dutton was in favor of granting both requests of Mr. MacPherson, moved a motion to that effect. "That's quite a jump,' interrupted Ald. Stocker. "You're very free with other people's money, aren't you," he said. Ald. Dutton objected to the statement and Ald. Stocker said such was his opinion.

"The man is worth it," said Ald. Glover. "You pay your garbage men nearly twenty dollars a week." The matter was referred to the board of health for report on motion of Aldermen Wilson and Bradburn.

Council Will Submit Plans To Quaker Oats Company Cost Is Estimated at $3,861

Probability that the city will construct a footbridge across the London street dam, on the property of the Quaker Oats company, was seen Wednesday night when City Engineer R. H. Parsons submitted plans and an estimate of the cost of the projected construction to members of the board of works.

While the bridge may not be constructed until next year, there was a possibility that the short-cut from Ashburnham to the city proper may be opened in the near future. Members of the committee agreed to submit complete plans of the proposed bridge to Quaker Oats officials and ask them to reopen their property to pedestrians until it is completed.

Cost of the 300-foot bridge was estimated by Mr. Parsons at $3,861—a much lower figure than had been previously mentioned. Reason for the lowered cost was a recent conference between Mayor Hamilton along with other members of the council and officials of the company. The company agreed to permit use of their present bridge in the new construction, a step which lowered previous estimates a great deal.

The promise of action on the matter came after residents of East city had petitioned the city council when the Quaker Oats company closed the London street dam, long a thoroughfare between homes and downtown areas.

The Rambling REPORTERS

HER AFTERNOON.

She had arranged the bouquet for the purpose of taking it to the Little Lake Cemetery, where she desired to decorate a grave. "And after I get that attended to I am going to walk on over to the Locks where I believe I can catch a fish. I am fond of fishing and have done a good deal at it and generally with some success."—K.

Advises Britain Put Action Up To Dominions

By Guy Rhoades
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Sept. 29—(CP Cable)—Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express today called upon Prime Minister Chamberlain to lay the whole Czechoslovak problem before the Dominions and await their reply before he acts.

The independent newspaper called attention to that part of Mr. Chamberlain's speech of last night referring to the Empire and added: "He says that the decision we may have to take is one concerning the whole British Empire. By that statement he implies that before any decision to fight can be taken, the British Dominions must be consulted.

"For these Domions are self-governing bodies and no decision bringing the whole empire into action can be taken until the Dominions have said their word."

United Consent First.

The Canadian-born peer's paper continued:

"We must have the Dominions' cooperation and collaboration with us before we embark on war at any time.

"That is the principle which the Prime Minister enunciates. It is a sound one. It is indeed the only principle on which the unity of this commonwealth can be maintained.

"The foreign policy of the Empire cannot, must not, be the foreign policy of Great Britain alone. It must incorporate in an agreed form the foreign policies of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

"A common course agreed upon by the members of this vast family of nations in council may direct our steps along the path of war. But nothing short of that joint determination can do so or should do so.

"Mr. Chamberlain now must send an inquiry to the Dominions setting out the nature and implications of the present problem before us. He will ask their government to take council and he will await their answer.

"In taking that course, the Prime Minister will have the support of every peace-loving man and woman in Britain. He will have the allegiance of all who see in the British Empire the mightiest instrument for freedom and righteousness in this world."

Reason or Force.

The Times (Independent) said that while it was still impossible to tell if Mr. Chamberlain's efforts will be successful "at least this lesser success is already achieved, that he has cleared the moral issue before this country of all its irrelevancies."

The Times reviewed at length the issue and remarked: "self-determination, the professed principle of the Treaty of Versailles had been invoked by Herr Hitler against its written text and his appeal has been allowed."

What was left in dispute, it added, was the choice of procedure and the choice now is "between the method of reason and the method of force."

It seemed "incredible" that neither the Roosevelt appeal nor the Chamberlain speech had been published in Germany, The Times said, noting both had received prominent treatment in the Italian press.

The Daily Herald (Labor) said:

"War is none of our disiring. Yet we are called upon to acknowledge to ourselves, force upon our minds (unwilling to believe that this can be actuality, unwilling to accept it as anything but nightmare from which we shall awaken again into the light of day) the fact that war may be upon us—unless by some supreme achievement of statesmanship it can at the last hour be avoided.

"Herr Hitler demands that before a threat of German force, every principle of international order, peaceful settlement of disputes and negotiations between nations shall be set aside.

"If there be war—and we may still hope he will pause before he takes the irrevocable step—his alone will be the responsibility."

Man's Arm Broken When Car Ditched

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Sept. 29.—Rev. Pulferd, Hastings mail courier, had his arm broken Wednesday when his car was ditched and upset a mile west of Hastings. He was returning home after completing his mail run when the accident happened, about 10.30 o'clock. There were no eye-witnesses of the affair, but it is believed Pulferd was reaching for his tobacco in his pocket when he lost control of his car which ran into the ditch on his left-hand and turned over. He was brought into Peterborough for hospital treatment.

A Mild Winter?

BRADFORD, Pa., Sept. 29—(AP)—Dah-sa-Noch, 'the Sagacious One' scratched his grey head and predicted today the coming winter would be a mild one. The Seneca Indian, who has been 96 winters, pointed to the scarcity of black squirrels in the forest this autumn as one indication of a "green winter." A profusion of black squirrels, he said, always means deep snow and bitter cold.

Harvest Services Held In Hastings

HASTINGS, Sept. 29.— Harvest home services were held in St. George's Anglican church on Sunday. The church was beautifully decorated with products of the orchard, garden and field, tastefully arranged and intermixed with masses of flowers and foliage, suggesting in a very real way God's goodness and nature's response to the needs of mankind.

The Rev. Wm. Stocks at the morning service spoke on gratitude and the choir sang a thanksgiving anthem. In the evening the guest speaker was the Rev. R. E. Lemon of Havelock.

Anniversary Concludes.

Large congregations were present at both services on Sunday for the concluding events in connection with the 75th anniversary of Trinity United church. In the morning the guest speaker was the Rev. H. J. Bell, a former pastor, now of Blackstock. Soloists were Miss Sexsmith of Peterborough and Mrs. E. Hess. In the evening, the Rev. M. L. Hinton of Castleton, also a former pastor, and one whose pastorage was the longest in the history of the church, was the guest speaker. Soloists were Miss B. Roberts of Havelock and W. W. Knight.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Johnston and little son of Hamilton, are visitors this week with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Oliver.

Rev. H. J. and Mrs. Bell, Ruth and Milton, of Blackstock, and Mrs. A. German of Hastings, were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Preston of Asphodel.

Mrs. A. Leach, of Texas, is visiting at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Brown.

Bolt Kills 9 Cows For Roslin Farmer

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Sept. 29. — Raymond Whiteman, Queensboro youth, was sentenced to serve one month in the county jail after being convicted of a charge of breaking and entering, when the accused appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court on Monday. On a subsequent charge of the theft of a motor car, Whiteman was given a two year suspended sentence.

Whiteman faced charges of breaking and entering the garage of Erving Delyes, Queensboro, and taking a motor car. It was established by witnesses that Whiteman took the vehicle and motored to Haliburton in search of employment but returned the car before he was apprehended by authorities. The charges were preferred by Provincial Constable A. Dymond, Madoc.

As the result of the brief but severe electrical storm which passed over the district early Tuesday, the loss of nine milch cows was reported by Vincent O'Neil of Roslin district.

The animals believed to have sought shelter from the storm under one of the trees on the farm were victims of lightning which shattered the tree, killing them instantly.

Unaware of the pasture tragedy, the owner visited the field later in the morning to find his fine herd huddled in a silent group near the seared tree trunk.

Millbrook's W.M.S. Plans Hostess Tea

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Sept. 29.—Mrs. H. Seaton was hostess for the September meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Grace Presbyterian church, which was held at her home, Tupper street, on Friday at 3 p.m., with the president, Mrs. S. E. Eakins, in the chair.

Mrs. A. Coyte read the lesson, and the hostess offered prayer after which the roll was called and answered with a verse of scripture, and Miss Agnes Johnston followed with a fine paper, developing the general theme of Peace, under the title: "The Power of Peace." The matter of the allocation was discussed, and to raise necessary funds a hostess tea will be held the latter part of October. The committee in charge, beside the executive, will include Mrs. Milton Fallis, Mrs. W. C. Thorndyke, Mrs. A. Coyte, and Mrs. Harry Ball. Miss Ruth Thorndyke was put in charge of the program, with power to choose her own helpers.

The treasurer presented a report covering July and August, when no meetings were held, showing $9.81 in the expense fund, and a total of $47.15 from various sources. The president reported a pleasant gathering which some of the members had enjoyed as guests of the Centreville Auxiliary, Bensfort also being present, and it was decided to try and secure Mr. and Mrs. Davies, missionaries on furlough from Manchuria, for the Fall thankoffering meeting.

Miss Eileen Hunter sang, "Peace Be Still," during the worship period, with Miss Mamie Fisher at the piano, and Mrs. J. R. Thompson brought an interesting message regarding the opening of the new "Rocky Mountain House Hospital," an undertaking of the western auxiliaries, which took place on July 14, of this year. It is on the border between Alberta and British Columbia, in one of the few remaining frontier towns, and is a much-needed institution. Sentence prayers for the success of this work followed, those taking part including Mrs. S. Weatherup, Mrs. H. Seaton, Misses M. Fisher and R. Thorndyke.

During the social hour at the close Mrs. R. J. McMahon supplied homemade fudge, sold in containers of two sizes, and the resulting funds were added to the W.M.S. treasury.

Taxi Bylaw Is Discussed By Commission

The police commission spent two hours Wednesday afternoon discussing the new taxi bylaw, the provisions of which were read aloud by City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, secretary of the Commission in the presence of a very much interested delegation of taxi owners. The whole bylaw had not been read by the time the hour for adjournment came and there will be another session of the commission on Friday afternoon.

The new measure which is designed to control and regulate not only the taxi cab business, but to exercise similar control over tally-hos and sightseeing buses and drive-your-self cars, neither of which class of vehicle is at present in use here.

One of the most important features of the proposed legislation is that it will compel taxi owners to carry insurance, covering personal injury to the extent of 10,000—not more than 5,000 in the case of injury to one person—and 1,000 property damage.

Herb. Stinson, one of the delegation of taxi men present objected to this clause, not because he was opposed to the principle of insurance but because as he said, he was afraid that once this insurance regulation was passed the taxi owners would be at the mercy of the insurance companies who would take advantage of the situation. He pointed out that most of the folk who patronized taxis were workers with comparatively small wages and they would be unable to pay the higher fares that compulsory insurance would make necessary.

Will Stop Holdup

It was explained to Mr. Stinson that the commission had secured information on this point and that it had been found that insurance to the amount insisted on in the bylaw could be obtained at the rate of $85 per car per year.

"Personally I am not in favor of anything less than the amount of insurance set forth by the Highway Traffic Act, said Judge Smoke. "If it is found when you come to renew your insurance there is any evidence of a holdup the matter can be taken under revision."

The bylaw requires taxi owners to be licensed at the rate of $5 per car per year and for their drivers to be licensed at a cost of $1 a year. The owners are required to have proper equipment, satisfactory to the chief constable, to have a garage and telephone facilities and to provide adequate 24-hour service. Drivers are not to be kept at work for more than twelve hours a day, nor must taxi owners drive their own cars for a longer period than twelve hours out of every twenty-four.

For the purpose of establishing rates, the city and surrounding district is divided into two zones.

No. 1 zone comprises practically all the city except the portion north of Anson and Wolsley streets on the west side of the river and north of Parkhill Road on the east side and the section in the south east end of Ashburnham while No. 2 zone takes in the other portions of the city and the district three miles from the limits.

The suggested fares from point to point within No. 1 zone are twenty-five cents per passenger, with no charge for children under ten if accompanied by an adult and from any point within No. 1 zone to any ponit in No. 1 zone or vice versa, 50 cents for one or two passengers and 25 cents for each additional passenger. In each case these rates apply to the hours between 6 o'clock in the morning and 12 o'clock at night.

The fares for the night hours will be discussed when the commission meets again on Friday.

AFRAID TO MARRY

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, is stunned when Craig Denby, the man she loves, tells her on the phone that he has married a girl he met at a week-end house party. Afraid of marriage, Judy reflects she put Craig off once too many times. Then she phones her father's lawyers to learn the details of his financial crash, just announced in the newspapers, and talks with Ronald Birrel, a brilliant young attorney from Tennessee who has just joined the firm. Ronald both angers and fascinates Judy, doubting that she has the stamina to remain in New York and make her own way designing dresses which she says she likes to do. Judy's father tells her he is going west with her stepmother, assuming his daughter plans to join her mother abroad. Judy doesn't tell him her mother cabled, announcing other plans for the winter with her second husband. Craig phones to tell how sorry he is to learn of the family's reverses, then Judy comes upon Ronald as she goes downstairs for a book in the library. Ronald takes Judy for a drive and tells her about himself. On a sudden impulse he kisses her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 6

RONALD BIRRELL'S arms were strong and firm. The chest against which he pressed Judy was hard. For a wild second she realized he had not kissed any other girl this way, that he had not wanted to. It was on his lips, the confession written in full.

Then he let her go. He spoke slowly. "I'm sorry, Judy. I forgot myself. I haven't any other excuse. If I can atone. . . ."

"I'd like to go home," she said shaken when she should have been angry.

Ronald Birrel spoke again, when they had turned the car back toward the city. "Maybe you will remember me now."

Those words erased the strange uncertainty that had seized her. They released her anger.

"I'll forget you as quickly as I can."

"As you wish." He did not speak again until he helped her from the car. She did not say good night. She ran into the foyer to the elevator.

"Judy Rogers, you don't look like a girl a red-headed young man should take for open prey. You look NICE. I hate him, hate him, hate him!"

Three days later the town house was closed. Judy went to the train with her father and stepmother, leaving at once for the west. She knew they believed she was having her luggage taken to dock, to wait until the sailing of the Queen Mary. She had convinced them she could not be ready in time to take the Normandie. They supposed she was staying for a day or two with her aunt, prior to sailing.

In reality the luggage had gone to an unimportant hotel where the rate were low. Fifty dollars, a farewell gift from her father, had paid the rent for two weeks, and would provide her with some money for food and carfare.

But when the train pulled out, she stood on the platform, scared and white. She watched the white-coated porters signaling that they were ready, saw the rose-shaded lamps shining on the tables in the diner, and thought of the cheap little room where she would live now.

Then the train was gone. The last light bobbed its farewell as it swung under the tunnel beneath the river's approach.

She was alone! What was it Ronald Birrell had said: "Life can't lick you unless you want it to."

As if anyone wanted it to! The boy wasn't as smart as he sounded, viewed in the cold terms of daylight.

Well, she must hunt for a job. She had worn a black woollen suit, with a white blouse that was an intricate mass of ruffles. It was too frivolous for an office but it was feminine. Surely men must tire of secretaries in severe tailleurs. Only she couldn't type, so she couldn't be a secretary. She might clerk. Eventually she wanted to model but that must wait until a little time passed so the photographers would not find her, and put her pictures in the paper some more. She bought a paper, carried it to a drug store, and scanned the employment pages as she ate a devilled egg sandwich and drank a malted milk.

No good. No jobs she could handle. There was the telephone directory. It would supply names of employment agencies.

So it happened that the next morning, early, Judy, still in the black ensemble, but with a simpler blouse today, sat on a bench and waited to be interviewed at an agency. She noticed that the other girls who waited seemed sure of themselves. They had worked and knew what they could do.

"What's your specialty?" someone asked.

"I haven't any."

"That's bad. You should know how to do some one thing well. Can you model? You're slender enough and sort of built for wearing clothes. Of course, you aren't very tall . . ."

"No modeling," said Judy firmly. But why not? she could change her name. She had worn gowns on display in charity bazaars and style shows. She had poise.

It would have to be a shop not too well known, tough. Otherwise clients would recognize her. Some day she wouldn't care. Not yet, though.

So Judy filled out a blank and suggested that she would like to model.

"Nothing doing," the woman at the desk told her. "Models are tall and willowy. You're skinny enough, but too short. Still, once in a while they need somebody for juveniles. Ever do that?"

"Well, give us your application. We'll call you."

Judy registered with half a dozen other agencies. She was starting home when a voice hailed her at the subway steps. A girl seized her arm.

"Judy, I thought you were gone already! I knew the house was closed, and your family had left. When do you sail?"

The girl was Marjorie Barton. She had chestnut hair, bright and shining, and flashing blue eyes. She had been Judy's roommate at boarding school, and the one person in whom she would dare to confide. But Judy had been in Europe when Marjorie last had been in America, and then Marjorie had gone abroad when Judy returned. They had not met for a year.

Suddenly Judy wanted to cry. Here was someone who would understand. Here was a refuge. Then she straightened her shoulders.

"I'm job hunting, Marjorie, but nobody knows. Promise to keep it, won't you? Everyone thinks I'm going to France."

"But you're not?"

Standing at the top of the subway steps at Forty-second street and Seventh avenue Judy told the story.

"Come home to dinner with me, Judy. Dad's bringing a young lawyer, Ronald Birrell, who's been handling some work for him at the Heaton office. They say he's knocked down the feminine hearts of the city as though they were paper mache nine-pins. I'm not dropping any confetti to celebrate until I've viewed the gentleman but he's probably worth a good look. Please come, Judy."

"I can't, Marg, but I'd adore it. You see, nobody must know I'm in town. Not—not this lawyer or anyone."

"But I want to talk to you, and we haven't even time to grab a cab and go to the St. Regis for a cup of tea—I know, Judy! You come home for the night. You can call wherever you are staying. Then you may have a tray in your room, if you insist, but we can talk and talk. We have a year on which to catch up."

Judy's feet burned. High-heeled patent leather pumps were not so good for job hunting. Her crisp white blouse was wilted. So was the gardenia on her lapel. She tossed it through the window of the cab. She would just stay with Marjorie for half an hour, while she prepared for dinner. Then she would leave. She was strictly on her own. No favors from anyone!

But Marjorie's next words made her change her mind.

"Judy, where did Craig meet Mary Banner? She's a sweet child, but how did Craig and Mary happen to get married?"

"You know her?"

"She was travelling with an aunt in Switzerland, and some friends of mine knew the aunt. I'll tell you about it tonight."

"So Judy stayed. She watched Marjorie slip into a silver sheathe that was a shining, straight dress, and comb her hair high on the top of her shapely head. For just a moment she envied Marjorie, because she would sit in the candlelight and smile at Ronald. She wondered if he would kiss her, too, and a swift fear stabbed at her heart.

What if he did? She hated him. Oh, make the evening hurry, hurry, so she could hear about Mary who had married Craig!

A Wife Should Do a Lot of Thinking Before Rushing Into a Divorce Court When She Learns That Her Husband Has Been Unfaithful; She May Not Better Herself Or Her Family

DEAR MISS DIX — I accidentally discovered that my husband, who is a travelling salesman, spent his vacation with a woman who works for the same firm as he does at a hotel registered as his wife. When I told him what I had found out he admitted it. Said she was that kind of a woman; that he cared nothing for her; that I was the only one he loved, etc., etc., I would get a great deal of satisfaction out of making this woman lose her job, but if I did it would cost my husband his and we would be left without any means of support and my children are still in high school. What do you think of a woman like that, having an affair with a man whom she knew to be married? What do you think of him? Can I ever trust him again? What should I do?

MRS. A. C. G.

NSWER:

In a case like yours I think a woman is wise if, for the sake of her children, she summons up all the fortitude she has and swallow her bitter pill without making any more faces over it than she can help. And without calling in her friends and relatives to see her do it. It is a nauseous dose, I know. The taste will never be out of her mouth as long as she lives, but it is the better of two evils and will save her and her children, whose well being is more to her than her own happiness from a worse fate.

It is a terrible thing for a woman to find out that the husband she has loved and trusted has been unfaithful to her. It stab her to the heart. It humiliates her pride. It desecrates her marriage in her eyes. It kills her faith. It pulls down her house of happiness about her ears. And it is no wonder that in her first hurt surprise and anger she feels that she wants to be done with him forever and rushes to the divorce court.

But before she does this, she is wise if she sits calmly down and studies the situation and tries to find out if divorce is going to be a panacea for her trouble. If she leaves her husband, will her heart cease to ache for him? Where will she go? Has she enough money to live on and support and educate her children in the way in which their father is doing? Can she give them the place in society and the start in life that their father can give them?

It is hard to collect alimony from any man unless he is rich. Very few middle-aged women are capable of making enough money to support a family. And so only too often the woman who had divorced her husband because of his affair with another woman finds herself reduced to dire poverty.

Also, consider that there are degrees in infidelity. There is the infidelity of the flesh, which is the gratification of a merely animal appetite and is a thing of the moment only. And there is the infidelity of the mind and heart which involves a man's whole relationship to his wife and means that he has ceased to love her and does love some other woman.

Your husband's unfaithfulness belongs in the first category and is much less serious than it would be if it belonged in the second. Men are not monogamous by nature and it is quite possible for your husband still to love you and think you the finest woman in the world and yet to go off on an adventure with another woman. And if you can be generous enough to forgive him it is quite likely that you may yet have many happy years together. But if he prefers some other woman to you the case would be hopeless. It would be his heart and not his body that was faithless.

When I write that I think that women with children generally jump from the frying pan into the fire when they get divorces. I get loads of letters from divorcees saying that a wife owes it to her self-respect to leave a husband if he philanders, no matter how kind and generous and what a good provider he is, but I am very sure that the women who do this buy their self-respect at a ruinous price, and that they would be better off if they followed the biblical injunction to forgive the sinner seven times seven, and held their homes together.

DEAR MISS DIX—We are two girls in a small town, with fairly good office positions. We have been going with the same boys, who come from nice families and make just enough money to support us. We have known virtually all of the boys in this town all of our lives and do not think we could love any of them. We would like to go out of town and get positions in a city where we can meet new and interesting men, but our parents will not permit us. How are we to find our whether or not we love the boys we know? Should we marry them and settle down in this town for the remainder of our lives?

M. AND L.

ANSWER:

All girls dream about a glamorous Fairy Prince riding down their street some day. They are always looking for him and that is why they fall so easily for any strange man who comes their way and who has a new line. Any strange traveling salesman, any flashily dressed actor, any long-haired poet can have the girls eating out of his hand and turning up their noses at the sensible, worth-while boys to whom they are accustomed and who don't seem romantic to them because they went to school with them.

Believe me, my dears, the men in cities and far places are just cut off of the same bolt of cloth as the ones you know and they are no more interesting after you have known them for a week than the home-town lads. They all want to talk about themselves, their occupations, their cars, what they have been listening to over the radio and what they read in the newspapers and they all get bored when you try to talk about yourself. All the difference even in their love-making is that they don't ask you where you have been all their lives that they never met you before, all the follow-up about your being different from all other women and your eyes being like stars, and that you are the only one they ever loved, etc., etc., is the same old pattern.

Believe me, marrying the man you have known all your life and settling down on Main Street is a mighty safe matrimonial bet. You know what you are getting, and you don't have to go through all the adjusting that you have to do when you marry some one with whom you have hardly a speaking acquaintance.

Faultless Etiquette for Exciting Dates

Teen-Age Manners Can Be Smart

So you're off to the movies with a new beau! Make that first date a five-star performance.

Follow the usher gaily down the aisle. Let good-looking Dick bring up the rear. Or if there is no usher, Dick goes ahead to find seats.

A bite to eat afterwards? Tell your escort what you want. He gives the order to the waiter. If there's dancing, you can suggest a turn even if your beau doesn't. You say when it's time to go—end the evening before the fun lags.

What's the etiquette of making a date? The boy says, "Would you like to go to a show Friday night?" —not "Are you doing anything Friday?" You say, "I'd love to go"—or "I'm sorry, but I've made plans for that evening."

Grown-up poise means popularity. Follow tips in our 32-page booklet on formal parties, restaurants, movies, automobiles. Introductions. What about petting?

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of ETIQUETTE FOR YOUNG MODERNS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

"Well," said Mr. Punch thoughtfully to Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children, the other night, "here it is autumn again, and I haven't even begun to think about my vacation."

"Oh! are you going on a vacation?" Hanid exclaimed, rather surprised. She didn't think Mr. Punch ever thought about such things.

"Of course I'm going on a vacation," Mr. Punch answered. "The only thing I have to decide is where I'm going."

"You could go to the seashore," Knarf said. "Do you swim?"

"Yes, indeed. I'm a beautiful swimmer."

Mr. Punch shook his head. "No, I'm not quite sure I'll go to the seashore. It isn't that I don't like it. It's only that I'm fond of the country, too. You know, trees, and flowers, and birds. Yes, I'm certainly fond of the country."

Go to Country?

"Then you'll go to the country on your vacation!"

Mr. Punch was silent for a moment or two. When he spoke again his voice was gentle. "After all, what is a vacation? You go away from home for a little while. But you always come back again. It's pleasant at home. You don't have to swim, or float, or sleep under trees, or be bounced up and down in trains, or swayed from side to side in boats. Yes, it's nicest of all at home. You just sit quietly and dream of the lovely places you could go to. Yes, my dears, I'm spending my vacation at home."

"I'm a beautiful swimmer."

And that's what Mr. Punch did. And Hanid and Knarf thought he was really being very wise. For, you see, he couldn't have gone on a vacation any other place even if he had wanted to.

Says Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced at Home

Prove It At Small Cost.

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, as good advice for home treatment as any friend can give is to get a bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil.

Simply ask McDermid & Jury or your druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer burdensome. So penetrating is Emerald Oil that it also helps simple swellings due to strain to disappear.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Shoes Are Now Worth Taking Look At

If you were to stand at the street corner and watch the feet go by, you would notice the change in a flash. Shoes are really worth looking at.

From a dog's-eye view it is astonishing. The high stilt clogs have been left behind on the beach, but the new city shoes have new and interesting soles, half an inch thick. The smart shoes have heels, often novel in design. Many are colored, in sober dark leathers, deep wine reds, dark plums, dark blues and browns with a golden glow. Bright pipings twinkle everywhere.

Shoes are no longer just something you put your feet into, they have definite character and definite functions. If your legs are too short you can feel divinely tall with that slightly elevated sole. You can make your foot slim by pulling on a glove-like pump of kid or Lestex suede that clings like an elegant glove. You can get a sporty clumpy look with the wedge sole, scooped out to give a little heel.

In the country you can creep silently about in heelless moccasins like a Robin Hood. In the city you can tread on pavements as if they were thick carpets because of the layers of felt in your thick sole. You'll be at ease in the winter shoes, because they are astonishingly comfortable.

You'll be chic if you'll be a little daring and pick those that are new.

Fall Coats Are New in Line

Coats this season are new in elegance, new in line, new and exciting in color. They nearly all have strong, square shoulders. They either swing out recklessly or they're tethered very tightly at the waist. They may be softly bloused; they may have a rush of fur to the front, or they may have a rush of fullness to the front. If they don't have fur, they're likely to have braid or big welt seaming. They often have great saddle-bag pockets. They mostly are of smooth, duvetine-like wools or tweeds.

And the colors—curious new colors that may lure you away from your favorite black—purple, fuchsias, reds, taupe, topaz, jealour greens—beneath them dresses in as strange but different shades.

Remember in choosing your winter coat or suit that it is your outward badge of smartness day by day; that anyone with taste can shine; anyone with an eye for line; an eye for color, and the ability to match both to her own personality can this year, more than any other, create in herself a glowing, living personality that comes from an awareness of one's own individual chic.

Muffs Larger, And Much Longer

PARIS, Sept. 19 — (AP). — Hands and heads are going deeper into the fur question this year than in many a winter past. Arms are digging into muffs up to the elbow. High coiffures are sheltering under sealskin turbans or snuggling into beaver hoods.

Muffs and furry headgear go together. A black-tailed white ermine muff in Paquin's collection companions an ermine toque, to keep an ermine bolero company. Molyneux attaches a beaver hood to a brown wool jacket which steps out with a brown wool frock and a beaver muff.

The longest muffs are designed by Schiaparelli. They are bolster shapes tied around the middle with colored velvet ribbon. One in silver fox is four skins wide and bow-tied in light blue. Another is skunk, tied in pink, with a skunk trimmed hat to top it off.

The Chechia turban, resembling those the Zouaves wear, is the big tall note in fur hats.

New Charms Used In Fall Styles

A bumble-bee afloat on a single diamond wing; a pair of ruby doves; a luminous lantern of gems. New sheets—snowy white linen printed all over with sprigs of pink flowers! cream linen printed in dainty green leaf pattern. New luncheon sets—of brightly barred silk mousseline appliqued with orange satin (washable). New buttons—large circles or squares of tortoise shell or cornelian, to match autumn clothes in light brown shades are charms in modern styles.

Off-the-Face Felt

This is the Deanna Durbin style that's going back to school on many girlish heads this Fall. It's an off-the-face felt.

WELL-BRED SIMPLICITY

By ALICE ALDEN

Don't lose sight of tailored casual clothes in all this to-do about furs, frills and furbelows. The smart girl always has some well-bred clothes in her wardrobe and likes to get out into the country for an opportunity to wear nice tweeds or a woollen coat.

Phyllis Brooks, the beautiful movie star, likes smart simplicity, as can be seen from these specially-posed pictures of her togs.

At left is the ever-trig double-breasted coat. This model is of fine woollen in a delightful copper-brown shade. The coat is casually nipped-in at the waist, and it has a gold watch-fob chain and a printed silk scarf to lend additional interest. Then comes that California indispensible, the natural camel's hair polo coat, shown right. Miss Brooks combines it smartly with a brown felt hat, brown sandals and scarf of brown, beige, red.

Colorful Windows In Stores Emphasize Fall

Dressing up their windows in the vivid colors of Autumn, local stores drew crowds of interested shoppers before the displays of new Fall merchandise. Never before has a more colorful fashion palette been dramatized in fashions. Beautiful displays of tweed suits, new dresses and the bright feathers of hats all featured the same brilliant or richly subdued colorings of the Autumn leaves and foliage. It created a picture that no woman could resist!

Vintage shades are shown in hats and dresses, as well as accessories, and include glamorous new reds with purplish hue, such as huckleberry, sloeberry, roseberry, and grapejuice. Cherry red and cherrywine are both featured as new style colors. Raspberry reds are lovely in wools and soft silks.

Vivid splashes of color add interest to dark dresses and costumes. Suits display bright blouses or gleaming tops of flower pastels. Rare combinations of subtly contrasted or blended colors are shown in dresses, too, after the Alix manner.

Fashion Favors High Necks and Hair Dressing

UP go our spirits as we plunge into that first dress and silly little hat. Autumn is here once again and we must have that crisp polished look. Let your imagination run wild and do amusing gay things with accessory gadgets.

The foundation — any black dress.

The accent—a tiny crepe lastex bolero in shocking pink, deep turquoise, or spic span white to suit your fancy.

Thngs are going higher and higher. Dame fashion favors us with high necks and hair piled high on our heads. Get yourself one of the new high collars in crisp pique or venise to give you a dainty ruff around your neck. If you are an industrious soul, buy yards of pleated ruching and sew it into the necks of your dresses—very 1900, and oh, so flattering with your hair up high.

Tiny little silk or cotton pique collar and cuffs are perfect to give you a sweet demure appearance. Very chic and new are jewel colored velvet collars and cuffs for your simple wool or crepe dress. Lame collars are smart and sophisticated. Wear them for that important date.

For your tweedy country suit, remember little jersey cardigans in autumn leaf colors are smartest. If you are a mite on the Scotch side, wear a colorful Tartan plaid gilet to keep you warm. Don't forget, the shirt on your back should be the ever popular tailored gilet in brilliant silk crepe. Your town tailleur needs an exquisite had embroidered georgette gilet with val edging.

Tailored Clothes Of Simple Style.

Year in and year out, the thick brogues, leather jackets and sweater and skirt combinations played an important part, in campus fashions. This year, however, the trend is more along a "sports-classic" line.

Taking Last Dip

These two winsome lasses are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Mahood, 1033 Water street and were caught by the camera as they enjoyed the last outdoor dip of the season. Wilma is three years old and her big sister is seven.

We Noticed

. . . She looked very chic, the young lady who came into our office yesterday. Her grey tailored suit with the checked jacket was admirably contrasted with a sheer wool blouse, jaunty suede hat, and and trim shoes, all the glowing hue of dead cedar trees brought to life by the sun . . . and just to make us envious, luxurious martins topped the ensemble!

. . . Plaid jackets with plain skirts . . . what popular, smart costumes they make. We noticed a neat outfit that blended a plaid jacket in a new aqua-and-brown color with an aqua skirt, and used brown for handsome suede accessories.

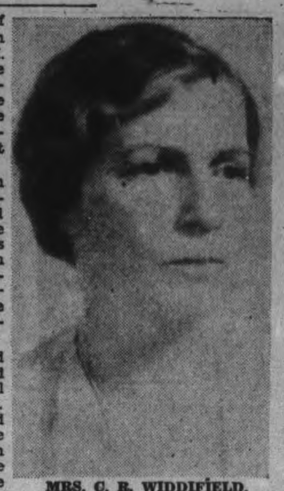
. . . And speaking of hats . . . the talk of the town these days. We see modern versions of the sailor, breton or bowl-trimmed shapes. We see inconsequential bits of ribbon, bunches of flowers, scrapes of veil . . . they all lend an air of old-time romance and charm . . . and are a reflection of new-time feminity!

Former Peterborough Woman Heads Women's Liberal Association



MRS. C. R. WIDDIFIELD.

Mrs. C. R. Widdifield, a native of Peterborough and now living in Stratford and a daughter of T. H. G. Denne, is the president of the Ontario Women's Liberal Association. She took an active part in the discussions at the sessions of the National Federation of Liberal Women meeting at Ottawa in May last when 600 delegates met.

Speaking at the luncheon given the delegates at the Chateau Laurier, Mrs. Widdifield advocated greater co-operation between the Federal and Provincial Governments and opined that such co-operation would be an incentive for the women in the various Liberal Associations to unite and work to promote Liberal Government whether Federal or Provincial.

Mrs. Widdifield was born and raised in Peterborough and received her primary education in local schools. She obtained her B.A. and M.A. degrees at Toronto and also attended the Ontario College of Education. At the conference in Ottawa this year Senator Cairine Wilson was made president of the National Federation of Liberal Women of Canada.

Mrs. Widdifield's father, T. H. G. Denne, former Mayor of this city, who lives on Water Street and was recognized during his entire active career in Peterborough as a Tory, remarked when asked what he thought of his daughter being such an outstanding Grit: "It's a free country, and I like to see everyone use their own initiative and form their own political conclusions."

Mrs. Copp Is Hostess To W.M.S.

Mrs. W. J. Copp, Bridgenorth, was hostess to the members of Group A of the W.M.S. of George Street United Church for their regular September meeting. The leader, Mrs. E. G. Wellwood, presided.

The meeting opened by the singing of a hymn followed by prayer. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. H. M. Dulmage and the roll call answered by a verse of scripture. A fine reading entitled "Mrs. Rush at Branch Meeting" was given by Mrs. Ruth Reynolds and a pleasing vocal number by Miss Phyllis Rome, with Miss Pearl Smith as accompanist. Of much interest to the members was the talk given by Mrs. A. I. Brown on the Summer School at Whitby.

Following a short business discussion the meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. J. C. Wood, and refreshments were served by the hostess and members of the social committee.

A vote of thanks to Mrs. Copp was tendered by Mrs. G. Baird.

Mrs. Groombridge Elected Choir President

The Philharmonic Choir held its inaugural meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Leslie Groombridge, with a splendid attendance of members.

Plans and business for the coming season were outlined, although action is to be postponed until Mr. H. Prevey's arrival in the city next week. Much of the success and recognition won by the fine performance of these singers last season is due to the splendid work of Mr. Prevey, and this year it is hoped that excerpts will be given from the "Bohemian Girl."

There are still a few vacancies open for seniors in the Choir, and anyone wishing to join is asked to get in touch with the president, Mrs. L. Groombridge.

Officers were elected as follows: Honorary president, Mrs. E. Foster; president, Mrs. L. Groombridge; vice-president, Mrs. Eric May; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. J. S. Roberts; telephone, Miss Phyllis Cowle and Miss Doreen Groombridge; refreshments committee, Mrs. A. E. Barrie, Miss H. Ross and Mr. W. Carter.

Following a short rehearsal, tea was served by the refreshment committee.

Staples—Trimble

A charming autumn house wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Trimble, when their daughter, Vera Marjorie, became the bride of Lawrence Cephas, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Cephas Staples, Bethany. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. Smith of Courtice.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and entered the living room to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Helen Savigny, Peterborough. She was gowned in white marquisette over satin, made on princess lines, and her finger-tip veil of tulle fell softly from a halo of satin. Her shower bouquet was of rose buds.

She was attended by her sister, Lavonne, who wore a beautiful gown of blue taffeta, and carried a sheaf of roses. Mr. George Timms attended the bridegroom.

During the signing of the register Mrs. Edward Foley, cousin of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly." A buffet luncheon was served after the ceremony.

Switzer—Aldred

The marriage of Amy Louisa, only daughter of Mr. Wilfred Aldred and the late Mrs. Aldred of Ops Township, to Clarence Edward Switzer, second son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William John Switzer, Tory Hill, Ont., took place in St. Paul's church, Lindsay, Rev. J. A. Goldring officiating.

Groom Composed Composition Sung At His Wedding

At the wedding on Wednesday of Elsie Josephine Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Roy Ford, Waterloo, and R. Earle Crabbe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley W. Crabbe, Toronto, which took place at the Church of the Holy Savior in Waterloo, the song sung during the ceremony was composed by the bridegroom, who is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Clarke, Peterborough. It was entitled "Today," and sung by Miss Eleanor Hawke.

Rev. Canon R. J. Seton-Adamson conducted the ceremony and Mr. Leonard Grigg played the wedding music. Large cream chrysanthemums, Calla lillies, ferns and English ivy decorated the church.

Gowned in ivory French silk velvet, floor-length, and made with a short shirred jacket with long fitted sleeves and a flaring peplum, the bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father.

The senior attendants were Miss Ruth Alteman and Miss Vivian Peppler, the former wearing afterglow coral velvet and the latter in a periwinkle blue velvet frock. Both wore petal caps of velvet and carried Colonial bouquets of Token and Joanna Hill roses.

Little Edith Pollock, aged 4, wore a Kate Greenaway frock of aquamarine velvet and matching Juliet cap. Her bouquet was of rosebuds.

Mr. Austin Sims was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Howard Bedford and Mr. Robert Pollock.

Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Clarke of Rubidge street were guests at the wedding, and attended the reception after, which was held at the Forest Hill Gardens, Kitchener, Ont.

Woodward—Furniss

JANETVILLE, Sept. 29.—A wedding of much interest to Janetville district was solemnized on Saturday at Donlands United Church, Toronto, when Vera, only doughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Furniss, became the bride of James Reginald Woodward of Toronto.

The ceremony was conducted by Rev. R. J. Irwin, pastor of the church, was was beautifully decorated with standards of gladioli in pale shades.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a dusky pink satin gown, with doll hat and satin shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses, mauve asters and maiden hair fern.

Mr. Ethan Thaceray of Toronto was groomsman, and the ushers were William Garlick and Norman Moore.

The wedding music was played by the bride's cousin, Miss Edna Garlick and during the signing of the register Miss Adela Leslie sang "All Joy Be Thine."

The reception was held at "The Falcon."

Receiving with the bridal party were the bride's mother wearing wine velvet, black hat with ostrich plume, wine shoes and gloves and corsage of yellow roses and cornflower, and the groom's mother, Mrs. Woodward, was smart in blue sheer embroided in white, matching hat with ostrich tips and corsage of red roses.

Upon their return they will reside on Chatsworth Drive, Toronto.

Double Shower Compliments Brides

A charmingly-arranged event was the double miscellaneous shower given at the home of Mrs. Thomas Franks, 580 Bethune street, in compliment to two of the season's brides, Miss Ruth Billings, whose marriage to Mr. Arthur Maynard takes place on Friday at the home of the groom's sister, Mrs. Fred Brown, Smith township, and Mrs. Ivan Deyell, who before her marriage last Saturday in Boate's Church, Emily township, was Dorothy Davis.

Mrs. W. Lucas and Miss Olive Davis, twin sister of Mrs. Deyell, assisted the hostess. Following the presentation of gifts, and an evening of happy entertainment, coffee was served to over forty guests.

Reception for Normal Students

The Principal and Staff of the Peterborough Normal School were hosts and hostesses to the students at a reception held Tuesday afternoon at 4.30. The critic teachers of the practice schools and a few outside friends were also guests.

Dr. Bannister, the principal, welcomed the guests, and expressed his regret at the departure of Mr. Adrian Macdonald, who has been transferred to Toronto, and Mr. Vincent McIntyre, who was transferred to Hamilton. His welcome was extended, also, to the new members of the staff, Miss Olga Johnston and Mr. Roberts.

A brief, delightful musical program was enjoyed. Miss Margaret Dickson, Miss Musa Cox, and Mr. Maurice Park were the artists. They were accompanied at the piano by Gwen Craw.

Blouses Are Bejewelled

It looks as though no costume will escape some sort of jewelry accent this fall, even including coats with big brooches and chatelaines pinned on bosom, belt, or pocket. Dresses, too, are wearing their jewelry with a possessive air, as witness the necklaces that go all the way or part way around the neck, lie perfectly flat, and look as if they "grew" with the dress.

Another reflection of this relation of costumes and jewelry is in fall blouses which make a point of "jewelry necklines." One of the outstanding types is the high-throated blouse, developed with tailored and dressy versions. This serves as a foil for elaborate necklaces and mannish brooches.

Hair Styles For The Older Woman

Unless she is unusually slim for her years and has kept her skin quite clear, smooth and unlined, any mature woman ought to think twice before deciding to wear an upswept coiffure. Seldom is a style that is flattering to her daughter equally flattering to mother. And the new coiffure mode is no exception.

If your neck is quite thick, brushing your hair smoothly upward all the way around more than likely will emphasize the thickness. If you don't want to stick to your medium-long bob which hides the fact that your neck isn't as slender as it once was, then ask your favorite hairdresser to figure out a coiffure that sweeps dramatically upward at front and sides but which provides softness at the back. This isn't as difficult as it sounds.

Furthermore, it is possible to wear your hair up without going in for a cluster of little curls at the top. Try swirls, soft waves and rolls instead of small ringlets. And if you're really; quite large, you'll avoid diminutive saucer-size hats, no matter how much they are touted.

Starch Bath Whitens the Skin

Did you know that starch is a good whitener? Throw a couple of heaped tabespoonfuls into a ot bath—your skin will be soft as silk after this.

It's a god idea to apply whatever skin food or face cream you use before you take a bath. The steam opens the pores so that the cream on your face is easily absorbed. You can wipe off the surplus with tissues afterwards and your skin will have enjoyed a good meal.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Nourishing Lunch Needed For Boy or Girl At School

Ever since the "'flu epidemic" of 1919 I have had a whimsical feeling that I was immune to it, but this fall the 'flu bug finally hit me, and I have the typewriter on the bed table which is propped on my knees —and I must say it is a very comfortable position in which to earn my stipend.

However, I am not sick enough that I can't be hopping mad at the conditions that could provoke such a letter as this:

"Dear Mrs. Moore,—When the depression was at its worst we were a little better provided for than many of our friends, but now conditions have changed and we have to provide for our family of 4 children and 2 adults on $8 per week. This must include soap, matches, toilet paper, etc. My husband and I have given up coffee and tea, and our only hope now is that our children do not become so undernourished that the lack of good food will leave a permanent mark on their health. . . ."

The indomitable spirit of such a father and mother shows that they need no such help as mine—they WILL find a way to provide for those youngsters — however, I did send her a list of the essential elements and minerals and vitamins and the inexpensive foods in which they could be found.

This "school lunch" story is for the mothers who pack lunches as fast and easy as they can, just to get the job done—without thinking of their little ones hopefully opening it each day, only to find the same old thing—ham or salmon or peanut butter sandwiches (each one good when not overdone), a piece of cake or pie or a cookie, and let them worry over getting some beverage if they can. Some of you conscientious ones may not believe that any mother could be that careless, but I know from school teachers that that type of thing is the exception rather than the rule.

The schools are doing a grand job in teaching the youngsters what they should have—and that is where their salvation lies, for nothing is more forceful than a child asking for something he should have and that he is not getting—the mother either has to mend her ways or unconsciously be dubbed a failure for the rest of her days.

School Lunch Menus With Adequate Nourishment

The essentials for successful lunch packing are (1) a tin box of comfortable size for carrying—tin so that it may be thoroughly washed and scalded; (2) plenty of wax paper; (3) a water-tight glass jar (mayonnaise or screw-top jelly jar does nicely for this); (3) ½-pint thermos.

NOTE.—Where lunches are carried mother should make a special point of varying the kinds of bread used—the new white bread with wheat germ milled with the flour is another variation which every mother should buy in place of plain white bread.

School Lunch Menu 1

Cream of Tomato Soup (Thermos)
(Leftover from previous day's lunch)
Cottage Cheese and Lettuce Sandwich on Wheat Germ Bread
Whole Pear Date Cookie

The child's milk requirement is made into the soup.

School Lunch Menu 2

Chopped Egg and Lettuce Sandwich on Whole Wheat Bread
Whole Tomato
Apple Sauce (in glass jar)
Cocoa (Thermos)

School Lunch Menu 3

Split Pea Soup (Thermos)
Peanut Butter Sandwiches on Rye Bread
Quarter Head of Iceberg Lettuce
Dates Plain Cake

The nourishment in split pea soup is so good that if lettuce is included in the lunch the milk may be omitted this time without any loss of nourishment.

School Lunch Menu 4

Spaghetti in Tomato Sauce
(Thermos)
Raw Carrot Strips
Bran Muffin (Buttered)
Prunes in Lemon Jello (Glass Jar)
Cookie

When we suggest a dish such as spaghetti with tomato sauce it is with the assumption that the day's meals preceding had enough of this leftover for a lunch. To be hot for the thermos they can be turned into the double boiler and warmed while the child is having his breakfast.

School Lunch Menu 5

Minced Beef and Mayonnaise Sandwiches in Wheat Germ Bread
Celery Hearts (salt)
Sliced Peaches with Honey
(in glass jar)
Oatmeal Cookie Cocoa

Note that we always include plenty of moist food—the worst error in lunch-packing is the monotonous dryness.

School Lunch Menu 6

Potato Soup (Thermos)
Salmon and Celery Sandwich
Orange Ice Box Cookies Apple

School Lunch Menu 7

Clam Chowder (Thermos)
Hard Whole Wheat Roll (Buttered)
Banana Raisins Plum

While the fruit season is still here use fresh fruit as much as possible —it is a good thirst quencher and contains valuable mineral salts and vitamins.

Sewing Room Was Busy in 70's

To the family of the '70's and '80's the sewing room was second to the kitchen in importance," says Ida M. Tarbell, writing in the North American Review. "My mother, my sister and myself were clothed from the skin out in the sewing-room; we bought nothing ready-made except our hoop-skirts and corsets, stockings and shoes, and an occasional coat.

"Sewing activities were continual, but the big moment came every spring and fall, when a real dressmaker arrived to produce our 'best' or 'Sunday' dresses. Days were spent selecting patterns and choosing the material from the dry goods store's large assortment of wools and silks, poplins and alpacas for winter—or delaines and organdies, lawns and calicoes for summer. Again and again we looked them over, considering price and, above all, quality—for quality, in my mother's code, was a moral attribute.

"Before the dressmaker arrived the sewing room must be ready. Scissors had been sharpened and innumerable bobbins wound for the sewing-machine, which had been overhauled and oiled. On hand was an extraordinary collection of linings, whalebone, braids, spools of thread, assorted hooks and eyes, pins and needles. Sewing-tables, lap-boards and scrap-baskets must be ready, and the coming autocrat's favorite chair in place. And then came the momentous day."

Duchess Believes Self-Expression

On the contrary, her two children's nurses have instructions to allow Prince Edward and Princess Alexandra to work off their high spirits by singing, talking and shouting and not to suppress them unnecessarily.

The Duchess told the Matron of the Battersea Park open-air children's shelter of her ideas of nursery discipline at a private visit. "Mine do this all the time," the Duchess said, unperturbed by the almost deafening noise of hundreds of toddlers playing on the grass in the shelter. The Royal mother at once took a Coronation mug that a child was holding for a milk ration and had it filled.

Gift of Toys.

For half an hour the Duchess heard from Lady Crosfield how children, during the holidays, are looked after in this shelter and playground. Before the Duchess left for Vienna, Nurse Smith, at Belgrave Square, had made a selection of toys from the Royal nurseries to add to the collection.

Oysters Slimming Also Nourishing

Women are now as interested in the arrival of the first oysters as men are, if not more so, and for a good reason. Oysters are slimming and at the same time nourishing. And so women who can afford a dozen make a complete meal of oysters. This is the experience of fashionable hotels, says a writer in the London Telegraph and Morning Post.

Once again the restaurant experts are laying down the law on the subject of the correct way to eat this delicacy esteemed by the ancient Britons no less than the modern epicures.

"The correct way to eat oysters is from the deep shell and in their own liquor. The only accompaniments necessary are lemon juice, a little red pepper and brown bread and butter.

A Chablis is recommended as the best wine to take with oysters.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Dresses for breakfasts, and dinners, and balls;
Dresses to sit in, and stand in, and walk in;
Dresses to dance in, and flirt in, and talk in,
Dresses in which to do nothing at all;
Dresses for Winter, Spring, Summer and Fall;
All of them different in color and shape,
Silk, muslin and lace, velvet, satin, and crepe,
Brocade and broadcloth, and other material,
Quite as expensive and much more ethereal.
—Wm. Allan Butler (Nothing to Wear).

Dear Friends:

Men have always laughed at women when they say they have "nothing to wear," if some special occasion arises. Why, there are dresses hanging in the clothes closet, a number of them, and yet a woman complains about nothing to wear.

You will notice that most flowers have leaves as a background, yet all flowers vary in color, and shape, and size, while the leaves remain simply green leaves and nothing else.

Well, that is how I think of men and women's dress. The men are the leaves, mostly the one color, while the women lend variety and color to the whole ensemble.

And which man amongst you does not like to be seen with a well-dressed woman? Which do you choose when you want one as companion at a dance?

Do you take the sensibly-dressed one neat as a pin, with low "sensible" heels on her shoes, or do you look around for one who will show by her dress what a good picker you are when it comes to women?

Men criticize women for long dresses, for short ones, for the styles they wear. Their silly hats come in for a lot of talk, their so-high heels are laughed at.

But most of them would be disgusted with their "date" if she was not all dolled up in the latest fashion, no matter how crazy it looks.

We laugh, too, at the weird effects men get in the sweaters they wear, in the combination of colors where the tie fights with the color in the socks, and the shirt is at variance with the tie and suit.

Just imagine what would happen to the commerce of the world, if all women adopted a sort of uniform of one color and one style. Why, the whole thing would come to a standstill.

Men like brown shirts, blue shirts, red shirts, to show their individuality, or the unions of different kinds they belong to. But women have all the colors of the spectrum to indulge their taste for variety.

And a new dress or hat or coat can raise a woman's spirits as nothing else can do. There are clothes for utility, but there are others which make one gay, adventurous, romantic.

Even in the clothes one wears to bed, the things made for men are atrocious, ridiculous, unseemly. But women can look ravishing in their night things, and more power to them.

Look around you when you go downtown, and see how carelessly men dress as a rule. For one who is well dressed and as if he took some pains to look nice, you will see dozens who are sloppy, badly groomed, and poorly put together.

And so, before you laugh so hard when women say they have nothing to wear, remember that the world depends on work for women on their clothes, their gowns, hats, shoes, hose, and underthings.

We need the green things in nature (no, I did not say men were green), but we also need the color of the rose and the violet, and the pale yellow of the daffodil. Wish I had a new dress.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Pleads For Peace

Miss Ellen Wilkinson, Laborite member of the British parliament, shown in a fiery address to a crowd of thousands in Trafalgar Square which met in a demonstration to "save the peace" of Europe. Meetings like this took place throughout England as Prime Minister Chamberlain and his cabinet met to decide ways and means of preventing a war over Adolf Hitler's Czechoslovakian demands.

Janetville Enjoys Fine Anniversary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANETVILLE, Sept. 29. — Rev. D. A. McKenzie of Centreville was the guest speaker for the anniversary services which were held in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday afternoon and evening. In the afternoon Rev. Mr. McKenzie spoke on the timely subject, "The Changing World and Unchanging God."

A quartette from eBthany comprised of Miss Winnifred Preston and Messrs. Percy Preston, Fred and Harvey Grey, assisted the regular choir in rendering special music at both services.

At the evening service Rev. Mr. McKenzie was assisted by Rev. M. A. Bury of the United Church, whose service was withdrawn in honor of the anniversary occasion of the sister church. Rev. Mr. Bury brought greetings from his people, many of whom were present, and extended congratulations on the splendid success of the anniversary activities.

Rev. Mr. McKenzie spoke from the text, "But God said, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?"

The pastor explained in a concise manner why the man was a fool. He was selfish, he ignored God, he fed his body but starved his soul, and made no provision for future life.

The church was lovely with fall flowers and there was a splendid attendance at each service.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

FOUR-CARD VALUES

FOUR-CARD suit values are not properly appreciated by many fair players. A lot of them consider that an evenly distributed hand, packed with high cards, will produce as many tricks at no trump as at a suit bid. That may be so if the partner's hand also is evenly balanced. But suppose it contains a nice singleton, or a well-placed doubleton. The combined holdings then may be a trick or two, or even three tricks stronger at a good four-card suit fit.

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

This deal arose in a duplicate and at some tables the contract ended in 6-No Trump, which was made with the loss of one diamond trick, the original lead having been the diamond K.

At those tables the bidding had been 2-No Trump by South, 3-No Trump by North and 6-No Trump by South.

Those who bid differently were able to reach contracts of 7-Spades. They opened with 2-Spades, North responded with 2-No Trump, South 4-No Trump, North 5-Spades, South 5-No Trump, North 6-Spades and South 7-Spades.

The diamond K was the lead against 7-Spades. This was won with the A and a diamond ruffed. A trump to the A was followed by another diamond ruff. After trumps were drawn, the thirteenth club took care of the losing heart.

Lakefield Pupils' Farm Classes Under Lady Teacher; Health And English Stressed

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Sept. 29. — Agriculture is being taught in Lakefield Public School this year for the first time, Principal T. W. Chaplin told the Examiner to-day. It is being introduced into Grades 7 and 8, along with the new course of studies prescribed by the Department of Education, he continued.

Although manual training and domestic science are also mentioned in the new course, they are being taught here this year on only a small scale; since the school is not at present equipped for the more complete courses.

Miss Eileen Young, who joined the teaching staff here in September will teach agriculture and T. W. Chaplin will be in charge of the manual training. This year the new course of studies which was formerly taught only in the lower grades, has been extended to Grades 7 and 8 (Fourth Book).

"Although I cannot voice an opinion on the success of the course in the higher grades here so early in the term, I might say that the children are keen on the idea which gives them considerably more chance to use their own ideas and to develop their own powers of creating things," Mr. Chaplin said.

English, Health Stressed.

"With the new course, the stress is put on English and health instead of on arithmetic, which formerly was considered the all important subject. Now English and health must be taught in the morning while the youngsters are most attentive, and mathematics is left until afternoon. Music and art are stressed more than previously, with two hours each week devoted to each of these subjects instead of one hour a week as formerly. One hour of English is taught every day, and an hour is also devoted to social studies, a new course which embodies the old history and geography lessons. Miss Marion Comrie is teaching Art this year, one hour per week being devoted to the subject, and Charles Renaud is in charge of the music again.

The subjects might be rated in importance as follows, Mr. Chaplin said: 1 English, 2 Health, 3 Social Studies, 4 Mathematics, 5 Science, 6 Music and Art.

Science is something new on the curriculum and will be taught in a general way to form a foundation for the High School courses. It will deal with science as the child meets it in the classroom, that is, with the history of the chalk used on the blackboard and the so-called "lead" of the ordinary lead pencil, etc., so that the youngsters will realize the origin of these things and what processes they were put through before they could serve their present purpose.

Some Improvements.

A number of improvements have been added to the Public School buildings this year, Mr. Chaplin continued. Three rooms have been painted to give a considerably brighter and cheerier atmosphere, and new doors have been added to the porches. Some time was spent levelling and oiling the grounds, so that a splendid smooth, hard playing surface should add considerably to the pleasure of outdoor sports, while lessening the danger of accidents."

Attendance this year is about the same as a year ago, Mr. Chaplin continued. "We have fifty pupils in Grades 7 and 8 this year as compared with fifty-three one year ago. Of this number probably twenty-eight will be eligible to try their High School examinations next June."

In the High School.

"The attendance at Lakefield High School this year has reached 119 pupils," Principal J. F. Harvey said. "This is considerably higher than it has been for a number of years, and includes between 45 and 50 out-of-town pupils. There is an increase in all classes as well as a considerable increase in the number of out-of-town pupils. We have one pupil from Coe Hill in Hastings County with us this year," Mr. Harvey added.

"This year Grade 10 (formerly Second Form) enters upon the new course of study outlined by the Department of Education. We are following the course as well as it is possible for us to do, but we will need more equipment and more room in order to carry on the new course in full," he said.

"The new course in Grade 10 is a continuation of that started in Grade 9 last year. It includes agriculture, shop-work, drafting, and health education, in addition to the subjects formerly tough in Second subjects formerly taught in Second Form. Physical geography, however, is among the subjects missing from the new course of studies, and history and geography are combined into one subject called Social Studies. The former subjects, arithmetic, geometry and algebra are combined under the general term, mathematics,and are taught in both Grades 9 and 10. Forms 3, 4, and 5 are not yet affected to any extent by the new system.

Anti-Jap Sanctions New League Worry

GENEVA, Sept. 29—(AP)—League of Nations delegates said today the swift progress of China's appeal for punitive measures against Japan put up to individual nations the question of how far they should go in applying Anti-Japanese sanctions.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, the Chinese delegate, won an agreement from British and French representatives that League punitive powers were applicable against Japan. Dr. Koo made his appeal the precedent for a possible Czechoslovak appeal against threatened German aggression.

The success of the Chinese demand made Russia the great hyphen between the Japanese-Chinese war and the threatened Europan conflict over Czechoslovakia.

Informed circles said Russia assured Great Britain and France her far-eastern and European forces can operate independently and that everything, from stores and supplies to war-time rear-guard organization, was ready to make Russian forces self-sufficient.

Hastings House Hit By Lightning Four Times In Thirteen Years

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Sept. 29.—Lighting has entered the residence of L. T. Huycke here for the second time in the past three months and four times in the last thirteen years. Mr. Huycke, who runs an apiary at the edge of the village, said that at the height of an electric storm which visited this village Tuesday morning, lightning entered his house via the wiring and split a new sash in two, half of it dropping to the ground from a second storey bedroom. Little damage was done.

He recalled thirteen years ago when lightning caused considerable damage to the entire house, necessitating $400 repairs. He was in bed at the time and saw a ball of fire enter the room and knock the plaster from the ceiling and walls. The second time damage was done was eight years ago, when lightning came through a bed lamp hanging just over his head. It blew the lamp to pieces and split a bed post lengthways and half of it dropped over his head. It then went out through the wall, leaving a small hole.

Three months ago his telephone was blown to pieces and the tubes in a radio were burned out even though it had been disconnected. This was the only time it ever entered downstairs, he said.

His only explanation for the electrical bombardments is that the house and telephone wiring carry it into the house. He does not think location has anything to do ith it, although no residences in his disrict have been struck to his knowledge. "The house stood for forty-five years and never until the wires were installed was it struck," he said. "I am not afraid of electrical storms even yet, but I don't feel as easy as I used to," explained the middle-aged man.

ADOLF HITLER WINS BLOODLESS VICTORY AS EUROPEAN 'BIG FOUR' SIGN PEACE PLAN

Chamberlain Hitler Sign Pact

New Anglo-German Agreement Comes As Surprise

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

MUNICH, Sept. 30 (CP Cable)—Prime Minister Chamberlain and Chancellor Hitler today signed a peace pact binding the German and British peoples to attempt pacific methods of settling disputes.

"We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo-German naval agreement as symbolic of the desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again," the agreement set forth.

"We are resolved that the method of consultation shall be the method adopted to deal with any other questions that may concern our two countries, and we are determined to continue our efforts to remove the possible sources of difference and thus to contribute to assure the peace of Europe."

Prague Accepts

At the same time Mr. Chamberlain announced the Czech government had accepted the four-power agreement for settlement of the Czech-German crisis. German troops will move into portions of Sudetenland late tomorrow.

"We received the acceptance through our minister at Prague (Basil Newton)," Mr. Chamberlain said.

"I took that for granted," the prime minister said, when asked if Great Britain would demobilize her navy and Germany her army. "The obvious methods are the demobilization of everybody."

"I have always had it in mind," Mr. Chamberlain said, "that if we could find a peaceful solution of this problem of Czechoslovakia we might open the way for the general appeasement of Europe."

Sir Horace Wilson, the Prime Minister's adviser, who was present at the interview, said a meeting would be held in Berlin this afternoon of the International Commission which will oversee the plebiscites and delimitation of the ceded portions of Sudetenland. Representatives of the Commission will go to Czechoslovakia to-morrow.

Very Friendly Session.

The Prime Minister said the general discussion with Hitler, which lasted for two hours, "were of a

10,000 British Legionnaires Volunteer As Neutral Police In Sudetenland

London, Sept. 30 (CP)

TEN THOUSAND selected members of the British Legion were ready to act as a neutral police force in some of the Sudeten districts preliminary to occupation by Germany. Thousands of applications already have been received from members but the men who will go will be chosen by areas and branches throughout England and Wales.

"We are only waiting for official instructions," a Legion official declared. "The Legion will be ready as soon as wanted."

The volunteers will be unarmed and without uniform and in every sense will be an impartial body of British civilians. They will wear some distinguishing mark and the colors of the Legion — blue and gold—have been suggested.

The question of billetting and the districts where they are to operate will be a matter for the international commission.

Treaty Branded Tragic Business, "Like Dissecting Body That Wasn't There," Says Briton

By Fred Vanderschmidt
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

MUNICH, September 30. —(A. P.). Prime Minister Chamberlain, a joyous light in his eyes, came out of the Fuehrerhaus today convinced peace was worth the price.

"It's all signed," he said. "It's all right."

France, Great Britain, Italy and Germany will hold themselves responsible for each step necessary to fulfil the agreement, hence Czechoslovakia must accept the plan or France can not go to its support and fight against German "invasion" of Sudeten territories. Great Britain, even in last Monday's strong offical statement, bound herself only to move when France did.

An Official View.

The same British source said shortly after the conference ended:—

"It was a tragic business—like standing around a table in a mortuary and dissecting a body that wasn't there. (Czechoslovakia was not represented at the Conference).

"Yet you must remember that if it hadn't been done this way it would have been done by war. You must remember also that we are correcting a grave mistake we made at Versailles."

The spokesman went on to express a conviction that Czechoslovakia could be made by the four powers into a completely neutralized and guaranteed state, "shorn of the people it can not govern." This reference was to troublesome Polish and Hungarian minorities.

This State, he said, must be one which directs no enmity toward any other powers. That, of course, meant that the guarantee system as proposed under the four power plan

Nightmare Over Britain Smiles Again

By Edwin Johnson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Sept. 30—(CP Cable)—Britons today walked about with a jauntier step as the pent-up tension and suspense of the long drawn out European crisis gave way to spontaneous relief and thanksgiving that the gathering war clouds had been dispelled.

Greeted by newspaper posters and headlines such as "We have avoided war" and "peace assured," Londoners went to work in the most jovial mood in weeks. The result of the Munich agreement was on every lip. Friends and sometimes strangers greeted one another with warm handshakes. Instead of drawn and anxious faces, there were smiles and laughter.

"The nightmare is over, let us hope we can now settle down to normal life and business," appeared to sum up the attitude of the average man in the street.

Prayer of Thanksgiving.

Early today hundreds filed quietly in Westminster Abbey and Westminster cathedral to offer prayers of thanksgiving. It was a motley procession—elderly men, women typists clutching handbags, laborers, office and factory workers, and children. At the cathedral were a postman and a bus driver in uniform, while at the Abbey a police sergeant and a constable ready for duty knelt in silent prayer.

During the morning a chauffeur-driven car pulled up at 10 Downing street. A fur-coated woman alighted carrying a bouquet of flowers which she handed to the doorman.

"I am only one of millions who want to show some mark of appreciation and thanks for the premier's magnificent work," she told reporters.

Later there was a procession of flower bearers to the Prime Minister's residence and thousands of letters and telegrams of congratulations poured in from all parts of the world.

Dictator Gets All He Asked In Czechoslovakia, Major Powers Guarantors

International Commission Acts At Once To Supervise Takeover And Votes; Poles And Hungarians To Be Satisfied

By Charles Foltz, Jr.
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

MUNICH, Sept. 30 (AP).—An international commission quickly undertook today to carry out the plans that Europe's four major powers drafted to save Europe from war.

The commission was named early today and met briefly before flying to Berlin to complete an organization for supervising details of ceding Czechoslovakia's Sudeten German territory to Germany.

Named on the commission were Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin; Andre Francois-Poncet, the French Ambassador; Count Ernst von Weiszaecker, German Secretary of State, and Bernardo Attolico, Italian Ambassador to Berlin, with the Czechoslovak Minister to Berlin, Dr. Vojtech Mastny, likely to be the fifth member.

They were to supervise the occupation of Sudetenland, selection of areas to be occupied and those in which plebiscites are to be held, and to administer other details.

DETAILS ARE FORWARDED TO PRAGUE

Details of the agreement, for delivering parts of Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland territory to Germany within 10 days, and for seeking adjustment within three months of demands of Hungary and Poland for Czechoslovak territory in which their minorities live, had been forwarded to Prague earlier in an effort to obtain the Czechoslovak Government's endorsement of the plan.

Next step, it appeared, would be a meeting of Ambassadors of the three powers—Britain, France and Italy—with the German Foreign Minister in Berlin tomorrow afternoon to implement the agreement reached early today.

The four statesmen who accomplished the agreement are Premiers Chamberlain of Great Britain, Daladier of France and Mussolini of Italy and Chancellor Hitler of Germany.

CHAMBERLAIN LEAVES WITH A SMILE

Mr. Chamberlain visited Chancellor Hitler shortly after 11 a.m. to say farewell. Premier Mussolini left during the night.

Mr. Chamberlain smiled brightly and looked fresh despite the terrific strain through which he had passed. A crowd of friendly Germans gave him a warm greeting of "Heils" as he left his hotel.

Earlier a crowd had cheered before the hotel until he appeared to bow and wave.

Official informants said military attaches of legations and a staff of experts might assist the international commission after organization at Berlin is completed.

Prime Ministers Chamberlain and Daladier undertook to urge the Czechoslovak Government, which was not a party to the Munich agreement to accept its plan for ending the danger of war over Czechoslovak Sudetenland where live the German-speaking Sudetens to whom Hitler pledged protection.

The plan permits Hitler to send troops into Sudetenland gradually during the coming week, and provides for plebiscites in areas where German minorities are not clear, and for an international commission and police to handle the plebiscites.

MUST AGREE OR BRITAIN, FRANCE STEP OUT

Should Czechoslovakia refuse to agree to the plan, British and French sources said they would not be bound to engage in any eventualities which might result.

Should Czechoslovakia agree, France and Great Britain guarantee the borders of the remaining Czechoslovakian territory at once. Italy and Germany would give similar guarantees after the Polish-Hungarian minorities' question is settled.

"You must remember that we avoided a terrible war," the Premier told his friends when he reached his hotel.

Europeans all over the continent sighed in relief when they learned peace outweighed war on Munich's scales.

"To whom the credit for peace?" echoed a French official to a questioner. "To four men and the will of hundreds of millions."

Ottawa, Sept. 30 (CP)

THE Munich four-power agreement averting the threat of war in Europe will be celebrated today when, in the presence of Prime Minister Mackenzie King, his cabinet and a group of invited guests, the figures symbolic of "peace" and "liberty" will be placed in position on the national war memorial now being erected here.

The huge memorial group, executed by the March Brothers of Farnborough, England, is being assembled on the plaza, close by Parliament Hill and will probably be completed some time this fall. It is Canada's national memorial to those who fought in the war of 1914-1918.

Munich Meet Just The Prelude To Peace For All Europe Says Chamberlain, Back Home

LONDON, Sept. 30—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain flew home today to vast, cheering throngs with a peaceful agreement on the Czechoslovakian problem and strong hopes for a broad European settlement as the fruits of his diplomacy.

He stepped from his plane at 5.39 p.m. (11.39 a.m. E.S.T.) to cheering by excited crowds that had gathered at Heston Airport to give him a triumphant homecoming his third flight to Germany.

The Prime Minister was handed a letter from the King as soon as he emerged from the plane.

One of his first duties was to go to Buckingham Palace and report personally to his Majesty on the achievements of the four-power conference at Munich yesterday.

A Regal Reception

In response to tremendous cheers by thousands massed in front of the palace, the King and Queen ushered both the Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain onto a palace balcony.

At the airport earlier, he had stopped despite a shower to respond happily to a tumultuous reception.

"Settlement of the Czech problem which now has been achieved," Mr. Chamberlain said, "is in my view only a prelude to a larger settlement in which all Europe may find peace."

Smiling broadly, the Prime Minister waved his hat at the excited thousands.

He held up for the crowd to see, the joint declaration he and Reichsfuehrer Hitler signed this morning in a private talk after the four-power conference.

Grateful For Support

First, however, the prime minister told the crowds there were two things he wanted to say:—

"First of all, I have received an immense number of letters during all these anxious times.

"So has my wife—letters of support and approval and gratitude—and I cannot tell you what encouragement that has been to me.

"I want to thank the British people for what they have done and, next, I want to say that settlement of the Czechoslovak problem, which now has been achieved, is in my view only a prelude to a larger settlement in which all Europe may find peace.

"This morning I had another talk with the German chancellor, Herr Hitler, and here is the paper which bears his name on it as well as mine.

"Some of you, perhaps, already have heard what it contains but I would just like to read it to you."

He had paused to talk to the crowds despite a sudden shower that sent many scurrying for shelter. As he finished there were shouts of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow!"

Mr. Chamberlain then entered his automobile and went directly to Buckingham Palace.

Cabinet Report Tonight

The cabinet was summoned to meet tonight to hear his account of the Munich conference.

Hours before Mr. Chamberlain's plane was expected, roads leading to Heston airport were blocked with automobiles, bicyclists and pedestrians.

In the throng was the entire cabinet, out to greet him on his return from the mission to Germany which he started yesterday with his ministers' surprise send-off.

A public enclosure adjoining the landing field overflowed and thousands waited outside for a glimpse as Mr. Chamberlain was driven past.

Dream Of Kaiser Almost True In Hitler's Coup

By Dewitt Mackenzie
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

MUNICH, Sept. 30 (AP).—Adolf Hitler has effected the greatest coup of his career toward his dream of a great Germanic confederation, a Germany greater than that of the pre-war empire.

To hundreds of millions of simple, home-loving, friendly folk in all countries the message "We give you peace" which came from yesterday's four-power conference was sufficient in itself.

The four-power agreement has many and vital ramifications. In-

Premier Syrovy Hopes For Strength Out Of Humiliation

PRAGUE, Sept. 30 (AP).—Czechoslovakia's soldier-premier, General Jan Syrovy, in a broadcast to the nation tonight said he accepted the four-power Munich settlement on the German Sudeten problem "to save life and to save the nation."

"This is the most difficult moment in my life," he added. "Superior forces compelled us to accept the solution."

The veteran military man said that "as a soldier I had to choose the way of peace. We have chosen the only right course and the nation will be stronger and more united."

Meantime, Wenceslas Jaksch, leader of the Sudeten German Social Democrat party, a dissident element among the 3,500,000 German minority of Czechoslovakia, said he planned to appeal to Great Britain in an effort to see that at least part of the Angi-Nazi Germans are sent to new homes in some far away country, perhaps Canada.

At the same time Czechoslovak authorities said more than 50,000 Social Democrats already have fled from Sudetenland to the interior of the little republic.

Asks New Loyalty.

Following Premier Syrovy's broadcast, General Ludwig Krejci, commander-in-chief of the army, issued a proclamation appealing to the army loyally to protect the new State of Czechoslovakia.

General Syrovy told the nation that when Germany, Italy, Great Britain and France "decided to ask from us the annexation of German territories," the government had to choose between "a useless fight and sacrifices."

"We have accepted the unheard of sacrifices imposed upon us. We have had to choose between the death of a nation and abdication of some territories.

"We shall accomplish the conditions imposed on us. The main thing is that we are remaining ourselves and we must be united."

Believe Munich Meet May Move Duce To Recall Troops In Spain

ROME, Sept. 30 (AP)—Diplomatic circles considered today a start toward withdrawal of Italian Legionnaires from Spain was likely to follow the peace-saving conference on Czechoslovakia in Munich yesterday.

Diplomats, however, expressed the belief that unconfirmed reports of immediate Italian withdrawal were premature, at least, particularly in view of denials from authoritative Fascist quarters that any troops had been ordered home from Spain.

But they said it was not improbable that Prime Minister Chamberlain had found opportunity to raise with Premier Mussolini the question of the Italian-British friendship agreement. The accord has been pending, inoperative, since it was signed last Easter because Italian troops must be withdrawn from Spain before Great Britain will put it into effect.

The belief in diplomatic circles was that negotiations to hasten a settlement by the withdrawal of at least some Italian troops might come now that the chiefs of the Italian and British governments have established personal contact.

Hail Duce As Victor

Italians hailed their returning Duce as a conqueror and "Savior of the European peace." For the Fascists the four-power Munich accord to satisfy Germany by cutting up Czechoslovakia was an Italian victory.

Virginio Gayda authoritative Fascist editor set the pace for Italian press comment in the Giornale D'Italia with this sentence: "The accord, sacred to the peace of the people, vainly attempted in previous diverse and prolonged efforts, was concluded in a few hours after Mussolini called to intervene personally."

Gayda called the premier "the savior of European peace" because he telephoned Hitler after a plea from Prime Minister Chamberlain, and arranged that Hitler should invite Mr. Chamberlain, Premier Daladier of France and Mussolini to the conference in Munich yesterday.

Mimico, Ont., Sept. 30 (CP)

JOHN CUMMINGS, Mimico relief paymaster, got a hunch today that saved the town treasury $1,200 in cash.

As he walked toward the relief pay depot to distribute $1,247 among unemployed on relief projects, Cummings was slugged on the head by two men who crept up behind him. They grabbed a cash bag from his hand and fled.

Unconscious a minute from the blow on the head, Cummings reached for an inner pocket as he staggered to his feet.

"The twelve hundred dollars was right there in that pocket all the time," he said. "The robbers got away with $47 in silver because I had a hunch something might happen this morning. Before I left for the pay depot I put all the bills in my pocket."

Police said they believed the robbers acted on a tip-off because it was not generally known the relief workers were to be paid today. Pay was scheduled to be distributed tomorrow.

Milder Hurricane Nears Long Island

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—(AP)—A Southern storm which sent two tornadoes ripping through Charleston, S. C., yesterday, killing 26, moved rapidly toward Long Island and the hurricane-stricken areas of New England today, but the weather bureau said there was little likelihood its force would be as devastating as last week's storm.

Rain fell over the Metropolitan area of New York this morning and the coast guards at Fire Island, the isolated barrier beach off Long Island which was devasted last week, said the wind was blowing at 40 miles an hour, whipping up a thundering surf as the tide rose. The wind was increasing hourly, the report said.

Nazis Ready To March Before Czechs Agree

BERLIN, Sept. 30. — (AP). — German military units were ready down to the last mess kitn and polished bootstrap to-day to goose-step into neighboring Czechoslovakia.

Sources close to the war ministry disclosed — before Czechoslovakia had a chance to say yes or no to a four-power scheme to satisfy Chancellor Hitler by giving him parts of Czechoslovakia—that the German caissons would roll to-morrow along the south-western Czech frontier north of Passau and Linz.

Welsh Out To Buy Hearst Castle As Second Balmoral For King

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(CP).—Decision of William Randolph Hearst to sell St. Donat's Castle has spurred Welsh Nationalists in their campaign to acquire a Royal residence in the principality for the King and Queen. St. Donat's, they say, would make an ideal counterpart of Scotland's Balmoral if the proposal is accorded Royal favor.

Miss Alice Head, Hearst's representative in Great Britain, said primary reason for the sale was to start liquidation of part of the estate to provide for death duties.

Acquired 13 years ago by Hearst for approximately $100,000, St. Donat's has undergone almost complete reconstruction, but the Norman characteristics have been faithfully preserved. Even the moss on stones removed during over hauling was kept alive.

The castle however has every convenience of the most modern mansion, including central heating, running water, electric lights and one of the largest swimming pools in England.

In No Hurry To Sell.

Miss Head said there is no intention of rushing the sale. "We shall of course make it clear that $1,000,000 has been spent on the estate and until we get the right price we shall wait; if necessary, for five years."

A move to create a national fund to acquire or construct a Royal residence was started by a member of the Colwyn Bay borough council. Commenting editorially the Western Mail of Cardiff says: "While it cannot be doubted that His Majesty would appreciate any national manifestation of this character, and regard it as fresh evidence of the intense loyalty of the Welsh people, it is not impossible he would decide that he has already as many residences as he needs, and that there are other ways in which public money could be more usefully spent."

In 1926 Gwrych Castle, near Abergale, was bequeathed to King George V, but the offer was not accepted.

Woodstock, Ont., Sept. 30 (CP)

ROBERT COOK, Brantford, captured yesterday after he had held up the Royal Bank branch at Thamesford, was sentenced today to five years in Kingston Penitentiary when he appeared in county police court here before Magistrate E. C. McCrimmon on a charge of armed robbery.

Cook pleaded guilty and elected summary trial.

Cook held up the bank branch in the small Ontario town with a toy pistol yesterday morning. He walked into the bank and herded the staff into a vault. There were no customers in the bank.

G. E. Hessenauer, the manager, ordered Teller W. Horne to give Cook some money. Then Cook herded the two of them into the vault with R. G. Colbert, the ledgerkeeper. He warned them to remain in the vault while he made his getaway.

The bank staff waited several minutes and then gave chase. Cook was captured less than two blocks from the bank after running to the 10th concession and back into town.

Ottawa Jubilant On Munich Pact, Premier King Wires Chamberlain Congratulations

OTTAWA, Sept. 30 (C.P.). — This capital to-day echoed the sentiment expressed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King in messages to Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain and President Roosevelt of the United States applauding their efforts to save the peace of the world.

Official Ottawa maintained its dignified calm, but underneath the composure ran a current of relief and jubilation at the Munich Four-Power agreement designed to divert Europe and the world from the path of war. The tense atmosphere apparent for weeks in important Government offices eased. Government officials relaxed.

Late last night Mr. Mackenzie King messaged Mr. Chamberlain that "The heart of Canada is rejoicing at the success which has crowned your unremitting efforts for peace. May I convey to you the warm congratulations of the Canadian people, and with them, an expression of gratitude, which is felt from one end of the Dominion to the other."

The Prime Minister said the Government, joined with him in expressing "our unbounded admiration at the service you have rendered mankind."

In his message to Mr. Roosevelt, the Prime Minister said: "The people of Canada join with my colleagues and myself in expressing to you our deep and grateful appreciation of the part you have played in the solution of the European crisis.

"By making your apepal to reason you have compelled others to heed the incredible and unpardonable folly of war."

No Session Needed.

The new turn of events in Europe removed the necessity of the Government calling Parliament together to decide Canada's part in a world conflict. The next Cabinet meeting is scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, and it is expected that the Government will resume its normal course with emphasis on final negotiations of the Canada-United States Trade Pact and the November 14 by-elections in four Federal constituencies.

Mr. Mackenzie King will go to Washington for the signing of the new treaty, and it is believed here the trip might be made within the next three weeks. It is understood the Cabinet this week passed upon a draft agreement with the United States and the negotiators, who brought it here from Washington and have returned to Washington with it, will now be able to formulate a final draft.

Fiery Cross Sets Fire To Hill Causing Much Alarm

Bancroft, Sept. 30.

A FIERY CROSS blazing forth in the night on the high ground outside of this village on Tuesday gave the volunteer firemen a run, and before the fire was extinguished the entire hillside had been burned over. No one seems to know who started the cross, but it is the tenth to have been burned in this district in the past two years. At first it was thought that these crosses were the work of the Ku Klux Klan, but this opinion has been discounted, and it is believed to be the work of practical jokers. The police are investigating the fire.

Cyclist Hurt Critically In Collision

Roland Ferguson, 53, a painter living at 543 Park street, was very seriously injured when a bicycle on which he was riding collided with a Peterborough Bus Lines bus at Brock and Aylmer shortly after 5 o'clock Thursday evening.

Ferguson, dragged beneath the bus after the collision, received severe head and shoulder and abdominal injuries and was hurt internally. His condition was reported from Nicholls Hospital this morning as very serious, although a little improved since Thursday evening.

Failed To Stop

Ferguson was riding his bicycle east on Brock street and reached the intersection of Aylmer street just as a special Peterborough Bus Lines bus driven by Sidney Middleton, travelling south, arrived at the corner. According to the bus driver the cyclist did not stop at the intersection but rode straight at the bus. Middleton tried to swing his big machine to avoid the bicycle but the effort failed, the cyclist crashing into the front fender of the bus and falling underneath with the result that the rider was dragged some 54 feet before the vehicle was stopped.

It was found that Ferguson was pinned under the front axle of the bus and the latter had to be jacked up to permit the badly injured man to be released. He was bleeding badly and lost a lot of blood before he could be freed and rushed to Nicholls Hospital.

France To Stay On Guard

PARIS, Sept. 30—(AP)—France, despite hopes for peace held in the four-power Munich agreement, will hold most of her reserve forces under arms until after the Sudeten territories have been relinquished to Germany.

Official circles today confirmed Premier Edouard Daladier's intention to keep the army at its full strength until the complete liquidation of the Czechoslovak-German crisis and said Daladier would call a cabinet meeting for this evening or Saturday morning.

The Premier was expected to land in Paris late this afternoon from Munich, where he, Chancellor Hitler, Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini of Italy reached an agreement to give certain Sudeten German areas to Germany, and thus probably averted war.

The thanks of Paris for Prime Minister Chamberlain's work on behalf of peace was sent to him by the the President of the municipal council, Be Provost De Launay, who wired: "Paris give you thanks. Paris hopes for the pleasure of expressing its gratitude to you soon in this city."

Upon the conclusion of the Munich conference, the first French concern was to get Czechoslovakia's agreement to the four-power partition plan.

Ferguson Confident Canada With Britain

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 30 — (CP) — G. H. Ferguson former Canadian High Commissioner in London, told reporters here today he was sure Canada would stand by Great Britain and the Empire in the event of war.

"I have a very strong belief, amounting almost to confidence, that war will be averted," Mr. Ferguson said. "There may be conflict, outbursts here and there, perhaps considerable bloodshed, but I believe public opinion over the world will have a restraining effect and that the resentment and resistance of the people of the world to ruthless promulgation of a general war will prevail."

Pasteurization Starts Saturday, 58 Villages On List By Dec. 31

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—(CP).—Ontario's compulsory milk pasteurization law, prohibiting sale of unpasteurized milk in cities, towns or other areas defined by order-in-council will take effect to-morrow. Passed last session of the Legislature, it provides rigid penalties for non-compliance.

The law does not apply, however to milk brought into any such city, town, municipality or area by the producer and sold by wholesale to a distributor nor to products of milk prepared in a plant and by methods approved by the Health Department.

Province-wide compulsory pasteurization was not attained by the Act, although that was the Government's original purpose last year. During the legislative session, Health Commissioner Harold Kirby amended the Act to leave it to decision by order-in-council where the regulations should be extended. It was indicated then the ultimate aim was general pasteurization. When this comes into effect, Ontario will be the first province in Canada with such legislation.

Of the cities affected by the new regulations, these already have compulsory pasteurization: Brantford, Galt, Guelph, Niagara Falls, Oshawa, St. Catharines, Sudbury, Toronto, Windsor.

58 Villages on List

Villages generally are not affected by the law but it has been extended to cover small centres like Bala, Bonfield, Bothwell, Bruce Mines, Chelmsford, Frood Mine, Gore Bay, Harrow, Hearst, Kearney, La Salle, Latchford, Massey, Matheson, Nesterville, Ojibway, Powassan, Smooth Rock Falls, Thornbury, Trout Creek, Webbwood.

The law takes affect Dec. 31 in these villages: Acton, Arthur, Barry's Bay, Beamsville, Brighton, Caledonia, Cardinal, Chesterville, Delhi, Eganville, Elora, Exeter, Fenelon Falls, Fergus, Hagersville, Havelock, Iroquois, Kemptville, Lakefield, Lucknow, Madoc, Markham, Milverton, Morrisburg, New Hamburg, Norwich, Port Credit, Port Dover, Port Elgin, Port Perry, Shelburne, Stouffville, Tavistock, Tweed, Victoria Harbor, Waterford, Winchester.

In addition, the legislation affects defined districts around the cities coming within its scope.

The law provides a fine of not less than $25 and not more than $500 for any person contravening its provisions.

deed, some of them bid fair to create in the coming generation history that may surpass implications of the present decision against war.

Hitler, having already gained Austria, has made a gigantic stride toward his Germanic confederation by which Nazis aspire to become a dominant power of Europe.

The war-born Czechoslovak republic gives up territory of industrial wealth, and may, therefore, be reduced to an ineffectual small state over which Germany can command economic supremacy.

Weakens French Machine.

The reduction in size and economic power of Czechoslovakia will materially weaken the powerful military machine France sponsored in eastern Europe as a safeguard against German aggression. That machine was the Little Entente — Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania.

An over-lordship of Czechoslovakia would open the flood-gates for German economic control of the Balkans. It is an old dream of the former German Kaiser more near than to reality than ever before.

The peace conference may mark the beginning of a period of better relations and greater co-operation. The conference, too, has provided a high point in a new type of diplomacy in which the heads of government do their own negotiationg instead of entrusting affairs to subordinates.

Low Ministers Pay Said Disgrace

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—(CP).—Salaries paid some ministers "constitute a disgrace—not as much as Toronto's street cleaners," A. E. McBride, of Toronto, said to-day in a debate on salaries at the General Council of the United Church of Canada. He spoke during discussion of a plan for co-ordination of ministerial salaries.

Under the plan recommended by a comittee, ministers and congregations would be asked to contribute equal amounts to bring all ministers salaries to at least $1,250, the minimum set by the Home Mission Board for clergymen under its jurisdiction. The plan was debated to-day after discussion was adjourned last night.

"I am in sympathy with the idea that ministers should have more money," Mr. McBride said. "But every fund you raise up mean the missionary and maintenance fund gets it in the neck.

"Under God, what are you doing" he asked. If ministers and congregations got behind the missionary and maintenance fund for two years or so, it could be revived.

One minister thought the Council was "straining at a gnat to swallow a small camel," and another expressed the opinion it (the plan) was not much of a co-ordination.

Bid By Inglis Firm Only One Wanted?

OTTAWA, Sept. 30 (CP)—Information to the effect the British war office would deal with no company other than the John Inglis Company regarding the manufacture of Bren guns in Canada was before the interdepartmental committee which passed on the Canadian contract with that company, C. Fraser Elliott, said today at the Bren gun inquiry.

Mr. Elliott, commissioner of income tax and a member of the committee was called of profits on government armament contracts said the committee was called Jan. 5, 1938, to consider the proposed Inglis contract, then under negotiation.

Major-General L. R. Lafleche, deputy minister of national defence, was chairman of the interdepartmental committee, said Mr. Elliott. He had told the committee he understood the British war office would deal with no one in Canada but the Inglis Company and also that without a British order it was doubtful if Bren guns could be made in Canada.

Major J. E. Hahn, president of the Inglis Company, had apparently been given access to confidential information in England and it was doubtful if other Canadian concerns would be given the same access. Without it other firms would have difficulty in preparing bids or tenders.

What Hitler Asked and Got.

Following are his terse comparisons of what Hitler demanded and what he gets under the four-power agreement:—

Demanded— evacuation by the Czechoslovak army and police forces and officials of a wide area of Sudetenland by October 1, without removal of any properties.

Granted— Evacution of an area roughly corresponding to what he asked for by October 10, without destruction "of any existing installations."

Granted—Occupation of 4 pieces of territory roughly corresponding to the area he drew on his own map but he is to occupy them over a period of seven days beginning October 1 and (presumably) this is to be done without fighting. In addition an area to be defined by the proposed international commission would be occupied by the German army by October 10.

Demanded—Discharge at once of all Sudeten Germans from the army or police of the Czechoslovak state.

Granted—Discharge within four weeks of all now serving in the army or police "who may wish to be released."

Demanded—Immediate release by Czechoslovaks of all Sudeten German political prisoners.

Granted—Same, but with 4-week time limit.

Demanded—Plebiscite by November 25 in areas where Sudeten Germans are obviously in the majority voting to be carried out under the control of an International Commission; settlement by German-Czechoslovak or International Commission of frontier operations arising from the plebiscite.

Winnipeg, Sept. 30 (CP)

MORE than 400 firefighters in Manitoba today fought bush fires in Southeastern and Central Manitoba.

A drop in the wind in the Elma District, fifty-five miles east of Winnipeg, brought hope of checking fires yesterday, but it increased today, and the entire district was blanketed by thick smoke fog.

Fires have swept through sixty sections of land in the Lakeview and Westbourne districts, north of Portage La Prairie, Man., and it is feared the fires will spread into dried-out sloughs west of Lake Manitoba.

Grove Students Enjoy Trip To Eeel's Creek

The annual excursion up the historic route of Champlain through the Kawartha Lakes by the Trent Canal is a great event at The Grove School. The entire school forgets books and learning and embarks on the trim lake steamer Islinda at the Lakefield Government Wharf. With a piano playing below decks and eighty boys festooned about the superstructure the vessel steams up the lakes and through the lock at Young's Point, past the beautiful islands of Stoney Lake to Eel's Creek, the objective. Having moored to the dock of Reginald Bicomfield's cottage, the boys are disembarked and allowed to finish their lunch ashore. They scatter through the woods and up river wherever they wish until the recall whistle is sounded (blown). The return is less riotous than the outward trip, but there is still plenty of evidence of good spirits, and singing around the piano or watching the scenery in the sunset are not the only activities of the trip.

This year the plans for a trip had not been revealed, and on a bright September morning the headmaster, Mr. Mackenzie, announced after breakfast that the school was to assemble immediately on the village wharf for a trip up the lakes. A burst of applause was swelled by cheers and the school streamed from the dining-room in wild disorder, and before many minutes had elapsed they presented themselves one by one for inspection in suitable togs for the trip. Boys in shorts, boys in windbreakers, running shoes, red and green sweaters. The road to the village is soon dotted with groups of bobbing dots of red and green, and soon the whole school is assembled at the wharf and have taken possession of the Islinda, listing gently to the unaccustomed load.

With a warning toot of the whistle she pulls out into the current and steams past the swift-flowing narraws, up the lake. In the open lake the school buildings are seen standing peaceful and silent on the eastern shore, the green roofs and white walls framed in the profuse green and red and yellow of the autumn foliage. The islands and the river bring the travellers to Young's Point, and the locks. Pat Young himself is at the helm; he has piloted the lake boats for thirty years, and he proudly holds up a ten-pound pickerel caught above the dam the night before. The boys stream across the road to the nearby store while the boat is being locked through and the scene at the counter may be imagined. A few minutes and the warning whistle is blown and the trip proceeds. Clear Lake opens up as the boat rounds the bend in the river, and for half an hour the shores recede as she proceeds up the open lake. Ahead lie the pine-clad islands of Stoney Lake, the border of the Pre-Cambrian Shield, and the limestone shores end abrutly as the red granite protrudes. Large islands and small islands raise their pine-crowned heads above the dark amber waters and the various hues of red sparkle in the morning sunshine where bits of quartz appear. Threading in and out among the islands by channels often only thirty feet wide, the boat passes through scenery of the rarest beauty.

Pioneer Cottage.

Ten miles up the lake is the mouth of Eel's Creek, a small river draining Jack's Lake which has been an important river in the lumbering days. At the headland Reginald Bloomfield has a pioneer summer cottage. The heavily wooded shoreline between his cottage and the Creek shows the activity of beaver, with a hundred poplars lying prone with their unwithered leaves touching the still waters, and twitching as the busy animals work at trimming the branches.

The boys swarm up the bank. There is a variety of games: Horseshoes, "cat," "run sheep run"; others are abroad in canoes. Some follow the trail up the river bank, trying to reach High Falls. Dense swamps block their progress after the first mile, and they content themselves watching those in canoes shooting the swift rapids.

Reginald Bloomfield, some-time champion canoeist of Canada, and an Old Boy of the school, delighted the boys by performing for them in one of his thrilling exhibits of skill. He brought his canoe upstream to the foot of the rapids on the downward slop of the great first wave of the rapids, then, removing his paddle from the water he held the canoe steady by sheer balance on the eddying crest of the white-water. The canoe seemed poised, as if stuck on a rock, in the turbulent rush of foaming water. He shot the rapids alone and with passengers, taking many of the boys through, much to their delight. This demonstration, accompanied many more feats of balance, including the upset canoe in which he rolls his canoe over in deep water without shipping more than a quart. He sank the canoe in mid-lake and emptied it by a few deft rocking movements as he swam beside it. The boys watched from the shore as he went through his routine with an efficiency and economy of effort that spoke of many hours of practice and years of experience.

As the afternoon wore on, groups of boys appeared along the banks, toiling wearily home from the quest. The whistle blew sharply, and the stragglers came with unwilling haste tired by the exertions of the day. When all were aboard and checked, the lines were cast off and the Islinda backed slowly out into the lake, with its cargo of adventurers all pleasantly wearied and satisfied to spend a quiet trip back loitering about the decks or joining the singsong below.

As the sun approached the horizon and the shadows crept across the lake the Islinda slipped easily down the swift, dark waters of the narrows toward the Government dock at Lakefield, and unloaded its passengers. They moved off in groups with less spring in the step than was evident in the morning, but under the spur of hunger and the thought of a good supper, they covered the mile in good order. The dining-room became a busy din of chatter and clatter, and not long after, they trooped up the stairs to bed, and were soon drifting down another river and into the pleasant land of dreams to live again the excitements of a not-to-be-forgotten holiday "up the lakes."

British Troops Quit Irish Forts Three Weeks Early

Cork, Ireland, Sept. 30 (CP)

BRITISH SOLDIERS manning forts on Bere Island were replaced today by Irish troops who now guard the entire southern coast.

Withdrawal of the British soldiers, in accordance with the new Anglo-Eire understanding, was advanced three weeks.

As they departed thousands of Irish people working in England were returning home because of the international crisis and many English people were sending their children to Ireland for safety.

Great News for People With INDIGESTION

Do you know what happens inside your stomach when it refuses to deal properly with food? Those unbearable pains you get are caused by excess acid. There is more acid in your stomach than is needed for proper digestion. And what is this acid doing? It is irritating and inflaming your stomach walls. It is fermenting food wastes—building up gas to press upon nerve centres and so cause heartburn and those other pains you are all too familiar with. Stomach specialists know this—and they always prescribe four powerful alkalies as treatment. You can get exactly this same treatment by taking Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. These same alkalies, in perfect balance in Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, usually relieve stomach pains at once. They put a soothing coating over the inflamed stomach lining. Then digestion comes back to normal. You lose your fear that food means pain. Get Maclean Brand Stomach Powder from your druggist, in bottles in cartons 75c. Never sold loose. And look for the signature "Alex. C. Maclean" which must appear on every bottle and carton. Maclean Brand Stomach Powder is not genuine without this signature. 120

An Unusual Tribute

In a cabled resume of what the British papers were saying on the day when the "Big Four" started negotiations, the Sheffield Independent used a phrase which was uncommonly good. Just this: "Neville Chamberlain stands today as the great, quiet, calm, home-loving peacemaker of his day and generation."

There is something in that which is quite different to the usual mill-run of war-threat comment. It is not given over to a technical argument regarding armies and fleets; it has nothing in the way of denunciation, but rather spends its force in going back to something which is essentially fundamental — home-loving peacemaker.

We cannot recall seeing or hearing of a monument which has been raised to such an individual. One can travel far and wide through Europe and find erected there columns and magnificent tributes to men who have fought. There appears to be no end of them. But that phrase about the "home-loving peacemaker" strikes deep in the fabric of human emotion and it sticks.

Within recent days a good many people have had their minds turned to something of the same sort. They have not said so openly, but they have been thinking—thinking a great deal.

Young men were thinking about it too; about the prospects of war. They know well enough what it means to them. We had occasion to see a letter written by a young man only a few days ago, and he was discussing the same thing. He said he had always looked forward to the time when he would have a home of his own; he believed he was right in thinking that was a normal course which should not be denied. And then he was moved to say that things looked so doubtful in the world outside that he felt at times as though his fond hope would fade.

The world has been living on hope in recent days; clinging to it like a drowning man to a straw. High hope and dull fear have been invading our homes, welcome and unwelcome guests in the same chamber. And the world still hopes and with good reason. The home-loving Englishman has accomplished that to which he set his hand.

Our City Is Growing

The population of Peterborough is increasing. The year 1938 shows an increase of 547 over 1937, and the increase over 1936 is 1,074. That gives us a population now of 24,146, but that does not tell the whole story. Our city boundaries are rather closely drawn, and particularly in the south end has there developed a large section which although in the city as far as work and trading is concerned, is in the separate municipality of North Monaghan. A similar condition obtains in other sections and estimates of the number of people who are actually in Peterborough although living outside of it run from 3,500 to 4,000. These estimates are based on various counts, including the number of houses served from the post office. That would make a population of about 28,000, and we do not think that figure is far wide of the actual mark.

There has been in recent years an incoming of families on relief, although this movement is rather well under check now, but it is also true that families have left during the same period and have gone on relief elsewhere. There is evidence of healthy growth in the number of new houses which are being erected this season. When a community has a consistent building program and a rising population it is evidence of progress.

Since the year 1905 when there was a population here of 14,175 there has been but one period when there was a sudden jump in population, and that was an increase which took the 1911 population of 16,923 up to 19,300 for the year 1912. That was principally accounted for by the locating here in that year of the De Laval Co. Since then the growth has been gradual.

Apart from the increase in population it is interesting to find that the amount levied by taxation last year, $895,463, was the lowest figure since the year 1929. In 1928 the per capita amount raised by taxation was $38.60, while in 1937 the audited statement gives the amount at $37.91. Population on the way up and the tax levy slightly decreasing—two signs of good health for any city.

The Law Has Spoken

A wedding party passed down one of our streets in Peterborough and the horn of a car was blowing. It finally blew its way to police court. It was no pioneer horn blazing a new way in virgin territory. It was tooting just as other horns have been tooted since cars took the place of hacks and cabs and phaetons and plain buggies at wedding parties.

In these days of cars the trip of the wedding party is generally so short owing to the speed of the age that what tooting is to be done must be pressed into a short space. That is probably why tooting became such a habit. If the driver of the car desires to make a noise there is not anything else he can do.

There used to be a fine old custom called the charivari where the folk of the community gathered by night. They beat upon pans and tubs as soon as the newly weds arrived at their home and if such an event did not take place then the young couple were apt to feel that they had been snubbed.

But to return to this horn tooting, we find there are two reasons urged against it. First it is against by-law 3262 which deals with noises calculated to disturb the peace of Peterborough. When a person drives bang into a civic by-law with such a formidable number as 3262 we guess there is nothing else for the law to do but take its course. That by-law has been slumbering for a long time as though it had a touch of sleeping sickness, but the other day it stood up on its hind legs in court; it was dusted off and put into action.

What's more we learn that in the prosecution of the case it was urged that when this car came tooting along the street with a wedding party the noise was so great that "doctors and lawyers and secretaries and other people were unable to concentrate." And admittedly that makes the case pretty black, well nigh on to being hopeless. If the day's work is ever going to be done then we've got to concentrate whether we feel like it or not.

So it does look as though when our young people want to go off and get married the exuberance of friends must be muffled. Nothing must be done which interferes with the serious business of concentrating — whatever that may be. And apart from that there is by-law 3262 bearing upon it the great seal of the city and it says the inhabitants of the burg must not be disturbed. So wedding parties will henceforth kindly tip-toe about their happy mission. The law has spoken.

A Rabbit Can Run

A member of the Examiner staff says a young jack rabbit can run between 32 and 33 miles an hour. And this particular jack was just a young fellow of this year's hatch. Probably his father if he is still alive might be able to do even better.

There was an actual test made in this case and it was the result of the rabbit being attracted by the lights of a car at night. People who drive at night have frequently seen rabbits standing out watching the car coming. This rabbit started running beside the car and for a mile or so went at 25 miles an hour. Then the car was stopped and the headlights turned off for a moment to see if the jack would take to the woods and thus get out of the way. When the car was started the rabbit was found a few hundred yards farther on as though waiting to start the race again. This time the car was stepped up between 32 and 33 miles an hour and that pace the rabbit held for another mile or so by which time there was room to pass it and leave the racer behind. When the car finally passed it the rabbit was going strong and it had been running well over two miles. Of course this one was a 1938 model and this is a year of pretty fair speed.

This Looks Wrong

In one of our courts there came the other day a man charged with driving a car which required 80 feet in which to stop when going at 20 miles per hour.

He was asked what he would have done if a child had walked across the road in front of him, and the answer to that was he thought he could have stopped. Such a question seems strange when the court had evidence before it that he could have done no such thing.

There were some other bits of evidence and it was said the price paid for the car was either $3 or $4, and the owner and driver carried no insurance. And yet the driver left court with the warning that he better go and get the brakes fixed.

We have a good deal of patience with the general idea of letting people do what they desire to do, but that plan has its limitations. Here was an old rattle-trap fit for the junk heap, which took 80 feet to stop at 20 miles an hour, with no insurance on it and yet it is going to keep on running if the brakes are fixed. That decision looks like estimating the privilege of one man to be greater than the rights and safety of the general public.

They Want To Stay Out

There is a feeling in a good many people that they do not want to get "mixed up" in anything which is going to take them to court as a witness. There was a fair example of it when Joseph Cruthers of Parkhill (Middlesex Co.) was charged with reckless driving.

Cruthers' car ran into a ditch and afterward took fire. Miss Willa Culbert saw the accident and ran to assist the driver, being able to pull him out of the burning car. Some time afterward from measurements taken by officers, there was a charge laid against the driver of recklessness.

Then it was that Miss Culbert went into action and said another car had come into the road in front of Cruthers and he took to the ditch in order to avoid an accident. She admitted she had watched the episode from beginning to end but did not say anything about it. She even told the traffic officer at the time that she did not know anything about the case "because I did not want to get involved in the matter." After Miss Culbert told her story Cruthers was discharged.

This lady is not the first to have taken that attitude. Truth is it is quite common and also entirely wrong. Comes from fear of going into court and being questioned. And yet these people who have actually been eye-witnesses can do more to see that plain justice is done than can any other agency or individual. There is a plain duty facing them rather than an ordeal from which they should shrink. In fact their failure to come forward and tell what they know could readily enough be the cause of an injustice being done.

He Was Only "Jake"

On the sixth of August a farmer near St. Thomas picked up a man on the highway, and in the course of the conversation that followed the transient offered to go and work for the farmer if he would give him his board. He gave his name as "Jake."

A few days ago Jake was working in the mow of the barn taking in pea straw on a sling. One of the loads gathered too much speed coming down the track and knocked a section from the end of the barn. Also knocked Jake out through the opening and he died a short time after from a fall of 30 feet.

That of course was a tragic ending for Jake, but there was an extension to this tragedy and it came when some effort was made to see about what they should do with the dead man. The farmer for whom he had worked for his board for almost two full months had no idea who he was. He know only that his name was "Jake." And yet Jake would have been in the house for meals and he would have had a bed at the place and members of the family would be well known to him. But he was only "Jake" —unknown and with no past history . . he had just been picked up on the road on August 6 and the sum total of his desire seemed to be something to eat and a place to sleep.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Rather sound advice in these few words—the best way to stop drinking is not to start.

Greenland is moving away from Europe at the rate of fifty feet per year, and would probably increase the temo if it could.

Now that fines are being imposed in police court for unnecessary auto horn-blowing, wedding parties in Peterborough promise to verge toward the sedate, henceforth.

A church body has passed a recommendation that Christians should not invest in liquor stocks. Nor in the stocks of the liquor stores either we presume the resolution implies.

From the Harrow station of the Dominion Experimental Farm comes word there will be no more egg-laying contests. The campaign against shell games at fall fairs may have had something to do with the decision.

A Huntsville minister of 91 years says he has to keep on studying as he never knows when some one is going to call on him to preach a sermon, and apparently he is not content to reach down in the barrel and take out an old one.

Ottawa authorities explain they had nothing to do with the removal of a cargo of copper from a German freighter about to sail from Montreal. The announcement should occasion little surprise.

That old belief that women hate to tell their age will have to be scrapped. Here we have a story from a women's organization in the district of the members answering the roll call by stating how old they were.

TRAGEDY

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When Aunt Lucile comes visiting, she brings along most everything, enough to fill a bunk; she has a telescope valise, where she says stuff won't spoil or crease, she likewise has a trunk.

¶ A hand bag comes with Aunt Lucile, about the size of half a wheel, dimensions are profound; for it is wide and deep and long, it's also made uncommon strong, and stitched up very sound.

¶ And in that bag she has her pills, if she feels comings down with chills, or shivers in the morn; she' pads and ointment in there too, she packs beneath her Sunday shoe, to ease her aching corn.

¶ She keeps her curling tongs in there, night curlers too to tuck her hair, a toothbrush and a comb; her reading glasses are in there, there's most enough I should declare, to start and stock a home.

¶ And all her keys are in there too, a rather foolish thing to do, for she locks everything; and if she lost that bag I know, she might be hunting high and low, until on came the spring.

¶ That's just what happened Aunt Lucile, she gave a startled little squeal, I knew that she was shocked; in fact just now she's almost sunk, she can't undo her grip or trunk—for everything is locked.

Finds Corn Crop Is Very "Messy"

(By Rusticus in Stratford Beacon-Herald)

IN COMMON with most farmers who feed and milk a number of dairy cows, we like to have a good silo full of ensilage when the feeding period opens—and the unfortunate part of it is that barn feeding is rapidly drawing near.

We much prefer to have a little corn left over when the silo is filled and re-filled, rather than be a little short on the second filling. The trouble is our silo is a bit on the small side, considering the stock we keep, and in sowing the corn in Spring we generally figure on an average or below-average crop, and sow a bit extra. That is what we did last Spring and then found that the corn was actually going to be an above-average crop. Just about the time the cobs were forming the field looked wonderful. Then one day came a terrific storm, and what a sorry mess that corn field was in next morning. Stalks broken and twisted. The whole crop severely checked from further growth and development, particularly of the cobs.

Then, not so long ago, came the day to start harvesting the corn crop. A corn binder makes a good job of many a tangly field, but there are some crops that are just too messy for a binder to properly handle, and this was one of them. Now, cutting corn with a hoe is not a pleasant job. The average man tackles it with reluctance and finishes with sore hands and ailing back; and from the farmer's standpoint the labor involved is rather costly. Finally we thought that enough had been cut to fill the silo once at least, and nearly an acre was left untouched. The silo was filled and there was enough loose corn in the field to refill. Thus we have not only had the problem of a crop difficult to handle but a crop too big for the silo. Perhaps we would be speaking more correctly, though, if we said a silo too small for the crop, because we could use all the corn to good advantage if we had the storage space. Some day we must have more silo space.

Today the silo was to have been refilled, but this is one of those days that we would naturally expect in late November rather than in September. How much of the corn is going to go into the silo and what can we do with the remainder?

The month of September has been one of raw weather and the stock, particularly milch cows, has suffered. Speaking of cows, where is that Consumers' League that complained so bitterly about the high cost of butter last Winter? The farmer certainly is not making a fortune with butter fat at present levels, though even the price of butter is overshadowed by the danger of war. It is generally conceded that the price of farm produce will advance in case of war, but the farmer would object most strenuously to any increase in price if war could be prevented.

But can war be prevented? What anxiety one man, dizzy with his own rise to power, can cause a world! Just at a time when the leaves are turning, when the last of the harvest, corn, roots and potatoes are being gathered, just when we should be well satisfied with the yields of our fields, this most serious of all war threats comes up. Surely peace can yet be maintained.

FARE BOOST A LOSS.

(New York Post)

ONE of the points that will be made in the railway labor case against a wage cut is that the industry has come more and more under the control of banking elements which have no real understanding of operating problems.

How far this is the case we do not know. But we are interested in what has happened since the Eastern railroads, over the objections of the Baltimore & Ohio and against the better judgment of several members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, raised passenger rates to 2½ cents a mile.

Railroad executives are now complaining of a drop in travel. In August the decline in passenger revenue under August, 1937, was 16 per cent on the New York Central, 15 per cent on the Pennsylvania and 19 per cent on the Baltimore & Ohio. On the other hand both bus and coastwise steamship companies report an increase in revenues since the railroads raised their rates.

The bright minds responsible for the fare increase thought that bus companies would also raise their rates, but the bus-line operators showed better sense. They kept their rates down and won a lot of business away from the railroads.

Judging from the way some people are accustomed to doing business, the danger is now that, instead of letting experienced operating men decide the fare question on the Eastern roads, they will try to buy up the bus lines—and use monopoly methods to maintain fares at uneconomic levels.

EASY ANSWERED.

AN INSPECTOR of school, determined to puzzle a class of boys, asked them this question in mental arithmetic: "If I had a field 100 yards long by 80 yards wide, and I employed three men for five days to plant it with seed potatoes at a guinea a hundredweight, how old am I?" The class was not unnaturally baffled, all except one boy who immediately raised his hand.

"Well?" asked the inspector slightly taken aback to find his challenge accepted.

"Forty-four," said the boy.

"How do you make that out?" demanded the inspector.

"Well," said the boy, "I have a brother who is 22 and he's half-daft."

NOT GOOD LISTENERS

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

And it's suggested that one Wilhelm Hohenzollern could give Herr Hitler some good advice. Yes; if he'd listen to it. But chaps like that don't listen to advice; they know it all. Even Wilhelm in 1914 wasn't a good listener.

MIGHT AS WELL

"May I say you're out?"

• There Has Been Little Peace

IN THE LAST 538 years the world has only been entirely at peace for a total of 51 years.

From 1400 to 1600 there was not one single year of complete peace in the world. From 1600 to 1800 there were only 16 years of peace; from 1800 to 1900, 25 years of peace, and from 1900 to date, but 10 years of peace.

These remarkable facts come from an unique survey by the research department of the Searle Grain company, noted for its statistic service. The study takes a rather original view of the problem of peace and war.

	Years
France	300
Russia	261
Austria	238
Great Britain	232
Spain	213
Turkey	192
Germany	187
Italy	117
Holland	106
Portugal	40
United States	27

Why, it asks, should the people of the world have spent such a large proportion of their time in destroying their lives, property, goods, commodities, products and resources, in making themselves poorer?

One can only suggest one real cause for it all, which is man's unfortunate genetic "make-up," which consists mainly of certain defects which seem to be so deeply ingrained and inherent in man's nature. They are as follows:

Selfishness: Which shows itself in an unwillingness to share with others those resources of soil and minerals which nature has made available in and on the earth, and which certain nations have taken possession of.

Greed: Born of the struggle for existence, the urge or the fear that man must accumulate things in order to tide over times of scarcity that might come.

Envy: The uncontrollable desire of any individual or nation to be as well off as other people; the determination to make others share with him the things that others own and have accumulated by one means or another.

Almost all of the wars that have been fought, the survey concludes, can be traced to one or the other of these basic characteristics of human nature.

• A City Wrecked By Trouble

MAYOR NELSON SPARKS of Akron, Ohio, is authority for the statement, in an article in the Magazine, Liberty, that since John L. Lewis and his minions came into that city in their tactical drive against the motor car industry, 11,000,000 work hours have been lost by the wage earners and the rubber manufacturing interests, and here is the sum and substance of his story in brief paragraphs:

"The city that once gave full-time employment to 75,000 satisfied, prosperous factory workers now gives part-time employment to a frightened, intimidated 25,000.

"The city that once manufactured 67 per cent of the world's rubber goods now manufactures barely 30 per cent. The city that increased in population 360 per cent in 20 years is now rapidly liquidating.

"Real estate values have dropped 50 per cent.

"Homes are offered at public sale and find no bidders.

"Thousands of former highly paid rubber workers are now working on WPA for sixty dollars a month, and eighty-eight thousand persons, more than a third of the city's population, are on relief," he writes.

"The larger industries commenced to move away from Akron under the "reign of C.I.O. terror."

LIES AND PROPAGANDA.

HITLER believes that a most effective weapon can be forged out of the 100 per cent iron ore of the pure and unadulterated Lie.

Inasmuch as the German propaganda at present is concentrated on asserting that Czechoslovakia is a Bolshevik nation ruled by Jews, the following facts should be stated in the interest of truth:

The Jews are 2.4 per cent of the population of Czechoslovakia. They are distributed among the members of every political party except the Henleinists, from which they are barred. In the last election the Communist party polled 10 per cent of the vote for Deputies and not quite 11 per cent of the vote for Senators, by exact proportional representation, largely on the issue of the maintenance of the Czechoslovakian-Russian alliance for protection against aggression.

There has never been a member of the Communist party in the Czechoslovakian-Russian alliance for protection against aggression.

There has never been a member of the Communist party in the Czechoslovak Cabinet. The posts of Finance and Foreign Affairs may not be held by the members of any party, but must be manned by experts.

The present Prime Minister and Minister of National Defense, General Syrovy, has never been associated with any political movement in the Czechoslovak Republic. He is a war hero and a military expert.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

AND ONE of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me....And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth. And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: and he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do; I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God.—Luke xii: 13, 15-21.

Exchanging Jobs

A young English worker and an American worker are to exchange jobs, and were in cordial conversation with each other, as follows:

"What's work like, your side of the Atlantic?"

"Awful!"

"Same here; what's the pay like?"

"Awful!"

"Same here. Do you like work?"

"No!"

"Same here. What's your boss like?"

"Catsmeat!"

"Same here. Shake, pal!"

"IT'S THE TOBACCO THAT COUNTS"

Woman Driver Is Guilty Of Negligence

Mrs. Caroline Baker of Kingston charged with manslaughter in the death of 17-year-old Elva Preston of Lakefield at Havelock on July 4th last was found guilty of criminal negligence by a Supreme Court jury shortly before ten o'clock Thursday night. The jury deliberated for three hours.

Her counsel, Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., made a strong plea for leniency and when he suggested a two-year suspended sentence, Crown Attorney V J. McElderry, K.C., did not oppose it. Mr. Justice Urquhart gave the accused a two years suspended sentence, and ruled that she must not drive a car during that time. A bond of $500 was posted by Cecil Baker, husband of the accused, by the order of the Judge.

Correct Verdict

"In view of your good record as a driver and your responsibilities I am letting you off with suspended sentence, and as a further penalty I will make it conditional that over the two-year period you do not drive a car," said Judge Urquhart. In speaking to the jury, he said: "I think you came to the correct verdict and the Crown is grateful to you for the manner in which you discharged your duties."

Under recent amendments to the Criminal Code a jury has the right to reduce a charge of manslaughter to one of criminal negligence if the facts of the case warrant it, and the jury took advantage of this privilege, finding the prisoner guilty under section 285, sub-section 6 of the Criminal Code.

Mr. Gordon called the attention of the Court to Mrs. Baker's fine driving record, covering a period of fifteen years in which she had not had a single accident. He asked the Court to take into consideration the age of the prisoner, and her family and pointed out that the bulk of the family finances had been used in educating the children. He referred to the accident as a mistake in judgment on the part of his client, Mrs. Baker.

Contradictory Evidence

Contradictory evidence featured the trial as two independent witnesses for the Crown, Clifford Davies of Norwood and Russel Currie of Havelock both testified that they were standing near Wellman's garage at the north-east corner of highways 7 and 30 and saw Mrs. Baker's car drive across No. 7 highway without coming to a stop at the stop sign. Against this Doris Baker, daughter of the accused and Mrs. Baker, both swore the stop sign had been obeyed.

The accident took place on July 4th last at two o'clock in the afternoon, when the Baker car driving north on Highway 30 or what was formerly known as the Trent River Road came in collision with a car being driven east on Highway 7 by Nelson Coons of Lakefield. The Coons' car turned over and Elva Preston, sister-in-law of the driver and a rumble seat passenger died in a few hours of injuries received as the car rolled over her body. Harold Coons, aged 6, the other passenger in the rumble seat, escaped with minor injuries. The car was extensively damaged. The trial started on Wednesday and the last witness was heard at 5.30 last night.

Car Not Stopped.

Provincial Constable McClure said the point of impact was four feet from the north side of Highway 7.

"Were there any other tire marks?"

"Yes, tire marks led up to Highway 7 and to the point of impact starting ten feet south of Highway 7," answered the constable.

"There is no law that says a car must be stopped directly at the stop sign, is there?" asked the bench.

"No," said the officer, "the car must be stopped before entering a through highway." He replied the Baker car was not stopped, before the impact, giving the opinion because of tire marks leading up to the point of impact.

Mrs. Nelson Coons, the next Crown witness and a front seat passenger in the Coons car, said both cars entered the intersection at the same time. She said the speedometer of their car was not working but was positive they were not travelling over thirty miles an hour.

Clifford Davies, of Norwood, said he was standing at Wellman's service station while Wellman put a quart of oil in his car. He had a clear view of the intersection. He said the Baker car did not stop until the collision took place, and estimated the speed of the Coons car at about 30 miles an hour.

Nelson Wellman, a garage owner on the north-east corner of the intersection of Highway 7 and 30 at Havelock, saw the Coons car go into a side spin and roll over one and a half times.

Andrew Currie, Havelock, a Crown witness, saw the accident. He testified the Baker car driving north on Highway 30 did not stop until the collision took place. He heard Coons blow his horn and saw him swerve to the left to avoid striking the Baker car.

This concluded the Crown's case, and the jury was excluded, while Mr. Gordon made a formal motion for dismissal which was noted but denied by Mr. Justice Urquhart, because two witnesses had sworn the Baker car had not stopped.

Defence Case.

At two-fifteen the jury was recalled and the defence counsel called his first witness.

Leo Ackford and Bert Cribbis, auto mechanics, both testified it was impossible to distinguish between straight tire marks made by stopping or starting of a car.

Mrs. Nelson Wellman was the third defence witness called and verified that Andrew Currie had been in her store the day of the accident.

Cecil Baker, husband of the accused, said his family had lived in Kingston for 13 years, and on the day of the accident had been visiting Mrs. Baker's mother, who lived a mile south of Highway 7 on the Trent River Road. He gave evidence on the condition of the brakes of the Baker car prior to the accident and said they were efficient.

Claims Car Stopped.

Doris Baker, 18, daughter of the accused, said she was a passenger in the car with her mother at the time of the accident. She claimed the car almost came to a stop at the railroad tracks then came to a full stop at the edge of the Highway 7. She said the Coons car was well down the highway to the west when they started to cross Highway 7.

Mrs. Baker, the accused, was called as the last witness for the defence. She reiterated the evidence of her daughter, saying the car had been brought to a stop and that her car was in low gear as she began to drive the car across the highway.

"Where was Coons' car when you first saw it?"

"It was west of the Havelock Corporation sign," Mrs. Baker said.

"When did you notice the car again?"

"It was about 250 feet west of Highway No. 30 when I started to cross," she answered, and added that a short time later when her car was two-thirds of the way across the road, she saw Coons' car almost on her. She stopped the car, and Coons, in swinging to the front, struck the front of her car.

"How far is it to the far corner of this room?" asked Judge Urquhart.

"Between 50 and 60 feet, said the accused. The Bench then ordered the distance be measured, and it was found to be 56 feet, and this concluded the case.

Gibraltar Blackout Fails Under Rebel Searchlights

Gibraltar, Sept. 30 (AP)

SPANISH INSURGENT searchlights spoiled two Gibraltar blackouts last night.

When the signals were given all lights on the island and in the port were darkened, but almost immediately batteries of insurgent lights on Carnero Point, south of near-by Algeciras, flashed on and lighted up the entire rock.

German Liner Seized To Satisfy Mortgage

HOBOKEN, N.J., Sept. 30 (AP).—The Red Star German liner Westernland remained today in dock, seized under a United States court order instead of steaming hurriedly toward Germany.

While the Westernland prepared yesterday, along with other German vessels, to hasten home in the face of the European crisis, officers of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company of New York made a complaint to Federal Judge Guy L. Fake that the steamship line was in default on interest on a $1,150,000 loan and mortgage on the Westernland.

Judge Fake ordered the ship seized by the United States marshal at her Hoboken pier and held until next Tuesday morning for a hearing in Newark in which the line was directed to show cause why the ship should not be held in this country until the mortgage was satisfied.

North Manvers Fair Draws Seven Schools

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANETVILLE, Sept. 30. —Ideal weather prevailed for the twenty-seventh Rural School Fair of North Manvers, which was held at Janetville on Wednesday afternoon.

There was a splendid attendance of interested parents and friends as well as pupils and excitement ran high during the entire day.

Seven schools with their teachers were represented as follows: Franklin, Miss Bailey of Warkworth; Fleetwood, Mr. Real of Port Perry; Lifford, Miss Harper of Port Perry; Yelverton, Miss Jane Mills of Lifford; Bethel, Mr. Roy Marshall of Janetville; North Janetville, Miss McKay of Lindsay, and South Janetville, Mr. P. Hamilton of Blackstock.

Th pupils numbered around 150.

After the exhibits were placed at 10.30 a.m. in the large C.O.F. Hall, races and other sports were enjoyed at the park until noon and included three-legged races, wheelbarrow races, slipper kicking contests and tug-of-war between the various schools. In the latter Fleetwood boys were the winners, with Franklin girls a very close second.

In the apple naming contest Margaret Shea of Fleetwood was first with Ruth Armstrong and Marjorie McNeil coming second and third.

In the afternoon the livestock judging ccntest was followed by a parade of the various schools in costume.

When all had formed in front of the grandstand the new school inspector, Mr. Cannon of Oshawa asked Mr. Roy Marshall of Bethel to conduct the opening exercises with the music instructor, Mr. Holmes, assisting with the singing. This consisted of the 23rd Pslam, the Lord's Prayer, O Canada, the Pledge of Allegiance and the National Anthem.

Each school presented its school yell and later Mr. P. Hamilton directed the physical training exhibition.

Mr. Holmes led the schools in singing two delightful numbers which drew much applause. Recitations, mouth organ playing and two classes of public speaking followed and were of an excellent standard.

After the judges had given their decision all repaired to the hall to view the results of the judging there.

Every class was well represented except the livestock, for which John Burn won 1st with his dairy heifer calf and Orwell Muirhead 1st with his beef heifer calf.

Lunch was provided during the day by Mrs. M. Armstrong's group of the W.M.S. and the proceeds were most gratifying.

Crown Timber Cutter Gets Month To Pay

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Sept. 30.—Ambrose Lepinskie, of the village of Rockingham, appeared before Magistrate William McGregor, of the County of Renfrew, charged by Crown Attorney H. C. Johnson, K.C., of illegal cutting of timber on lands in the Crown, in the Trent Forest district. The charge, laid under section 373 of the Criminal Code, arose out of the failure of the accused to make restitution to the Crown for timber which he had illegally cut on Crown lands, and for removing same after it had been placed under seizure by an offiicer of the Department of Lands and Forests.

It was impressed upon those present in the court that illegal cutting of timber was a punishable offence, and that any further cases of trespass which came up in court would not be treated with leniency.

Lepinskie was given one month in which to make payment of $20.20 together with the costs of the prosecution, and failure to make payment would result in imprisonment of one month.

Japanese Foreign Minister Resigns

TOKYO, Sept. 30 (AP)—The resignation of Foreign Minister Kazushige Ugaki, who had differed with the army over China policy, was announced officially tonight.

General Ugaki, on the army retired list, long has been at odds with the dominant faction in the army over the general lines of imperial policy.

His appointment as foreign minister in the cabinet shakeup of last May 28 was considered an indication that Japan might follow a more moderate course with respect to the China war and relations with other powers.

His disagreement with the army over administration of the new China affairs board was considered the reason for his resignation.

The board, an extra-governmental organ, was designed to act as a liaison between the government and the new Japanese-supported administrations in conquered Chinese territory. Under the present pattern the army would hold the balance of power.

General Ugaki retired to his villa today, explaining he was ill. He refused to receive any visitors.

Pope Calls Upon People To Pray In Message Broadcast To World

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Sept. 30 (AP)—Pope Pius asked the world on Thursday to have "recourse to the unarmed but invinicible power of prayer" to avert "the imminent danger of war."

The Pope broadcast his message over a vast radio hook-up. It was in the form of a pastoral letter addressed to the bishops, clergy and faithful and read to them by the holy father.

The Pope spoke under the shadow of the meeting at Munich where the heads of western Europe's four most powerful governments were meeting to find a peaceful solution to Germany's demands on Czechoslovakia.

"While millions of men live in dread because of the imminent danger of war and because of the threat of unexampled slaughter and ruin, we gather into our paternal heart the trepidation of our children and we invite the bishops, clergy, the religious and the faithful to unite themselves with us in the most undaunted and insistent prayer for the preservation in justice and in charity of the peace.

"To this unarmed but invincible power of prayer let people have recourse once yet again so that God, in whose hands rest the destinies of the world, may sustain in those who govern confidence in the pacific ways of faithful negotiations and of lasting agreement, and that he may inspire in all sentiments and action corresponding to the reiterated words of peace which will be suited to foster peace and to establish it on the secure basis of law and of the gospel teaching.

Ladies' Winner At Field Day For Third Time

Mrs. A. F. Inch won the club championship of the Kawartha Golf Club yesterday at the closing field day for ladies. It was the third time Mrs. Inch had taken this golfing title.

A large number of ladies attended the club's field day, the games being in charge of Mrs. C. B. Muir and Mrs. C. J. Ray. Competitions were held in the morning and a two-ball foursome in the afternoon. Runner-up to Mrs. Inch for the club championship was Mrs. V. A. Selkirk. The latter took the handicap trophy. Mrs. A. R. Jones won the nine-hole trophy, and Mrs. Selkirk captured the 18-hole ringer. The nine-hole ringer went to Mrs. J. P. Watts.

Mrs. Scott Wins

Mrs. A. F. Inch also was successful in the silver division ringer competition, with Mrs. H. R. Scott gaining the consolation championship. The runner-up was Mrs. C. J. Ray. Point prize was taken by Mrs. H. Barker. Mrs. L. Browne won the driving first, and Mrs. L. McKeever the driving second. In the tennis ball competition, high went to Mrs. Pounder with Mrs. Sackville getting the low.

In approaching and putting, Mrs. G. Solmes was first and Mrs. C. B. Muir second. Mrs. Selkirk came first in putting and Mrs. Ray second. The best score of three holes was won by Mrs. J. E. Girven. A special spoon prize went to Mrs. Sackville with Miss Dorothy Sherin second. In the two-ball foursome, Mrs. Ed Riley and Mrs. Inch came first, and Miss V. Martin and Miss M. O'Dette second.

Good Season

The ladies of the Kawartha Club enjoyed the most successful season this year they have had in the club's short history. Six different clubs were represented at June competitions on the beautiful greens to the west of the city. The city and district tournament had a large representation the past summer.

The club champion—for the third time—saw one of the older golfers emerge triumphant, when Mrs. Inch came through with colors flying. Not a long-time player, having only taken up the game in rather recent years, Mrs. Inch plays a steady game and earned her third victory by a comfortable margin.

Following the annual field day closing competitions Thursday the prizes were presented at a tea for the lady competitors in the clubhouse.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

IT'S LACROSSE TONIGHT down at the George St. arena at 8.30 of the clock. The Inglewood-Caledon Combines clash with the Petes in the first game of the group finals. Second one will be Monday away, and third, if it's needed, maybe in Lindsay about Wednesday. The loser is ge-finished for this year of grace and good gate receipts, while the victor ambles into Ontario senior "B" finals 'gainst the Wallaceburg squad. And there ought to be a huge crowd of fans and fanettes on deck this p.m. to yodel the lads along with merry music in the stands as well as on the cash register! Last couple of contests have drawn some 1500 folk to each tilt and, unless it comes up a rainstorm, tonight should see as many. This town is really lacrosse-minded now.

* * * * * *

COACH FRANK RANDLE and his players expect plenty of work in their attempt to subdue the Combines. They rate the Combines a smoother lacrosse club than, but not as rough as, Brooklin. The Combines are experienced, lovely passers and puh-lenty dangerous. They knocked off our gang last year in playoffs, and put the skids under a strong East York outfit the other night. Both teams will be at full strength and battling like Czechs and Sudetens in this first final fray. Don't pass it up.

* * * * * *

They're Still At It

SOME SOFTBALL FANS of this city have been wondering out loud what had become of the Keene men's team, the last O.S.A. survivor around this district. Well, the Keenesters—who were in the Southend League during the summer here—are very much in the playdown picture yet, and stand a swelegant chance of grabbing unto themselves an Ontario title. After rubbing out Collingwood in semi-finals, they had a rest but will now swing into action Saturday. They meet Humberside in Colborne in the first of the three-game O.S.A. intermediate "C" finals, second struggle being in Keene on Saturday, Oct. 8th. A double win and they'll bust training wide open with a big drumstick apiece of the Thanksgiving Day turkey. Or they may do that regardless of the series result.

* * * * * *

WE HAVE NO INTENTION of going out on the limb, like the mocking bird, and yodel a paen of victory in senior O.R.F.U. ranks for the Orfuns. We don't say they will win, or even make the playoffs in their first season—such things take a little time. And then, too, there is always the chance that they might fool everyone and really do something in the senior race. Aren't the sports experts being fooled all the time on predictions? But one thing we do claim, Coach Bill Irwin's gang will give all and sundry a real battle. Bill is injecting the old scrappy spirit into his squad and they intend to fight from whistle to whistle. So local and district grid fans can be sure of plenty of entertainment on at least three Saturdays when they ramble down to the Exhibition Grounds this autumn, the days when Balmy Beach, Sarnia and Montreal are here. They will be football games—and no fooling—regardless of which club wins.

* * * * * *

What Is An Ex-Expert?

TORONTO STAR WEEKLY interviews the 12 major football coaches in Eastern Canada and summarizes the predicted final standings of the teams. In the Big Four, they have Argos first, then Ottawa, Tigers third and Cubs in the cellar. In O.R.F.U., they rate Sarnia, Nationals, eBaches and Orfuns in that order. And Intercollegiate has Varsity, Western, Queen's and McGill. If, just sorta accidental like, the Orfuns should clamber up out of the cellar—where the experts so kindly consigned them—and should poke their heads out of, say the second-story window, wouldn't that be a jolt? We would take great pleasure then in hurling the sharpest pieces of the experts' shattered predictions right back at 'em. Yes, indeed. At anyrate, the Orfuns will not be in the position of the uneasy head that wears a crown; after all, they can't drop any lower than fourth—and might do much better.

* * * * * *

THERE WILL BE a meeting of senior O.R.F.U. clubs in Toronto this p.m. and H. A. Cranfield and Walter Jackson of Peterborough will attend. Just routine business in connection with the opening of the league next week-end, appointment of referees and such like. Orfuns couldn't get a game for this Saturday afternoon, so the squad will be split in two and a practice tussle run off tomorrow after lunch in the Grounds ala Exhibish. Practices will continue nightly next week, tapering off to light workouts the latter part of the week—as the Orfuns want to be on edge for their long trip to Montreal and their first fray with the Nats on Turkey Day. With our lacrosse and ball clubs still in the race, and each team having several good gridders tied up in these sports, the football ossifers are coming to a slow boil at the delay in winding up these sports. But it can't be helped; the sports season will overlap.

No Pay Dirt At The Mines

NO BALL GAME here tomorrow, arrangements between Creighton Mines and the Petes having fallen through. The northern club refused to make any guarantee offer at all for the Petes to go north, refused to consider the Petes' offer to them of 60 per cent of the gross to play here but insisted upon a flat financial guarantee, plus living expenses if the club had to stay over owing to a third game or for rain. In other words, the Creighton crew would take no risk on finances at all, but insisted that the Petes should do so—after the locals twice getting the run-around from the T.A.B.A. Obviously the Petes weren't going to play the sucker again, so nothing could be arranged. The northerners said they'd drop out if not given an opponent this week, but they'll likely stick in there. Some of the officers from here will go to Toronto tomorrow and thresh it out with O.B.A. officials. It may wind up with names of the remaining clubs being put in a hat and drawn for. 'Tis an unsavory mess with a tainted T.A.B.A. flavor.

Central Boys Win 6 to 0

Queen Alexandra Soccer team still occupies the cellar position in the Public School league through its defeat on Thursday afternoon by Central eleven by the score of 6 to 0. The winners played combination throughout the entire game to run up a high score.

League Standing

	P	W	L	D	F	A	Pt
King Edward	2	2	0	0	6	1	4
P. of Wales	3	1	1	1	5	0	3
Central	2	1	1	0	7	3	2
Queen Mary	2	1	0	1	2	0	2
Queen Alex.	3	0	3	0	1	12	0

Two points for a win and one for a draw.

Two Goals In First Half

The choice of goals went in favor of Queen Alexandra and they made tracks for the Central goal where Kiff punted clear. Play ran from end to end at a rapid pace with the half-backs feeding their forwards with timely openings. Eventually the northenders relaxed sufficient to allow Lee to break through the full backs to send home a stinging drive past Palmer. This was followed by Central hammering away at Queen Alexandra goal and were successful in increasing their score through Batten who accepted a pass from Millen. Half time — Central 0, Queen Alexandra 0.

Central Increase Score.

J. Gaskill took up the goal-keepers position for Queen Alexandra to give his team more confidence. Then Central concentrated in combination to completely baffle the north enders with their steady attack that ultimately resulted in their success being increased by Lee when he connected from a pass along the ground from Clark who had outplayed the full backs. A little later Clark scored from a scrimmage in front of goal, after Gaskill had made a smart one-handed save from Kiff and then stopped a low grounder on the ground but was not tall enough to stop the rising shot from five yards out. Lee added the first and Millen made the count read, Central 6, Queen Alexandra 0.

Queen Alexandra — G. Palmer, goal; J. Woodgate and B. Smith, full backs; C. Seal, J. Tighe and D. Hume, halves; M. Richardson, N. Harvey, J. Gaskill, C. Belford, and E. McEwen, forwards. Subs — M. Coones and B. Lyons.

Central—F. Drummond, goal; F. Kiff and P. Meiklejohn, full backs; G. Hanes, J. Parsons and G. Burns, halves; G. Lee, S. Clarke, L. Batten, B. Millen and W. Smith, forwards. Subs—H. Stewart, V. Griffin and B. Young.

"Peace Pact Is Signed"

We feel sure that all members of our club will join with us with heart-felt thanks at this wonderful news. Long may it continue.

The chairman of the games committee advises us that owing to so many counter attractions and the cool weather that there will be no tournament to-night, but instead the greens will be open for the final games of the club singles and novice competitions.

Our local ladies staged a nice tournament all their own yesterday afternoon, when ten rinks enjoyed 3 10-end games. Tea was served at the conclusion of the games and prizes were presented to the rinks skipped by Mrs. H. Staunton and Mrs. R. Hendry.

We notice that the entry for the "non-winners" competition to be held in Toronto to-morrow is over subscribed. We believe our own club could have staged one of these —we know of one sure entry.

And don't forget the men's open Irish treble competition to-morrow afternoon at 2 p.m. $1.25 per man.

And also the annual meeting on Monday night. Please don't forget the date. It is important all should be present.

Graham Trophy Is Won By Campbellford

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 30.—Campbellford claimed permanent possession of the coveted Graham Trophy when they won from both Trenton and Belleville on Wednesday afternoon. It was the third time the locals had won the trophy which they are now entitled to keep. In order to finish a schedule which has been hampered by rain for the past three weeks it was arranged for the three top ranking clubs to meet in Belleville for a showdown. Both Belleville and Campbellford were led in points by Trenton so officials decided these two teams should meet first to decide which would play Trenton. The procedure adopted was to say the least unusual but the season was fast drawing to a close and the clubs were confronted with the option of either playing it out then or taking a chance on more unfavourable weather. The six events were placed in a hat and drawn the first three being the ones played with two out of three establishing the winners. The events drawn were the men's singles, and first and second mixed doubles. The first event, the men's singles Campbellford lost 6-3, 6-3. Art Cole played for the Belleville club and Harry Free for the locals. J. Weston and Cliff Weston took the mixed doubles for Campbellford and G. McCreary and Bud O'Dell 6-2, 6-2, and Don Meyers and E. Ferris captured the second from M. Mitchell and Evelyn Jack, 6-4, 6-2.

In the finals against Trenton the outstanding event was the men's singles in which Ken Kingston battled with J. Morris of Trenton for three hours before he finally took the match after the playing had been adjourned to the flood lighted courts at Point Anne. The score for the event was 7-5, 2-6, 9-7. Campbellford won five of the six events from Trenton to whom they conceded the ladies' doubles with the count tied late in the evening.

Following are the scores and events:

Men's singles—J. Morris, Trenton vs Ken Kingston. Score: 7-5, 2-6, 9-7.

1st Men's Doubles: L. Goulet and Pat Mainguy of Trenton vs Cliff Weston and Harry Free. Score: 6-1, 7-5.

2nd Men's Doubles: A. Hogg and J. Tache, Trenton vs Art Orr and Paul O'Sullivan (Bank of Montreal). Score 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

2nd Mixed Doubles—I. Hinds and A. Jamieson, Trenton vs W. Kingston and Jessie Weston. Score 6-2, 7-5.

Ladies doubles—P. Hill and B. Milliken, Trenton vs V. Weston and Lois Meyers. Score: 6-4, 4-6, 5-5. Conceded to Trenton.

FACTS ABOUT FOOTBALL

Cross-Body Block Is Used By The Backfield and Line

By LEW HAYMAN

CROSS-BODY BLOCK

Note the crab-like position taken by the blocker after he hits opponent. His hands and feet are wide apart and his inside leg on the other side of the man being blocked. This position gives him free movement and stops his man if the impact when he hit him fails to knock him down.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth of a series of articles on rugby, written for the Examiner by Lew Hayman.

When one man is assigned to block an opponent who is free and clear the most effective block is the cross-body block. Backfield men use it when blocking to protect a passer, or when moving out to hit a crashing defensive outside on an end run.

Linemen use this block when pulling out of the line to lead the interference on reverse plays, and also, like backfielders, when moving from the line to protect a passer.

Outsides will occasionally use it when they have to block the defensive middle alone. If their assignment calls for them to go out wide and take out the defensive outside they would again use the cross-body check.

In executing a cross-body block run close to the opponent, picking up speed, power and drive. Concentrate on the contact to be made, keeping your head and eyes up and then at the opportune time, take off. Aim at your opponent's mid-section, which will allow for the distance between you and should enable you to hit him across the thighs.

Keep you head and shoulders on one side of your man and the inside knee on the other. The force on the block is made costly with the impact of the hips and legs. Should the intact not knock your opponent down, contact must be maintained by supporting yourself on the ground with hands and feet. This allows you to move forward and backward, always manoeuvring to keep between the opponent and the play.

In using the cross-body block be careful of your timing. You must guard against leaving your feet too soon. When you dart don't take off too low, and watch out for your opponent backing up. Too little attention to any of these things leads to a poor blocking effort and exposes you to injury.

In the picture of this block notice how the body is thrown across the thighs with the inside leg behind the opponent. The actual contact is made mostly with the hips. Note particularly the bridge-like effect against the body of the opponent. His feet and hands are wide apart and if he doesn't hit his man hard enough to knock him down the bridge-like position will hold him and move him back.

We have now discussed all the important methods of blocking. Other types of blocks are used but they are all secondary to these and used merely as extra measures. So as the three important blocks we have:

1. Shoulder block.
2. Pin block.
3. Cross-body block.

Master these blocks and when you can use them effectively no coach can keep you off his team . . . no coach will even want to keep you off. No team is better than its blocking. Blocking is tackling without using the arms.

TO-MORROW we'll move over to the other side of the fence. We've discussed the ways to block a man; to-morrow we'll tal kabout bringing a man down . . . tackling.

Mayes McLain Crowned Mat Champion

TORONTO, Sept. 30.—A young college graduate who was brought into wrestling by the depression after a brilliant career on the gridiron reigns today as world's heavyweight wrestling champion.

We give you Mayes McLain, a handsome young man of twenty-nine summers and winters, who scaled the heights last night at Maple Leaf Gardens by defeating and unmasking the Masked Marvel in a world's title match before a crowd of 6,500 fans.

The broad-shouldered native of Pryor, Oklahoma, who was born and brought up within eighteen miles of the late Will Rogers' homestead, claimed two of three falls in the pulsating titular match and won himself the acclaim of the terrific anti-Mask faction which has been clamoring for the mystery grappler to be exposed the many months he has been champion.

The Usher Was Right

Such acclaim as was accorded McLain as he fought through the cheering throng to his dressing-room has seldom been given any wrestler. He had achieved what Vic Christie, Yvon Robert, Lou Plummer, Bob Wagner and a host of other capable grapplers had been unable to do, defeated and unmasked the Masked Marvel.

Who is the Marvel? The question was on every one's lips after some of the bedlam and excitement had died down. But the usher at the ringside had it right. "It's Ted Cox, you know, Bulldog Cox," he whispered confidentally like to every one who filed through his gate. And it was Ted Cox, a native of Yuma, Arizona, who had been masquerading as the Masked Marvel these many months. Cox, a short, squat man, with powerful arms and legs, admitted to reporters he was glad his masquerade was over. "I've been nearly choked in that outfit, time and again. I'm not sorry I lost the title. I want a chance to get it back, not as the Masked Marvel, but under my real name—Ted Cox."

Embarrassing the Referee

One thing about Cox—he went down fighting. At one stage of the bout he was wrestling not only McLain, but Referee Cliff Worthy, too. He tore the official's shirt to shreds, and for this trouble received a neat poke in the mouth. An attendant soon came to the rescue of the somewhat embarrassed official and threw him a sweater to cover up the bare spots. Still in possession of his title and hood, the Mask won the first fall after 31 minutes of speedy and exciting exchanges. He used a grapevine arm lock, and McLain conceded the fall because of the terrific pain his rival was inflicting.

McLain, a former All-American football player—and he performed here with the Lionel Conacher-Mike Rodden Crosse and Blackwell pro team a few years back—returned to earn the second fall after 11:56 with a flying head scissors and spread. And then came the exciting finale. Grabbing the Mask (whom we will henceforth refer to as Mr. Cox) by the head, he twisted his hood so he couldn't see and then very deftly aimed a flying tackle at his helpless foe. Down went Cox and as Referee Worthy patted McLain's back in token of victory, the latter ripped off the hood and jubilantly threw it to a ringside fan. And how the crowd howled!

CUBS WALLOP PIRATES 10-1 TO TAKE GAME AND HALF LEAD

Pirates Held By Bill Lee Cubs 10th Win

By Drew Middleton
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

Everyone is sounding off about Cincinnati Reds being the team to beat next year, but it looks as though they'll have plenty to say in the National Baseball League race these next four days.

The Pirates lost another to the Cubs yesterday, a 10-1 beating that set them 1½ games behind the league leading Cubs. The "Jitter-Bugs" go into a four-game series with the Reds at Cincinnati, a series that holds their last chance of the pennant.

At the same time the Cubs will be playing three games at St. Louis. If the Cubs win all three, the Pirates can't catch up. If Chicago drops one and Pittsburgh wins all four of its starts, including to-day's double-header, they'll win by a single percentage point.

The Reds are bound for big things in 1939. Apparently they have come up with one of the best young first basemen of the last decade, Buck McCormick. Manager Will McKechnie thinks they will be even better next year—and the other clubs thought they were good enough back in June when they were dominating the flag fight.

Reds Beat Cards 7-4

The Reds got into shape for the Pirates yesterday by beating the Cardinals 7-4. Johnny Vander Meer chalked up his 14th win of the year as Ernie Lombardi collected a double and a single to regain the batting lead. The Bees' Danny MacFayden gave the Dodgers nine hits and won the first game of a double bill, 2-1, but the Brooks came back with an eight-run second inning and took the nightcap 8-6. The Giants, starting to hit again, pounded out 13 hits and beat the Phillies 9-2.

The American League drew closer to the end of the season as the Yanks slapped the Athletics around 7-4 in the first game and then tied the second 1-1.

The Red Sox continued to knock the cover off the ball, beating the Senators, 13-5, the Tigers downed the Browns, 6-2, with Hank Greenberg held to a single, and Cleveland Indians shaded the White Sox 9-8 on Roy Weatherly's 10th inning homer.

Diminishing interest in the part of Edmonton fans in the games played by their all-conquering Grads, women's basketball champions, may end in the disbanding of the famous cage aggregation, according to Coach Percy Page, ABOVE. Page, who for the past 24 years has set up an incomparable record with the team, said he felt it was hardly worth continuing without the interest of the fans.

New York Yanks' Brace of Hotshots Lefty Gomez and Red Ruffing To Provide Action In Series Opener

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP) — New York Yankees, seeking to break all precedent by winning their third straight world series, will go into action against either Chicago Cubs or Pittsburgh Pirates next Wednesday, firing the same double-barrelled shotgun that has mowed down the Giants in the last two autumn baseball arguments.

First, Manager Joe McCarthy will explode Pitcher Vernon (Lefty) Gomez at the National League batters, and then he will pull the other trigger, Rufus (Red) Ruffing. If the enemy survives the twin blast and the mopping-up operations of assorted other Yankee pitchers, then Gomez and Ruffing will be fired again.

That about sums up the Yankees' pitching strategy. In Ruffing, who has won 21 and lost seven this season, and Gomez, with an 18-12 count, the champs own a pair of the greatest flingers in the game to-day. Gomez has won all five world series games he has started. Ruffing has won two and lost one.

Neither the Cubs nor the Pirates boasts such a brace of hot-shots, though both have good pitching and the Cubs figure to do a lot of damage with Bill Lee and Clay Bryant if they qualify for the big doings. Lee with 22 wins and nine losses, and Bryant with 19 and 11, have been pitching phenomenal ball during the Cubs' stretch drive.

Three Good Men With Bucs

The Pirates own three top pitchers in Bob Klinger, Jim Tobin and Russ Bauers, a useful game-saver in Mace Brown, and valuable supporting strength in Cy Blanton, Red Lucas and Ed Brandt.

Baseball men figure that the Cubs staff would stand the best chance of stopping the Yankee sluggers, providing Lee and Bryant get a little rest before the series begins.

A comparison of the rival catchers is elementary. The Yankees have Bill Dickey, the best catcher in baseball today and perhaps the greatest ever. He is hitting at a .315 clip, has smacked out 27 home runs and has knocked in 115 runs in 129 games.

Gabby Hartnett, who has caught and managed the Cubs from fourth place to the brink of glory within two months is a .274 batter who has hit nine homers and driven in 57 runs in 86 games. Al Todd, the Pirate backstop, has poled seven homers and pushed 74 runs across while compiling a .264 mark in 128 games.

MILLBROOK

Lancashire Heads Badminton Club

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Sept. 30—The Millbrook Garrison Badminton Club met for its annual meeting, in the officers' mess room of the Armouries on Tuesday at 8 p.m., the vice-president, Betty Montgomery, taking the chair until the arrival of the retiring president, Major L. V. Stewart.

The secretary-treasurer reported $34.21 on hand, and gave a detailed account of the year's finances, which was adopted on motion of William Edworthy and Mrs. W. R. Howard.

The following officers were elected for 1938-39: Honorary president, Colonel A. H. Bounsell; president, Howard Lancashire; vice-president, J. E. Allen; secretary-treasurer, W. R. Howard, M.A.; social committee, Mrs. W. R. Howard and Ruth Thorndyke; games committee, Mrs. J. E. Allen and Grant Henry.

It was decided to open the playing season on Monday, October 3, and to close on Friday, April 14, 1939; it was also decided to have a social evening the first Monday in each month, the opening event of this kind to be October 3, following the evening's play. Fees were decided upon as $1 as initiation fee; $2 membership fee; $1 associate members fee.

The following are on the waiting list, asking to be received as members: J. C. Turner, G. W. Ellsworth, J. L. Burnham, Muriel Ball, Thelma Ball, Gladys Williamson, Walter Ziegler, Shirley Buckingham, A. H. Jeffrey; as associate members for afternoon play, Eleanor Bigelow and Dorothy Sisco.

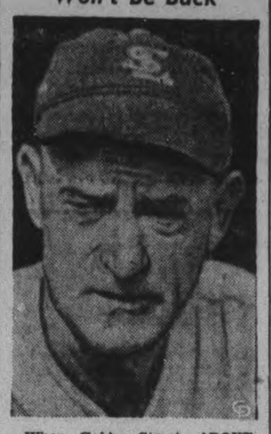
It was decided that the above being available as members, they will be admitted to the club as vacancies occur.

Grant Henry addressed the gathering relative on the care of the floor following dances held in the Armouries, and was appointed to secure the necessary product to cleanse same of wax, as occasion arises. Bill Byam is at present painting the courts in preparation for the season's play.

Mrs. W. R. Howard also addressed the club, mentioning that it was the first opportunity, since her marriage in July, that she had had to thank the members for the electric toaster which it has presented to Mr. Howard and herself as a wedding gift.

The meeting adjourned on motion of G. Henry and Betty Montgomery.

Won't Be Back



When Gabby Street, ABOVE, manager of St. Louis Browns in the American League inquired about his status for next year he was informed by the Brownie management that he was definitely out as a leader of the 1939 edition of the team. No announcement of who the new manager will be is expected for some time. Street will finish out the season with the squad he has had in seventh and eighth place all season.

Going To Detroit?

Ever since Charlie Conacher, high-scoring right winger with Toronto Maple Leafs, was forced to the sidelines last year because of poor health, rumors have been flitting hither and yon that the next time he donned a uniform it would be that of Detroit Red Wings. Who Conacher will play for, if at all, is still in doubt, but Manager Jack Adams of the Detroit team says he still has irons in the fire for the Toronto star.

Combines Play Petes Tonight

Inglewood - Caledon Combines and the Petes clash here tonight at 8.30 in an O. L. A. senior "B" group playoff contest. It is the first of the three-game series and the ultimate winner tackles Wallaceburg for the Ontario lacrosse championship. With the second game on the Combines' floor and third, if necessary, on neutral grounds, the fixture here tonight may possibly be the last lacrosse seen in Peterborough this year. However, the locals feel they can take the Combines, though they expect a tough series with them. It should be a redhot, exciting fray full of action, and ought to draw another huge crowd of fans.

The Combines play a clever brand of lacrosse, much on the same order as the Petes. They have a mixture of veterans—many of whom helped put the Petes out last year in playoffs—and youngsters. They pass the ball much more than Brooklin, check closely and shoot well. They do not play a rough game but check hard and can take care of themselves. The Petes are in top shape now and at full strength for the big series, feeling they can oust the Combines and step into finals against Wallaceburg. If the weather is right, this game may see a record crowd for the season here.

MADE CRICKET DOUBLE

SCARBOROUGH, England — (CP).—Playing against M.C.C. here, Frank Smailes became the first Yorkshireman to complete the cricketer's double of 1,000 runs and 100 wickets in one season since 1926. Incidentally, it was the first time in his career.

Nazi Dictator Gets All He Asked Of Czechs-With Guarantees

He was not included in the Munich conference, but whenever the four thought of what would happen if they failed, they must have reckoned with Russia's armed might captained by Joseph Stalin.

The Russian Foreign Commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, in Geneva, left no doubt of his dissatisfaction with what the Russians called the "sacrifice of Czechoslovakia for a more terrible war later."

Some French observers feared that Hitler would see in Sudetenland occupation an opportunity to go far deeper in Czechoslovakia than the agreement permitted.

"Something like that happened in Austria," said one French commentator. "Why not here?" (Hitler annexed Austria March 13).

"The Munich agreements are thinly defined, with plenty of room left for differences of interpretation by Germans, French, Italians, British, Poles, Hungarians and even the Czechoslovak "patient."

COLONIES HITLER'S NEXT DEMAND?

There remained, too, Hitler's references to his next demand—colonies. The Czechoslovak problem, the Fuehrer has said, was Germany's "last territorial demand in Europe."

Granted his promise will be kept, many Munich observers wondered if the colonial demands might also be sought by a display of the force of greater Germany.

The evacuation provides that residents may move into or out of the areas to be ceded to Germany; that the Czechoslovak Government within four weeks shall release Sudeten Germans from military and police forces, and that Sudeten political prisoners are to be liberated within that period.

The four powers will hold another conference within three months to settle the Hungarian-Polish minorities' question, if agreement has not been reached by Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia in the meantime.

GERMAN TROOPS MOVE IN BY OCT. 10

Four zones of predominantly Sudeten German population were marked for quick occupation by German troops by October 10, and any remaining territory with chiefly German-speaking population also by that date.

The international commission will determine the areas in which plebiscites are to be conducted. International bodies meanwhile will occupy them.

The plebiscites will be not later than the end of November.

A British spokesman said the zones to be occupied by German troops and which Czechoslovak troops are supposed to begin evacuating, starting October 1, were roughly as follows:

Zone one takes in Krumau along the Czechoslovak-Austrian German border. This is the smallest of the four.

Zone three is along the Silesian border.

Zone four is along the Saxon border.

The depth of the zones was not given.

HITLER WINS ON EVERY POINT

Hitler had set Saturday as the deadline for yielding by Czechoslovakia of her Sudeten areas, and in all essentials he won his points at the Munich parley.

He had said he would act Saturday. He agreed instead to start Saturday, but to make his occupation gradual rather than precipitate.

The provisions for plebiscites, international supervision and delivery of the territory without damage were what he previously had said would be acceptable.

His agreement not to use force, however, dissipated the danger of widespread war. Had he moved suddenly, France by treaty was guaranteed to aid Czechoslovakia, and Great Britain had said she would aid France.

very friendly character." It is understood the German claims to her lost colonies were discussed.

Before he went to see Hitler a crowd of 1,000 gathered outside his hotel in the street. They cheered until he stepped out on the balcony and responded to their Nazi salute with a broad smile and a wave of the hand.

It was a spontaneous demonstration to the British Prime Minister not included in the official program. There could be only one explanation—the German people were deeply thankful for his untiring efforts on behalf of peace.

When he returned two hours later scores of men and women in the rotunda of the hotel rushed up to shake his hand. His progress towards his hotel suite was held up many minutes while he smilingly obliged. Many women had tears in their eyes and were half hysterical in their pleas to shake his hand.

A few minutes later Mr. Chamberlain left Munich to return to London.

The New Pact

The Anglo-German agreement, announced by Mr. Chamberlain, follows:

"We, the German Fuehrer and Chancellor and the British Prime Minister, have had a further meeting today and are agreed in recognizing that the question of Anglo-German relations is of first importance for the two countries and for Europe.

"We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo- German naval agreement as symbolic of the desires of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again.

(The 1935 Anglo-German Naval Treaty limited Germany's naval tonnage to 35 per cent of that of Great Britain.)

"We are resolved that the method of consultation shall be the method adopted to deal with any other questions that may concern our two countries, and we are determined to continue our efforts to remove possible sources of difference and thus to contribute to assure the peace of Europe."

Boycott of its products by certain groups has caused Palestine to lose its near-leadership in supplying goods to Syria.

Cattle Advance 25 Cents Cwt. But Hogs Ease 10

TORONTO, Sept. 30 (CP).—Cattle prices recovered 25 to 35 cents per cwt. on all grades except bulls on the Toronto livestock market this week, the Dominion Livestock Branch reports. Lambs gained 25 cents for the week, while hogs closed with a net loss of 10 cents. Calves and sheep were steady.

The cattle run included 1,400 from the West, mostly stockers. A few of the heavier store cattle were unsold by the close, but the killing cattle were all cleared out. Trade showed more activity and prices were up 25 to 35 cents on steers and heifers and 25 cents up on cows and fed calves.

A few choice heavy steers sold at $6.50 to $6.65, with weighty steers mostly from $5.25 to $6.25. Good butcher steers and heifers brought $5.25 to $5.75, with common downward to $4. Butcher cows ranged from $3 to $4.35. Canners and cutters were $2 to $2.75. Bulls failed to advance, selling at $3 to $3.50 for bolognas and up to $4 for good butchers.

There were no export shipments to the United States this week except for a few stockers. Stockers were slightly higher, ranging from $4.10 to $5.25, with some stocker calves up to $5.50. Milkers and springers continued steady with tested tops $70 to $75.

Calves Hold at $10.

Calves were generally unchanged at $9.50 to $10 for the bulk of choice vealers with occasional tops at $10.50. Common heavies sold downward to $5. Grass calves made from $4 to $4.85.

Hogs opened 10 to 25 cents lower at $8.50 to $8.65 off trucks for bacons against to $8.75 on Tuesday and dropped to $8.65 by the close. Sows were unchanged at $6.50 to $7 cwt. Buyers were still using pressure at the close.

Sheep and lambs made a moderate run. Lamb prices were up 25 cents at $8 for good ewes and wethers delivered by rail and at $7.75 generally by trucks. Bucks sold to small buyers at $1 cwt. discount. Culls brought from $6 to $6.50.

Sheep prices were steady at $2 to $4.50 cwt. according to quality. A car of Western feeding lambs passed through the yards en route to an Ontario buyer. This is the first car of feeders from the West this year.

Prosperity Vanishes

STRATFORD, Ont., Sept. 30. — (CP).—Prosperity, Ont. — Imagine what a dateline that would be for a story. But Prosperity—a crossroads settlement in West Wawanosh Township, Huron County— has disappeared. During the Boer war there was a Prosperity store, Prosperity post office and blacksmith shop and two or three houses. Now there is nothing left at the crossroads.

League Opposes Peace By Force

GENEVA, Sept. 30—(AP). — The League of Nations assembly today passed unanimously a resolution expressing "earnest hope" that no government would attempt to "impose a settlement by force" in the European crisis.

The text of the resolution:—

"Representatives of 49 nations, meeting as delegates to the assembly of the League of Nations, have watched with a deep and growing anxiety development of the present grave situation in Europe.

"The assembly is convinced that existing differences are capable of being solved by peaceful means.

"It knows that recourse to war, whatever may be its outcome, is no guarantee of a just settlement, and that it must inevitably bring untold suffering to millions of individuals and imperil the whole structure of civilization in Europe.

"The assembly, voicing a prayer for the peoples of all countries, expresses the earnest hope that no government will attempt to impose a settlement by force.

"It welcomes and fully associates itself with the messages of the president of the United States in this regard."

COMMITTEE APPROVES SHARING TAXES ON LOW COST HOMES

Cellar Fracas Ends In Suit For Damages

A jury civil action to collect damages said to have followed an altercation in which he received injury, Cyril Rice is the plaintiff against Herbert Mason at the Supreme Court Sitting before Mr. Justice Urquhart today. W. J. A. Fair is counsel for Mr. Rice and Hon. G. N. Gordon, K C., is acting for the defendant Mason.

Rice testified that on February 8, 1937 he was a tenant in an apartment at 559 Aylmer street and that Mason occupied 561 Aylmer street, an apartment in the same building. The cellars of the two houses were joined by a door and three families in the three apartments all used the laundry tubs in Rice's cellar for laundering clothes. The other family occupied the apartment above Rice and Mason.

He told his counsel that on the day in question either Mrs. Mason or the maid had been doing the washing in the cellar, and that when he had gone down cellar twice he found the three cellar lights burning. He further said this was unnecessary as the cellar was bright.

These lights were on the circuit in my house and I was paying for the power. They were all on one switch and this switch was at the head of the stairs leading into my cellar.

Found Lights on

He claimed that when leaving the cellar he had turned out the lights and on going back, found they were turned on again. This occurred a second time, and following that he described an altercation at the foot of the cellar stairs when he alleges Mason pushed him from the back, causing him to fall over the edge of the bottom stair step to the floor. "My leg struck the sharp edge of a beam supporting the stairs and the skin was broken." Rice described how the wound had become worse until he had to have medical attention and two weeks later he was taken to the hospital. He spent four weeks in the hospital, according to his evidence, and the wound has never healed since. He states it must be dressed every twenty-four hours.

At the time of the accident Rice said he was supervisor of music in 27 Rural Schools and organist at St. Andrew's Church.

There had been an agreement made with the landlord that Mason's should be permitted to use the laundry tubs in his cellar, according to the witness but he added they were to run an extension from their own circuit if light or power was required.

"Did Mrs. Sollitt the other tenant turn on your lights" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Yes but she paid me for it".

How much.

"Three dollars all together".

Power Shut off

Following the alleged assault Rice claimed that Mason had shut off the power in Rice's cellar and refused to turn it on unless Rice agreed to leave the switch on.

"Is it not true that you would leave the furnace room door open when you shook down the furnace, and thus leave the dust sift out through the door and into the Mason wash" queried Mr. Gordon.

"No, said Rice, the door was left open to allow heat into the laundry room".

"Didn't you take a shovel and smash the window in the cellar door when Mrs. Mason objected to you leaving the door open because of the cold".

No, the window fell out when Mrs. Mason slammed the door behind me. I had to leave the door open because I needed both hands to carry a tub of ashes, was the reply.

Bitten by a Dog

The first wound in his leg, according to Rice was received some time before the altercation in February 1937. "I had been bitten by a dog about seven months before but the wound had healed completely".

"You were confined to St. Joseph's Hospital in January 1936" said Mr. Gordon.

"Yes I contracted a chill while digging my car out of a snow bank."

"Then you were in Nicholls Hospital previously."

"Yes I had pneumonia in either 1934 or 1935.

"Weren't you in the Toronto General Hospital once". Yes I had a slight wound in the ankle and had chronic diarrhoea but it was cleared up in a few months back in 1931."

"Then in 1928 you had an operation on your chest."

Yes answered the plaintiff, a suitcase fell off the rack in a train and I had an operation."

Mr. Gordon then obtained a letter from Mr. Fair and handing it to Rice in the witness box, asked him to identify it.

"Is this a letter you had Mary Schiarizza sign concerning the accident so that you would obtain insurance.

"Yes," replied Rice.

"Who is Mary Schiarizza, asked Judge Urquhart.

"She is the maid employed by the Masons, Mr. Gordon answered.

Mr. Rice at the noon recess was the only witness that had been called and the case is proceeding.

Alderman Offers City Lot For Parking Cars

Alderman E. R. Wilson's offer of the use of his property at the east end of Sherbrooke street for public parking space for automobiles was recommended for acceptance by the Manufacturers committee of the council last night. City Engineer Parsons will be asked to grade the property which will materially enlarge the parking accomodation in the centre of the city.

The government lot at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets was recently placed at the disposal of automobile owners. Mayor Hamilton said that on one occasion he counted fifty-eight cars parked there.

Alderman Wilson's property is across the Water-Sherbrooke streets corner, close to the George street parking lot of which it is practically an extension and is convenient to the business section. In gratefully accepting the lot, the committee decided to post a sign "Municipal Parking Space" directing the public to it.

4200 Rules For Operation

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask., Sept. 30 —(CP)— Chester Leach, 19, arrived in Prince Albert yesterday from Rochester, Minn., after travelling 4,200 miles in a round trip on a motorcycle for a mastoid operation. Both trip and operation were successes, he said.

Thos. H. Hooper Never Ill In 50 Years

T. H. Hooper concluded his fiftieth successive year in business at 327 George street, "the lower store." He may have surveyed the old familiar street with wistful memories of his contemporaries, all of them gone before him, and he their lone survivor. In all probability he thought of them again because in the Hooper character there is a fine vein of sentiment, and like most men he is usually diffident about sentiment, and is reluctant to disclose it. Some of the old business houses of fifty years ago still retain the family names of that time, and are carried on by the present succeeding generation. Even their number is comparatively small; the Comstock furniture store and funeral home, Lech's fur store, the largely expanded Mason grocery business and the Stenson shoe store. If there were any others Mr. Hooper could not readily recall them this morning, the only one he thought might be added to the list was the Belleghem furniture store and funeral home.

"People will think I am getting garrulous," Mr. Hooper remarked today when The Examiner reminded him of the anniversary on Saturday, although he didn't need to be reminded, and suggested another chapter of reminiscence to supplement the interview he gave ten years ago. The ensuing conversation brought forth various topics that may be strung together at random, reflecting some phases of life when Peterborough was a gas-lamp town without water and sewerage services.

Nights of Darkness

"You read about 'blacking-out' cities in Europe to avoid bombardment by airplanes as in Spain, and as they have been practicing in other countries these last few weeks," Mr. Hooper said. "That was the ordinary condition of the old town after midnight fifty years ago. All we had to light the streets were gas lamps, and only in the business section, and on the fringe of it. The gas works was down at the foot of Simcoe street, but it was of small capacity. And there was the lamplighter who made his rounds in the evening when dark was coming on. He carried a short ladder and he had a sort of lantern torch. He would place his ladder against the old gas lamp standards, climb up and turn the gas valve, and thrust in the torch to light it.

"About midnight he would start out over the same route, and turn off the lamps one by one; and then, of course, the whole town was in darkness. Most people in those days thought midnight was a terrible hour to be out. That was the general idea, although it was not observed by everybody."

Isn't there an old English maxim to the effect that "ten o'clock is time all decent people were in their beds, and rogues to the highway."

"Nowadays you are likely to see as many people on George street around midnight as at most of the hours during the day. And one of Ross Dobbin's men throws in a switch or two and all the street lights flash on."

No Water Mains

Mr. Hooper implied, too, that if there were water-taps in his youth they would have saved him many an hour's work.

Work! The Hooper grandchildren know nothing about. There were no eight and ten-hour days, at least for youths learning to be bakers; more like eighteen hours.

Young Hooper got a job with Harry Long, baker and confectioner, with two stores on George street, one where the Greatrix druge store is located south of Hunter street, and the other the present upper Hooper store conducted by Percy Hooper, north of Hunter street. The water supply for each day's needs had to be carried from Croft's Hotel yards at the corner of Hunter and Water streets, where the Crown apartments are now. Croft's pump and water supply was a community service.

Young Hooper's day began with the routine chore of carrying water to the two stores. Big containers were kept solely for that purpose, and they had to be refilled daily. Then the fires had to be started, and the fuel had to be at hand, and when all that was done, it was time for breakfast.

After breakfast the shutters had to be folded up at each store; then came dusting and so on; and finally the young apprentice baker took himself to the bakeshop where the day's work began in earnest. And the wages—the remuneration, one dollar a week for the first year, two dollars the second, and three dollars a week the third year. Mr. Hooper recalled these circumstances without an inflection of bitterness. Those conditions were general. People were working; they weren't galivanting all over the country.

Incidentally, the upper Hooper store has always been a confectionery. Harry Long bought it fifty-seven years ago from Lemay, who had carried the same kind of business there, living with his family above the store.

He explained the story in last night's Examiner indicates the Council is taking definite action on the plan and the residents therefore are satisfied that the bridge will soon become a reality.

ANOTHER ADJOURNMENT

There was another brief session of police court this morning. The only case was an adjourned drunk charge. The accused who had already had the advantage of one adjournment wanted another and Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., was in the mood to deny the request. However, Inspector Reid reported that the man had collected about three quarters of his fine so the court somewhat reluctantly adjourned the case for another week.

The Peterborough Unemployed Workers' Association are holding a tag day on Saturday for their annual Christmas tree fund. The members of the Association will greatly appreciate contributions Saturday for their Christmas fund. The tagging is held in October while the weather is still favorable for outdoor appeal.

Picks 30 Quarts Berries Weekly

Harvey Seaborn of Birdsall will take a back seat to no one in this district when it comes to raising raspberries. He is at present picking some 30 quarts a week from a small patch on his place, 20 by 45 feet. His bushes began to bear fruit the middle of August and will continue till the frost arrives.

"The neighbors are buying them from me as fast as I can pick them," Mr. Seaborn said this morning, showing a box of this surprisingly late summer delicacy. Last fall, he offered some for sale to local fruit stores but they declined, apparently being suspicious of the late fruit, and saying it was long out of season. "If they had been produced in Florida or somewhere in the south," he smiled, "I could have sold them easily."

The Birdsall man has been experimenting on his berry bushes for four years and the present crop is a combination of the Viking and the Everbearer. The latter bears a late, crunchy small berry, while the Viking is large, red and luscious. The crossed result is a large, soft and most appetizing raspberry, and the bushes are fairly loaded with the fruit.

Compensation For Czechs Local Opinion

The settlement of the Sudeten problem as proposed by Europe's "Big Four" was generally approved by the staff and customers of Smith and Freeman's barber shop to-day.

"But there ought to be compensation for any Czechs who may have to move off their properties. Justice surely demands that these people should not be victimized by losing all they own," Harold Freeman commented.

Leo Copp, School Inspector—"The fact that representatives from nations did come together personally to find a satisfactory agreement is a great achievement for peace, and would indicate splendid possibilities for a league of nations with a real problem to solve."

Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, County Gaoler—"They have only postponed the day of reckoning. I feel that Hitler will make further demands for territorial expansion."

F. J. A. Hall, Deputy-Sheriff — "Litvinoff has the right idea when he intimated that if Mr. Chamberlain had anything else to give away he would have given it. I believe Hitler should be put in his place right now."

David Silvester, Provincial Constable—"Within five years Hitler will be making new demands for territorial expansion and will not be satisfied until Germany has regained all of the territory taken from her after the World War."

O. L. Dalgleish, Hotel Owner—"I have great confidence in the ability of British diplomats. I felt all the time that Chamberlain would avoid war, which is the important thing. Human lives should come first."

Will Make Hitler Bolder.

"I am not altogether sold on the thing," said Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr, of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, "The result of the conference will be to enhance Hitler's prestige and tend to make him bolder than ever in his demands when similar problems are to the fore."

Col. Frank Bradburn was not among those who thought that Hitler had got anything out of the peace conference that he had asked in the first place. "There is a lot of difference between the way he is to go into Czechoslovakia now," he said" and the way he planned to go in with steel helmets and tanks and all that sort of thing."

Drawn On House Is Set For Tonight

Kiwanians today prepared for what they confidently expected to be the largest crowd ever to attend one of their carnivals tonight when Mayor James Hamilton will draw the lucky ticket that will win the Kiwanis Dream House.

Talk on the street today is all about the unknown lucky person who will be some $3,000 richer before midnight. Last night a good sized crowd turned out to witness the opening of the carnival, but officials of the club say the Armouries was deserted in comparison to what it will be like tonight.

The show opened last night at 7.30 and exhibits included a demonstration of painting by Dinesen, brilliant young Peterborough artist. Kay is completing a picture during the carnival while crowds watch. He will make a presentation to the club of one of his paintings. Another artistic demonstration is of hand weaving, featured at the Peterboro Exhibition. Bingo games, hot dogs, all kinds of competitions, ensure a good evening's fun for the thousands who will attend tonight.

City Assessor Henry Requested To Prepare List Of Lots Which Should Sell At $50 Each

The Dominion government's plan of sharing the taxes for three years on low cost houses constructed according to the terms of the new Housing Act was discussed by the property committee of the council last night and action directed toward adopting this form of assistance was tentatively undertaken.

City Assessor Henry was requested to prepare a list of twenty-five lots in different parts of the city which he considers should sell at $50 each, or thereabouts. The motion was proposed by Mayor Hamilton and seconded by Alderman Bradburn.

Must Not Cost More Than $50

Part 3 of the revised Dominion Housing Act provides that on low cost houses the government would pay the entire amount of the first year's municipal taxes, 50 per cent of the second year's, and twenty-five per cent of the third. One of the conditions determining this aid by the government is that the lots sold by the municipality should not cost the prospective owners more than $50 each. As an additional encouragement to citizens to avail themselves of the government's loan scheme it is believed that this further relief from the immediate incidence of local taxes would be a strong and helpful inducement.

Demand For Lots

During the last two or three years there has been a fairly steady demand for lots which have passed into the hands of the city. Many of them have been resold on the understanding that houses would be built on them.

A second resolution last night proposed that W. J. Henry, city assessor, also list fifty other lots showing their locations and approximate values as definite information at the city hall for citizens enquiring about property on which dwellings could be built. The two lists are to be considered at the next meeting of Alderman McCannan's committee.

Adjutant Warrander Promoted In Rank

His many friends in Peterborough, both in and outside the ranks of the Salvation Army, will be pleased to hear of the honor that has been conferred upon the local head of the Salvation Army, Adjutant Neil Warrander, in his promotion by the Commissioner to the rank of Major. The announcement, made earlier in the week, is a recognition of the work that has been done by Major Warrander in connection with the Peterborough corps. He will continue as head of the organization here.

Car Is Pierced By Guard Rails

(Examiner Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 30. — Early Thursday an accident of a rather unusual nature occurred five miles north of town. An American tourist who is visiting at Healey Falls lost control of his car as he descended a hill just as the road crosses a small wooden bridge and the car plunged into the wooden guard rail which was driven completely through the radiator grill and radiator cap over the top of the engine up to the dash board. The rail punched a round hole through the radiator passing just to one side of the engine and did no other damage to the car.

HELPED FELLOW MEMBER OUT.

One of the unpredictable advantages of belonging to a service club was revealed to-day by Kiwanian Charles Saunders, who gave service with a capital "S" to fellow Kiwanian Harold Scott when the latter got into a "bit of a jam."

Busy with the Kiwanis Dream House, Lumberman Scott forgot his recent wedding anniversary until the following day. Alarmed at the possible consequences, he waited upon Kiwanian Saunders, asked him to send along a gift together with a letter of apology for not having forwarded Mr. Scott's purchase the day before.

"He did and it worked," chuckled Kiwanian Scott. "If ever any of you fellows get into a jam, let me tell you Charlie Saunders can write the best letters of any man you ever heard of."—P.

Damage Action Is Dismissed

TORONTO, Sept. 30 (CP).—Court of Appeal, at Osgoode Hall yesterday, sustained a judgment of Mr. Justice Godfrey dismissing a damage action for $5,500 brought against the Township of Dungannon. The plaintiffs were William P. and Jennie Doughty, of Peterborouh, and Minnie Molloy, of Coe Hill. They alleged that they suffered injuries when the car in which they were driving had an accident by reason of a faulty culvert on a road connecting old Hastings Road and Falconer Highway, near Turiff.

The Appeal Court finds that the township was not to blame for the accident, but a truck driver, who, the previous day, had removed posts which formed a crossing over the culvert.

Ralph Gordon To Give Concert

Ralph Gordon, the well-known entertainer, will give his talents to St. Andrew's Church on Friday night, October 7, at 8 o'clock, under the auspices of the Young People's Union.

Mr. Gordon has had five years' experience on the Chatauqua concert platform, and is well-known for his success in service club entertainments. He has a marvellous combination of qualities. He writes poems for a leading daily paper, and has been well called the Edgar Guest of Canada; his comic cartoons and impersonations make people laugh, his musical monologue and ventriloquism appeal to boys and girls who generally come in large numbers to hear him. There is no silly stuff in his program; it is real wholesome entertainment of an uplifting and inspiring nature. At the close of the concert the ladies of the church will sere light refreshments in the school room, and it is expected that the members of the congregation will appreciate this opportunity of coming together after the summer months.

Girls Take Lead In Winnings At School Fairs

Girls are leading boys in capturing special prizes at all Peterborough county rural school fairs this year. Seldom at any of the fairs has the name of a boy been listed higher than third from the top in competitions for special Eaton trophies awarded for the greatest number of points amassed by any pupil.

Keene fair on Tuesday was an exception however, with Allan Stark of S.S. No. 5, Otonabee, taking the trophy. Two girls, Audrey Renwick of S.S. No. 7, Otonabee, and Joyce Pimmett of S.S. No. 5, Otonabee, finished second and third to bring their sex's batting average up to near its normal.

At Bridgenorth on Wednesday girls lived up to their record when Audrey Hatherly of S.S. No. 1, Smith, captured the trophy for highest number of points garnered. Phyllis McKee of S.S. No. 4, Smith, finished second and third prize was the best any boy could do. Winner was Morris Telford of S.S. No. 5, Smith.

Highest average for Keene Fair went to SS. No. 5, Otonabee, while S.S. No. 11, Smith, captured first honors at Bridgenorth.

Outstanding feature of both fairs was the large number of holstein calves shown at Keene, according to Frank Paterson, agricultural representative. Quality was extremely high and the children were thoroughly familiar with their work, he said.

Londoners Seek Safety Underground As War Threatens

As Prime Minister Chamberlain and members of the British and French cabinets strive to bring about a peaceful settlement of the critical Czech crisis, the English populace has been warned to take precautions in case of air raids. Hundreds of underground shelters have been constructed in the London area to care for a large proportion of the population should war break out. A Londoner is pictured, LEFT, entering one of the underground chambers by way of a vent opening on a London park. The interior of one of the bomb and gas proof shelters is shown, RIGHT.

Move Made To Alter Bren Contract After Drew Story, Probe Is Told

OTTAWA, Sept. 30 (C.P.).—Steps taken to clarify or alter the Bren gun contract following Lt.-Colonel George Drew's criticism of it in a magazine article were disclosed on Thursday as the Royal Commission inquiry on the contract continued.

A letter written by Major J. E. Hahn, president of the John Inglis Company, which holds the contract, to Major-General L. R. Lafleche, was read into the evidence. It said the maximum over-riding profit to the company on the production of 7,000 Bren light machine guns would be $267,000. This was a limitation on the cost plus 10 per cent. basis of payment.

The letter was dated September 3, 1938, and followed a conference between Major Hahn, General Lafleche, and Lieut.-Colonel D. E. Dewar, director of clothing equipment and manufacturing establishments. Col. Dewar, on the witness stand, said the three then had before them an advance proof of Col. Drew's article. He had not understood the maximum profit of $267,000 named in the contract could be exceeded although the article alleged it could.

Major Hahn had stated his impression was this was an absolute maximum and it was agreed Major Hahn should sign a letter making this clear. The letter asserted it was the understanding of both the company and the Government $267,000 was the maximum profit and offered to enter a formal agreement amending the contract. Hon. J. L. Ralston, Government counsel, said he had advised against this, pending completion of the inquiry.

Some Questions.

The commissioner, commenting on progress, said, "I ought to be told within a reasonable time about the inception of this thing. When did Hahn enter this picture? Where did he come from? Did the War Office send him to the Canadian Department? Did the Canadian Department send him to the War Office?"

Col. Ralston said the evidence so far was to show the evolution of the contract. If the contract was a good and desirable one, that was an important point to be decided in view of Col. Drew's criticism.

Machines from which arms required for defence can be produced should be kept available by the government, and reliance should not be placed on private industry, Lieut.-Col. D. E. Dewar, Director of Clothing, Equipment and Manufacturing Establishments of the National Defence Department said.

He made the statement as an expression of his view when questioned about steps leading up to the contract under which the John Inglis Company of Toronto is to make 7,000 Bren machine guns for the Defence Department.

Considerable Revising.

Col. Dewar was questioned by Hon. J. L. Ralston on a memorandum dated February 11, 1938, signed by Major-General A. C. Caldwell, Master General of the Ordnance. It said owing to revised figures on the cost of production of Bren guns reviewed from the British factory at Enfield, England, it was necessary to revise estimates by the John Inglis Company on production in Canada.

MORE ABOUT—

ness for himself. He wanted to get off work for a week-end to visit friends near Fenelon Falls. Mr. Long agreed to him going on Thursday, but wanted him home Friday for the usually big Saturday business. At any rate that incident decided young Hooper, married not so long prior to that time, to look elsewhere, possibly to venture for himself.

"It was about this time of the year one Saturday when I was at the market to buy a barrel of apples. There were no stores on the east side of George street, half way up to Simcoe from Charlotte street. When I was on the market side I noticed that this store—the lower one—was vacant. It had been occupied by McAndrew and Noble, plumbers. I thought it would be a good site for a confectionery store because it was opposite the market. So, I went up to see George A. Cox of the Toronto Savings and Loan office. E. R. Wood was a clerk for him. Mr. Cox asked me a lot of questions about myself, and when I told him I had worked for Mr. Long seven years, he said that if I had given him satisfaction that was recommendation enough. So he got the key to the store, went down with me, and asked what changes were needed, agreed to put in a bake oven. And so I started in business for myself on October 1st, fifty-one years ago.

First Customer

"My first customer was Jimmy Sheehy, now in Chicago. He was in the drygoods business up the street, and he was going home Friday night, the last day of September. I had the door locked, but he got me to open it and bought some candy to make the first sale."

And when Mr. Hooper counted his money at the end of his first day he had taken in $15, and also taken his first step toward success.

He was never sick a day, never lost one day from his business on account of illness. That is surely a record for those fifty years of is.

Mr. Hooper recalled that the first milk route in Peterborough was begun by Alfred Crawford.

Early Milk Vending

"That may be of interest because compulsory pasteurization of milk is going into effect on Saturday. Mr. Crawford was a Quaker, and a splendid citizen. He lived at the foot of Monaghan road in an old English style of house on the east side of the road, and on the bank of the river where the red brick house still stands. He built up a retail milk route. His price was five cents a quart, but to hotels and restaurants it was three cents a quart because they bought considerable quantities. Crawford's Grove is named after Alfred Crawford. He owned about eighty-five acres. Over to the west and south was Bruce Johnston's father, and coming up Monaghan road there were Revington's, Irwin's, the basketmakers, and David Doig. And at the river end, Mr. Crawford, and later my father when he bought the milk business.

Wood Was Cheap

"We had no hard coal at that time. We used to buy coke for the candy furnace from the gas plant, and I can remember the time when my father used to haul wood for me from the Red Mills at Nassau, a big lumber mill owned by a man named Irwin. He charged a dollar to go through the gates to the mill yard, and for that money you could draw away all the load you could pile up and your team could haul.

The stores were lighted by coal oil lamps. That was one of my jobs as an apprentice, keeping the lamps clean and the wicks trimmed.

When I opened the lower store, the space from it to the corner was vacant. There had been plans to build a greenhouse right on the corner of George and Charlotte street for Mason the florist, but something happened and they didn't go ahead with it. Women wouldn't think of coming down to Charlotte street. There were near-a dozen hotels, saloons and liquor stores in the block, and Charlotte street was called "Hell Street" by the people around town, because of the drinking and fighting."

Recollections such as these afford a background for contrast of the George street of to-day with the old macadam road and board sidewalks of fifty-one years ago. Tom Hooper worked for himself as industriously as he had done for his first employers, and also for his last. From the beginning he set a quality for his cakes and candies and other confections that has never declined. Hooper wedding cakes have delighted most of the city's young brides during nearly all those year. At least he has had a full share of that special business of catering. His sons, Percy and Fred, have lightened the load of business for a long time, and now grandsons are occasional helpers in the stores.

Something more personal could be said about Tom Hooper because he has a secretive way of keeping most of his good deeds to himself, but probably it would embarrass him too much. At any rate, his continuing business is a reflection of its intrinsic worth. The fact that the Hooper business has survived the increasingly keen and expanding competition of these recent decades is proof of the sound position it attained in the appreciation of the public.

The test of fifty years on main street has left the Hooper business as favorably regarded as ever and "T. H." himself as young in spirit as when he opened the door at 327 George street 50 years ago Saturday.

Cuba raised 50 per cent. more pineapples this year than in 1937.

Left The Army With Rheumatism

Now Fit to Join Again

Twenty years ago, he left the army, constipated and rheumatic. To-day, he is fit and nimble — a merry, romping granddad, 61 years young.

"I came out of the army with rheumatism," he writes. "It was especially bad in my feet. I started taking Kruschen Salts, and in a few months I found relief from my rheumatism. I became nimble on my feet. Now, at 61 — weighing 168 — I am cheerful, energetic, and always ready to play with my grandchildren."—F.E.B.

Many people grow old long before their time because they neglect one vital need of health—the need for internal cleanliness. Eventually, they adopt the healthy Kruschen habit. Then, probably for the first time in their lives, they start getting rid every day of waste matter from the system. The result is renewed health and vigour. Ailments due to a clogged system vanish, youth returns, and life becomes really worth living—Advt.

Firemen From Mine Save Small Town

VAL D'OR, Que., Sept. 29.—(CP). —Fire crews from the neighboring Canadian Malartic mine saved the scattered community of Roc D'Or from destruction by fire which threatened to wipe out the two-year-old "squatter-town" last night.

Two frame homes were burned along with Roc DOr Club, where the flames originated from overheated pipes, and a driving north wind sent the flames licking surrounding buildings, nestled in a heavy bushland. Without equipment, villagers were unable to cope with the blaze and appealed to Canadian Malartic firemen who rushed to the scene with pumps and hose.

Water Truck Burns

ANDERSON, S.C., Sept. 30—(AP) —The city water truck here—loaded with 300 gallons of water—caught fire and burned. Faulty ignition caused the blaze as the new street-flusher began its daily tour. Firemen extinguished the flames. The damage—$300.

We Noticed

. . . That the spectator sports hat has new characteristics this season. Generally, the spectator sports hat has a brim lifted at the side to show the hair with close back and with a crown draped, tucked, corded, nipped in some fashion to make it irregular. Irregularity of brim and crown line, plus feminine trimmings, are new in this type of hat.

. . . A dozen different ways of keeping the hat on the head and often grooming the coiffure have come in with the season. These are all functional and entirely new. Single and double combs, shirred elastic bands with hooks and eyes, slide buckles, snoods of contrasting material on the hat fabrics are just a few. They are often decorative as well as practical, as, for example, jewelled ornaments set at the centre back of a bandeau.

Figured Wallpaper Is Returning

Figured wallpaper is returning — has returned, in fact—and it is well to make a note of the rules for using pictures on patterned walls.

Suppose we have a beige paper sprinkled with old-fashioned nosegays. Landscapes, garden scenes or prints framed in bleached walnut to match the ground of the paper would give those walls their rightful pictures, appropriately framed. Or say that the wallpaper pattern is a flowing design of flowers and vines, pictures with large areas of color in the dominant shades of the paper will show to best advantage on such a wall. Good illustrations are today's Victorian rooms with floral walls and dark furniture. Here boldly framed bird prints and old portraits are the usual choice.

The Examiner's Needlework Pattern

It's all in string—double thread, and a large hook—a real jiffy crochet. Add richness to your home with this 60-inch cloth. It can be made in smaller sizes, too. Pattern 1775 contains instructions for making the cloth; an illustration of it and of stitches; materials needed; photograph of cloth.

Send 20 cents in coins or stamps for this pattern to Examiner, Needlecraft Department, Peterborough. Write plainly PATTERN NUMBER, your NAME and ADDRESS.

FINAL BON VOYAGE

SOUTHAMPTON, England—(CP)—After 27 years' service, the 14,000-ton Royal Mail liner Arlanza docked here from South America for the last time, later going to the shipbreakers at Rosyth, Scotland. At Buenos Aires 1,750 people held a farewell cocktail party aboard.

Advance Styles In The Season's Modes

What those with a seventh sense of fashion will wear during the coming Fall and Winter was reviewed in a manner which delighted the feminine audience who attended the fashion parade Thursday evening in the Parish Hall, which was arranged by the Women's Association of All Saints' Church.

Furs which are indeed making history in the fashion story of Autumn 1938 showed a greater diversification of line, a greater variety of fur. The suggestion of bulk which dominates the mode was an outstanding feature among the smartest coats shown, and most of them were square of shoulder, and usually small of collar.

Beneath them were worn frocks in new materials and colors completely in keeping with the vogue of the hour. Black, first favorite of chic women, still held its place, but was hard pressed by the new rich colors; the glowing wine tints; greens; coppers; golds and rusts. One outstanding khaki-shade model had a wide leather belt studded with brass nail heads.

Picturesque gowns which might have stepped down from the frame of a Victorian portrait gallery were displayed for evening. One lovely dreamy dance dress with puffed, intriguing sleeves, actually was triple-skirted. What a graceful whirl such a frock would make on a dance floor! It was of orchid net over cire lace, and a swishing taffeta petticoat was added for good measure! Gold lace, exquisitely fashioned; rich, shimmering black velvet, square velvet, square-necked and puffed sleeved; and a Grecian-style gown of chiffon in Venice blue with a trailing scarf of blue and petunia—these were some of the loveliest.

A huge poppy in a petunia shade, its stem hanging down the back, was the flower hat worn by the model in the Venice blue evening gown. Other evening hats, coquettish, delightful little affairs resembling the choicest flowers in an old lady's garden, formed tiny wreaths; velvet pansies; single blossoms, or clusters of flowers.

"Feather your Fall hat, morning, noon and night," say the smartest of the season's stylists. Feather, all the way from the barnyard to the ostrich farm, were the ornaments shown on the hats— which ranged from very small doll hats to tricorners and tailored felts, though even the most tailored felts were dressed-up to play their part in this era of elegance.

The tea table was arranged with a silver basket of flowers in lovely colorings, and their beauty was enhanced by the light from green tapers in silver holders. Tea was poured by Mrs. John Black, and members of the Association assisted to serve.

Home cooking tables were in charge of Mrs. J. Price and Mrs. Sabin, and Mrs. A. Millen supervised the tea table.

Models for the fashion show were Mrs. R. Dickson, Miss Marion Worboy, Miss Doris Ackford and Mrs. Roy Irwin. Music during the parade was supplied by Mrs. W. A. Greenslade.

The furs modeled were from Hamilton's Fur Store; the afternoon and evening dresses from Lyda Telford's Dress Shop, and the millinery from Olga Haskill's Millinery Department in the Barrie Building.

How to make dainty party sandwiches—pinwheel, ribbon or blocked? Spread thin slices of bread with creamed butter and filling, wrap in wax paper and chill thoroughly in the refrigerator until bread and filling appear one solid piece. They may be then sliced crosswise or lengthwise without danger of falling apart. Creamed butter spreads easily and avoids lumpiness.

Puff balls are only available in the early fall? To prepare them, take a nice large one that is white and fresh, slice across in pieces about one inch thick, dip in milk and dredge with plenty of flour. Fry 'till tender in plenty of butter. Or slice and cube them and cook in milk and thicken with flour.

AFRAID TO MARRY

by HELEN WELSHIMER

Written for and released by CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, is stunned when Craig Denby, the man she loves, tells her on the phone that he has married a girl he met at a week-end house party. Afraid of marriage, Judy reflects she put Craig off once too many times. Then she phones her father's lawyers to learn the details of his financial crash, just announced in the newspapers, and talks with Ronald Birrell, a brilliant young attorney from Tennessee who has just joined the firm. Ronald both angers and fascinates Judy, doubting that she has the stamina to remain in New York and make her own way designing dresses which she says she likes to do. Judy's father tells her he is going west with her stepmother, assuming his daughter plans to join her mother abroad. Judy doesn't tell him her mother cabled, announcing other plans for the winter with her second husband. Craig phones to tell how sorry he is to learn of the family's reverses, then Judy comes upon Ronald as she goes downstairs for a book in the library. Ronald takes Judy for a drive and tells her about himself. On a sudden impulse he kisses her. Judy moves to a small hotel and begins to look for a job. She runs into Marjorie Barton a boarding school roommate who persuades her to go home to dinner with her. While there Judy overhears Ronald, there to see Marjorie's father on business, talking with Marjorie.

TO GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 7

She was sitting in a deep chair, half asleep, a magazine on her lap, when she heard footsteps on the terrace outside her room. She switched out the lamp and went to the window, concealed by the draperies. She recognized the gleam of Marjorie's frock, the low rumble of Ronald's voice:

"You said the girl I could marry."

Then RONALD BIRRELL'S words, "Yes, the girl I could marry," Judy retreated into the shadows of the long draperies at the bedroom window. She did not move too far away to overhear the conversation. Not that she wished to eavesdrop. But suddenly it was important to know about whom Ronald was speaking.

"May I ask who she is?" queried Marjorie.

"Certainly. She has brown eyes, flecked with gold, a tilted nose and curly brown hair. She's an aristocrat, well-bred, honest, fearless."

"Where's she from?"

"Nowhere from town."

"Do I know her?"

"It's possible."

Marjorie laughed softly. "Did you say all of this to warn me that you aren't in the running on the man-hunting tracks?"

"Not at all." He laughed, too. "I felt you were an understanding person."

Someone called Marjorie away. She heard her apologies and left Ronald, standing by the balustrade, staring into the street. He turned and, though he did not raise his voice, it carried distinctly to Judy.

"Coast is clear, July Rogers. Why not come out?"

She stepped through the window, reproach in her gaze.

"So Marjorie told you I was here."

"No Marjorie never said a word. But you stepped to the balcony a while back, as the guests and family were dining. I arrived late and I happened to see you. I watched through which window you returned, that's all. But why aren't you at the party?"

"I'm not up to parties," she answered. "I'm resting."

"Yes. Meantime, it just might happen that you are the girl of whom Marjorie spoke a while ago. She said this friend of hers wants a job, and doesn't want to ask a favor of anyone in her own group, so she thought I might suggest something."

"Didn't I tell you I'm going to dance?"

"You did, Judy, but you aren't, either. I admire you for it. You're right! And Judy. . . ."

His voice faltered a little.

"Yes?"

"I meant the words which you heard through the window. Never forget."

He was tall, wide-shouldered, lean and muscular. His hair was bright and crisp, his face was tanned, his profile was well—almost as good as Craig's. Here there might be security. But she didn't love him.

"Better run. I hear steps," he said, and she went back through her window.

But hours later, when she and Marjorie had talked for a long time, she lay in bed and thought. A little of Ronald. More of Craig. There was a slender white ship, out there on the dark ocean, some place on it were two people who loved each other very much. Would it always be this way? Would nothing ever again be important, because she had placed her heart in Craig's pocket then forgotten to tell him that it was there?

Could you weave the warp of life and love closely through the years, then unravel it at a single gesture? She did not know.

She wakened in the morning to a confusing memory. Then the events of the past several days righted themselves. She was alone, hunting a job. She must hurry to the hotel and see if an agency had called.

But it was several days before one did. Then the executive sent here to an Eighth avenue address.

"It's a firm which makes sports wear," she explained. "They need a model your size, to show size 14's before the out-of-town buyers. Better hurry right over. They need you."

Judy had lived in New York, off and on, for most of her 21 years. But she had never walked down Eighth avenue. It was an intersection, to her, which one crossed on the way to the North river where the ocean liners were anchored. So she felt that she trod in a strange land as she hurried down the crowded street. Boys maneuvered small carts, filled with dresses, all alike, along the curb. Men had arms full of furs.

The elevator that carried her to the seventh floor was slow and uncarpeted.

Here, in a small room, a man in his shirt sleeves looked at her.

"Take off your hat," he said. Judy obeyed.

"Let me see your legs."

Judy flushed, then realized that the better this man's street and sport frocks and coats looked on her, the more sales' appeal they would have.

'The job is yours if you want it," the employer said, and smiled. It was a warm, friendly smile, that accepted her as a member of the firm.

"I'd like it very much," she answered, and smiled, too. 'When do I start?"

"Now, if you want to. Had breakfast?"

"N-no." She didn't mean to tell him. She intended to pawn a necklace and buy some lunch.

'Neither have I. I'll order some for you when I send out for it."

Judy was taken to a crowded dressing room, told to remove her dress by the woman in charge of the half dozen models, and given a clean gingham smock. A few minutes later someone brought a small tray to her.

It held crisp toast, bacon, orange juice and a pot of coffee. The employer had not thrust his society upon her. He had been kind and remote at the same time. She was grateful.

Eatin, Judy reflected that she had associated modeling with velvet carpets, low music, soft lights and flowers. She had thought only of the salons in the Fifties. Yet here, in this wholesale place, she had found kindliness. Maybe Ronald was right. People would be charitable if you met them half way.

The woman who had taken Judy to the dressing room returned with an arm load of dresses. "A big buyer," she said. "Here, I'll help you get ready."

All morning long Judy paraded in dresses. A blue one, a brown one, a black one, another blue, a tan, a rose, a brown again. When noon came, her back ached and her feet throbbed. She sat on a high stool and played with a sandwich which someone brought in.

"You'll get used to it," another girl told her. "Some days nobody comes. Other days we have a rush. But that buyer took several of your models. That means you know your stuff."

The day passed. Another one. Three, four, five. It was a week. The next one began.

Judy was too tired at night to care that she had vanished from her friends' sight. She saw in the social news that she had sailed for France to spend the fall and winter with her mother. She knew that her friends were relieved, because it would have been embarrassing to strike the right note of sympathy with a girl who had nothing now, not even a home.

One day she saw Ronald. It was raining and cold. Quite suddenly his red head and wide shoulders loomed up in a crowd. He was walking briskly, head bent, brows drawn, as though trying to solve a problem. She moved to the inside of the sidewalk, and averted her head. When she was successful, she would see him. Not now.

Not even Marjorie knew where she was, for she had changed rooming places, and sent her former roommate a note, telling her she would get in touch with her later in the autumn.

But for a moment after Ronald had passed she was lonelier than she ever had been. Not only lonely, afraid. What did it matter? She would toss her pride down the wind and call to him.

Raving Or Ranting Will Do Little Good In Attempting To Ward Off Unsuitable Marriages Of Your Children; There Are Other Methods More Effective And Less Disturbing

A MOTHER, whose only adored daughter is bent and determined upon marrying a youth who is a lazy loafer, a drunkard and a gambler, asks me if I can tell her any way in which she can break off such an undesirable match.

Oh, yes, there are a hundred ways of killing a cat besides choking it to death on butter, but one of them is not by assault and battery. When fathers and mothers see their darling children about to commit hara-kiri by rushing into marriages that are bound to wreck their lives and end in tragedy, their first impulse is to forbid the banns and to shut the door in Mary's boy friend's face, or threatens John with dire penalties if he even so much as looks at Susie Smith again.

The ensuing result is merely to hurry on the wedding. Parental opposition has fanned more flickering fancies, that would have died out if left alone, into the flame of passion and precipitated more ill-advised marriages than any other one thing.

There are many reasons why this should be the case. One is that the misguided youngsters are at the time of life when they are almost morbidly jealous of their independence and resentful of any authority exercised by their elders. They are particularly infuriated at their parents interfering in their choice of a wife or husband. The nerve of them! What do old people know about matters of the heart, anyway? They'll show Pop and Mom a thing or two. And so they step around to the Magistrate and tie the knot with their tongues that they cannot untie with their teeth.

Most of all, parents promote a marriage instead of prevent it when they foam at the mouth every time Tom's or Susie's name is mentioned and spend their time knocking their faults and explaining what undesirable members of the family they would be. This puts the children on the defensive and makes them partisans who refuse to recognize the faults in Tom and Susie that they cannot fail to see.

No. The situation calls for diplomacy, not force. Those who are indulging in love's young dream have to be awakened from it as gently and insidiously as a sleep-walker is roused into consciousness, if dire results are to be prevented. Moreover, the methods have to be adapted to fit the individual, for there is no universal way of breaking off a match that applies to all cases.

There is no use, for instance, in wasting your breath trying to convince adolescent boys and girls that calf love isn't the real thing. They are absolutely certain that no one ever loved before as they love, and that they can't survive until they are doddering old people of 20 to marry. But a railroad ticket or being sent off to college or the advent of a new boy or girl will nearly always turn the trick of breaking off a too early love affair. For in youth absence makes the heart grow fonder of somebody else.

Nearly all girls cherish the illusion that they have occult powers that enable them to perform miracles in reforming men and that they have only to marry drunkards to quench the latter's thirst for liquor or espouse ne'er-do-wells to turn them into gogetters.

The one and only cure for this hallucination is to send the girl who is afflicted with it to pay a long visit to some drunkard's wife who also once thought that she was a liquor cure. A close-up of the lot of a drunkard's wife doesn't enthuse the girl over trying it herself. Nor does the sight of a worn old mother taking in boarders to support a temperamental son make a girl feel that she wants to qualify for the job.

Often it is good strategy to disillusion the party of the other part instead of wasting your effort on your own child. I knew of one mother who shooed off ineligible youths by telling them that she knew that they wuld cherish darling Mabel who was so delicately constituted that she couldn't do any work, and that she just had to have imported clothes and every luxury. When they tried to figure Mabel's upkeep they just faded out of the picture.

And let not parents forget that nowhere does the theory of "like kills like" work out so beautifully as in love affairs. Don't try to separate Tom and Gwendolyn from their heart's desire. Give them overdoses of their society. A week of the uninterrupted company of any Dumb Dora or egotist will break off automatically any match that wasn't made in heaven.

Let your children see the undesirables against their own background. Many a boy or girl who was a dream walking in the far West or the dairy restaurant is a nightmare at home.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, October 1.

The auguries for this day are rather adverse, with signs of difficulties in employment, with superiors, in business as well as in purely social relations. There may be loss, treachery, duplicity, with subtle feminine influence at the root of misadventure and misery. It would be well to be alert to this as well as to contacts with strangers. Some treacherous undercurrents may have to come to the surface, but be cautious.

Those whose birthday it is have need for much wisdom and circumspect action during the year, as they are best by peculiar, erratic or doubtful alliances both in business and in intimate associations. Particular discretion is enjoined in relations with women or with any strangers who may have very alluring or intriguing propositions. Romance and adventure call for prudence.

A child born on this day may be active and adventurous, possibly erratic and wayward, getting into difficulties with superiors or adventurous or romantic women.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Knarf and Hanid came into the playroom just as the Tin Soldier was about to march off. All during the day he stood by the door with his musket over his shoulder, never moving an inch. But when night came and the children were put to bed, he was quite a different sort of tin soldier. He took his musket off his shoulder, and took off his tall hat, and often took off his shoes and went to sleep in a corner.

But to-night he started to march off. Knarf and Hanid, who looked like children but were only shadows, saw him.

"Where are you going, General?" Knarf asked.

The tin soldier, who was always called General, stopped. "I'm going to see the king."

"Which king?"

"Step aside, please. I'm in a hurry."

"King Fat-Wat, who rules the land on the other-side-of-the-wall. He has just sent for me. Step aside, please. I'm in a hurry. His Majesty doesn't like to be kept waiting."

Doesn't Want Company.

"May we go along with you?" Hanid asked.

Certainly not, King Pet-Wat didn't send for you. He doesn't like to see anybody he hasn't sent for. Now PLEASE step aside."

The two shadows stepped aside and the General marched straight across the playroom, right for the wall. When he came to the wall he marched right through it. Then he vanished.

"My goodness!" Hanid exclaimed.

Knarf ran up to the wall. "I can't even find a crack. How did he get through it?"

Hanid didn't know, either.

Knarf kept wondering how they could do it, when all at once Mrs. Cuckoo, who lived in her own apartment inside the clock, came out on her front steps and called: "Open door, open-door!" Then she went back again.

"Open door? What does she mean?" Knarf asked Hanid. "I don't see any doors."

"There must be a door in the wall."

So they started looking all over the wall for a door.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

W. A. Deanery Meeting Hears Sir Henry Drayton

Perfect September weather greeted delegates who attended the annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary Conference of Peterborough Deanery, which was held in St. John's Church, Peterborough, on Thursday.

Commencing at 10.30 a.m., Holy Communion Services were held, with Canon Robertson as celebrant, and Rev. H. R. Howden of Lakefield as preacher. A meeting of Deanery presidents followed, and morning activities were concluded with a luncheon served in the church parlors.

Sir Henry Drayton Guest Speaker.

The conference was honored in having as guest speaker, Sir Henry Drayton, who spoke of the centenary of the diocese, which is to be celebrated in 1939. The speaker was introduced by Mr. A. Cuttle of Toronto, finance commissioner of the Diocese.

The object of the centenary celebration, as pointed out by Sir Henry was to quicken the life of the diocese; to help arouse interest in the cause, and to create workers where at present none exist.

"We've become a lot of drifters," Sir Henry said. He told his audience that in eight years' time an increase of over 35 per cent had been noted in Sunday school attendance, and an increase of over 81 per cent in church population, but remarked regretfully that, although mothers are getting their children to Sunday school they are not as successful in getting their husbands and grown-up sons to church. "There is an increase of 35 per cent in Sunday school attendance," he said, "but there is also a decrease during the eight years in Sunday school and church giving."

Speaking of the opportunity of giving on the one hand, the opportunity of labor on the other, the speaker urged his listeners to rededicate themselves to their Master, stating that there has never been a time when the principle of love, which is the underlying principle of the Gospel, was needed by a tortured world as it is to-day.

Speaks of Diocesan Work.

Mr. R. W. E. Green of Toronto, secretary - treasurer for Indian Schools, brought greeting from the executive board, and spoke in a clear, concise manner of the work carried on by the various committees in connection with the W. A. Diocesan House on Wellesley street, Toronto. Her description of its splendid library; its little chapel on the first floor; and its accommodation for missionaries or workers who might wish to rest or stay overnight while passing through Toronto, was of especial interest to the members.

Trials of Hebrew Christians.

The sacrifices which Jewish young people make when they proclaim their devotion to Christ, and the persecution which they sometimes must endure at the hands of their families and friends, was explained in a brilliant address by Rev. M. Kimmisky, head of the Nathaniel Institute in Toronto.

Speaking to the young people of the Evening, Girls', and Junior branches later, he asked them not to think of the Jews as having persecuted Christ, but to remember that his death was brought about by the selfishness, sin and greed of the people.

Briefly he outlined the happiness that comes to the boys and girls who learn to believe in Christ, through the teachings of the Mission of the Jews, saying that this personality of Christ is all that Jewish religion lacks. He asked the young people to remember that Jewish people will return any kindness a hundredfold if they feel there is love in their hearts.

Life in Indian Schools.

Life in an Indian Boarding School was described by Mrs. Green during the evening meeting of the Evening, Girls', and Junior branches. These schools, which are scattered throughout Northern Canada, are built and kept in repair by the Government, and are often large enough to accommodate 100 children.

Their school day consists of half a day of study, and half a day of practical work, such as laundry, baking, etc., for the girls, and work in the fields or manual training for the boys. The Church of England is responsible for outfits for the girls and boys of 19 of these schools, these outfits being provided by the different dioceses. These school graduates, Mrs. Green stated, were vastly superior to uneducated Indian children.

Reports from the various evening branches were given, and the evening session concluded.

Luncheon Committee.

The noon luncheon was under the direction of Mrs. Dorrington, assisted by Mrs. D. Eldred, Mrs. G. Groombridge, Mrs. E. Knight, Mrs. F. Ford, Mrs. R. Crocker, Mrs. E. Graham, Mrs. B. Wardle, Mrs. E. Nicholls and Mrs. A. Stanger.

Throughout the day the W. A. Branches of St. John's Church were hostesses, and the sessions, afternoon and evening, were presided over by Mrs. F. H. Dawson, Deanery officer.

During the business period, which commenced at 1.30, reports were given by the W. A. branches represented, and the Deanery report was as follows: 14 Senior branches who have 354 members; 6 Girls' branches; 6 Junior branches; 7 Little Helpers' branches; and 1 Church Boys' League. BLACKHEADS

Blackheads go quickly by a simple method that just dissolves them. Get two ounces of peroxine powder from your druggist, rub this with a hot, wet cloth gently over the blackheads—and you will wonder where they have gone. Have a Hollywood complexion.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"The world usually pushes a man the way he makes up his mind to go. If going up, they push him up; if going down, they push him down—gravitation, however, making the speed greater on the decline."—G. F. Train.

Dear Friends:

How do you walk? With your head up as if you were going somewhere, or listlessly as if it did not matter, or draggingly as if you were beaten?

Because, of you walk listlessly, you get pushed and shoved around by those who are going some place. If draggingly, you advertise your failure to the world, and the world has no use for you, so people walk around you.

But when you walk with purpose in your step, with light in your eyes, the world will step aside to let you get there, and even help you onward, belive it or not.

We all feel as if we had failed at times, even the most successful people feel that way. One successful woman as the world saw her, felt she had failed because she could not have a child.

But she overcame that by adopting one. Another man I knew who was a great artist, felt he had failed in life because he had always wanted to be a Dr., so he got rid of that feeling by taking a course in Medicals, and found he was unfitted ever to have been a Dr.

So it is with all of us. We hitched our wagon to a star, an impossible high place to hitch it to, when maybe we had been better to hitch it to a fence post. For a well-kept fence is a good thing.

And we view our success by the success of others, and class ourselves as failures when there is no need. We cannot see our own faults as others see them, neither can we see our successes as others can, so we drag our steps.

Few machines are composed of but one wheel, and the tiniest is of as much importance as the largest. But it must function properly, it must keep turning round and round, or back and forth, else it will throw the whole machine out of commission.

And the big wheel gets as tired going round and round as the little wheel does, never forget that. The Dr. gets tired doctoring and listening to other people's sicknesses.

The lawyers have their weary spells when they see the messes that people can get themselves into, and generally through their own fault of talking too much.

Newspapermen get tired of getting and giving you the news as briefly and concisely as possible, often getting more blame than praise. Mothers get tired of guiding husband and children, and husbands get tired of earning the money to keep them.

So, don't think you are the only one who gets tired with their station in life. But do your part as a little wheel in the machine of life and you may graduate into a larger wheel. It has been done.

Forget the thought of failure, for if you fail in one thing, there are many more to choose from. Walk courageously and as if you knew where you were going.

Not arrogantly, for then you will be apt to stub your toes because your head was too high in the air. Not cowardly and beaten, for you are a human being with all the possibilities of one.

Not too humbly, for then you will be apt to cringe, and no one loves a cringer. But confidently, having faith in God, yourself, and your purpose. Marden tells us "The best way to get out of a lowly position is to be conspiciously effective in it. Think that over, and watch your steps. Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I am enclosing a recipe for cucumber pickle upon which I would like your advice. Do you think it might safely be used for sweet mixed pickle as well? am in doubt because it takes a period of about 3 weeks to make them. They are very much like the ones one buys. I would like to use onions and cauliflower in them.

Also I am planning a party for my small son who will be three and for a lady friend with 2 children whose birthday is the same day. What would be a suitable menu for such a party? My house is small and it will be in September which is a busy month for people on the farm. So I should like something that would not be a great deal of work. Could one use paper plates and table cloths?

What sort of favors should one have for the guest children?

My husband and myself never fail to read your page and we have had innumerable good things to eat because of you. I hope you will try this recipe for cucumber pickle—it is really very good.

I hope I am not too piggy but what is it that makes the bought dill pickles so superior to the home made?—Mrs. S. N.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

The recipe you sent may be used for sweet mixed pickles—the only change being that if you use onions and cauliflower the onions may be treated the same as the cucumber but the cauliflower must be brought to boiling point and then drained after it has had the 2 weeks' brining, and before it is put in the alum water. Use clean cold water to cover to cook the cauliflower in.

I am keeping the copy of the recipe you sent for my files—trusting that you have the original.

Certainly use paper plates and paper table napkins and table cloth—they are becoming so popular one expects them at a party and the various colors procurable add to the gala effect.

For the youngsters I think balloons in various colors are unbeatable—you should have a reserve supply of them for the younger ones that will cry when their first one breaks—however if the older ones know there is a reserve supply they might be tempted to break theirs, knowing a second one was available. I know my Peter of four would.

Besides the balloons little baskets or cups made using cup cake paper cups as a base, and fluting delicate shades of fine crepe paper around sides—fill these with raisins and peanuts, or stoned dates dipped in nuts or sugar, and walnuts. If possible try to avoid candy—if they have dates and nuts they like them just as well or better because they are a change.

Menu.

Creamed Chicken in Patty Shells or Tender Tart Shells or Split Tea Biscuits
Tomato Jelly
Celery Hearts or Stuffed Short Sections of Celery
Chocolate Ice Cream Clowns
Birthday Cake
Cocoa

The Ice Cream Clowns are made by placing 1 round scoop of ice cream on a plate, using sliced maraschino cherries for eyes, and slices cut in half for nose and mouth. Use an ordinary ice cream cone for a cap—this is so simple compared to the sensation it gives to kiddies. There should be a big nickel wrapped in wax paper for every piece of cake cut for the children—these can be indicated by marks on the frosting.

By this time you will have seen our page entitled "Pickle Chapter" containing a recipe for Dill Pickles that I can't agree with you in thinking is inferior to bought pickles. Try it this year and see if the result is not satisfactory.

QUESTION: Being one of your ardent fans I have come to you for help because I think you excel at suggestions. I want to make a birthday cake for a grown up and would like something different from the ordinary kind. I have made the large one with cup cakes around, but would like something new.

I hope you continue with your page for a long time—my only complaint is that there should be nothing else on the page but your recipes.—E.M.

ANSWER: Thanks for your enthusiasm for us.

Honey-Almond-Orange Cake.

One-half cup butter, ½ cup sugar, ½ cup strained honey, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind. Five unbeaten egg yolks, 2 cups sifted cake flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅝ cup milk, 2 tablespoons orange juice, ¼ cup ground or finely chopped blanched almonds. Cream butter very well then gradually sift in the sugar, then beat both until very light. Add the honey and orange rind and beat again. Then add the yolks one at a time, beating hard between each addition. (If this method is too much of a nuisance, beat all the yolks until light with a rotary beater). Sift the flour, then measure your 2 cups, then sift it together with the baking powder and salt. Add them by sifting, a small amount at a time, alternately with the milk. Then add the orange juice and almonds. Pour into 2 well-buttered layer cake tins and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 55 minutes. Then frost with Sunshine Fudge

Bloomed for Eight Years

This plant, according to the Examiner's correspondent at Roseneath, is the rare blooming cereus in blossom. Peterborough owners of like plants said they were century plants, could not boast one with so many flowers. This plant is owned by Mrs. W. R. Taylor of Roseneath, is 14 years old, has bloomed for eight consecutive years. The outer thin petals are pale rose, the petals proper are of waxy whiteness. Inside, dainty yellow stamens come trooping down a white stem. The flower has a heavy odor.

Baby Should Be Weighed Often

Young mother should remember that the scales are the only real test of whether a baby is making satisfactory progress or not. You may think that Baby looks thin or that he or she is having less nourishment than is necessary, but you must never go by this; verify your opinion by weighing Baby regularly.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

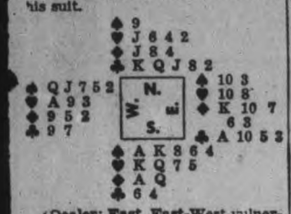
WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

SHOW YOUR PREFERENCE

IF YOU HAVE raised one of your partner's two major suits and he then bids no trump, he means to be telling you two things. First, he has some kind of stoppers in any unbid suit or suits. Second, the suit you raised is not very good, probably only a four-carder. He wants you to leave the no trump in if you have a balanced hand, or if you have only three of his trumps. But if you have four trumps and shortage anywhere in the hand, switch the contract to his suit.



(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

This deal came up in a duplicate tournament and at the majority of tables North and South reached a contract of 4-Hearts. These players made five, with the loss of the club A and trump A.

At two tables the bidding was the same as at other tables up to a certain point, South having started with 1-Spade, North 2-Clubs, South 2-Hearts, North 3-Hearts and South 3-No Trump. These North players incorrectly let the bid stand there instead of going to 4-Hearts.

Where the spade 5 was led against 3-No Trump the declarer had no difficulty in making his contract, but the other West defender against 3-No Trump led the unbid suit — the diamond 9 — and by so doing defeated the contract. The diamond 9 was taken with the Q and a club led. The A won and a diamond was returned to the A. When the heart A was driven out, three other diamond tricks were taken, setting the contract one.

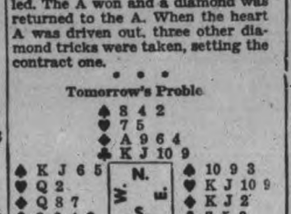
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is South's best chance for 3-No Trump after the lead of the spade 5?

How To Pick Spuds

FORT FAIRFIELD, Me., Sept. 30 (A.P.). — Lewis O. Barrows, Maine's Republican Governor, scooped his way to a potato-picking triumph today in a no-holds-barred match with Governor Barzilla W. Clark (Democrat) of Idaho. Five minutes and 201 potato pounds after the starting gun, Barrows stood erect in the black dirt of a hilltop potato patch. Clark had clawed up, basketed and dumped into boxes 197 pounds of potatoes.

Detroit Discounts Canadian Cash 3 p.c.

DETROIT, Sept. 30 — (CP). — Large Detroit stores charged a 3 per cent. discount on Canadian money for the first time in three years as Canadian funds to-day reached a 3 per cent. discount at banks here.

Canadian money has been at a slight discount for about a year, one department store executive explained, but no charge has been made for exchange on purchases. Other stores said the exchange rate went into effect almost automatically in most city establishments when the exchange reached 2 per cent.

The Canadian dollar on New York markets yesterday was discounted about 3 per cent. The fluctuation was so erratic, however, due to European uncertainties, that banks in Detroit in order to protect themselves temporarily fixed a rate of 6 per cent. as the discount on all Canadian funds.

Stores in turn were warned of the swiftly fluctuating condition of the money market and they, too, in some cases, imposed their own fixed rates which ran as high as 8 per cent., in small stores.

The approach to a settlement of the situation in Europe will immediately reduce the discount rate on Canadian money and again tend to stabilize the money market, Detroit bankers said.

Government To Complete Work Around Point St. Charles

THE Dominion Government has agreed to complete its rip rap work around Point St. Charles provided the city buy the property, Mayor James Hamilton informed the finance committee of the city council Wednesday night.

The committee agreed to take up its option on the property and buy it from S. H. Abbott for $1,500 and to notify the government to that effect, on a motion by Mayor Hamilton and Ald. James Dutton.

The work will be done by the government this fall at an estimated cost of $7,200, Mayor Hamilton revealed. The new work will commence where rip rapping was halted on Little Lake, will continue around the point but will stop short of the George street wharf. That last stretch will presumably be left to a future date.

PRAGUE ACCEPTS POLISH LAND DEMAND

30,000 Nazis Goosestep Over Border

Military Law Rules 60-Mile Front Of Ex-Czech Land

By Melvin Whiteleather
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

Headquarters of the German Army of Occupation, Passau, Germany, Oct. 1.—(AP).— The main body of the German army crossed the Czechoslovak frontier at 2 p.m. (8 a.m. E.S.T.) to-day, to start its formal occupation of Sudetenland.

Reconnoitering units had preceded the main body of the occupation force across the border during the early morning.

The force, estimated at about 30,000 men, was commanded by Colonel General Ritter Von Leeb.

It planned to occupy about one-quarter of the first zone of the ceded territory to-day, going as far as the Warmer and Moldau rivers.

As the German troops advanced they were separated from Czechoslovak forces by a neutral zone 3,000 metres (3,270 yards) wide running roughly parallel to the new frontier.

The first zone taken over from the Czechoslovaks stretched from the border town of Stubenach through the towns of Hehorg, Wallern and Reasberg, curving downwards toward the frontier just outside of Krumau and outside Kaplitz to the frontier town of Unterhaid.

Krumau, the chief town of the region, and Kaplitz were not included in the German occupation. It was assumed at hearquarters the Czechs had withdrawn to Krumau, using the city as a new frontier base.

Thousands More Ready

BERLIN, Oct. 1—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler sent his first steel-helmeted, goose-stepping soldiers today into parts of Czechoslovakia given him to keep peace.

Thousands more, with full equipment and the pride of the New German motorised units, were poised along a 120-mile stretch of frontier and across from three other rich zones, ready to annex them in the name of greater Germany before Oct. 8.

The entry was denied those to whom it may have meant the most—the thousands of Sudeten German natives who fled from Czechoslovakia into Germany last month and were formed into a "voluntary" Free Corps by the Sudeten German party leader Konrad Henlein.

The Free Corps men had threatened to take a 100-fold revenge for every drop of Sudeten German blood spilled in German-Czech disorders.

Miss E. Jackson Is Winner Of Dream House

Miss Eurena Jackson, 622 George street, won the Kiwanis Dream House as the club's carnival wound up at midnight Friday night. To her also went $25 for selling the lucky ticket.

The draw was made in the Armouries by Mayor James Hamilton just as clocks were striking midnight. Milling crowds jampacked the hall all evening waiting for the climax to an evening's fun. Unnoticed by the majority of the disappointed ticket holders, Miss Jackson stood a few feet away from the wheel, remained incognito until most of the crowd had filed from the building.

"I'm so excited I couldn't tell you what I'm going to do with the house. Yes, I may take up residence there," said Miss Jackson, who lives with relations. "Will you get married" queried one impudent reporter. "That wouldn't be hard to do now," shot back Miss Jackson. She had sold more than 60 books of tickets herself, did not know how many she held in her own name.

Painting Not Claimed.

Thorn Crown Czechs Term Pact

Charge Alliances And Obligations Were All Ignored

PRAGUE, Oct. 1—(AP).—A statement broadcast to-day declared "all that Prague and Czechoslovak nation received was a crown of thorns" from the four-power Munich agreement to grant Germany parts of Sudetenland.

The declaration referred to "the great injustice" done to the nation by the accord, and added: "The Prime Ministers (of Italy, France, and Great Britain), who after the Munich conference went to their homes were welcomed as saviors of peace.

"Not a glance was given to treaties of alliance and no recognition accorded to alliances of Czechoslovakia and all obligations arsing from her international contracts."

Czechs, many of whom were saying "We have been sold out," paced the streets of the capital, collecting in small groups to discuss the government's decision.

It was unwise to speak in a foreign language in the streets of Prague, principally because of the danger of being misunderstood. A Danish newspaper correspondent, Sven Nielson, was struck in the face while talking English.

People Obey Premier

The little republic which struggled through 20 years of independence was saddened by cession of the Sudeten territory to Germany, but the Czechs appeared to be heeding the admonition of President Eduard Benes, Premier Jan Syrovy and General Ludwig Krejci, commander-in-chief of the army, to refrain from demonstrations.

The population heard that the soldier-premier said in a broadcast that Czechoslovakia had been deserted by France and that the Nation was making a vast sacrifice for peace. Spontaneous demonstrations started, but the crowds seemingly were impressed by General Syrovy's assurance that Czechoslovakia would live despite its dismemberment.

Some found encouragement in his observation that the new state would be more cohesive and united and possibly happier because it would be relieved of the Sudeten minority problem (which had disturbed the republic since the depression of 1933, before which the Czechs thought the Sudeten Germans were satisfied with conditions.)

The Government's acceptance of the Munich accord followed an all-day cabinet session. Many who did not have access to foreign radios did not know about the accord until the Government's announcemet late yesterday afternoon.

Agrees After Ultimatum Threatens Invasion Of Silesia Border Area

Czechs Give Up City Of Teschen By Sunday And Whole District In 10 Days; Consent To Discuss Vote, Free Prisoners

WARSAW, Oct. 1 (AP).—Czechoslovakia accepted Poland's territorial demands in full today, thereby averting a threatened invasion.

Under terms of the demands the part of the city of Teschen on the Czechoslovak side of the border will be transferred to Poland before 2 p.m. Sunday (8 a.m. E.S.T.)

Within 10 days Czechoslovakia will transfer to Poland the remainder of the Teschen district and the entire district of Freistadt.

Matters of other territories and plebiscites will be settled in direct negotiations between Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Czechoslovakia also agreed to release immediately all persons of Polish nationality from the Czechoslovak army and to free all Poles imprisoned for political reasons.

A government communique announcing the settlement stated that "the Polish Government meets with great joy the news of the conclusion of a painful quarrel between the two nations and a settlement corresponding to the peaceful intentions of Poland."

Czechoslovakia, after asking and receiving a one-hour extension on the time limit set by Poland, sent her acceptance in reply to Warsaw's "final" note.

6 A.M. the Deadline.

The note, delivered in Prague just before midnight, was understood to have set noon to-day (6 a.m. E.S.T.) as the deadline for fulfilling "just" demands for Teschen Silesia, an area of 72 square miles inhabit by most of Czechoslovakia's 100,000 Poles.

The official government organ, Gezeta Polask, made public three points which its aid determined Poland's action in forwarding the categoric demand to Prague:

1. Poland cannot tolerate any longer the shedding of Polish blood in the area."

2. "Poland does not recognize the separation of Europe into countries of second and third classes, and especially will never permit Poland to be treated as a second-class country."

3. "Since Poland was not invited to the Munich conference (at which French, Italian and British statesmen agreed to arrange for cession of certain predominantly German parts of Czechoslovakia to Germany), Poland cannot be bound by decisions of that conference."

Any Peace Good Says Press Lauding Pacts

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(CP Cable)—London's morning papers, having passed through the shock of peace instead of war, today began to examine the Munich agreements and this is what they concluded:

The Times (Independent) declared there were days when the terms of the Anglo-German anti-war declaration "could be dismissed as a pious platitude likely to be forgotten before an occasion could arise for it to be practically tested. But the present, it is fair to think, is not such a time."

"Civilization has been so near the brink of collapse that any peaceful issue from the dispute of the last months would have been overwhelming relief," the paper continued. "But close examination of the Munich terms show they constitute not only a settlement but a hopeful settlement.

"By the terms thus concluded the most dangerous threat of war in Europe is at last removed, and by the joint declarations we are given hope that others will be peacefully eliminated.

"That two-fold achievement by common consent we owe first and foremost to the Prime Minister."

The Daily Express (Independent) declared the Anglo-German pact was a new step in the direction of detachment from Europe which "affords us the opportunity to develop to extreme limits the unity of our empire."

"It holds out to our people the prospect that turning at long last from Europe and its interminable problems, we may seek security within our empire and unity of endeavor with our brother states," continued the Express, owned by Canadian-born Beaverbrook.

Archbishop O'Brien Returning To His Native City On Occasion Of Silver Jubilee

The visit of Archbishop M. J. O'Brien of Kingston to Peterborough Sunday and Monday will be perceived by his many friends in this city as an expression of his wish as a native son to share with them memories of old associations and events fused into the years that have at length reached the twenty-fifth anniversary of his consecration as a bishop of the Roman Catholic Church.

From apostolic times men who were singled out to preach the word of God and to fulfill His mission were subject to orders in their goings and comings, in their tranfers from one field to another, but that obedient movement did not necessarily incur any diminution of home and natal ties and affections. One of the greatest of them declared with a bright inflection, appealingly human, "I am a citizen of no mean city."

No Formality Necessary

Archbishop O'Brien's friends, Protestant as well as Catholic, feel certain that some strong urging of that same natural attachment is leading him back to Peterborough on the occasion of his episcopal silver jubilee. And whatever the incidents of his stay here may seem they are unlikely to present much of the formal and conventional. At least it will be diluted by feelings from the heart. There is no formality in a home-coming, and that is obviously the purpose of Archbishop O'Brien in spending a few days here after almost a weeks' festal program of tribute and congratulations by the people of his archdiocese.

"Better an acre in Middlesex than a principality in Utopia"; that acre is Peterborough, the place where his parents are buried, where he spent his boyhood and where old friends of those precious years still live.

"Forsan et haec olim meminisse juvabit." Once upon a time Archbishop O'Brien may have quoted that phrase. Now its reality is full upon him, and experience has sharpened the truth of its words, "perhaps some day it will be happy to recall these affairs."

Aberhart Opens Credit Houses

EDMONTON, Oct. 1 (CP)—With the opening of five treasury department branches or "credit houses," the Alberta government has launched its new credit program designed to increase purchasing power and develop manufacture and sale of Alberta goods.

Individual and merchants have the opportunity of opening accounts in the credit houses to qualify for the three per cent bonus on the purchase of Alberta-made goods through merchants co-operating in the plan.

Formal ceremonies marked opening of credit houses yesterday at Grande Prairie, 250 miles northwest of Edmonton; Andrew, 75 miles northeast of Edmonton; St. Paul, 100 miles northeast; Rocky Mountain House, 100 miles southeast and Killam, 85 miles southwest of the capital.

3 Chinese Assassins Use Hatchet Kill 1st Premier

Shanghai, Oct. 1 (AP)

TANG SHAO-YI, former Chinese revolutionary leader and first Premier of the Chinese Republic, died yesterday after an operation to remove a hatchet buried in his skull.

Three assailants gained entrance to the home of the 78-year-old retired official on the pretext they were presenting him with honorary scrolls. They pulled hatchets from the scrolls and attacked him, escaping in a stolen automobile, which they later abandoned.

W. H. Casement Postmaster 63 Years, Dead

Canada's oldest postmaster, William Henry Casement of Lakefield, died at 3.30 o'clock this morning at the home of his cousin, Miss Nellie Nelson in Lakefield. In failing health for about two months, he had not been at the office regularly for about six weeks, but was still in harness to the extent he still held the appointment.

In his 84th year, Mr. Casement had been a postmaster for 63 years, the longest time any living man has ever served in such a capacity. His death marks the passing of the second postmaster the village has had in its entire history, including the time it was a mere pioneer settlement known as Thompson's Rapids. The first was his uncle, Robert Casement.

Served Since 1875

Appointed under Sir Alexander Mackenzie when John Bertram was the local parliamentary representative, Mr. Casement had served continuously as postmaster since his uncle's death in 1875, had been in office under every Prime Minister of Canada since Confederation, although not during Sir John A. Macdonald's first term of office.

Mr. Casement could recall the time the first post office was opened by his uncle in 1847 in a log building. It was subsequently moved and in 1914 the present modern structure was erected.

Mr. Casement was taken out of school in his early 'teens to assist his uncle in the business which combined a post office and a hardware store. In 1901, twenty-six years after his uncle's death, Mr. Casement gave up the hardware business to the increasing task of keeping post office.

Reeve and Warden

He was Reeve of Lakefield for ten years and in 1890 was Warden of Peterborough county. Chamberlain Urges Demobilizing Leaving Czechs To Map-Makers

LONDON, Oct. 1. —(AP)— Great Britain left Czechoslovakia to the map-makers today and steered a course toward what Prime Minister Chamberlain hoped would be peace in Europe for years to come.

Immediate steps in the general European settlement which the Prime Minister expected to grow out of yesterday's four-power agreement for peaceful dismemberment of Czechoslovakia and the Anglo-German declaration against war were aimed at getting Europe's mobilized manpower back to normal.

Mr. Chamberlain was said by informed quarters to have asked Chancellor Hitler and Premier Daladier of France for gradual demobilization of the German and French armies as a prelude to settlement talks.

Reliable sources in London said six battalions of British troops would be sent to Czechoslovakia soon to aid in police duties involved in the partition. The detachment, which probably would consist of four battalions of Guards Regiments and two from regiments of the line, was expected to sail within a few days.

Police Vote Areas.

The British detachment would become a part of the international force provided in the Munich agreement to police areas where plebiscites are to determine ultimate ownership.

In diplomatic circles there was talk that Mr. Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini of Italy were near an agreement on one barrier to full harmony in their relations — the Spanish situation. Any substantial withdrawal of Italian soldiers from Spain probably would bring into effect the Anglo-Italian friendship pact under which Great Britain would recognize the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

25,000 New Rural Users Of Hydro

HENSALL, Ont., Oct. 1 (Special)—During the four years of Liberal Administration in Ontario, 25,000 new rural customers have been added to the rural power districts, Hon. William Houck, Vice-Chairman of the Ontario Hydro Commission, said tonight in an address at the annual meeting of the Huron Liberal Association.

Throughout the Province, the position of Ontario had shown immense improvement as a result of the application of businesslike policies, declared Mr. Houck. Reserves had been maintained and added to, he claimed, and the condition of the various Hydro municipalities was a most gratifying one.

"Since the Liberal Government assumed office in 1934, three separate reductions in service charges have been made," said the Vice-Chairman. "There various reduction are estimated to be a saving to rural customers of between $600,000 and $700,000 annually."

OTTAWA, Oct. 1 (C.P.) — Canada's imports of farm implements and machinery in August jumped to $3,299,963 from $1,745,008 in August, 1937, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said to-day. The United States supplied practically all of the August import, the value from that country being $3,214,585.

London, Oct. 1 ((AP)

AUTHORITATIVE quarters understood today that Great Britain, the United States, France and Germany, joined in international representations to Warsaw asking moderation in the Polish-Czechoslovak dispute over Polish minorities.

Representations were believed to have amounted to a virtual warning and were understood to have been a "contributory factor" in a reported Polish-Czech understanding.

Informed sources indicated the British ambassador in Warsaw yesterday urged the poles not to march into the Teschen area, where most of Czechoslovakia's 100,000 Polish minority live.

It was understood the United States, French and German ambassadors made similar representations.

Naval Chief Duff Cooper Resigns, Distrusts Foreign Policy

LONDON, Oct. 1—(AP).—Alfred Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty, resigned from Prime Minister Chamberlain's Cabinet to-day because he disagreed with the Government's foreign policy.

The Prime Minister accepted the resignation.

In his letter of resignation, Mr. Duff Cooper said:

"I profoundly distrust the foreign policy which the present government is pursuing and seems likely to continue to pursue."

In accepting, the Prime Minister wrote:

"Knowing you are sincerely convinced that the foreign policy of the present government is a mistake, I agree with you in thinking it would not be proper for you to remain a member of the government."

Mr. Duff Cooper is a Conservative, long known as one of the leading advocates in the cabient of a strong Anglo-French alliance.

As civilian head of the navy he directed the mobilization of the fleet earlier this week when it appeared Great Britain and France together might fight Germany over the Czechoslovak issue.

Move A Real Surprise

The resignation came as a surprise in the midst of widespread public acclaim for Mr. Chamberlain for his achievement of a peaceful settlement of the crisis which only two days ago threatened to plunge Europe into war.

Mr. Duff Cooper, however, was understood to have been a cabinet dissenter even from the original Anglo-French plan of Sept. 19 for the cession of the Sudeten areas to Germany.

The first Lord of the Admiralty is the second member of Mr. Chamberlain's cabinet to resign in disapproval of the prime minister's policy of bargaining with Europe's dictators for peace.

Hurry Prevented Bidding Bren Probe Told

OTTAWA, Oct. 1—(CP)—Testimony as to the urgency of getting a Canadian source of supply for light machine guns was on the records of the Royal Commission investigating the Bren gun contract today. The Commission will resume its hearings Monday.

Yesterday C. Fraser Elliott, Commissioner of income tax and a member of the Interdepartmental Committee set up to control profits on Government armament contracts, told Commissioner H. H. Davis the committee was reluctant to pass on a contract for Bren guns without competitive bidding by various manufacturers but did not wish to delay the undertaking.

The inquiry is into a contract awarded the John Inglis Company of Toronto for the manufacture of 7,000 Bren guns on a cost plus 10 per cent basis. The same company holds a contract to supply 5,000 guns to the British war office.

The inquiry results from a magazine article by Lieut.-Col. George Drew of Toronto in which the terms of the contract were criticized.

Mr. Elliott said the Interdepartmental committee was called to meet on the then proposed Inglis contract in January, 1938. Major General L. R. Lafleche, chairman of the committee and Deputy Minister of National Defence, said his department would take responsibility for selection of the Inglis company without competitive bidding.

He advised against further delay which would ensue from dealing with other companies. The Inglis company, through its President Major J. E. Hahn, had obtained an assurance of a contract from the British war office and the capital cost of plant and equipment could be spread over the two contracts.

No Others Wanted.

The committee had been informed the War Office would deal with no other Canadian company.

Mr. Justice Davis said one of the questions he would have to consider was whether the committee had been brought into the picture early enough to enable it to deal with the matter in a practical way. The first negotiations took place in 1936 and the committee was not called until 1938.

L. A. Forsyth, associate Government counsel, said the calling of the committee was determined by receipt of word from the War Office that it would purchase guns made in Canada.

A Department memorandum submitted to the committee said if a crisis developed and Canada lacked guns to defend itself, criticism would be directed to those responsible for providing guns if they neglected to urge speed.

After reluctantly giving up the idea of calling for competitive bids, Mr. Elliott said, the committee proceeded to examine the proposed Inglis contract in order to see that the public interest was protected. Two clauses, considered unusual, were eliminated. One would have given the company an exclusive licence for the manufacture of Bren guns and the other would have permitted it to assign its right.

MORE ABOUT—

W. H. Casement

Casement read the vice-regal visitors an address of welcome.

Parents Pioneers

Mr. Casement, one of a family of three boys and three girls, was a son of the late Thomas Casement and Sarah Nelson, early pioneer-settlers in Douro township. His mother was born in the community now known as Lakefield at the time it was a tiny settlement called Nelson's Corners by reason of the fact that her family were among the earliest settlers in that part of Upper Canada. His father was born in Ireland of French descent and came to Canada in 1836, two years after his own parents had settled in Douro township.

Mr. Casement was treasurer of the Clement Lodge, A. F. and A. M., Lakefield, for more than 60 years. He was also a member of the Canadian Order of Foresters.

Surviving are three brothers, R. R. Casement of Belleville, Walter Casement of Hood River, Oregon, Alex. Casement of Carmanguay, Alberta, and two sisters, Mrs. Annie Dillabaugh of Manaka, Alberta, and Mrs. Mary C. Alsdorf of Medford, Oregon.

The funeral will be held on Monday afternoon at two o'clock from the Lakefield United church, under Masonic auspices. Interment will be at Hillside Cemetery, Lakefield.

6 Months Peace Says Laborite

MANCHESTER, Oct. 1—(AP). — Harold Nicolson, National Labor Member of Parliament, criticized Prime Minister Chamberlain at a Manchester luncheon to-day for what he called the "surrender" at Munich and the "betrayal" of Czechoslovakia.

"It is too late now to repair the damage that has been done," Mr. Nicolson said. "We have betrayed a valiant little country and a great democratic idea.

"There are many people who feel in so doing that we achieved peace for a generation. They are wholly mistaken. We have not achieved peace for a generation. We have achieved it only for six months."

Mr. Nicolson resigned the vice-chairmanship of the Foreign Affairs committee of Government supporters in April when he disagreed with Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy.

The National Labor member declared the Prime Minister "was offered one of the greatest opportunities that ever befell the lot of any British statesman."

"He missed that opportunity," Mr. Nicolson said. "Had he taken a firm line at Munich he would have established perhaps for ever the superiority of the democratic faith over Fascist conceptions."

Poorly Advised.

Mr. Nicolson contended the Prime Minister had been ill-advised by Sir Horace Wilson and should have listened to Sir Robert Vansittart, chief diplomatic adviser to the government.

Declaring naval mobilization on Tuesday threatened to break the Rome-Berlin axis, Mr. Nicolson said: "It was at this moment, had the Prime Minister realized it, that we held all the cards in our hands. Had the Prime Minister exploited his advantage he would have obtained peace with honor. He did not, however, understand the psychology of Germany and Italy and surrendered to them at the very moment when surrender was least necessary.

"He managed to short-circuit the House of Commons on an emotional appeal and I am still unaware that his final surrender had the approval of his own cabinet."

There were 55 births in September against 64 last year, and 25 deaths, three less than in the same month of 1937.

Gov't Assisted Taxation Clause Applies To Houses Built In '38

Referring to the action of the property committee of the council in planning a list of lots to be sold at $50 each, as required by the Dominion Housing Act, a businessman this morning told the Examiner he understood that the Dominion government's assisted taxation clause should apply to local houses built this year.

"As I understand it," he said, "the council should pass a bylaw thereby assuming the aid of the Act locally; and they should also set up a list of vacant lots that would sell for around $50. Having done that then other provisions to the Act come into effect, and one of them is that all houses not exceeding $4,000 built here since June 1 with Housing Act assistance are entitled to the assistance in paying taxes. The government pays the entire amount of the taxes the first year, 50 per cent the second and a quarter the third. I think the Property committee might look into this point, and I believe they will find these are the facts.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 1 (C.P.). — The four-power agreement at Munich to solve the Czechoslovak-Sudeten German crisis induced general commission house selling on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday. Wheat futures closed 2¾c to 2¼c lower.

Weakness in outside markets due to easing of European political tension and lack of aggressive Canadian wheat export demand were contributing factors as prices headed down for the fourth consecutive day.

Stop-loss selling pushed prices down 3 cents, but moderate -aboard and scattered mill orders caused a minor recovery. Canadian export wheat sales were placed at only 100,000 bushels, about a tenth of the business reported in several recent sessions.

Liverpool slumped 2¼ to 2¾d.

Coarse grain futures sagged fractionally to as much as 3½ cents.

Human "Guinea Pigs"

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 1—(A. P)—Harvard University set out today to discover what forces "produce normal young men." A group of selected students became figurative "guinea pigs," to be studied concerning heredity, constitution, family, school life and other elements pertaining to the make-up of the individual. Dr. Arlie Bock, head of the university hygiene department, and a staff of eight will continue the study for at least five years.

Biblical Thoughts For the Shut-Ins

By Rev. E. R. James, Toronto

THE CALL OF THE LORD JESUS

JESUS was baptised of John in Jordon St. Mark 1; 9.

A young Jew, a Carpenter of thirty years of age, is pondering upon the meaning of the voices within him. Eighteen long years have passed since he stood in the temple, a lad of twelve, filled with the joy of being in His Father's House and about His Father's business. He had obeyed the voice to go back to Nazareth and be subject to his mother and foster father. It was not easy. Certainly there was a conflict. It was His heart's desire to be in His Father's House. Yet as He journeyed to Nazareth He was sure He was doing the will of His Father. We knew nothing about those eighteen years, but of one thing we are sure, like every devout Jew, He had the privilege of studying the Scriptures, reading the sacred rolls in the synagogue. For the same reason, four hundred years ago, the English Bible was ordered to be placed on the lectern in every parish church, so that any man who desired might enter the Church and read the Book in his own tongue.

Many a night He pondered upon the deep sayings of the prophets, especially Isaiah. There was a response in His own heart to those mysterious voices from the past in those holy Writings.

Then one day a passing Jew told Him of the great prophet from the wilderness; how multitudes flocked to hear him. Perhaps as the Jew spake one passage came to the mind of the Carpenter:—"I will send my messenger before thy face to prepare thy way before thee." Four hundred years had passed since these words were uttered by Malachi.

That night as He sat at supper in the little cottage He said to His mother that He must go to the Jordon and meet John the Baptist. There was quietness in His voice that His mother had learnt to recognize. Nothing could turn Him when He spake so softly and with that far away look in His eyes. With the memory of the miraculous birth and its promises she looked at her Son and instinctively felt that the crisis had come. What would it mean to her?

Soon the little business was settled, the Carpenter's shop closed and the Master never to return. He had finishd His work as a Carpenter. He was now commencing His work as the Founder and Builder of the Kingdom of God.

The cousins met probably for the first time. The great prophet looked into the eyes of the greater. He offered Himself for Baptism with the rest of His people. "Suffer it to be so," said the young Man and the strong prophet yielded to the stronger.

It was at His baptism that the call came. It is the story of an inner experience. The account comes from the Lord Himself. In the days of His active ministry He tells this story to the nearest and dearest of His Apostles; men whose eyes were opened to see and understand something of the inward meaning It is oriental poetry. "Straightway coming out of the water He saw the heavens rent asunder and the Spirit as a dove entering into Him," not upon Him.

He is filled with the Spirit all the days of His active ministry. There is a blinding flash, an inward rush of power. A voice out of the heavens saying:— "Thou art my beloved Son; in Thee I am well pleased".

A modern scholar translates, perhaps more clearly:— "Thou art my Son; My Beloved; on Thee have I set my choice". Three distinct statements but each meaning the same. "Thou are the Messiah—Thou art the Anointed of God — THE CHRIST."

John the Baptist came preaching the coming of the Kingdom of God. The Kingdom came in the Person of Jesus Christ. He is the obedient Son; He has fulfilled to the uttermost the mind and will of the Father. "The Kingdom of God is within you" was literally fulfilled in Christ.

"Straightway the Spirit driveth Him forth into the wilderness."

Are you surprised at that? Preparation, meditation, decision. He had to be alone; far from man and close to the Father. Nothng must interupt the strain, the struggle and the decision He must make. He had to decide upon the principles of His ministry. He must think and think hard. He must now allow the spell of His experience to pass away.

How great is the danger of sensational preaching both to the preacher and to the hearers. The leper is cleansed. He is commanded to tell no man. He disobeys. He dissipates in idle chatter the spiritual benefits. There is such a thing as a spiritual experience. Too many lose its power and blessing when they talk lightly about their spiritual adventure. A modern Scotch theologian has taught that we must return to the wilderness for our deeper religious life. The roots of spiritual life must have time and quietness to strike deep into your personality and bring forth the fruits of His indwelling.

In the "Gospel of the Hebrews," one of the rejected Gospels, we have this reading, which Dr. Moffatt thinks is authentic:—

"My Son, in all the prophets did I await Thee; that Thou mightest come and I might rest in Thee, for Thou art my rest." Thought provoking words.

Two Missionaries To Give Addresses

The Quarter Million Fellowship Crusade, a conference organized by the Peterborough Presbytery of The United Church of Canada will be held in St. Andrew's Church (corner of Rubidge and Brock) on Wednesday, October 5th from 4 p.m. to 9.30 p.m.

Two leading missionaries of the church, Rev. T. T. Faichney, M.A., B.D., Tientsin, China and Rev. A. D. McKinnon, B.A., Ph.D., D.D. of the Caribou, B.C. will be the chief speakers. Associated with them will be several local ministers and laymen. Revs. Frank W. Newell, B.A., B.D., C. L. Brown, B.A., B.D., George Easton, M.A., Max Parr and E. W. Young, Mr. Leo Copp, B.A., and Dr. J. E. Middleton. The conference will begin at 4 o'clock and at 6.30 a supper meeting will be held in the school room at which Mrs. E. R. Shirley's group of the St. Andrew's Woman's Association will serve the meal.

At 8 o'clock the final public meeting will be held to which all are heartily invited. Groups of interested persons from each of the 22 charges in Peterborough county are expected in the afternoon, and large contingents especially from the city churches for the supper at 6.30 and the public meeting at 8 o'clock. The main purpose of this congress is to stimulate interest in the Fellowship crusade for worship, prayer and group which will be organized this month in every charge of the United Church of Canada. An urgent call from the moderator of the general council now assembled in Toronto will be read in all pulpits on some Sunday early in this month. This call coming from the supreme court of the church will command the attention of all our members and adherents.

Crusade Pledges To Be Given Out

At the morning service in St. Andrew's Church the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be held and also the public reception of new members. The cards for the quarter million Fellowship Crusade will be signed immediately after the communion, these contain a solemn purpose regarding church attendance, prayer for the church, and giving to its funds for the 10 weeks from Sunday, October 23rd, until the end of the year.

The evening address will have special reference to the dramatic national events of the last two weeks. Have they any bearing upon the judgment so often pronounced dogmatically by some people that the world is getting worse? In fact some speakers say that the sooner this civilization of ours breaks down the better. They declare that then certain startling events will happen which will compel us by force to obey the laws of Christ

A National Message

There is a static resistance to the spread of British Israel truth, and of every truth which is in any way new to the generation This is a natural law similar to the resistance of the air to the movement of an aeroplane or an airship, and the resistance of water to the passage of a ship.

Yet without such resistance the aeroplane or airship could not fly, and the ship could not move through the water. It is the resistance of the air, or the water to the propeller which enables the power of the engine to be utilized in driving the machine forward. The law governing such resistance must be mastered, and the horsepower of the engine, the size and pitch of the propeller blades, must be calculated and provided for according to the speed desired.

There is a similar resistance to progress in the mental and spiritual world. We must gauge its force; we must see how that force operates to retard the movement, and how it may be made a means for the forwarding of the truth.

First, then, as to the nature of the resistance. The resistance is chiefly static. It is the inertia of the existing body of thought and opinion, which primarily, we have to overcome.

There is the natural resistance, too, on the part of the individual; and also the mass mentality of the multitude to any forward movement in thought and knowledge, which calls for the output of mental and physical energy. We all have some experience of this. In most cases the decision to set oneself to acquire learning is only reached after hard mental conflict. The younger generation will not undertake it of its own volition. It is the task of parents, guardians, and teachers to compel or to constrain such an output of energy as is required to obtain an education. Alas for the strata of society where this is neither understood nor practised.

When scholars have gone through the day schools, there is a great falling off from the ranks. When the remaining scholars have finished high school, there is a further falling out of the ranks of students, and comparatively few go on to higher education. And of these a small proportion only for the love of knowledge. When students have completed their course, there is a very general determined putting away of books and studies. They say, "now is the time to reap the advantages of the hard path traversed in pursuit of knowledge. Why should anyone go any further on that hard and toilsome course?"

In this manner is built up a body of resistance against all new lines of study, against all presentations of truth which may demand the same.

Years and years of experience have shown that this resistance is as steady and inevitable as the resistance of a ship

Cathedral Musings

By reason of much repetition, words often seem to lose their meaning. They come parrot-wise to our lips, but they fail to enter our consciousness. We fail to grasp their significance. For instance, what exactly do we mean when, in repeating the Lord's Prayer, we address the Deity as "Father?" And what is our realization in connection with the words, "Thy kingdom come?" Do we fall into the error of the ancient Jewish people and look for the coming of a theocratic power on earth, or do we realize that the "coming" referred to is an individual affair, a coming of the kingdom to oneself, not necessarily to all at the same instant? Most of the references to the coming of the kingdom by the Master would indicate that this is so, but the point we wish to illustrate is that the mere saying of the words without any clear idea of what is meant and then sitting idly with folded hands, wafting for some miraculous thing to happen from without, is not religion, nor is it commonsense.

Neither in this world, or in any other world, do we get something for nothing. If we desire the kingdom of heaven, whether individually or collectively, we must pay the price. We must give that which most of us prize most dearly and that is ourselves. We must realize our spiritual heritage by realizing to the full extent of our consciousness that God is our only Father. We must also realize that on this earth, at least, God is always ready to manifest Himself through man, if man will only sink his self-will. That only through man can God's will to man be performed. In short, we must actually mean what we say and say what we mean. Not only that, but by pondering these things in our hearts, we must penetrate far beyond the surface of the words into their utmost meanings and implications. If one were granted an audience by one of the rulers of this world, how carefully one would treasure the words one heard. How much more so should we do this when in communion with the Supreme Ruler of the universe, before whom the proudest potentate is no more than the meanest beggar. When He speaks to us in our hearts then, let us be still and know that He is the Lord.

Institute Improves Havelock Cemetery

Result of systematic caretaking, a plan sponsored by the Havelock Women's Institute early last spring, Maple Grove Cemetery, situated just south of Havelock on No. 30 highway, now presents a very beautiful appearance. In April the Institute in co-operation communicated with all plot-owners asking that a yearly subscription be donated towards the upkeep of the cemetery grounds. Success of their venture is quite evident in the above photo.

The Teachings Of Jesus

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Oct. 2 is the first of a three-month course on "The Ten Commandments and the Teachings of Jesus," this first one on the topic, "The One True God," being based on Exodus 20:2, 3: Isaiah 45:22; Mark 12:28-34; I Cor. 8: 4-6, the Golden Text being Deut. 6:5, "Thou shalt love Jehovah thy God with all thy heart, and with all they soul and with all thy mind.")

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

The essence of true religion is love. Not fear, but love; not fear nor personal advantage must be its motives, but love and love alone. Even God's law, being a revelation of his person as well as his precepts, is grounded in love.

The Person Of God

As without a center there can be no circumference, so the Person and the Precepts of God stand related to one another, a knowledge and love of the Person being essential to a respect for his precepts. So God logically introduced his Person preparatory to promulgating His precepts: "I am Jehovah thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other gods before me." Jehovah's love for and his redemption of Israel were to be the basis of Israel's love for and obedience to Jehovah. God's redemption of them from Egyptian bondage was not conditional upon their obedience of the Ten Commandments, but was the free gift of God's grace in gratitude for which their obedience was asked. It is ever after this same order: "We love Him because He first loved us."

What God is and has done for us gives color to His every precept.

The Precepts Of God

Quite properly the first of these precepts has to do with our relation to our redeeming God. Our duties to God introduce our duties to our fellowmen. "Jesus answered, The first is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord our God, the Lord is one; and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. The second is this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." Supreme love expresses all there is to religion: the outflow of God's love to us and the back flow of our love both to Him and to our neighbor in appreciation of His love to us. But it is to be the utmost of love of which we are capable, giving to God the full measure of the affection of our hearts, the devotion of our souls, the thoughts and reasonings of our minds and the service of our strength. In every realm of our being God is to be enthroned as Lord of all. This preeminence in all things is to be given Him not only for His glory, but for man's own good. "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God and there is none else." Apart from God no blessedness is possbile for us. "To us there is one God, the Father, of whom are all things and we unto Him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, through whom are all things and we through him." St. Augustine expressed it saying, "Thou hast made us for Thyself, and the heart of man is restless until it finds its rest in Thee."

Czech Crowds Angry

PRAGUE, Oct. 1—(CP-Reuters).—Crowds carrying Czechoslovak flags today tried to form processions in Prague streets to protest against the cession of Sudetenland to Germany.

The crowds were alarmed by the statement in the press that the Czechoslovak Government "had no other alternative" but to accept the decision of the Munich four-power conference.

The Teaching of Jesus — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Ex. 20:2, 3; Isaiah 45:22; Mark 12:28-34; I Cor. 8:4-6.

"I am Jehovah thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage," said God to Israel through Moses. Therefore Israel was to love God and obey his commandments.

The first of God's precepts dealt with God's person. He is to be first in our love because God has put us first in his love: "Thou shalt have no other gods before me."

Many years after Moses' time the prophet Isaiah commanded us to worship the true God only, saying, "Look unto me, and be ye saved....for I am God, and there is none else."

Jesus taught us saying, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind and with all thy strength, and thy neighbor as thyself."

People Don't Want War

When Chancellor Hitler made his remarkable war speech a few days ago every person in Germany listened to it. If there were those without radios then they were told to go to some central place and listen. When it was over there was a tremendous shout and a declaration that when the Chancellor gave the word Germany was prepared to gladly make the sacrifice. If he went for war then the people were all ready. It left the impression that all the people were of one mind and that all wanted war.

But did they? When the prolonged conference was finished at Munich it was found that men and women had been standing outside for hours. They did not go home for fear they would lose their places. They were waiting to see just one man, Neville Chamberlain, premier of Great Britain. He wore no uniform there was no glitter in him or on him; just a plain dark overcoat and a bowler hat, but it was for that man the crowd in Munich — Hitler's most-loved place—waited. And when he appeared they did the kind of cheering one hears at a football game. It was not prearranged, but it was spontaneous and the men and women were cheering because Chamberlain was to them emblematic of peace. And only a few days before they assured their own Hitler they were ready for war.

And what of Rome? Cables tell much the same story. When it was announced there would be no war the papers issued extras and people scrambled for them just the same as they would here. We read the jubilation of the people was spontaneous. They seemed to forget for the moment the species of regimentation under which they live and they were letting lose that within them which cried out for expression and would not be denied utterance.

And only a few days ago they were lined up and ready to follow Mussolini in a war-league with Hitler.

What does it mean? Simply that the people of Italy and the people of Germany did not want war. When they had opportunity to give expression to their own feelings they did so more plainly than their dictators could speak for them.

One might well be tempted to express the fond but futile hope that Joseph Chamberlain might have lived to see the day when his son was able to be of such monumental service to a war-stricken world. It would have been supreme satisfaction to have known that he had left behind him one who could take the affairs of a broken and crumbling world and by infinite patience and sublime courage restore it to the basis where peace was victorious in the struggle with war. In his own days Joseph Chamberlain was accustomed to hearing the acclaim of the crowd, but never in his fondest recollection could he have heard anything to compare with the reception given his son Neville when he returned to London from Munich.

We are living so close to the stage where some of the world's greatest history is being enacted that we probably fail to grasp the full significance of that which has happened.

There was one conviction which haunted Sir Edward Grey during and after the Great War, and it is written in his memoirs. Just this—a few days' delay in 1914 would have saved 8,000,000 lives.

There is not even a remote doubt that Neville Chamberlain was fully cognizant of that. He knew if nothing were done one country would carry another like climbers on a rope into the abyss. It will go down in world history that he did the right thing at the right time—he secured that delay before the final plunge. And it is no exaggeration to say he saved 8,000,000 lives. He performed as great a service for Germany and Italy as he did for France and Britain.

Right now seems like the appointed time for these same four men to sit in conference again and look to the future. They have demonstrated they could make a decision when they had the fate of the world in their hands. It has been made plain to them their own people do not want war. They can have without asking for it the endorsation of the world for the dismembering of their giant war machines. Events of recent days are too great to be fully realized, but they do erect in their wake a great and glorious finger post pointing to the future. Peace has for once gained the victory for which the world actually groaned in the intensity of her strong desire. And what has been done can be done again.

Our Service Was Complete

A number of people who listen to Walter Winchell on the radio have become disgusted. They heard the real Walter Winchell a few days ago, and his offering was just a poor cheap sneer at what British statesmen were doing to try and avert war.

The solution for such a problem is in refusing to listen. That may not injure Walter Winchell in the least for he will probably never know that some people tuned him out. But if they do tune him out we are certain they will be doing what they should have done before. It has always been a trifle difficult to understand just why he had a following. In recent times he would be preparing his material for his own American audience, and he would interpret events to suit them. His own convictions do not matter much because he is patently in business where he can market his talents only.

The radio world has been running full blast in recent days, and one hears again "I heard on the radio that . . ." Now that the present crisis has passed it may be quite in order to make a few comments on what people did hear and what amount of reliable information was forthcoming.

In the first place the Examiner missed nothing in the way of news but its readers did miss a good deal in the way of rumor. There was not one move or parital move made at any time or in any place which was not immediately available to this paper. That is not boasting, but a plain statement which needs saying.

And for that service this paper relied on Canadian Press which in turn is one of the most complete and reliable services in the world. It has its own offices and its own men at world points and they furnish news—nothing else. Even at the momentous conference at Munich there was a Canadian Press staff writer there, J. F. Sanderson, a son of F. J. Sanderson, deputy-speaker of the House of Commons.

Now about the radio broadcasts. In this country they are furnished to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation four times a day by the Canadian Press and at no charge. So it is actually the Canadian daily newspapers acting through the Canadian Press which is furnishing the people with their radio news.

So you can forget about Walter Winchell and all the other commentators if you wish and be assured that when you read your Examiner you are getting a full service, one which gives a fair and accurate reading of the events as they pass. In the crisis which has just terminated this service did not miss a thing. And it also avoided many rumors and positive mis-statements.

Little Pigs Go To Market

On most market days in Peterborough some of the little pigs are offered for sale and perhaps some of the farmers themselves have wondered at times about the prices asked or offered for them. It is one thing which a farmer sells to another farmer. We listened the other day to a discussion on that point and it was contended that where one farmer sold and another bought the man who bought must be sure he could go ahead and make some money. The question was—could not the farmer who sold have done the same thing?

The discussion brought forth a few old rules, one of which was that a pair of weanlings could be taken as being equal to 100 pounds of live hogs. If hogs were selling for $8 then the pair of weanlings should be worth about $4 each. Admittedly there might be variations from that rule, but in a general way it was held to be sound enough. It was mentioned too that some farmers are now making a business of breeding to sell weanlings much the same as the chick hatchery does business. Such people were not interested in hogs as such but were making weanlings (pigs of six weeks or so) their special line of business.

The price of feed has quite a bit to do with the business for we heard it stated "When the price of feed goes up you can hardly give weanlings away." When the price of feed comes down or when the cheese factory season is at hand and whey is available then the price of weanlings goes up. Another rule was that when the price of wheat was less than one cent per pound it paid to feed it to the hogs, the reason being that four pounds of wheat would make one pound of pork which would be worth at least eight cents.

So when one sees the little pigs in crates at the market it can be taken for granted there are a good many rules and figures and ideas governing the selling price.

Tornadoes And History

Tornadoes are probably not familiar with the territory which they invade, and one cannot expect they would show any discrimination in their points of attack.

One tornado bent upon destruction entered the old city of Charleston, South Carolina. Twenty-five persons were killed and several hundred injured. Buildings were smashed and the property damage will be large.

There are old buildings there, and many of them date away back to years before the Civil War. Public money has been spent in recent times bringing them back to their original condition, but not changing them in the least.

Among the buildings reported seriously damaged is a quaint little place known as the Hugenot Church, and we believe it is the only one of its kind in all United States. Possibly there is not another on the North American continent. And the founding of that little church would reach back to the days of Louis XIV. of France, who turned against the Hugenots, the Protestants of France who adopted the Calvinistic form of the reformed religion. Around 1685 many of them fled from France to England and Holland, and later on some of them made their way to United States, and undoubtedly it was this movement of people which later on caused that little Hugenot Church to be built in Charleston in South Carolina. And now the tornado on its visit has wrecked the place, indicating that tornadoes have little regard for the historical significance of the places which they attack.

He Was Indignant

Here is another of those cases where it is claimed "something should be done about it." A Peterborough gentleman was in the city of Detroit on the day when the world situation looked rather black. He had occasion to spend some money and found the people in two stores were asking a discount of from six to eight per cent. on his Canadian money. He was indignant and told the clerks in the stores what he thought of the situation, and perhaps never stopped to think that the clerks were doing exactly as they had been instructed.

The day after he reached home he was still indignant and told the Examiner something should be done about it, but just what that something should be he was not prepared to suggest. Not another war scare over such a matter, but he felt justice had been denied him.

The British pound sterling sold off during the days of war talk, and probably that may have been the reason why the Canadian dollar was a little off color in border points of United States. The money the Peterborough man was offering was good in this country, but across the line they did not seem so sure. They were probably thinking anything might happen. In such a situation the man in question could "have done something about it" himself. He could have put his good Canadian money in his pocket and spent it at home where it is worth 100 cents on the dollar.

NOT SO GOOD

(By A. R. K.)

¶ I used to think when things were black, when there was nothing in the shack, and when finances shrank; the easy way to fix it all, would be to make a sudden haul, I'd go and rob a bank.

¶ I knew where I could get a gun, I'd read just how the thing was done, and I was stout of heart; I'd make a hurried sort of trip, then scoop the ducats in my grip, and hasten to depart.

¶ But I keep reading day by day, of plans which often go astray, they had some hidden fault; I get discouraged as can be, at thoughts of bullets sunk in me, it's brought me to a halt.

¶ The latest one I read about, was where a husky man and stout, with shoulders like a plank; he had two pistols in his jeans, and with him every other means, so he could rob a bank.

¶ He entered in this brave galoot, and said he'd soon begin to shoot, do other things quite rash; he scooped the money from the tills, took full-ribbed bundles of nice bills, and he was strong in cash.

¶ And then he started on a run, but stopped before a nasty gun, they grabbed him by the ears; they parked him in the court next day, and there he heard the cadi say—I'll give you fifteen years.

THE FIRST CASE of kidnapping in Virginia was six years after the English arrived there. Captain Samuel Argall, in 1613, abducted Pocahontas, the Indian princess, and held her for ransom. Her father, King Powhatan, paid the sum demanded, and during the time the terms asked by the colonists were being satisfied he sent messages asking that his daughter be well treated.

Julius Caesar was once kidnapped, and feeling insulted because but $15,000 was asked as ransom, he insisted a higher figure be set as the price of his freedom. The sum of $75,000 was paid, and upon his release he captured and executed the entire band which held him captive.

KNOWS THE SAD STORY.

(Detroit News)

FRANCE apparently will support a reasonable Czechoslovakia compromise, if one is worked out that Chamberlain can accept. Hitler's acceptance of Chamberlain's request for the meeting encourages belief that a settlement may be made. If war should nevertheless come, there can be little doubt that the world will place the heavy blame wholly on Hitler.

Statesmanship, after all, may have learned since the World War. Not until long after the days just preceding August, 1914, were the records disclosed which revealed secret fumblings and inadequacies on the part of men in high though subordinate places in the chancelleries of Europe. Chamberlain shows that he well knows that sad story. His course evinces firm determination that history shall no again be compelled to record, for Great Britain's part, a repetition.

• As Peterborough Was In 1851

THROUGH the kindness of a reader The Examiner has been able to look through a very interesting publication, the "Canada Directory" edited by Robert W. A. MacKay and printed and published by John Lovell, St. Nicholas Street, Montreal in 1851.

The 87-year-old directory claims to set forth the names of the professional and business men of every description in the cities, towns and principal villages of Canada "brought down to November, 1851."

The Peterborough of that far-off year required only two pages to set forth its Who's Who in the business world and the description as given by the directory is as follows: The county town of the county of Peterborough is situated on the Otonabee River in the township of North Monaghan C. W.—distant from Cobourg 30 miles—usual fare by stage and steamboat in summer 5s, usual stage fare in winter 5s—distant from Port Hope 30 miles—usual fare by stage and steamboat in summer 5s, usual stage fare in winter 5s. Population about 2,000. The public officers listed a number of men whose names are still well remembered, among them James Hall, M.P.P. and W. H. Wrighton who lived to a ripe old age. Here is the list:—

G. B. Hall, judge of the county and surrogate courts; James Hall, M.P.P. for Peterborough; W. S. Conger, sheriff; W. H. Wrighton, clerk of the peace and deputy clerk of the crown; Charles Rubidge, county registrar; Thomas Fortye, clerk of the county court and registar of the surrogate court; Walter Crawford, crown lands agent; Thomas Milburn, revenue inspector; Thomas Short, warden of the county, Keene; Charles Hudson, mayor of Peterborough; S. J. Carver, postmaster; W. H. J. Vizard, town clerk; Frederick Ferguson, county treasurer; J. J. Hall, clerk of the division court; Walter Sheridan, clerk of the county council; John Reed, county engineer; R. Nicholls, town treasurer, and Henry Norton, jailer.

It will be noticed that three of these officials, Messrs. Conger, Sheridan and Rubidge have been commemorated by naming three Peterborough streets after them.

PETERBOROUGHS BENEFACTOR

In the list of asurance companies, banks, etc., the name of Robert Nicholls is prominent. In 1851 this well-known merchant, to whose generosity and that of his wife, the late Charlotte Nicholls Peterborough owes a hospital and many of its parks, was agent for the Bank of Montreal, the Canada Life Assurance, the Colonial Life Assurance Companies and the Mutual Fire Insurance Company. W. H. Wrighton, with headquarters at the Court House was agent for the National Loan Fund, Life and Equitable Fire Assurance Companies of London and James Hall, Hunter street was listed as the agent for the Provincial Mutual Fire Assurance Company.

The business and professional list makes interesting reading and glancing through it it will be noticed that many names that are well known here now are mentioned. Here are some of the men who were in business in the Peterborough of nearly nine decades ago:

John F. Albro, Alexander Bethune and Thomas Bradburn were all proprietors of general stores on George street, handling dry goods, groceries, hardware, crockery etc.

Elias Burnham was a barrister and an attorney-at-law with his office on George street, and another lawyer whose name is an historic one here was Robert Dennistoun, who was also listed as master extraordinary in chancery and whose office was located on the Market Square. A third in the list was W. H. J. Vizard who was also the town clerk.

The Roman Catholic priest here was Rev. Father John Butler and Rev. R. J. C. Taylor, M.A. was rector of St. John's Anglican Church.

Among the hotel keepers mentioned in the directory were William Creswell who operated the Victoria Inn on Hunter street, and advertised good accommodation for travellers and permanent boarders, also adding that there was a good yard and stabling attached to the premises, and Thomas J. Fisher, proprietor of the Albert House, situated on George street and mentioned as a stage house, and steamboat office as well as the headquarters of a livery business.

Henry Edmison was described as a general smith and steam engineer, capable of manufacturing steam engines. William Coulter was a druggist and chemist whose place of business was located on George street and who in addition to drugs, also handled paints, oils, dye stuffs, perfumery, books, and stationery, James Hall's tannery was on Hunter street and George Haslehurst's printing office where the Weekly Despatch was published had a George street address. The boot and shoe needs of the community were looked after by Thomas White's store on George street while Richard Winch had a butcher shop on Simcoe street.

EARLY ADVERTISERS

These were only a few of the business men of that day and they were mentioned in a special list because apparently they were the advertisers of their era and paid for the extra publicity they received in the Canada Directory. In the general list printed in smaller type are to be found the names of other business men and there we learn that other hotelmen in 1851 were William Baxter, Thomas Beatty and Thomas Chambers, the latter operating a commercial hotel at Hunter and Water streets. A store keeper whose name was long a household word was William Cluxton, while another whose name is just as familiar even to this day was Samuel Dickson, lumberman.

Several of the clergy living in Peterborough have already been mentioned. Others were Rev. J. Gilmour who was the Baptist minister and Rev. Isaac B. Howard, the Wesleyan and Rev. Robert Hurley the Bible Christian minister.

It is very interesting to find that the old nickname for Ashburnham, the "Scotch Village" is used in this old directory and that some of the most important industries in the community were located in the section on the east side of the Otonabee. Among these were James Haney's iron foundry and machine shop, John Mowry's foundry, R. D. Rogers' mill and the brewery operated by Arthur Peck, father of E. A. Peck, K.C.

Another brewery of that date was the one on George street south which had as its proprietor Clark Spalding.

Doctors mentioned in the list included Dr. Egerton Perry, George street, Dr. George Burnham, Water street, Dr. Thomas Hay, Brock street, Dr. John McNab, Hunter street.

The fact that there were seven blacksmiths doing business here in 1851 and four or five tanneries were active is in sharp contrast with the conditions existing today.

• Another Small Boy Is Killed

(Letter in Ottawa Journal)

SIR,—Another small boy, 11 years old, riding a bicycle just at dark killed in collision with a motor car. Auto ditched when driver tried to avoid hitting the cyclist.

You have written strong editorials and printed letters warning bicyclists. Apparently useless.

The menace continues—grows as there seems to be an increase in the number of bicyles used.

This is one more letter—from a former cyclist who has pedalled many thousands of miles. I now am a motorist and a careful one because of my long knowledge of road dangers.

Last night—about the time this small boy was killed—I was making a left turn off a car-track street. Visibility was poor. Suddenly, in front of me on the second street were about 10 bicyclists coming toward me. The were spread out from sidewalk to sidewalk, half of them on their wrong side. They were laughing and chattering, paying no attention to traffic on the car-track street they were approaching. I had to throw on my emergency to avoid hitting them.

The fatal accident reported in The Journal this morning was nearly duplicated with me in a leading role.

I may admire the courage of our bicycle boys, they would doubtless make good aviators, but they do give me and other responsible motor drivers the jitters.

To The Editor

LET US REMEMBER

Editor of the Examiner,

Sir,—The news of this morning brought to us by radio and newspaper has lifted the gloom for every heart and home. When I think of what might have been I can only exclaim this morning "Thank God." Can we not all make this coming Sunday a real day of thanksgiving for Peace. Let those not forget who have just escaped active service with its dangers and suffering. Let those never forget who might have seen son, husband, brother or father go away perhaps for years, perhaps for ever. Let none of us forget the inevitable strain, high prices, shortage of food and distress. Then let none of us be slow to give thanks that conference has gained the victory over war and particularly let us give thanks for our own first statesman, Mr. Neville Chamberlain and uphold him by our thanksgiving and prayers. Let us all remember to go to church on Sunday.

Yours very faithfully,
J. DOUGLAS PATERSON.

PLAIN TALK.

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

INDICATIVE of the freedom of the press in France, the Rightist newspaper L'Epoque on Monday declared: "We are abandoning Bohemia (Czechoslovakia) to her destiny; we are handing her over to the executioner; we even are aiding him to cut her up like a chicken—we the French, who by the voice of our premier, swore just a few days ago from the rostrum of parliament that we would remain faithful to our pledged word." Can you imagine that kind of a statement being made in any newspaper in a dictatorship—and the editor being allowed to live?

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

HERE THIS, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.

The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money; yet will they lean upon the Lord, and say, Is not the Lord among us? none evil can come upon us.

Therefore shall Zion for your sake be ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest....

But in the last days it shall come to pass that the mountain of the house of the Lord shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.—Mic. iii, 9-12; iv, 1, 2.

THE WORLD'S STEEL.

(Toronto Globe and Mail)

HERR HITLER had much to say about German military strength being "greatest." For a short war what he says is probably true. But for a long war the respective ability and strength of the steel industries of warring countries would be most important. Back in 1915 total output of Germany and Austria-Hungary was 15,651,161 tons and of United Kingdom, Russia and France, 13,648,632 tons.

But now, says Steel magazine, the same group of central powers has increased output to 20,815,722 tons and the former allies are able to produce 38,239,590 tons annually. Germany has increased output 50 per cent, and Russia 333 per cent. United Kingdom went up 51 per cent and France 613 per cent.

Moreover, part of Germany's production is dependent on a trade agreement with France, whereby Germany has imported about 7.2 million tons of ore annually in exchange for much needed coke.

SOLDIERS TOO FAT.

(Australian Press Bureau)

AUSTRALIAN military authorities are taking a stern view of the tendency of members of the instructional corps to become fat.

An army order has been issued instructing "physically able members of the Australian permanent forces under 45 years of age, to engage in some active sport at least once a week."

"Some members of the instructional corps have become too fat," said Colonel R. McDonald in Sydney.

"They have the choice of football, hockey, or cross-country running.

"Most of them take to hockey or football. Not many like the idea of cross-country jaunts."

Belmont School Fair Speaking Features 12 Group Event

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Sept. 30. — With ideal weather prevailing, Belmont Rural School Fair, held yesterday afternoon in the Havelock Public School playground, drew the largest attendance in several years. The introduction of a microphone and loud-speaker for use in the public speaking and reciting was especially interesting to the 12 groups of school children taking part. The exhibits were on display in the Havelock town hall.

The pupils of school section No. 9 and their teacher, Miss Helen Anderson were especially congratulated by Public School Inspector Leo Copp for their contribution to the program.

Only a fair exhibit of stock was displayed, the judging being conducted by Frank Paterson, Peterborough Agricultural representative.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

All at once Knarf, who had been looking very carefully at the playroom wall, exclaimed: "Hanid! I've found it! Look!"

His sister hastened over. She found him pointing to a tiny doorknob in the wall. It wasn't much bigger than the head of a pin. "There it is!" he said excitedly. "That's the door to the land on-the-other-side-of-the-wall!"

"You mean that's the door the Tin Soldier just went through?"

Yes."

Knarf turned the knob.

"It's locked," he said.

Then Knarf rapped on the door. Both shadow-children listened very carefully. They didn't hear anything.

"Maybe nobody's home," Knarf said.

"Rap again....louder," Hanid said.

So Knarf rapped louder. This time they heard footsteps and a voice from the other side called out, "Who's there?"

"Knarf and Hanid? Never heard of you. Go away."

"But we want to come in."

"The door's locked. You can't come in."

Here Hanid said: "Please open the door. We're friends of General Tin, the tin soldier."

"We're the best friends General Tin has," Knarf broke in. "He went through this door a moment ago. We're sure he wants us to go along with him."

"Why?"

"He has to do something very important for King Fat-Wat who rules over the land on-the-other-side-of-the-wall. He needs our help."

"Hanid! I've found it! Look!

"You mean General Tin can't help himself?" the voice said.

"Well," said Knarf, "he's just a tin soldier. There are lots of things he can't do by himself. We don't mind helping him. For instance, his legs are very stiff. He always keeps falling on his nose. We just go around picking him up again."

"Falling on his nose! H'mph! So that's what you think of your good friend, General Tin—!"

And at that moment the door was flung open. And there stood General Tin!

AFRAID TO MARRY

By HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, obtains a job as a model shortly after her father loses his fortune in a financial crash. The same day she learns that Craig Denby, the man she loves, has married another girl. Afraid of marriage, Judy had put him off once too often. Her father goes west with her stepmother, her own mother, remarried, is abroad and Judy moves to a small hotel. She finds a place as a model, cut off from all her old friends. Now she has seen on the street, Ronald Birrell, brilliant young attorney, who had taken an interest in her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 8

Judy did not speak to Ronald Birrell. When she glanced up, having decided to do so, he was gone. Vanished completely as though, one moment before, his long strides had not been carrying him down the street.

It was just as well, Judy decided. It was better that she keep her solitary banner waving bravely. She did not want sympathy or pity.

"Not that he would give me much of either," she reflected ruefully. "He thinks I should fly the Star Spangled Banner because I'm on my own. And I—I don't much care what he thinks."

It was that same evening that Craig and his bride came back to New York. Judy saw the girl's picture in the society section of one of the most prominent newspapers the next morning. It was not a sensational story this time—merely a quiet anouncement that Mr. and Mrs. Craig Denby had returned from their honeymoon and would be at home at a strange address. So Craig was vacating his apartment?

Judy walked down to an automat for dinner, thinking about that. She had had tea with him before the great fireplace in the old rooms, while the logs snapped, and the servant who had been with him since childhood moved noiselessly here and there. She had been part of gay groups who had come back to the living room to talk, after the theater, and eat the delectable cheese or chicken sandwiches, prepared by an elderly, comfortable cook, who did not mind working late because she had so little to do at any time.

That was ended, completely.

"Try remembering not to think back, Judy Rogers," she reminded herself, slipping a nickel into a slot, turning a crank, and watching a thick white cup fill with steaming hot chocolate at the automat.

In order to divert her thoughts from Craig, she tried to think of Ronald Birrell.

"He would think I'm eating where I should," the musing went on. "I don't care—the chocolate's good."

But she dreamed all night long that she was making the old, gay rounds—Twenty-one, the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf, The St. Regis, Pierre's. She thought she was laughing too lightly, too gally.

And she wakened to find the dull gray morning light coming into the dull gray hotel room. It was better when the lights were on. Three round lamps, a table, four shelves of books, prints and cushions of her own had been salvaged and brought along. There was a bright rug, too, and she had ornaments and bowls and candle-holders gathered from here and there. It was early, so she took a quick shower, slipped into a warm bathrobe, and put a few last touches on a sketch on the desk. More and more, the last few days, as she watched the designer at the dress manufacturer's, she had felt an urge to create, too. She held up the completed costume. She liked it. Some day, soon, she might have an opportunity to show it to her employer. If he liked it, it would mean a raise. Or maybe a chance to try a design now and then.

At last she put on the gay red frock which had been one of her favorites and started to work. There were buyers. She paraded before them in a blue frock, a black one, a brown, a blue, a white evening dress that followed simple sport lines, another blue . .

And all the while Craig Denby was wondering about Judy as he went through the habitual routine of landing, customs, and riding up town to the new expensive hotel suite which he had taken for a month or so. Today he would see about dismantling his old apartment. He must find a permanent place to live. Marriage was more inconvenient than he had thought at first. But Mary...

He smiled at the girl whom he had married. He had not been sorry for a minute. Judy was right. You recognized love when it came. Suppose he had not gone away for that week-end party, and had not met the dark-eyed girl with the throaty contralto? But he had.

"I love you, Mary," he told her again.

She laughed a little tremulously "I love you, too," she said. "Oh, darling, isn't life fun?"

With you it is hilarious," he agreed.

"Silly! But I'm glad you came along."

For so long a time Craig always had called Judy when he first returned from a trip, that he mechanically reached for the telephone in their suite. When the operator told him that the Rogers' telephone was disconnected, his brows drew together. He glanced through the directory, found Marjorie Barton's number, and made another call.

"Marjorie, this is Craig Denby. I thought you might be in Ethiopia or New Guiana. But I took a chance."

"Craig—congratulations! I know Mary, and she's a darling. When may I expect you for dinner? I'll get a party together."

There was more of that, and then Craig said: "Marjorie, where can I reach Judy?"

"Hadn't you heard that she was going abroad?"

"No." He wondered why he felt so disappointed. Old friendship, of course. But he did want to see Judy. He wanted Mary to meet her. He wanted them to like each other. "When did she sail?"

"Judy made her plans so suddenly, I wasn't there," Marjorie's calm voice was answering.

"I'll call her father. He'll know."

"Sorry, Craig, but he's in the west. The Rogers have left the city for a year or so, it seems."

So Craig sent Judy a cable in care of her mother that evening, and the cable came back stating that she was not there. He again telephoned Marjorie and received an evasive answer. Judy was being cockeyed, according to Marjorie's viewpoint, but if that was the way she wanted things, that was the way they would be. Marjorie would not let her down. She was worried, though. Seh wanted to find Judy. The note had been so final.

"Why not drop over?" Marjorie asked Craig. "A few people are here. Mary should know them."

One of the people was Ronald Birrell.

"You don't know Judy Rogers," Marjorie told him. "but she's my best friend and Craig and Judy were fond of each other for a long time. Not fond enough, though. Craig was married recently and he is bringing his bride to see me."

"What happened to Judy Rogers?" asked Ronald, as though the girl were a name, nothing more.

"When her father lost his money, where did she go?"

"Abroad," answered Marjorie, loyalty not failing.

It was natural that Judy's name should arise, a litle later, when Craig and Mary arrived. Everyone had been unusually fond of Judy. She was missed now.

"Say, I know I saw her on the street the other day," one young man volunteered. "It if wasn't Judy, it was a dead ringer for her. Are you sure she's in Europe, Marjorie?"

"Boats run both ways. Maybe she's back."

Meantime, Judy, unaware that her whereabouts was a matter of discussion up at Marjorie's, had decided that she was prospering enough to venture to get in touch with someone. Marjorie could be trusted. She would telephone her. A pay telephone booth was in the drug store at the corner, so she went into it. There was danger of eavesdropping and discovery if she talked from the hotel. She had a quarter changed to nickels. She and Marjorie might talk a long time.

She dialed the familiar number. She waited.

Marjorie and Craig had been talking together in a small den near the main drawing room. Talking about Judy. Marjorie, summoned to the reception room as the bell began to chime, turned to Craig.

"Will you take it please? I'm not here."

Thus, when Craig said: "The Barton apartment" in a voice as closely resembling a butler's as he could comand, it was Judy whom he heard say: "Miss Marjorie Barton, please?"

Judy's heart became a trapeze. There wasn't any world except the four walls of the telephone booth, and Craig's voice saying, over and over: "Judy, where are you?"

Dominion Police Force Proposed Under One Office, By Conant

TORONTO, Oct. 1—(CP). — Hon. G. D. Conant, Ontario Attorney-General, was on record to-day as favoring solidarity of the entire Dominion Police Force and revision of Sunday observance laws passed by the Federal Government 32 years ago.

Speaking before the annual Police Association of Ontario convention yesterday, Mr. Conant suggested the English system of supervision, in which inspectors from a home office have supervision over police throughout the country, be given a trial. It would "save money in the end."

"Crime knows no boundaries these days," he said.

The time has come when Sunday observance laws, lottery laws, and slot machine laws should be changed "so we could enforce them with sanity." If it was attempted to enforce the laws as they stand, police would incur "the hate and ridicule of the entire province."

Mr. Conant told the second day's gathering at the three-day convention that he would not interfere with Ontario courts and that social connections, politics or money would not gain "back-door" entrance to the courts. He said that "such manipulation of justice would breed Fascism and Communism quicker than anything else."

"I believe that magistrates and judges know more about a case they have heard than I do, and I think overruling their decisions is apt to lead to grave abuses," he said.

Kidney Troubles
Indicated by the symptoms

Scanty, highly coloured urine, headache, backache and constipation are among the early symptoms of kidney disease. The appetite is fickle, the tongue is furred and in time there is pallor and loss of weight.

The functions of the kidneys in filtering the uric acid poisons from the blood are halted and these poisons set up pains and aches, rheumatism, gout and lumbago.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are recommended as an effective and prompt means of relief because they quickly arouse the activity of the liver and bowels as well as the kidneys, and thoroughly cleanse the system of the acid poisons. Relieved of undue strain, the kidneys resume again their natural functions and the painful symptoms disappear.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have stood the test of time and will not fail you. At all drug stores or The Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Limited, Oakville, Ontario, Canada.

DOROTHY DIX

No Second Wife Wants To Or Should Play Second Fiddle To a Ghost, So It Is Up To Her If She Is To Assume Her Rightful Place In The Home

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I married a widower with children and I earnestly desire to do my duty by them and make them happy, but I am being made perfectly miserable by my husband, the children and the first wife's relatives all telling me perpetually what my predecessor used to do. They use her as a club over my head. Everything I do I am criticized and told that wasn't the way my predecessor did it. My husband isn't my husband. He is still the husband of the dead wife. My home isn't my home. It is hers. I have tried to please all of them, but in vain, and I am tired of trying to pattern my life after that of some one else. I feel I have a right to my own opinions and my own way of running a house which should be mine. I love my husband and the children, but being the underdog is no fun. Will you please write a little advice to a stepmother who wants to do what is right but is tired of playing second fiddle.

MARYANNE.

ANSWER:

The only way any of us can keep from being the underdog is to fight our way up, and I strongly advise you to do so. Give your stupid husband, your impudent stepchildren and the meddling in-laws a few good hard bites that will make them afraid of you and keep their hands off of you.

It will probably precipitate a grand old family row, but when the dust is cleared away you will find that what you have gained was worth the battle, for you will have got possession of your home and you will have won the respect of your oppressors. More than that, you will have put yourself in a position to be of some help to your stepchildren, which you cannot be as long as they see you a poor, weak, spineless creature who lets everybody trample over her and hasn't enough backbone to stand up for her rights.

There is nothing that children have such a contempt for as they have for cowardice, and you try in vain to control and guide youngsters who see you meekly swallowing insults from their relatives and who permits them to tell you where you get off. The only way you can establish your authority with your stepchildren is just to make yourself head of the house in reality—as you are in theory—and tell them that while their mother's way of doing things was no doubt an admirable one, that it is now outmoded and that you have established a new modern regime.

As for your husband, have a plain talk with him and tell him that if he is still more in love with a memory than he is with you that you are leaving; that you are a flesh-and-blood woman and you are not going to play second fiddle to a ghost. That will wake him up, for the chances are that he doesn't realize how he is hurting you by his continual references to his first wife as a model of perfection and his giving you to understand that he considers you a poor substitute for this paragon.

Anyway, any man who is always throwing his first wife up to his second wife and who hasn't intelligence enough to know that a second wife is always more jealous of a first wife than she could be of any living siren hasn't got the sense of a fishing worm.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been a widower for the last six years and am now 48 years old. I had no thought of ever marrying again, but I have fallen in love with a girl of 22 and she believes that she is in love with me. I am amply able to take care of her financially and I know I will be good and kind and tender to her, but I feel that it is asking too much of any girl of that age to share her life with a man of mine. Do you think such a marriage would have any hope of lasting success? M. S. G.

ANSWER:

I think that twenty-six years' difference in age between a husband and wife makes marriage a mighty hazardous venture and goodness knows it is risky enough at best. You see the years dig an impassable gulf between the generations and though we think we can bridge it with love we cannot do it. Somehow, some way, there is a gap over which our spirits cannot pass and in the end the young are left on one side and the old on the other.

At 48 you think you are still young. You think of yourself as a mere boy, but you are not. You haven't the lithe muscles that you had at 22, nor the ambrosial locks, nor the same waist measure, nor the same tastes and habits. You don't want to spend your time running around from one strenuous activity to another, nor your evenings in night clubs. You don't want to shriek and yell with joy, nor to do dangerous and adventurous things. You have had your fling at the show and you are tired of it and want to go home and rest.

This young girl, however, is just beginning to live. She is on her tiptoes. She wants to go places and do things. She wants to laugh and dance and be excited by all the things that are old tales to you.

So how could you be congenial when you do not want to do the same things? What would you even have to talk about when you could not even say "don't you remember?" How would you like being torn away from your fireside every evening to go to places of amusement where you would sit on the sidelines and pay the bills—a sugar daddy and nothing more—while she danced with boys of her own age?

Of all times, this is the worst for a man to marry a girl much younger than himself because the modern girl has revolutionized all of our previous conceptions of feminine dress, conventions and habits and is no more like a 48-year-old widower's first wife than a peacock is like a dove.

So many of the things that a young wife would do now would be bound to shock a husband whose ideas of feminine propriety were founded on the tradition of the nineties.

There are few sights more pitiful than that of the old husband who has to drag around with a young wife to keep her amused while his old bones ached for repose, unless it is the spectacle of a young wife yawning behind her hand with boredom while her old husband reminisces about the war.

Branch Notes

ST. LUKE'S BRANCH

The regular meeting took the form of a Harvest tea and social hour after the Harvest service on Thursday, and quite a number of the congregation attended. The program consisted of sing songs and vocal solos by Charles Coleman.

On Tuesday evening the members journeyed to the home of Ernie Bell to wish him bon voyage on his trip to the coast. After games and contests, Mr. Pammett made a short address, and Art Sayers presented Ernie with a fountain pen on behalf of the branch.

Through the kind invitation of Rev. Mr. and Mrs Bousfield, the branch are holding their picnic on Thanksgiving Day at Rev. Mr. Bousfields cottage on Ketchecum. Full particulars will be given next week.

The request for billets has met with very favorable response, but the branch is still short of number required. If you have overlooked this and can take delegates, will you please telephone Mrs. Forbes (1041) as soon as you can. We will appreciate your help.

ST. GEORGE'S BRANCH

On Thursday evening the regular meeting was held with the president T. Alcock presiding. Ken Gibson was elected from the branch to act on the nominating committee for the district council.

The members were reminded that they had to attend three meetings a month to be eligible to bowl. So dont forget bowling starts Saturday night at 7 o'clock.

The president turned the remainder of the evening over to the social convenor, Mrs. T. Alcock and her committee. The program consisted of games and dancing, Mrs. R. King presiding at the piano.

For refreshments fish and chips were served.

ST. JOHN'S BRANCH

On Wednesday night St. John's motored out to Nassau for their annual weiner roast. A bountiful supply of food and endless laughter proved the evening to be a success. About 55 members in all attended. The first item on the program of course was hot dogs and coffee, followed by various other sweets and bakery, fruits and candy.

Then the group joined in for a sing-sing. Alf Pooley led the singing with music on the guitar. A ghost story raised fear and terror in the hearts of all and after the last ember was extinguished all filed homeward to welcome beds and nightmares.

Next Wednesday will be a business session. Everyone is urged to attend as important matters will be brought forward. Florence Hutchison is still on the search for billets and any who can help will be very much appreciated.

ALL SAINTS CHURCH

On Monday last a short business meeting was held and a very interesting talk was given by Douglas Weir, the subject being "Tact and Talent and the Want of Decision."

On Tuesday evening an executive meeting was held at the home of the president, and it was decided to carry out the scheme of last year with ministers of work, worship, edification and fellowship and their committees supplying a programme one evening a month.

The members of the Billeting committee are having some difficulty in finding billets for the out-of-town delegates for the conference from October 20-23rd. Our branch has 175 billets to secure and up to the present only 60 have been arranged for. Any help that can be given will be greatly appreciated. Please get in touch with Edith Abram, Brown street, phone 3359J.

Bowling starts off on Saturday night. Will all members please be at the alleys at 7.00 o'clock sharp.

Princess Enjoys Making Sketches

Led perhaps by the example of her two aunts, the Duchesses of Gloucester and Kent, the Princess has taken up sketching with enthusiasm.

Views of Balmoral provide her with plenty of picturesque detail, and she has made efforts to sketch the Corgis belonging to her and to Princess Margaret.

Care of Garment Determines Life

The college girl who is firmly resolved to be one of the neatest, most perfectly groomed co-eds on the campus, but who has no intention of missing any fun in order to keep herself and her clothes in good order, should shop this month with these ideas in mind.

Naturally, some clothes are easy to keep clean. Sweaters, for example.

To wash a sweater, first place it flat on a piece of paper, then make pencil dots around it. Put this aside. Now put the sweater in a bowl of lukewarm (not hot) soapy water. Squeeze (do not rub) the garment for several minutes. Rinse once, then squeeze again in thick suds. Afterward, rinse several times. Wrap in a bath towel and press out the excess water. Unwrap and place the sweater on the paper, making sure that it touches the dots all the way around. Let it dry on the paper. About the worst thing you can do is to hang it on a line.

Clean your own silk and wool dresses yourself. Simply buy a gallon of non-inflammable cleaning fluid for home use and follow directions carefully.

Remember, of course, that the care you give any dress or outfit you own determines to a large extent the amount of service it will give. If you clean it often, brush it even oftener, always hang it on a shoulder-shaped hanger the minute you take it off, letting it air before you put it in a closet, and try not to wear it two days in succession, it will keep its shape and look fresh and new a great deal longer than you expect.

Three Doctors Testify As To Ailments

Expert medical testimony from three doctors featured the Supreme Court action Friday here in the case of Cyril Rice versus Herbert Mason for an unstated amount of damages. Court resumed at nine o'clock this morning with the defence unfinished, and it is expected the case will go to the jury about noon.

Rice alleges that Mason pushed him and he fell across a stairs step, injuring his leg, in February of 1937, and the wound which developed and was described as a leg ulcer still requires a daily dressing.

Dr. H. Roderick, of Hamilton, told the court he had treated Rice for an infected finger on the right hand which was subsequently amputated, and explained that besides a sore on the calf of the leg, Rice had what is known as a bacterimia condition.

Travelled in Blood Stream

Such a condition, he said, permitted bacteria to travel in the blood stream of a person without multiplying in number, and if they did multiply the condition was known as septicaemia. He also described an injury to Rice's chest, naming the exact ailment as osteomyelitis or inflammation of the marrow portion of the bone. This disease was latent, he said, and a bump on the chest from a suitcase falling out of a rack on Rice's chest would not be the cause of the disease, but would precipitate it.

Dr. C M. Scott and Dr. J. M. O'Brien testified that the dog bite on Rice's leg had completely healed, but that the slightest external injury would make the wound break out again "Any break in the skin would give the bacteria on the outside of the body a chance to begin work and an ulcer would soon develop. Both doctors gave the history of Rice as they had treated him.

Drug Account

Myrtle Buchanan, druggist, produced an itemized account when asked to do so on the witness stand, which showed that from August 16 to March 8, 1938, purchases including morphine, nembuthal, gauze and adhesive amounting to $65 had been sent to the Rice home.

"You knew that Mrs. Rice had a baby about that time, didn't you?" asked Mr. Fair, counsel for Rice. "Yes," was the reply.

"And these supplies are the type which might ordinarily be used by a woman at that time?" "Yes."

Mrs. Mason, who prior to her marriage was a registered nurse, was the next witness. She described the arrangement between the three families occupying an apartment house on Aylmer street for washing clothes. All three, she said, used the laundry tubs in the Rice cellar. She also told how Rice had persisted in staying in or near the cellar while she or the maid, Mary Schiarizza, were doing the washing. He left doors open, left windows open and turned out the lights, causing considerable annoyance to the women, according to her testimony.

Why was your husband in the laundry on the morning in question? "To make sure Rice did not bother Mary Schiarizza; he came down in the cellar on Mondays."

"Why did Rice come down in the cellar?" asked Mr. Gordon, counsel for Mason.

Puttered Around

"I don't know; he always puttered around, fixing the furnace, putting out ashes and shaking down the furnace while we were washing," Mrs. Mason replied.

Before your marriage you were a registered nurse? Yes.

Did you see Rice's leg before he was bitten by a dog in June, 1936? "Yes, in 1935 he had an open sore and showed it to me, once when he was dressing it."

"That was a year before the dog bite?" Yes.

Did he ever show you an arm injury? Yes, he showed me his arm and said an infection had set in from a hypodermic needle. He threatened to sue Nicholls Hospital at that time.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fair, Mrs. Mason was asked if she had locked Rice out of his own cellar.

"Not particularly. I locked the door when he went out the side."

"But you wouldn't let him back in when he pounded on the door?" No, I wouldn't.

"Why couldn't these two families get along?" interjected Judge Urquhart.

"Everyone got along fine with Mrs. Rice and the child, but nobody could get along with Mr. Rice."

"Did Mr. Rice ever tell you he used a hypodermic needle?" Yes, he said he used a needle whenever he needed it, she replied.

Defendant Testifies

Herb Mason, the defendant, called to the stand, explained that Rice had been annoying his wife and Mary Schiarizza by his continual puttering around the cellar.

"Did he make any advances to the two women?" asked the judge. No.

He said that after his wife had complained about Rice, he decided to be in the laundry himself the next Monday morning. "I went to work at 7.30 and came back at nine, and sat on a bench in the laundry. Rice came through the cellar three times and turned out the lights each time. I told Rice, 'Now, Cyril, I want you to be a gentleman and stay out of the cellar when the washing was being done.'

"He gets riled easily," Mason added, "and was quite mad because the lights had been turned on."

"Did Rice ever ask you to pay for the lights?" No, never.

"What did you do when Rice wouldn't leave?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"I took him by the shoulders, turned him around and gave him a push towards the stairs." He ran towards the stariway and tripped on the bottom step, sort of falling up the stairs.

"Did you push him hard enough to make him fall?"

"I certainly did not," Mason replied. He fell because he was running away. He was always in a hurry."

"Don't you think a man has the right to tend his furnace whenever it needs it", asked the Judge.

"Of course, but it wouldn't need to be shook down three times in less than an hour, and the door to the furnace room left open each time while a washing was being done," the witness replied.

Dr. C. M. Scott called as the last witness before court adjourned said he had treated Rice for the following. Abscess on foot, August 1, 1935. Dog bite on leg, June 27, 1936. Ulcer on same leg, February 21, 1937.

Compulsory Pasteurization Of Milk Became Effective In City Today

Compulsory pasteurizing of milk for sale and distribution in all cities and towns in Ontario becomes effective to-day. Vendors of raw milk have been forced to go out of business or equip themselves with pasteurizing plants. In some instances here and there the distributors have arranged to have their milk treated at pasteurizing plants already established.

Four or five Peterborough vendors are planning to continue the business they have built up. Dr. G. Murray Fraser, M.O.H., told the Examiner to-day that L. J. Clancy of Otonabee, Whitfield and Morrison of North Monaghan, Merit of Ashburnham and Fred Cox, east of the Lift Lock, and possibly Hetheringtons were building their own plants.

If any of them had their plants ready to begin operations at once, they simply required a certificate from the Ontario Department of Health declaring that the equipment and method of processing had been officially approved.

After December 31 next a further group of municipalities will be designated as pasteurizing areas, completing the scheme. Milk, cream, chocolate drinks, and buttermilk must be pasteurized; in short, all milk products except butter and cheese.

There are no exemptions, nor is there anything in the statute providing for extensions until pasteurizing plants in course of construction are completed. The local Board of Health and the M.O.H. are required to prevent the sale of raw milk in the city. Nor can cream and milk be sold on the market by producers.

Dr. Farser said there were four cream vendors usually on the market, and twelve milk distrbutors in the city. They are all affected by the new amendment to the Public Health Act.

Five Candidates Are Seeking Tory Nomination

The political pot is beginning to boil in the Hasting - Peterborough constituency where no fewer than five candidates are now campaigning for the Conservation nomination at the convention which is to be held in Marmora on November 12.

The only aspirant from the Peterborough end of the riding is T. P. Lancaster of Havelock, former member of the legislature whose hat is already in the ring and who is pushing his candidature vigorously. The other candidates for the nomination are Dr. Lumb of Bancroft, Reeve Thompson of Rawdon township, George White, a Madoc lawyer and the former Conservative member for the riding Dr. A. T. Embury, who although now a resident of Ottawa is seeking the right to once more carry the Conservative banner in Hastings-Peterborough.

Mr. Lancaster attended an organization meeting at Apsley on Friday night.

British Royal Air Force recruits totaled 5,269 in 10 weeks.

Church Council To Continue Salary Probe

TORONTO, Oct. 1 (C.P.).—Commissioners to the eighth General Council of the United Church of Canada were en route to their homes to-day after a ten-day session in Trinity United Church here.

The Council closed last night after a day in which a variety of matters were disposed of. Next meeting of the Council will be held at Augustine United Church, Winnipeg, in 1940.

During the course of the final day's sessions the Commissioners participated in a short service of thanksgiving for the peaceful settlement of the European situation.

Throwing out a committee's recommendation for the inauguration of a fund for the co-ordination of ministerial salaries, the Assembly decided to continue the Central Emergency Fund. Ministers will be required to support this fund on the same basis as that proposed by the committee for the co-ordination of salaries. Under the latter, congregations as well as ministers were to be asked to contribute equal amounts.

More Salary Debate.

The matter of ministerial salaries will also be studied further by a committee to be appointed by the Executive Council.

Discussion of a report by the Committee on the Church and International Relationships took up much of the time in the closing sessions. The Council called upon statesmen of the world to multiply efforts for peace and justice and urged the maintenance and extension of democracy.

Commissioners voted support for the League of Nations, declaring it was still "in spite of its weakness, the strongest political instrument for peace there is." Opposition to anti-Semitism was pledged.

During the course of the debate Rev. R. O. Jolliffe, a West China missionary, make a stirring appeal against export of war materials to Japan.

Dr. Dafoe Wins

CHICAGO, Oct. 1—(AP). — Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe returned to-day to "my five little girls"—the Dionne quintuplets—after winning dismissal of a $1,000,000 damage suit.

The suit was filed by Ivan Spear, a Chicago promoter who signed a contract for exploitation of the quintuplets with their father, Oliva Dionne, soon after their birth.

Compulsory Insurance For Taxis Discussed By Police Commission

The compulsory insurance clause in the propose dtaxi bylaw was discussed at considerable length at a special session of the Police Commission Friday afternoon, at which was present a large representation of local taxi owners with T. J. Carley K.C. in attendance in their interests.

While not opposed to insurance the attitude of the taxi men was that the rates which they would have to pay were too high and out of all proportion to those which ordinary car owners are charged. They claimed that Peterborough taxis have been in a relatively small proportion of accidents and the rate for insurance in their case was as unreasonable.

"My own opinion is" said Judge Smoke "that any person who cannot afford to pay the $85 or so a year required to provide insurance protection should not be in the business. He cannot afford to drive a taxi."

It was decided to defer final action on the insurance question until a later meeting. In the meanwhile the secretary of the commission will secure information from other cities similar in size to Peterborough as to what they do in regard to compulsory insurance for taxis.

It was developed during the session that not a single taxi in operation in Peterborough carries public liability insurance.

Among other points settled during Friday's session was that the rate to be charged for automobiles for funeral service would be $3 per car.

Bonus Cheques Being Cashed

Employees of the Quaker Oats Company were cashing their semi-annual bonus cheques Thursday evening, and obviously they were all mighty happy about it. "Nothing new to that" said one of the men, "we get the bonus, on the first of April and the first of October. The company splits it in two, instead of waiting until the end of the year and distributing then in one sum. We've been getting the bonus for a number of years now, and the surprise and novelty has worn off a bit, but it is always very welcome."

WASP STARTS TROUBLE

DEPOSIT REQUIRED.

New residents who make application to the Public Utilities Commission for domestic service and who are employed at work of a transient nature, will be required to pay a deposit before such service is installed, according to a resolution adopted by the Commission yesterday. A similar ruling will apply to "mushroom" commercial applicants such as hot dog stands, booths of one kind and another, and others. The Commission has been "stung" a few times during the past summer by such power buyers, it was reported.

Veteran Blacksmith Marks Fifty-eighth Wedding Anniversary

One of the oldest active blacksmiths in Ontario is William Nichols of Bridgenorth, 78, now in his 61st year at the trade. To-day he and his wife are celebrating their 58th wedding anniversary.

He has been blacksmithing pass from one of the most reliable and prosperous trades into the doldrums. He has watched the steady increase in use of motor cars and tractors, knowing that every additional one meant the loss of a customer to him, the lessening of his opportunities to earn a livelihood.

When he served his apprenticeship in Lakefield with the late Jacob and John Isbister and for many years afterwards, smithing in this vicinity was a steady and an important job. But now customers are scarce although his wife says "he gets all he's able to do at his age."

In the old days every farmer who had a horse had it shod "every six weeks regular as clockwork." But now many of them get their animals shod anly twice a year, while others are never shod at all. "The horses don't go out on the roads much any more, all that is done by truck," was Mr. Nicholl's explanation. Horses are used only in the fields, travel much shorter distances and over soft ground, consequently need not so much attention.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls were born near Bridgenorth, have lived all their lives in the district. They have three sons, Albert, Wesley and Wallace Nicholls, and two daughters, Mrs. W. J. Mann of Bridgenorth and Mrs. Robert McKee of Peterborough. They have 10 grandchildren and a great grandson.

Charged with drunken driving Alfred Marshal was arraigned before Magistrate O. A. Langley K. C. in police court this morning. He pleaded not guilty and asked for a week's adjournment. Crown Attorney McElderry, however, declared that there might be other charges against the accused and insisted on a remand, bail being fixed at $500. The case will be heard on Thursday next.

A NARROW ESCAPE

George Hickey, 20, had a narrow escape from serious injury at the intersection of Reid and McDonnel streets Friday when the bicycle on which he was riding was hit by a motorcar driven by Max Meharry of Lakehurst. Hickey was riding south on Reid street and Meharry driving west on McDonnel street when the crash occurred. The cyclist was thrown to the pavement but escaped unhurt but his bicycle was badly damaged.

APPLAUSE FOR CHAMBERLAIN.

Local regard for Neville Chamberlain was indicated at the Capitol Theatre on Friday night by outbursts of applause on two occasions in the showing of the news films of the now famous meeting at Berchasegaden. It was as sharp as it was spontaneous. Peterborough audiences are usually reserved and not easily moved to letting themselves go in expressions of approval,

Dentist's Task Proved Light

The semi-annual dental survey which has recently been completed at the plant of A. Wander Limited, manufacturers of Ovaltine, confirms once again the statement which has often been made by members of the dental profession, that where the mouth of the patient has been put in a healthy condition, it is not a difficult task to maintain it in that condition, provided the full-co-operation of the patient is forthcoming.

The regular examination and attention which is given to the teeth of those employed by Messrs. A. Wander Limited, manufacturers of Ovaltine, has proved its value in that no major work has been found necessary following the recent examination.

PETES REPLY TO CREIGHTON MINES BASEBALL CRITICISM

States Petes Were Drawn Against T.A.B.A.

Considerable controversy has arisen over the O.B.A. semi-final senior playoffs, and the Peterborough Club appears to be right in the middle of it. Creighton Mines Club wanted to play the Petes the two-in-three series in Peterborough, while Toronto and Stratford meet in the other bracket. However, the Petes felt the northerners wanted too much financial guarantee, without offering anything in return, so they declined. The O.B.A. also tried to arrange the series but it fell through, and some decision will be reached at a meeting today in Toronto.

Makes Reply

Following a critical article in the Sudbury Star, directed at the local club this week, Secretary James Dorris of the Peterborough Baseball Club sent the following letter:

"Mr. T. J. Birney,
Copper Cliff, Ontario.
Dear Sir:

Have just read an article in the sports column of the Sudbury Star in reference to the proposed playoffs between the Creighton team and ourselves and I want to explain the position of the Peterborough Club and why we acted as we did.

In the first place we could not attempt to put up a guarantee of three to four hundred dollars on a series here without insurance as we are not financially able. Had we been advised on Monday which would have given us five clear days we could have insured the game and taken you on. We had a screwy league here all year—three teams till the end of June and only two teams after that. You are aware of what happened. We only played nine league games all season, two of which were played through a rain storm so we had no chance to get any returns at the gate, however that's not the main fly in the ointment.

To Meet Toronto

We were drawn against the T.A.B.A. winners in the playdown—you know that. Toronto allowed five softball players to go to Chicago and hold up their play-offs for a whole week. What your club or ours would be told by the O.B.A., and rightly so, if we pulled such a stunt might not look good in print, but Toronto can get away with murder. We waited for over two weeks after our series was over with Oshawa and no winner was yet decided in Toronto. To help out the O.B.A. and speed up the schedule we consented to go to Niagara Falls and play them—jump of one hundred and eighty miles. Understand we did not have to go. We won and then when T.A.B.A. at last produced a winner last Friday we were not even considered but Toronto was drawn against Stratford. That's what burns us up and the O.B.A. have not yet explained to us why such an arrangement took place. We had sat back and waited for Toronto as we were drawn, we would be playing them this week, and the Falls would be playing against Stratford leaving you still sitting on the fence, and it is because we got the merry run around by the O.B.A. that we're not for taking any more of it from them, regardless of the consequences. We don't blame you for feeling sore but after you know our side of it please don't put the whole blame on the Peterborough Club. The O.B.A. won't take any step to help you or us out on an expensive series, but we must take the whole gamble so they can get their pound of flesh out of the extra gates. We are not taking the gamble.

They now propose putting the names of the three teams in a hat on Saturday and arrange the draw accordingly, which means you may have two trips to Southern Ontario if you were drawn against and then knocked off one of us, and had to come back to play the survivor, but we have not consented to any such arrangement. What the future holds we don't know but at least you must feel we had some justification in any action we took this week.

You are at liberty to publish or use this letter any way you wish, as I am handing a copy of it today to the press.

Yours very truly,
J. J. DORRIS,
Secretary."

To F. Dearborn goes the honor of winning the club singles for the season 1938, and to R. Herman goes the honor of winning the Examiner Cup for novice players.

We had not the privilege of seeing these games, but we are told that the final novice game between R. Herman and J. Baird was a thriller, finishing up 21-12. The other final between F. Dearborn and R. Herman proved that a good big man can defeat a good little man, Fred having a little too much experience for his opponent. However we congratulate them both.

Dr. Graham defeated C. Blewett for third place in the novice competition, so here is how it now stands:

Examiner Cup (novice players)—1, R. Herman; 2, J. Baird; 3, Dr. Graham; 4, C. Blewett.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

ORFUNS will not have a heavy senior O.R.F.U. squad this semester, that's a cinch. They will build their offence accordingly—probably specializing in forward passing and sequence plays off the forward heaves. They will have a comparatively light, fast squad. They appear to have plenty of speed, several good throwers and at least four gees who can take a pass well and keep galloping. Defensively, they are shaping up well and ought to just about hold their own against burly rival plungers. The kicking department is still a question-mark. On the whole, the club is lining up pretty fair and, while they won't win a title their first time out, the players will not look outclassed by any big margin in against Sarnia, Balmy Beach and Montreal Nationals. And paste this in your fedora and take a peek at it the middle of November!

• • • • • •

AT A GUESS, we'd say the average weight of the Orfuns is about 170 pounds—that is, as close as we can guess with most of the locals weights listed. Another 10 to 15 pounds per man would be lovely, but the Orfuns will have to play faster and trickier football, like the Mo'real Cubs, than the others to offset any weight advantage. Only two players bump the beam at better than 200 pounds, Bill Flack at 206 and Herb Hendrie at 201. Al Winslow is 198, Harry Marsh 196, Johnny Shields 190, Mike Loucks 185, and Pup Curtin and Curly Krug 180 apiece. All good respectable rugby weights in any class of competition.

• • • • • •

They Oughta Eat More

ST. THOMAS SCRIBE seems to gloat a bit: "It is strange," says he, "how some of the greatest preseason ball teams are rubbed out of the playoff picture so quickly. If Niagara Falls had even forced Peterborough to a third and deciding game it wouldn't have been so bad but to be eliminated in two straight was a pretty sore touch for Mickey Paige. He told us early last summer that he hoped his team and London would meet in the finals. Both clubs are out and Stratford is playing Toronto. It would appear that the Petes have something this year. And this doesn't apply only to baseball. Their new senior O.R.F.U. team is said to be strong enough to make opponents sit up and take notice. So perhaps it's the East's year in amateur sport." We hope.

Gosh, We're Awfully Awful

WE ARE a terrible bunch of bums down this way, a dispatch from the Sudbury sheet would indicate. Highly indignant because the Petes didn't guarantee them a substantial sum to come here for the O.B.A. semi-finals, the Creighton Mines officials (neglecting to say why they didn't guarantee us something to go there) blast the locals plenty. Part of the item reads: "Freezeout tactics were attributed to the Peterborough club by Creighton officials. It is felt the Petes hope to stall long enough to cause Creighton to quit in disgust. Then the Petes would have an open field against the Stratford-Toronto winner." A four-power conference is being held in Munich—we mean Toronto—today to settle this issue.

• • • • • •

IT WAS 14-9 for the Petes in their lacrosse playoff last e'en here with the Inglewood-Caledon Combines. And a right smart game it was in front of a large crowd. Clean and clever lacrosse by two smart passing outfits, with the Petes looking a few goals better. Just how they'll go in Orangeville in the return joust Monday, we dunno, but are hoping the locals can make it two straight. Aside from some missed passes, they didn't do badly last p.m., but found it hard to work in close on the Combines' cord citadel with that husky defence and good backchecking forwards. The winner of this series steps right into Ontario senior "B" finals 'gainst Wallaceburg. We sorta expect the Petes to prance through to a title, but they've got to rub out the clever Combines first.

• • • • • •

Checked Up Like The Czechs

ALL THE PETES played good lacrosse, but spotty, only a few turning in a first-rate performance over the whole route. Still it was that type of game, with checks sticking closer than mazuma to a miser's fingers. Don Crowe had his leg twisted and was hors de combat the last part of the fray, and Jack Westonfelt was shaken up hard once. Magee went good but had no luck last eve. Emmett Creighton had a fine evening and the veteran Pete King was always dangerous. Shorty Reid and Ned Vitarelli worked hard, and Norm Worthy played a heady game. Red Creighton was hard to beat in goal, too. The Combines had several speedy, tricky performers and a good defence system. After giving the locals a lead at the start, they played on even terms the last three quarters. Fans liked this fracas, probably the second last one to be seen here this year. We hope.

A FEW STRAY PUCKS flying about. Two hockey coaches, Pick Hines of Baltimore and Tracy Shaw of Oshawa, were in town last night. Wonder who they were after. Bill Calladine has had several chances to move but isn't too keen on leaving the old home town. He is too good a puckist and ball player to lose, we think. Hines is said to be after a good goalie from this part of the province. Buster Martin, Lindsay's good junior coach has been transferred here by his firm, but may continue this winter to tutor the Scugog squad. Bill Jackson, who put his P.C.I.-ers through to the City League junior title last winter, will coach the local Colts in O.H.A. junior "B" company this winter, and he should make a fine puck pilot. No word yet on who will manage the senior "B" Petes.

Ching To Coach

We wouldn't speak with any degree of certainty, but it looks as if the days of broken bones and fancy stitching are over for Ching Johnston, ABOVE, for many years a mainstay of New York Rangers in the National Hockey League and last year with the Americans. Ching will spend the coming winter master-minding the Minneapolis Millers in the American Association. He signed a one-year contract that takes him back to the city in which he finished his amateur career.

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well Mac, outside the lacrossers coming through with a clean cut win over the Brooklin lads 20 to 7 in Lindsay, up No. 7 Highway from here Mon. nite, this has been a sorta mark time week in sport circles, the rugby gang working hard to get into shape for their campaign and the ball club working just as hard to keep in shape.

What's Next?

The Murphy gang is waiting now just to see what the O.B.A. magnets is going to try to do to them next. After the Petes hadda wait round for the Toronto winners to get decided and then was shot into a serious with Niagara Falls they naturally expected they would be tossed in against Toronto next. Nothing doing. Stratford was given the Toronto round and the Petes informed they oughta battle with Creighton Mines. And when the local management wanted to know how come the explanation of the baseball moguls was they thought Windsor would beat Stratford and they didn't want the Petes hafta make the long trip to the Border City so they was going to give the chance of a longer trip up north or to ruin the treasury with a big guarantee to northern winners. Right now they aint anything doing and just how the whole affair is going to be settled, well your guess is as good as mine, neighbors.

The Lacrosse Dope

The lacrosse lads tangle with the Inglewood-Caledon combines here tonite, Fri., Mac, and if they go out and play lacrosse and forget the fight stuff they aint a reason in the wide world why they can't take the Klassy Kombines and go into the Ontario finals against Wallaceburg, the western Ont. winners. The Petes has plenty of speed, teamwork and individual cleverness and if they concentrate on lacrosse I for 1 call on them to cop the title.

They ain't much to be said for rugby locally this week, Mac, but a week from now the final lineups should oughta be decided and everything set for the opening a week from Mon. against Nationals in Montreal. Boss Irwin has been driving the boys hard and the team is rounding into shape, speeding up their plays, improving their timing and generally begining to look like a football machine.

The Big Serious

Well Mac, here is the world serious right on us and we don't know yet which club is going to represent the National League. The Chicago Cubs which was 9 games back 5 weeks ago and was given a chance is now in front by a game and ½ and should hold it, although Gabby Hartnetts' pitching staff is about shot to pieces and Mister Lee and Mister Bryant has been carrying nearly the whole load for a month. If they have to keep on to the bitter end it would almost too much to ask them to step in there in a world serious and stop the Larruping Yanks but they is just a chance that the momentum of the Cubs' drive which has carried them to 20 wins in the last 23 starts may be enough to take them right through the money serious, particularly as the Yanks aint been looking like no world beaters for the last 2 weeks.

That is about the works, lads.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

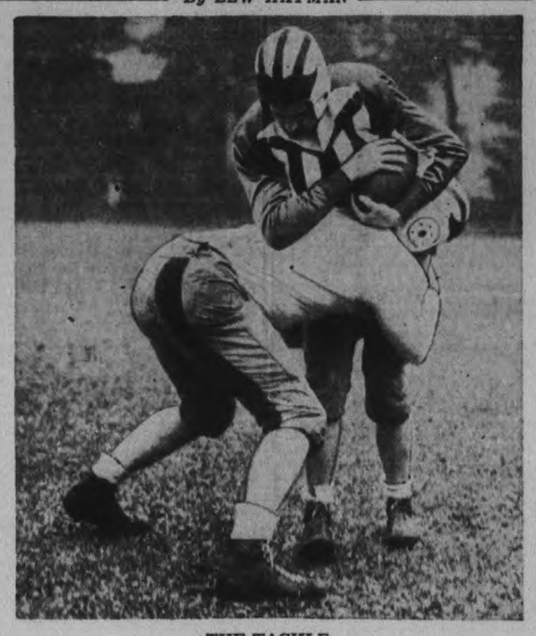
FACTS ABOUT FOOTBALL

When Tackling Judge Runner's Speed; Use Shoulder, Neck and Side Of Head

By LEW HAYMAN



THE TACKLE

This one is made from an angle, as are most tackles except in plays through the line. The tackler has hit the ball carrier between the knees and hips and his drive, or follow through, has moved him up higher. His feet are wide apart, head and eyes up.

Tackling is to the defence what blocking is to the offence. A team that tackles quickly and effectively is mighty tough to defeat.

There are basically two types of tackles, (a) the front tackle, used mainly in stopping plungers hitting into the line of scrimmage, and (b) the angle tackle, used in the open field and on wide line smashes. Both these types are executed in fundamentally the same manner except for the position of the tackler, which, as the names of the tackles imply, is in front of the ball-carrier or at an angle to him.

Good ball-carriers will not run into a tackler's arms or wait to be tackled, hence most of your tackles will be from the side, or angle tackles. In executing this tackle the first thought should be to obtain a good position. NEVER RUN DIRECTLY AT THE BALL-CARRIER. Calculate his speed and go for a point ahead of him so that you both meet at the imaginary point at the same time. Be careful not to underestimate the runner's speed. If you are near the side lines keep your opponent between you and the line, cutting down the angle so as to either tackle him or run him out of touch.

Start At The Right Time

Don't leave your feet too soon or you will fall flat on your face, not the most pleasant way to spend your time on the field. Run into the ball-carrier, giving him a bit of a lead, for remember he too is in motion and probably going pretty fast.

As you are about to hit the ball-carrier, keep your eyes up, duck under the straight arm with your head, and aim to hit him midway between the knees and the hips with your inside shoulder. Get your head and outside shoulder in front of the runner's body, and with the inside shoulder, head and side of neck DRIVE for power and a hard-hitting effort at the same time. The arms are thrown around the opponent's legs, squeezing the knees inwardly.

By keeping your body in front of the runner you have more chance of bringing him down and the chance of injury is reduced as you roll with the tackle.

Today's picture shows how the tackler's body is well across the front of the ball-carriers body, feet wide apart, for drive, with the shoulder, neck and side of head making the contact just above the knees, going up and through the opponent. Head and eyes are up making certain of the timing, leading and point of contact. In the picture, of course, the tackler's body has moved up in the follow through from the original point of contact.

Practice Indispensable

Tackling must be practised at least three times a week. The feel, the rhythm and the timing will come only with lots of work. A team that masters the art of tackling takes the fight and ginger out of the offence. It discourages and slows down the attack.

The more a ball-carrier is tackled and the harder he is hit the less effective he will be in carrying out his assignments. A good tackling team gives spirit, spark and dash to all its members.

Tackling is the most important fundamental of the defence. Tackling IS defence.

That gives us a pretty good idea of how to bring the runner down, but suppose you're the runner? MONDAY we'll talk about the runner and go over what is called the cross step.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1 (C.P.).—Horse-pulling contests are becoming as popular with farm people as harness racing was 25 years ago. Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule Association of America, says that's because a farmer likes to compare a champion horse with his own.

This year hundreds of thousands of people cheered horse pulling contests at county and state fairs from one end of the country to another. Most of the state winners will compete in a national contest to be held in connection with the National Dairy Show at Columbus, Ohio, October 8-15.

A team's pulling ability is measured by the dynamometer. Mounted on a small truck, this machine exerts tractive pull through an arrangement of weights, pulleys and hydraulic brakes. It was developed primarily to select the best horses and mules for draft work and to find the maximum pulling capacity of the horse and mule. In competition teams are divided into two classes—under and above 3,000 pounds in weight. Winners are determined by elimination, the tractive weight being increased in successive trials. The team must pull the dynamometer 27½ feet in each trial. Whipping horses is not permitted in contests.

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 1. — An enthusiastic crowd estimated as being one of the largest in several years attended the annual field day held at the Campbellford High School on Friday afternoon. A spirit of keen rivalry existed among all of those listed in the long list of events which began at 1.30 in the afternoon. Charlie Jeffs gave the most outstanding performance of the day when he out-pointed J. Beaver to retain the Senior boys cup for a second year. It was a big day for the athletic society, in fact one of the biggest in years since four new records were set. Bob Curle winner of the Junior boys cup set the first new record when he lengthened out the broad jump to 16 feet 11½ inches adding nearly a yard to the old one. In the shot put records were smashed in both the Senior and intermediate boys' section with Art Rowe lengthening the old mark by 2 feet 4 inches. He set a new mark at 35 feet 10 inches.

Ross Richardson added 7 inches to the intermediate boys shot put for a distance of 35 feet 10 inches and took the cup as well. In the girl's section M. Wilkens knocked one foot four inches from the old broad jump mark when she jumped a distance of 14 feet 5 inches and came within two points of the cup which was won by C. McKelvie. PETES COP FIRST LACROSSE PLAYOFF FROM THE COMBINES, 14-9

Senior Squads Battle Hard In Nifty Playoff Tussle With Locals A Bit Better

The Petes pulled out a 14-9 O.L.A. senior "B" victory over the Inglewood-Caledon Combines here last night to take the first of the three-game inter-group finals, or the first of the Ontario semi-finals. A crowd of close to 1200 fans witnessed a fine display of fast, clever and clean lacrosse between the finalists with the visitors always in the hunt. Next game will be in Orangeville on Monday.

The Combines spotted the locals a 5-1 lead in the first quarter but battled back to have a 4-3 edge in the next heat. The Petes looked a little better in the third with a 5-2 margin but were again outscored in the final frame, 2 to 1. The few penalties handed out were for minor offences, as both clubs turned on a speedy passing game and fought hard to get the first of the playoffs. The locals looked a bit superior on the home floor but had to hustle all the way to maintain their lead.

Spotty On Passes

Both goalies pulled off a number of good saves. All the Petes played spotty lacrosse, good and bad, with too many missed passes. Emmett Creighton, Worthy and King were the most consistent when they were in action, but the rest of the gang worked hard. The Harris brothers, Walsh and Nelson went good for the losers on the attack, while Puckering and Wilson provided a tough defence to beat.

The teams:

Combines: Goal, Chambers; defence, Wilson and Puckering; centre, H. Harris; wings, G. Harris and Nelson; rover, Walsh; alternates, Hall, Coulter, Rayburn, Dowling and Patterson.

Petes: Goal, R. Creighton; defence, G. Creighton and Westonfelt; centre, Worthy; wings, Vitarelli and E. Creighton; rover, Whitton; alternates, Chute, Miller, Magee, Crowe, Reid, Dundas and King.

Badminton Club To Start Monday

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Oct. 1.—Members of the Hastings badminton club held a meeting in the council chambers Thursday night for the purpose of re-organizing for the coming season.

On Monday evening next the season will open and continue three nights each week. An invitation will be extended prospective players to attend any evening and acquaint themselves with the game. A large attendance this year is being anticipated. Some of the racquets have been sent away in order to have them re-strung and in shape for the opening.

A dance in October for members and their friends is being planned but no definite date has been set.

Burns 'em Over

Although he hasn't been the ball of fire most people expected him to be this season, Master Robert Feller, above, the Cleveland sensation of two years ago, should wind up with a fairly good record. He seems assured of the strikeout championship of the American league with over 200 fannings to his credit. His closest competitor is hard-working Buck Newsom, of St. Louis Browns, who led in that department last year.

U. of T.-Balmy Beach Tilt Today's Feature

A struggle between University of Toronto and Balmy Beach for the Red DeGruchy Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the Toronto city championship, headlines the east's football card today as eight of the section's 12 leading teams go through final tuneups for a season which opens officially next Saturday.

Coach Warren Stevens' collegians will go on display for the first time this season when they meet Beaches, an Ontario Rugby Football Union threat. Beaches defeated Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four last Saturday to advance into the cup final against the Intercollegiate Union team.

The exhibition list finds the mighty Sarnia Imperials, champions of the O.R.F.U. pitted against Hamilton's Big Four Tigers; Queen's University against Ottawa Rough Riders of the Big Four; University of Western Ontario Mustangs playing the intermediate Dundas Red Bombers of the O.R.F.U.; and McGill Redmen as hosts to Royal Military College of Kingston, Ont.

Rough Riders Loom As Main Snag For Toronto Argonauts In Pre-season Expert Predictions

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Oct. 1 — (CP). — The safe thing in sport is to string along with the champion. So until someone knocks them off, Toronto Argonauts, the League and National titlists of 1937, must be considered the team to beat in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union this season.

At this date, a week before the opening of the Big Four schedule sends Argos against Hamilton Tigers and Ottawa Rough Riders against Montreal Cubs, it would appear that the bulky Riders will again provide Argos with their main opposition. Both teams fundamentally are the same as those which waged the knockdown struggle for the Union crown last year.

Shorn of most of the stars who performed for Montreal Indians, the newly-named Cubs do not figure on pre-season performances to dispute the Argo-Rider fight. Neither do Tigers, assembling under a new coach with a number of juniors and intermediates replacing the aging Tiger regulars who retired.

Argos have been weakened by the loss of eight members of the championship team, but it may be that they hold the answer to any questions about the Big Four championship in big Bob Isbister, an outstanding punter. If Isbister, at present suffering from a sore leg, kicks back to form, the extra yardage Riders undoubtedly will gain on the ground may go to waste, as in 1937.

Barker and Lewis Gone

Argos lost Reg Barker and Bud Lewis, their 1937 centres, and that section of the line may be slightly weaker with Red Vail and George Heen, a former University of Toronto star. But strong replacements came along for Bill Bryers and Leo Deadey, last season's outsides. The veteran Wes Cutler is assured of a berth and the addition of Bill Burkhart from Ottawa and Bernie Thorton from Queen's University fills the position capably. Thorton was a standout in the college circuit.

Johnny Edwards has retired to direct athletics at Queen's but the backfield remains strong with fleet Art West, Johnny Munro, another Queen's graduate, and Earl Selkirk as running halves and Bud Thomas, Doug MacPherson, Red Storey and Teddy Morris as plungers.

Bulk of the line duty will fall on Jim Staughton, Jim Palmer, Bill Zock and Dave Ferris with Art Evans, the team captain, as the key man on the secondary defence.

Argos, riding high as Dominion champions, were cocky and overconfident until Balmy Beach slapped them down 7-2 in the City series. Now they're "hungry" again and they'll be hard to stop.

Bucs Miss Elimination By 4-2 Score Over Reds In Second Game; Cubs Deadlock 7-7 With Cards

By Hugh S. Fullerton
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

There's a chance—more than a faint one—that the National baseball league race may end today just short of exhaustion for everyone concerned.

If Chicago Cubs manage to win both games of their double-header with St. Louis Cardinals where they couldn't break a 7-7 deadlock before darkness caught them yesterday, or if the Cubs win one game and Pittsburgh Pirates lose another to Cincinnati, it will be all over. Otherwise it can't end before Sunday, the final day of an exciting season.

There was a somewhat similar situation yesterday, but the Pirates pulled out by the skin of their teeth by whipping the Reds 4-2 in the second game of their twin bill after Cincinnati's Paul Derringer had let them down with five hits to take he opener 7-1.

The only thing that keeps that 1½ game that is Chicago's margin from looking as big as a mountain is that if the Bucs don't lose, the Cubs also must win twice. Two Pittsburgh triumphs and two defeats in three games for Chicago would leave them virtually tied, but by playing fewer games the Pirates would gain he edge of one percentage point, .527 to .586.

His 21st Triumph

Derringer gained his 21st victory of the season yesterday with a masterful mound performance against the Pirates while homers by Wally Berger and Ernie Lombardi in the fifth sewed up the game. Then it was turn about as Russ Bauers limited the Reds to four blows and made a double and triple himself while Arky Vaughan hit for the circuit and Gus Suhr whacked out three hits.

The weary Cubs, after getting a 6-1 lead over the Cards, couldn't hold it.

The rest of the day's action was confined to a doubleheader in which Chicago White Sox beat St. Louis Browns, 7-5 then tied them 3-3 in a game halted by darkness in the eighth. The Giants-Phillies game was cancelled because of rain.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

A BID AS A SAFEGUARD

IT IS UNLIKELY that either defender will suit you best if you [illegible] no trump contract, even if one of them has it badly bunched against you. That tendency in this direction constitutes one safeguard against the danger of weakness in that suit. Base your playing plans, then, largely on their firing other suits at you.

(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

After two passes, South began the bidding on the first deal with 1-Heart, North called 2-Diamonds, South 2-No Trump and North 3-No Trump.

When the spade 9 was led, South could see eight tricks in sight and the question in his mind was whether to attempt to find the ninth in the heart or diamond suit.

He correctly selected the diamond suit and as a result made his contract. The first lead was won with the spade Q and the diamond 10 led to East's J. The spade return was allowed to hold and the next lead was taken with the A. South then led another diamond and ducked again. East won and then switched to a heart. Declarer went in with the A and played to the diamond A. As the suit broke the diamond 9 furnished the needed ninth trick.

Declarer would not have been as successful had he attempted to set up the heart suit for, even if he ducked two rounds of that suit, the opponents would no doubt have gone after the diamonds.

Regulating Of Production Is Contrasted With Regulated Marketing

An article by H. B. Cowan of Peterborough, entitled "British Empire Market Plans", is featured in the October issue of "Country Gentleman," the premier magazine on this continent published in the interest of the industry of agriculture, also the oldest. It is produced by the Curtis Publishing Company of Philadelphia.

Mr. Cowan was one of the four representatives of Canada at the Empire Producers' Conference in Sydney, Australia, last spring, and with a thorough knowledge of the principles and ideology reflected and set fourth at that Conference. Mr. Cowan in this month's article contrasts the Empire plans with those of the United States in their separate efforts to solve the basic problems of agriculture. It is a long and interesting article sketching on the one hand the plan of the United States to regulate the production of farm products, and contrasted with that policy is the Empire project for controlling the marketing of the same kind of products, regulated production is contrasted with regulated selling or marketing. The purpose of Mr. Cowan is to inform United States agriculturalists of the program adopted at the tremendously important discussions in Sydney last March and April.

Problem Similar

A few quotations from the article indicate Mr. Cowan's treatment of his subject. The problems of United States and British Empire are fundamentally similar, he asserts. In both nations the economic position of a large proportion of farmers is desperate. Witness the steady increase in farm tenancy in the United States, the dwindling rural population in the United Kingdom, and the enactment in Canada of such legislation as the Farmers Creditors Arrangement Act, as well as similar legislation in Australia and New Zealand. . . .

"The United States seeks to regulate production of farm products. The Sydney Conference refused to consider restrictions upon production, at least not until an opportunity had been afforded to test out the effectiveness of alternative policies which were approved by the conference. . . The setting up of a possible government bureaucracy and the passing of the control of the situation from the hands of producers, was feared. . .

Surplus Problem

The approach of United States producers to the problem of the sale of surplus farm products, places chief emphasis on national remedies. The international complications of the situation are given but minor consideration. Empire producers took the stand at Sydney that the finding of a solution for national surpluses that form part of a world's surplus, to be effective, should be approached from an international and world standpoint. Whatever national remedies are then required should be set up and maintained in the light of conditions revealed by a continuous, world-wide consideration of existing conditions."

Mr. Cowan says the purpose of the Empire producers was to discover what means could be adopted of regulating, and if possible expanding, the sale of farm products of the Empire so as to insure Empire producers obtaining profitable returns therefore. The body of the article reviews legislation and other efforts by Empire countries to control the agricultural industry, arriving finally at the new approach from an international position. Mr. Cowan concludes with a review of the more important decisions which were adopted for future guidance, the establishing of commodity councils to maintain a continuous survey of world conditions of supply and demand, with authority to consult producing countries outside the Empire, seeking their co-operation in a joint effort to avoid disastrous effects of market gluts.

The A.A.A. farm program in the United States, he states, is recognized to be the most broadly conceived agricultural policy in the history of the world. "Should producers in the United States make a success of the gigantic program for the rehabilitation of agriculture to which they have set their hand, the producers of the British Empire will be the first to congratulate them and to seek to profit from their example."

for a climax was indicated by posters which appeared in streets of the Polish part of Teschen, a city which straddles the frontier.

Reply Amazes Warsaw

A previous Polish note demanded evacuation of Czechoslovak troops from Teschen territory as a condition for negotiations on Polish demands for the same treatment of its minority as Czechoslovakia accorded Sudeten Germans. The Czechoslovaks replied to that note yesterday, and the Polish government was said to have been amazed that it "dealt only in generalities."

This, they said, was a Prague "manoeuvre to evade fulfillment of promises."

(Controversy over possession of Teschen has raged since the ninth century and, more recently, since Poland and Czechoslovakia became independent states under the post-war Versailles treaty. In June, 1918, Polish and Czechoslovak representatives tried to agree on ownership of the district in succession to the Austro-Hungarian empire, but Czechoslovak troops occupied a part of the duchy in January, 1919. Attempts were made to conduct an internationally-supervised plebiscite there but riots forced abandonment of the plan. The conference of ambassadors induced Poland and Czechoslovakia on July 28, 1920 to divide the duchy.

during the carnival. Its holder may still claim his winnings, officials said. A second draw for a minature painting was won by Ernest Hutchison, Lock street.

Louis J. Pettit, president of the Kiwanis club, thanked all in attendance for their presence. Although he did not know how much money had been taken in during the evening, he was confident the carnival was a huge success. "I've never seen people spend money so freely. I think the war's settlement must have had something to do with it."

Successful Carnival.

It was a happy, gaming crowd that attended the carnival on its closing night. Bingo games, spinning wheels, lucky numbers' games, all were running at top speed from 7.30 until midnight. Hardly a single booth had more than a few odds and ends left when the show ended. One booth was "cleaned out" long before the carnival came to a close, others had little choice in prizes.

"It was one of the most successful carnivals we have ever had," said Mr. Pettit. Funds raised are earmarked for the club's work among underprivileged children.

Firemen and police stood duty throughout the carnival, had no difficulty in keeping the good-humored crowd in hand. Thanks of the Kiwanis club went to Announcer Dick Lush, who bellowed instructions to ticket holders and the names of lucky winners, and worked on various assignments all evening.

Archbishop O'Brien

That day has arrived for him as it arrives with the broader cycles of the years, especially when they expand to a quarter of a century. He returns in the dignity of an Archbishop, and none more than he appreciates, impersonally and detached from himself, the significance of that rank and responsibility in the long history of his Church. And since he cannot step out of the role in which destmy has cast him, he can show once more how dignity can enhance affection and warm the friendship that attracts him to his fellow men.

Those who know Archbishop O'Brien and who understand the honors recently heaped upon him, may still wonder whether anything else in his whole life time ever brought him greater happiness than those processions in Peterborough when he marched with the hundreds of Catholic men of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society who had solemnly promised to abstain from intoxicating liquors of every kind. He was younger, more impressionable, and he had all the zeal of a crusader in a cause that was close to his heart. possibly, that may have been his greatest accomplishment, placing the imprint of sobriety upon a whole generation of youth, and at the same time reclaiming and generally "straightening up" many of their elders.

A Boy of Promise.

Men beyond his years who remember the boy who was Michael O'Brien affirm that unmistakable signs of his vocation were noticed in his character and demeanor even then; and in the full meaning of that phrase that the boy is father of the man those witnesses of his development through school and college years and on down to the present say also that they have never been surprised at what he has done and been and still is. They remember him after his ordination as a personable, attractive, upstanding young priest, perhaps what his Irish forbears might have described as "a fine cut of a man." Soon he was absorbed in the work to which he had given, with the solemn act of dedication, his whole life, sublimating all his ambitions the affections of his mind and heart to the ends of that divine commission: "Go ye therefore..teaching whatsoever I have commanded you," and the quintessence of that command, "Thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself."

The words that would especially appeal to Archbishop O'Brien, then and now, were "with all thy heart," because they expressed the ardor that fired and propelled his undertakings. The lukewarm Catholic of flabby, spiritual muscles, tried his patience. He admired upstanding Christians, but above all and naturally so, the manly men of his own flock.

Hated Intoxicants.

And there was nothing mainly in the condition of intoxication. It was demoralizing, bestial. It separated men from God, and as it had to begin with the first drink, then there could be no temporizing, no concessions to beer or wine. The best way to fight it was the total abstinence. If some men argued that they could take a drink or leave it alone, the reply rested upon them to set an example to those of weaker will. an examplee to those of weaker will The answer was further, you are or should be your brother's keeper.

Dr. O'Brien as he was known on his return from Rome with his degree of Doctor of Divinity put all his heart into that campaign. The membership of the society rolled up into hundreds. It flourished for years. It had only one purpose, the making of better men, better citizens, men of stouter virtue, the providing of more material comforts in those homes where the head of the family wasted money on "booze", and where, as a result, children were deprived of opportunity, to say nothing of the full measure of love and care to which they had first and every claim.

If Dr. O'Brien could have thought of a more odious and sinister word than "booze" he would have used it without the least compuction. Some times there would be defections; but after all God did not make men perfect. Dr. O'Brien possessed some insight by which he could discern the disposition of the man whose resolution was sincere, but whose will power was not equal to some temptations. Then it was a duty of going out after the lost sheep and bringing him back into the fold. Eventually it became an understood duty on the part of members to keep a solicitous eye for the weaker brother, to be on hand at forks in the path until they became confirmed recruits.

For the weaker ones there was pastoral sympathy and pity and prayer, yes and exhortation, but the stalwarts in the cause were the apple of the chaplain's eye.

Loved Loyal Men.

Dr. O'Brien loved them for their manliness, for that two-fisted way with them by which they could look the devil in the eye. He loved them too, for their loyalty. Of course, who doesn't; but Dr. O'Brien possessed a talent in expressing by a light in his eye or warmth in his smile the satisfaction and joy men bore to him by their loyalty as Christian soldiers. And there was the same glow about him later for the Catholic men in the khaki uniforms of their country during those four years of war, a paternal pride in them. His interest was in all the soldiers, in the men of Peterborough's battalions, especially, but again his own first, those of his flock who were rendering to Caesar the things that were Caesar's. By that time, of course, Dr. O'Brien was Bishop of Peterborough, and many a man in khaki paid a visit to the Bishop's house before leaving for overseas, to go away with his blessing and the assurance of remembrance in his prayers.

Manly men, they were his quest; the salt of the earth. He asked primarily that they be loyal to God, and after that he could have no worry about their loyalties to their country, their home, their parents and wives, their employers and so on down the line. That used to be the familiar text of Archbishop O'Brien, and it never wore bare in his discourse.

At length came a new social technic, a new ideology of the liquor question. Men demanded that its public sale be cut off, and gradually the attitude of the Total Abstinence Society as a body became a feeling of being outmoded and finally it disbanded, with its literary and dramatic clubs, athletic and social groups and so on. Possibly changing times were about to finger it out any way, because the automile scattered most clubs or reduced their memberships to mere shadows of their former strength.

Assisting Vocations.

It was Archbishop O'Brien who inaugurated in the diocese of Peterborough a fund for the education of students for the priesthood. A collection is taken up annually throughout the diocese for that purpose. As Bishop he was aware that vocations were not found only among the sons of parents who could pay for a college and seminary education; and lack of money at home should not be a barrier to the son of a workingman who desired to enter the priesthood. That fund has abundantly fulfilled its purpose.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians used to be a rather strong society among the Catholic men of Peterborough. Today, presumably, it is gone. Son of Irish parents, himself, Archbishop O'Brien in the old days used to mildly discourage the retention of the Hibernian's society. He had an attachment as deep, no doubt, as that of any of the members for the land of his fathers, but he deprecated keeping alive a sentiment associated with a past that might as well be forgotten, and forgiven. Leave that to others, His Grace used to advise. You are Canadians, now; your children are growing up Canadians; there is no practical place here for a society of that kind.

His attitude was not downright and definitely adverse. It was merely an appeal to common sense, and eventually it had the affect he suggested.

These are only a few facts of the personality of the Archbishop of Kingston reflected from his career in Peterborough. He will be the guest of Bishop O'Connor during his stay in the city, will be at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday, and at the church of the Sacred Heart Monday morning.

Fifty Years Married On Monday

Buckhorn Couple To Mark 50th Wedding Anniversary

Youngest looking couple in this district to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary are Mr. and Mrs. Silas Graham of Buckhorn, who will be wed 50 years on Monday. On Sunday they will be hosts at a reception attended by large numbers of their friends throughout Peterborough county.

Although neither of them look their age by ten years, Mr. Graham is now more than 70, Mrs. Graham is past 65 years. They are living now on the farm on which Mr. Graham was born, a mile and a half west of Buckhorn.

Mrs. Graham was born in Smith Township where Mr. Graham moved when he was five years old. Both moved to Lakefield a short time later and it was there, many years after, that they were married — in the Methodist Church parsonage. They lived the first decade of their married life in Lakefield, 17 years in Peterborough, and 12 years in Windsor. Seven years ago they moved back to Harvey Township to the farm on which Mr. Graham was born.

The couple have five children, four boys and one girl. They are William Graham of Smith, George Graham of Peterborough, Sherman Graham of Peterborough, and Harold Graham of Detroit, and Mrs. Gerald Thorndyke of Detroit.

Worst Terms Nipped

The Daily Herald (Labor):

"Summing up, we must say that this plan is open to grave criticism on a number of important points. Nevertheless, Herr Hitler has had to abandon the most brutal of his Godesberg terms.

"For the first time, he has had to realize that there are forces in the world more powerful than the absolute will of a dictator.

"If there is to be any hope of real European appeasement it cannot be done bilaterally, can be achieved only at a conference of all the powers."

The Daily Mail (Independent) said the agreements were a triumph for Mr. Chamberlain and added:

"The nightmare of three days ago already is fading in the light of what the world trusts may be a new dawn for Europe. The grey hours when civilization stood face to face with the foul spectre of war should never be forgotten."

The News-Chronicle (Liberal):

"The face of war had come so deathly near by the middle of this week that the people could already feel the breath of its nostrils. There is none, whatever his principles, but feels intense relief at its retreat."

The paper called attention to the fact the four-power agreement did not include solution of Polish and Hungarian claims and added: "From the point of view of the Czechs and of our own security, it was a vital omission that Russia is not a party to the new guarantee."

Trouble Ahead?

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) foresaw trouble for the international commission in determining the racial areas of Moravia which it described as "like pieces in a jigsaw puzzle."

It called attention to the fact the Munich agreement envisaged amputation of the Polish and Hungarian minorities which were not mentioned in the original Anglo-French plan, but decided such amputation was inevitable anyway.

It declared: "Although the Munich agrement appears not unfavorable from the Czech point of view as compared with the earlier (Godesberg) plan it certainly eliminates the feature of arrogant dictation backed with a threat of force, against which Mr. Chamberlain had taken his stand at Godesberg."

The Telegraph also called attention to Chancellor Hitler's declaration that his European territorial demands were at an end, but recalled he had similar remarked "after retrocession of the Saar and reoccupation of the Rhineland."

The practical outcome of his promises, the paper added, "has been vividly impressed on our minds during the current year."

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOWNEYVILLE, Oct. 1.— The death occurred here Friday afternoon after a short illness of Mrs. Bernard Walsh in her sixty-sixth year. Mrs. Walsh had lived the greater part of her life in Peterborough until she came here a few years ago to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Vincent Perdue.

Surviving reltaives are Mrs. Perdue and two sons, Raymond and Cecil Ryan, Newark, N.J.

The funeral wil take place on Monday morning at 10 o'clock from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Perdue, to St. Luke's church, Downeyville and thence to St. Luke's cemetery.

69th Anniversary North Smith Church

With ideal weather adding greatly to the occasion, the 69th anniversary services of Wesley United church, North Smith, were held on Sunday and large congregations filled the church both morning and evening. Wesley church was opened in the fall of 1869, when Rev. Jones was in charge. The land was donated by Richard Graham, who was a member of the first church board.

The front of the church was banked with beautiful fall flowers of every variety and color, while palms, ferns, potted plants and leaves were used in profusion and the church was a veritable flower garden for the event.

At 11 a.m. the Rev. Fred Story of Toornto, conducted the service and the Curve Lake United church Indian choir rendered special music with Mr. D. Taylor as presenter and Mrs. Clayton McCue organist.

At 7.30 p.m. Ken Stewart, student minister of the church, conducted services and preached the sermon from Gen. 1:14. The regular chudch choir, directed by the organist, Miss Mary Nicholls, contributed splendid anthems.

The celebrations were continued on Tuesday evening, when the ladies of the church served the annual dinner. The tables were laid in the Orange Hall and a bevy of waiters assisted by a number of young men, cared for the large crowd.

Immediately following the dinner talent from St. James' United church, Peterborough, presented a play entitled "All in the Family."

Free Corps headquarters in Bayreuth, Germany, forbade members to cross the border singly or in groups without special permission.

The instructions apparently were issued to hold the Free Corps back to let their passions cool and avoid risking bloodshed.

It will surely go down in future German history books as a symbolic demonstration of German unity that "the liberation march" of the stolid, highly - trained, gray - uniformed troops began from Aigen, in Austria, which less than seven months ago became a part of greater Germany.

Clocks in city hall and church towers had sounded only the first stroke of midnight, when the first small "token" contingent of 600 crossed into Sudetenland as the vanguard of a main force scheduled to follow in several hours.

Army Anxious For Action.

Aigen, in mountainous upper Austria province, is at the southernmost edge of the border of zone one, which a four-power conference at Munich gave Hitler permission to occupy today and tomorrow.

Explanations were lacking for the nocturnal dispatch of the vanguard but it seemed the Germany army, trained to absolute obedience, wanted the glory of reaching in the shortest possible time the zone's innermost demarcation line at Krumau, 20 miles from the old boundary.

Zone one extends in a triangular shape northwestward to Stubenbach on the Czechoslovak-Bavarian frontier near Straubing. The Krumau population is more than 90 per cent Sudeten German.

As preparations for a quick and frictionless occupation of Sudetenland ended last night, Berlin started preliminaries for regal welcome for the fuehrer, who was scheduled to arrive from Munich shortly before noon.

Hitler was understood to have delayed the entry of the main body of men to take over the first zone at the request of the British Prime Minister, who feared a heavy nocturnal march might bread incidents.

Just how many soldiers would cross the frontier remained undisclosed early today, but the figure 30,000 was mentioned.

Special Three-Months' Course For Junior Farmers Starts November 29 In Keene

Announcement of a special three-months course in agriculture and home economics to be held at Keene this winter, most ambitious program of its kind ever attempted in Peterborough county, was made today by Frank Paterson, agricultural representative.

The course, which will open on November 29, will have daily classes from nine in the morning until four in the afternoon, taught by four special teachers. Enthusiastic about the possibilities of the course is its sponsor, Frank Paterson, who said, "It is college brought out to the farm."

Rounded Education

More than half a hundred pupils from Keene district and elsewhere are expected to attend the course, half of them girls. Only course offered here previously to compare with it was last year's single-month program. The new school will have all the advantages of agricultural courses offered at Kemptville and Guelph colleges, will give pupils attending a rounded education. The township council of Otonabee is providing the hall, but all other expenses will be borne by the department of agriculture.

A staff of four teachers will instruct boys in such studies as soil, crops, livestock, feeds and feeding, agricultural chemistry, botony, economics, English literature and composition, public speaking, civics, and co-operation in marketing. Girls will be taught foods and cooking, nutrition, chemistry of foods, clothing, sewing, home administration, health, nursing, English composition and literature, and other related subjects.

The three-months course is much superior to the one that lasted a month because project work — of which there will be a good deal— will be completed in the longer time, not left half done. There are only 19 schooldays in a month and pupils just get well into the shorter course when it ends, said Mr. Paterson. "In the three-months course they really get down to business," he said.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, October 2.

Sunday's horoscope is for a particularly lively and eventful day, with much stirring of a sudden and surprising nature. This may cause an upheaval, with change of plans and surroundings, and possible contacts with those in high estate. A new business or a new deal of major scope seems to underlie this, calling for splendid attacks and high-pressure activities. Finances, speculation, agreements with large corporations, diplomatic or political bodies should thrive.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a very important year, with major events climaxing much manipulation of powerful influences, political, diplomatic, financial, or fraternal.

A child born on this day may have large ideas and ambitions, with much initiative, enterprise and aggressiveness attracting the support of capital and attaining fine position, probably in a far distant place.

For Monday, October 3.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a very active and lively state of affairs, judging by the lunar aspects, but these will not be devoid of anxiety and friction. There may be enmity, jealousy, and open quarrels, although the undercurrents of treachery and pernicious plots and schemes of a peculiar nature may be most menacing. In connection with writings, publishing and promotional enterprises, there should be fine opportunities.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a particularly lively and enterprising year, although this important movement may be beset by envy, jealousy, trickery and quarrels, open and above board as well as secret and sinister.

A child born on this day should be particularly brilliant and versatile, with many intellectual gifts furthering a possibly brilliant public career, which, however, may bestir much envy, hostility and treachery.

BRITAIN TO BUILD UP ARMY, DEFENCES

Hitler Begins His Tour Of Triumph

Pledges Sudetenland Will Never Be Torn From Reich

By Melvin Whiteleather
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

WITH THE GERMAN ARMY IN SUDETENLAND, Oct. 3.—(AP)—Chancellor Hitler, triumphantly following the army across the newest border of growing Germany, declared today that "never will this land be torn from the Reich."

Welcoming Sudetenland within the fold of greater Germany, the Fuehrer told its inhabitants his greeting was "at the same time a pledge" and invited them to join "our march into a great German future."

He spoke in the market place of Eger, one of the "capitals" of Sudetenland, from a platform colorfully surrounded by flowers girls in their picturesque costumes.

"Over this Germany, this greater Germany, is its shield, is its sword as protection," the Fuehrer declared.

He stepped unexpectedly before madly cheering crowds at Eger, in the third and most populous of the four Sudtenland zones his troops will occupy before Saturday.

Hailed As Liberator

Almost half of the six minutes of his speech was taken up by the crowds, cheering and heiling their "liberator."

"I greet not only you, but the entire Sudetendland, which in a few days will belong to the Reich," he told them.

"Welded together in unity we must stand together. All must support each other.

"The whole nation rejoices with you.

"Your happiness is that of the 75,000,000 in the Reich that was hitherto."

The Fuehrer evidently was referring to the fact that Germany's population soon will be almost 80,000,000.

"Similarly your sufferings of the past period were also our sufferings," he exclaimed.

"In this solemn hour let us thank Almighty God that on our way thus far He has blessed us and pray that under His guidance our steps in the future may also be guided right."

Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten Nazi leader whom Hitler named Sudeten Reichs Commissioner for his work in behalf of annexation, accompanied the chancellor.

Hitler came into Sudetenland several hours after his army, which formally annexed the Asch-Eger region, heart of the territory, at 8:05 a.m. (2:05 a.m. EST.)

Salute To Peace

The man of the hour—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain—is pictured here in a symbolic pose. He might be acknowledging the acclaim he is now receiving throughout the world for the efforts that won a last-minute victory over the forces of devastation and death. No one can estimate the number of human lives spared by Chamberlain's successful fight for peace.

French Chiefs Aim To Steam Roller Munich Accord Through House

By Taylor Henry
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

PARIS, Oct. 3 (AP).—The French Government prepared today to press parliament for the strongest possible approval of its foreign policy, particularly its part in the four-power Munich accord.

Sources close to the government said the Cabinet planned to make a formal statement to the session convened for tomorrow and then limit the assembly to one address of eulogy by the parliamentary leader of Premier Daladier's Radical-Socialist party.

The government holds a powerful whip over parliament—since this is a special session it can order adjournment at any time.

But even if the government is successful, despite efforts of the Communists who are in open revolt and many Nationalists who are making common cause with them, it cannot conceal the fact that Germany's peaceful victory in Czechoslovakia has cost France dearly.

"Key To Europe" Lost.

Germany has taken over an area of Central Europe which Bismarck called "the key to Europe" and which French military authorities say will release 30 divisions of German troops for duty along the French frontier.

France has lost Czechoslovakia as the keystone of her eastern European policy. At the same time Rumania and Yugoslavia and Poland have been given a demonstration that they can not rely too strongly on their treaties with France. Probably they will now seek the most advantageous terms possible with Germany and Italy.

THREE THOUSAND Chicago youngsters had a dream come true. They saw a circus free, and didn't have to sneak in to do it. They were the guests of Louis L. Meitus, umberman, who started out to buy two ponies for his youngsters from a disbanded circus and came back with a whole menageric. To make the day complete, he fed the children 15,000 bottles of pop and 7,000 free pounds of peanuts as they watched the show in his lumberyard.

Escaped Convicts Wreck Stolen Car Police Shoot One, Catch Another

BLIND RIVER, Ont., Oct. 3 (CU)—Self-styled escaped convicts from the United States, one man is in hospital and a companion in jail after the reported theft of a Sudbury, Ont., cab-driver's machine. Police are searching for a third man.

Tommy Campbell told police the men hired him yesterday at Sudbury to drive them to Whitefish, Ont. He said when they reached Whitefish he felt a gun in his back and one of the men commanded him to "move over, we are taking your car."

"We are escaped convicts from the United States, so watch your step," Campbell said one of the men warned him.

One of the men took over the wheel and sped through Spanish, where Campbell said he escaped. The men continued westward but the car crashed into a ditch a few miles west of Spanish.

Campbell advised police and a squad of provincial officers set out after the trio, capturing two of them near the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks west of Serpent River bridge.

Police fired four shots at the fleeing men and one of the bullets apparently ricocheted and struck one of the men, who told police he was Harold Olsen of Washington, D.C. He is in critical condition with a bullet wound in the back.

Police said he admitted he was an escaped convict. The man in jail refused to reveal his identity.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., Oct. 3—(CP)—Kathleen Stewart, 11, of Pelee Island is recovering here today from an attac kof haemophilia. The child started to bleed Thursday after seven teeth were extracted here and she lost nearly a quart of blood during the next seven hours.

Dr. F. J. Snelgrove said the girl's blood refused to clot because of the haemophilia, and likely it would be a week before she could be returned home, where her father, J. E. Stewart, is manager of the Island telephone system.

Jail Mimico Coroner As Hit, Run Driver After Car Kills Toronto Cyclist

Toronto, Oct. 3 (CP)

DR. WARREN SNYDER, coroner of suburban Mimico for the past 5 years and a former University of Toronto rugby star, was arrested here early today after an automobile struck and killed Reginald Clements, 50, on a west-end street.

Clements, a bread company employee, was riding a bicycle enroute to his home when struck by a car which police said did not stop. Another motorist pursued the machine which struck Clements and Dr. Snyder was taken into custody.

Clements' body was found beneath a parked car 100 feet from the scene of the accident.

Dr. Snyder several years ago starred as a half-back with Varsity teams.

Prior to Dr. Snyder's removal to police station, Coroner J. P. F. Williams visited the scene and took a blood test of the Mimico coroner.

Clement's bicycle, the rear wheel almost smashed and Dr. Snyder's car were removed by police for further investigation.

A decade ago Snyder was recognized as one of the outstanding football players in the country, a kicking, running, plunging back who combined these offensive qualities with brilliance on the secondary defence

Chamberlain Says Nation Never Will Again Be Sole One To Disarm

Has Hopes Of General Peace Agreement Before He Resigns As Premier; Gives Czechs 50 Million Loan At Once

By J. F. Sanderson (Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 3 (CP Cable).—Prime Minister Chamberlain, addressing a tumultuous House of Commons, today declared fresh opportunities for disarmament have been opened as a result of the four-power agreement at Munich.

Mr. Chamberlain, who was firm in his defence of the Munich negotiations, stated, however, that "disarmament on the part of this country will never again be unilateral. We tried that once. It nearly brought us to disaster. If disarmament is to come it must come by steps and with the active co-operation of other nations."

Mr. Chamberlain said Great Britain will continue to build up the efficiency of its army and defences, but he believed that eventually disarmament would be made possible as a result of the Munch conference.

The Prime Minister said he hoped there still remains time for him to concluded a disarmament agreement "before I hand over my office to a younger man.

He concluded his speech with these words:

"It is to such tasks as that, winning back of confidence, gradual removal of hostilities between nations till they feel they can discard their weapons one by one; it is to such tasks as that I would wish to devote what energy there may be left in me before I hand over my office to a younger man."

Defends Munich Pact

With his speech punctuated by jeers and laughter from opposition Labor members, Mr. Chamberlain defended the four-power agreement and his "no more war" declaration with Chancellor Hitler.

The Prime Minister announced an immediate loan of £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) would be made to the government of Czechoslovakia, which had applied for a loan of £30,000,000. The loan of £10,000,000 may be increased when British government experts have studied the economic needs of the Czechs.

The day in parliament started with Alfred Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty who resigned from the cabinet over the weekend, defending his action.

He stated the basic difference in opinion between himself and the Prime Minister was that he believed in dealing with dictators with the "mailed fist." Mr. Chamberlain believed in "reasonableness."

Both before and after his speech, the Prime Minister was accorded an ovation by his followers. Members on the government side of the House left their seats and waved handkerchiefs and order papers.

The diplomatic gallery was packed by representatives of almost every country in the world. The Duke of Kent also was present.

Cooper Leads Off.

Alfred Duff Cooper, who resigned on Saturday as First Lord of the Admiralty, touched off the debate, which is likely to last for three days.

Explaining his position from a private member's place, Mr. Duff Cooper said he "felt lonely and isolated" when he heard Mr. Chamberlain, from a window of 10 Downing Street, tell a cheering crowd last Friday that he had returned with "peace with honor."

"That there was cause for relief last week, I am aware, but that there was cause for self-congratulation I am not certain," Mr. Duff Cooper said.

"Shameful! Hitler's yes-man!"

Mr. Duff Cooper, saying he had "a painful and delicate task" in explaining his resignation, declared he realized the majority of the House "is most anxious to hear the Prime Minister and that I am standing between them and him.

"The great defeat of our foreign policy of recent months and recent weeks is that we have failed to make it plain to other countries," he said.

He said Great Britain should "let them know where you stand and what, in certain circumstances, you are prepared to do."

Strong Stand Essential.

Mr. Duff Cooper continued:

"We have bene drifting day by day into war with Germany. We never said until the last moment—and then in uncertain fashion—that we were prepared to fight.

"Yet we knew that information to the opposite effect was being poured into the ears of the German leaders.

"Everything pointed to the fact that Germany was preparing for war and the one way that it could be prevented was by Britain making a stand and saying she would

Britishers Pack Churches In Thanksgiving

By Guy Rhoades
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 3.—(CP Cable.)—In icy rain and wind, Britons flocked to church yesterday to give thanks for peace. Westminster Abbey and other Metropolitan churches were jammed more tightly than at any time since the Coronation.

The Archbishop of Canterbury had set aside Sunday as a day of national thanksgiving. Other denominations also celebrated the passing of the war crisis. A solemn high mass was celebrated at Westminster Cathedral.

Saturday night people flocked to restaurants and dance halls around the Strand, Piccadilly and Oxford Circus. Englishmen sang German drinking songs in Jewish-owned restaurants. In one big Strand eating house that holds thousands or more, the patrons ate, drank and sang British war-time songs, barked for "John Peel," roared the "Marseillaise" and "Ach Der Lieber Augustie."

They yelled "more" every time the tired band sat down for a "breather."

Flower sellers did a roaring business as men rushed to get bouquets for wives and sweethearts. Soldiers,

$50 Orpen Plot Suspected Hoax

TORONTO, Oct. 3 (CP)—Police said today they were searching for a man who professed to know of a death threat against Fred Orpen, Metropolitan Racing Association officer.

Miss Loretta Morrison, Orpen's secretary, said a man telephoned at noon Saturday and asked for $50 to disclose a plot against Orpen's life. She agreed to meet him later and at a rendezvous at Gerrard street and Broadview avenue in east Toronto gave him the money.

She said he told her two men planned to kill Orpen and a police check revealed one of them is serving a term at Kingston.

Seventy-seven Permits Taken Out For Building During September

OFFICIAL building figures for the month of September show a new high in construction activity within the city limits and indications that the total for the year would exceed any year in the last five at least.

Seventy-seven permits with a total estimated value of $77,089 bring the total to the end of September and for the first nine months of the present year to the splendid total of $313,113.00. The list includes 8 houses, $23,650; 9 garages, $1,020; 1 warehouse, $2,700; 1 dairy, $4,500; 1 store, $2,000; miscellaneous, $8,219 and the addition to the Y.W.C.A. $35,000.

In September of 1937, there were 45 permits with a total value of $24,035 and the total permit values to the end of September last year was $194,542.00 which is $118,571.00 less than the nine months for this year.

Foreign Cash Of New Sudeten Spas Seen As Boon To Hitler In Drive For U.S. Trade Pact

BERLIN, Oct. 3 (AP).—Economic supremacy in the Balkans, an understanding with France and a trade treaty with the United States, emerge as new German land has been won in bloodless victory.

The Sudeten occupation marked the second time in less than seven months that the Reich's border had been moved forward. Austria was the first.

Germans reckoning of the future generally saw in the Munich four-power agreement for partitioning Czechoslovakia and in the British-German pledge not to war against each other a new morning in European relations.

It appears, however, that colonies have been relegated to the background momentarily. For, say those who know him, patience is Chancellor Hitler's motto and the time is not yet here to make the colonial issue paramount.

It is said, unofficially, that Chancellor Hitler and Prime Minister Chamberlain touched upon the question but briefly, sounding out each other on the possibility of returning Germany's war-lost colonial possessions by a 99-year lease.

Germany's interest at present appears primarily centred upon economics—domination of the Balkans as far down as Turkey and including Hungary, Yugoslavia, and Bulgaria, all of which countries Economics Minister Walther Funk visited on a recent tour.

Hungary to Lead Way

The country's editorial writers repeatedly have emphasized that Hungary, having swerved to friendship with Germany, is a first stone in the new central European economic structure.

Likewise, healthy economic relations with the United States have been stressed repeatedly by German officials.

Sudeten Germany, with its wealth or world-famed spas to which have come thousands of foreigners annually, may help fill the Reich's chest with much needed foreign currency. This in turn may play a decisive role in a German-American trade accord.

A Franco-German understanding also is looked upon as not far off. Premier Daladier's visit to Munich during Europe's most critical hours is interpreted as a first sign of a gradual but definite step toward ending the ancient thesis that each nation regards the other as its "arch enemy."

Third Call Made For Bren Gun London Papers

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—(CP)—A third request for the use of confidential British documents at the inquiry into the Gren gun contract will be cabled to London, it was decided at today's sitting of the investigation under Mr. Justice H. H. Davis.

The suggestion was made by Lieut. Col. George Drew, whose criticism of the contract in a magazine article led to the inquiry, and instantly concurred in by Hon. J. L. Ralston, government counsel.

"The crisis which prevailed a few days ago has passed, fortunately," said Col. Drew. "Any objection to making a request on the ground it might embarrass the British government at a critical time has lost its force."

"I concur absolutely," said Col. Ralston. "If Col. Drew will indicate the message he wishes sent I will

Czechs Offer To Appease Hungarians

Propose Commission To Settle Dispute; Poles Take New Land

By Alan Steinhopf
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

PRAGUE, Oct. 3—(AP).—Czechoslovakia today tried to lay the foundations of a new economic life inside the narrower borders of this once prosperous realm which has yielded to German and Polish territorial claims and agreed to negotiate the demands of Hungary.

With German and Polish military occupation of frontier regions proceeding quietly, the supreme economic council originally set up by Premier Jan Syrovy as a defence organization was considering the nation's new industrial and fiancial status.

Probably not until the end of the year will the borders of the new state—which the Premier declared "has the firm will to live"—be determined exactly.

The precise German and Polish frontiers are to be fixed by plebiscites. Prague is ready to start negotiating with Hungary on the dispute over the 800,000 Hungarian minority.

Most of Textiles Lost

Although the new borders have not been determined, the nation knew it had lost almost all of its textile industry, which ranks fifth in the world. Gone, also, was the entire porcelain industry west of Bohemia, many coal mines and much of the paper industry.

On the bright side of the picture was the salvaging of almost the whole iron and steel industry. The Skoda armament works and the Witkowitzer and Kladnoer Steel plants remained within the borders of the new state.

Prague and other cities were returning to a semblance of normal life. Soldiers were coming home, children were playing in trenches which had been dug in the park, and merchants were removing strips of paper which had been pasted on windows to prevent shattering during air raids.

An Orderly Retreat

Czechoslovak troops fell back in perfect order ahead of the occupation armies, the ministry of defence reported.

Between the armies was a temporary no-man's-land where for periods of 30 minutes to several hours there were no military authorities. In this strip between the

Truck Upsets In Path Of Freight Driver Roasts To Death In Cab

COBOURG, Ont., Oct. 3.—(CP).—W. E. Hannah, Front street, Belleville, was burned alive to-day when his truck went out of control at a railway crossing, just east of Cobourg. The truck upset on the tracks and the trailer swung around to trap the man in the cab.

Harry McCreary, Belleville, the driver's helper crawled out of the cab and with the assistance of P. Parks, Canadian National Railways section hand, tried to extricate the driver. However, fire had started and prevented further efforts of rescue. A Canadian Pacific Railways freight which had been approaching pulled up behind the truck. According to McCreary, they were proceeding west when they observed the train. The driver applied the brakes and the truck swung out of control.

Flames swiftly enveloped the cab and it was an hour before anyone could get close enough to attack a chain to pull it off the tracks.

Many new bus lines are being opened throughout Lithuania.

Jersey Crowd Burns Hitler In Effigy And Stones Nazi Bund Leader

Union City, N.J., Oct. 3 (AP)

MILITANT rock-hurling anti-Nazis today had thwarted for the second time in two weeks an attempt by the German-American Volksbund to hold a rally in North Jersey.

An infuriated crowd of 2,000 forced police to request Fritz Kuhn, United States Bund leader, to call off last night's celebration by his followers of the German asquisition of Sudetenland and of a traditional Bavarian festival.

The booing demonstrators, some of whom wore war veterans' caps, stoned Kuhn as Police Commissioner Harry Little escorted him from headquarters of the Hudson county bund to a waiting automobile.

They previously had made two attempts to storm the hall, guarded by nearly 100 policemen. They burned Chancellor Hitler in effigy and at sight of Kuhn shouted "Kill him." Fist fights broke out between bundists and demonstrators who carried banners of the American League for peace and democracy, the International Labor Defence and the Czechoslovakian societies of Hudson county.

Premier Consults Cabinet Before Telling House Reasons For Munich Peace

Opposition Faces Difficult Problem Fearing Government Victory If Chamberlain Tries Election

LONDON, Oct. 3 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain met with his Cabinet this morning, before telling Parliament his reasons for making peace with Chancellor Hitler at the expense of Czechoslovakia.

It was believed he presented further information on the four-power Munich conference and outlined the speech he is to make in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Diplomatic quarters said today that the Prime Minister likely would go to Rome in the near future to discuss a Spanish understanding, which would centre about the withdrawal of some Italian troops from insurgent Spain in return for British recognition of the Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

This adheres to the British-Italian understanding with which Mr. Chamberlain began his foreign policy April 16 but which has not been made effective formally because it was predicted on the yet unsolved question of foreign fighters in Spain.

Some reference to new negotiations with Mussolini was expected from the Prime Minister in the House of Commons today, after he reports on Munich conference by which Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany agreed on German acquisition of Czechoslovak Sudetenland.

Mr. Chamberlain also brought from the Munich talks a British-German agreement for consultations on all differences in the future, and presumably to alleviate French concern for this the Prime Minister yesterday sent a new pledge of Great Britain's union with France.

In a personal message to Premier Edouard Daladier, Mr. Chamberlain associated France with the spirit of the pact between Britain and Germany, and said:—

"I look forward to renewed and continuous co-operation with you in further efforts for consolidation of European peace through the extension of good will and confidence which so happily inspires relations between our countries."

Reliable informants said Mr Chamberlain was prepared to urge a Liberal British-French loan to Czechoslovakia to aid the little republic's economic readjustment.

It was understood that the Prime Minister discussed the Spanish situation briefly with Mussolini at Munich on Thursday. That conversation and subsequent reports

Easy-Going BBC Ways Impress Canadians

LONDON, Oct. 3—(CP).—Emissaries of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, Ernest L. Bushnell, General Supervisor of programs, and Jean M. Beaudet, musical director, are returning to Canada with a fund of ideas they hope to introduce to listeners in the Dominion.

The two officials came to Britain to check on the progress of radio and television generally. After conferring with chiefs of the British Broadcasting Corporation, attending rehearsals and listening to a variety of programs, the visitors declared they had been particularly impressed with the "easy-going" methods of the B. B. C.

"Our people in Canada cut their eye teeth on American programs with their rush methods," Mr. Bushnell said.

"We hope to strike a happy medium between the methods adopted in the United States and by the B. B. C.

"We heard as many programs as possible, and gathered all the ideas we can to take back to Canada and adapt them to our listeners."

Lad Proves Theory But Skunks Get Even In End

St. Petersburg, Fla., Oct. 3 (AP)

CRAIG PHILLIPS, youthful naturalist, proved an interesting theory but there were those who arched their eyebrows and asked "So what?" today.

Phillips believed it possible to slip up behind a skunk and pick up the animal by the tail without olefactory complications.

Sneaking up behind a mother skunk and her brood Saturday, he grabbed up one after another, the theory being that skunks spray only with their tails arched over their backs. All went well until he was faced with the problem of letting go. He had to eventually and the skunks sprayed in unison.

Millbrook Class To Start Quilt

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 3.—The September meeting of the Junior Missionary Auxiliary of Grace Presbyterian Church was held at the manse on Tuesday evening, with the president, Miss Muriel Ball in the chair.

Miss Agnes Johnston gave the devotional talk, and Richard Williams led in prayer. Ada Peers gave the treasurer's report, and it was arranged to have the October meeting at Betty Smith's home, each girl being asked to bring a block for a quilt, as this will be a work session.

The talk was given by Richard Williams, who in a most interesting and informative manner covered his trip to the Maritimes during the past summer, and especially his work at great Village, Nova Scotia, where he supplied as student preacher for his vacation period. Mr. Williams leaves this week for his fourth year at the University of Toronto, in connection with his theological course.

The president emphasized the need of the girls attending the public meeting, under W.M.S. auspices, in Grace Church on Monday, October 3, when Rev. and Mrs. Davies, missionaries at home on furlough from Manchuria, will be the guest speakers. Mrs. Williams served homemade candy during the social hour at the close.

Cases Are Adjourned In Police Court

"This case has been adjourned," said Arnold Nussey, McDonnel street, when a charge against him of illegally selling liquor was called before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

Magistrate Langley looked surprised.

"No one on earth except myself or some magistrate whom I might ask to act for me has power to adjourn the case," he told Nussey. "The case is not adjourned.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., explained that Nussey's counsel, a Toronto lawyer, had telephoned that he was busy in the Queen City today and would not be able to be present so that he wanted an adjournment.

"That is quite a different matter," remarked the magistrate. The crown did not oppose the request for adjournment so that by mutual consent the case goes over unto Tuesday, October 11.

A charge against Roy Courneya of the illegal possession of liquor and J. O'Toole of driving while his license was suspended were also adjourned to the same date as they are connected with the other case.

pass it on to the department of external affairs."

The commissioner said all counsel were agreed the communications marked confidential on the files of the Department of National Defence and coming from the British war office should be examined. These documents related to the award of contracts for the manufacture of Bren light machine guns to the John Inglis Company of Toronto, simultaneously by the British and Canadian governments.

The judge said it was most unsatisfactory to have witnesses say they come to certain conclusions because they saw certain communications from the war office and be denied opportunity to see the documents and examine the reasons for conclusions based upon them.

Pussy Reduces

FORT WORTH, Tex., Oct. 3. — (CP).— Workers at freight sheds unloading a railway car of flour from Manitoba here were surprised to find a cat among the bags of flour. The cat was in an emaciated condition and evidently had been locked in the car when it was loaded in Manitoba about four days ago.

France Resumes Normal Life Happy But Wary

PARIS, Oct. 3—(AP)—France jubilantly turned back to normal, peacetime life today, when it had expected to be at war.

Statesmen, however, kept a wary eye to the future as they examined the shifts in European relations already apparent from the Munich conference that brought peace.

There were spontaneous outbursts of relief all over France, among armed reservists who had been called for preparedness and now were being discharged, as well as civilians.

It was evident, however, that a growing number felt uncertain that peace bought at the price of Czechoslovakia would bring an era of security to Europe.

The Anglo-German friendship virtually a non-aggression pact, announced by Chancellor Hitler and Prime Minister Chamberlain was of first concern to this group.

Czechoslovakia's future as an independent nation was the second.

Many newspapers echoed opinion of government circles that the new friendship between Great Britain and Germany did not affect French-British cooperation, which has become the one basis of French foreign policy.

Isolating France.

Less optimistic observers, however, recalled Hitler's dictum in "Mein Kampf" the autobiographical statement of his creed, that a cardinal point of Germany policy must be to isolate France. These observers, therefore, saw the Rome-Berlin axis being extended to London, like a fence shutting France from the rest of Europe.

Despite this undercurrent of apprehension, there seemed little likelihood any serious attack would be made on the government at the special session of parliament called for Tuesday.

Chicken Supper Is Held At Bethel

WARSAW, Oct. 3.—The chicken pie supper at Bethel on Tuesday evening, was well attended. The program consisted of a humorous play entitled "a perplexing situation," by a group of young people from Fairview, in which four ladies prove that it is possible for at least some of the fair sex to live a whole day without uttering a word. Many awkward moments are passed, but everything turns out satisfactorily.

A piano duet by Misses Ann Franks and Fern Armstrong and guitar numbers by Miss Greta Reynold were enjoyed.

The Presbyterian Ladies Aid met in the church on Wednesday. In the absence of the president, Mrs. G. H. Crowe took charge. An interesting reading was given by Mrs. Theodore Douglas.

The W.M.H.S. meeting followed, Mrs. Milton Drain, president. Mrs. G. H. Crowe gave the Glad Tidings Message " interruptions in cheerfulness". Mrs. James Greystock read the study book lesson on "work among the Bihls."

The ladies are planning a missionary service in the church some Sunday morning after Sunday School session in October, when they can secure a special speaker. Lunch was served by Mrs. Douglas, Mrs. Milton Drain and Mrs. Trevor Watts.

W. A. Meets

Mrs. Arthur Payne presided at the United Church Women's Association on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Gordon Sharpe read a letter of thanks. All who can help are asked to come on Monday afternoon to prepare for the supper on Tuesday. Miss Lenore McIlvena sang "The Girl in the Bonnet of Blue." Mr. Wilkinson led in prayer. Mrs. D. Miller read part of "The sermon in the Hospital." After the Mizpah benediction there was an interesting contest which was won by Mrs. Harold Payne.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Stuart Clysdale, Mrs. John Morgan and Mrs. Arthur Payne.

Silo-filling is the order of the day. While the corn is not quite up to usual it is generally fairly good, though the last rain and wind tangled it, and on low ground made it bad handling.

Gordon Payne had a field of oats almost destroyed by the hail. Now he has a field of partly grown oats. If it were only Fall wheat it would be well started.

Zion United Church people plan their anniversary services on Sunday, Oct. 9, when Rev. Harry Wilkinson will conduct a.m. and p.m. services, with an entertainment by local talent and a weiner roast on Monday evening.

Chamberlain Says

be in that war on the other side.

"We should have been fighting in order that one great Power should not be allowed, in disregard of treaty obligations and the laws of nations and the decrees of morality, to dominate by bruite force the Continnet of Europe.

"We were always told that on no account must we irritate Herr Hitler. It was dangerous to irritate him before he made a public speech.

"Such reserved utterances as were made by the Premier and Chancellor of the Exchequer meant nothing to the mentality of Hitler or Mussolini.

"With new methods and a new morality they (the dictators) had introduced a new vocabulary. They discarded the old diplomatic methods of correspondence. During the whole of this crisis there had not been a German Ambassador in London and the German Charge d'Affaires had hardly visited the Foreign Office.

Action Hitler Understood.

"I had urged mobilization (of the fleet) for many days. I thought it was the kind of language it would have been easier for Herr Hitler to understand."

Mr. Duff Cooper said Great Britain must be prepared to fight against any other attempt by a nation to dominate Europe by force.

"For that principle we fought against Napoleon," he went on. "We fought for it against Louis the 14th of France and Phillip of Spain. "For that principle we must ever be prepared to fight, for on the day we are not prepared to fight for it we shall have forgotten our Empire, our liberty and our independence."

"I tried to swallow the Munich terms but they stuck in my throat," Mr. Duff Cooper said amidst Opposition cheers.

The resigned minister broke down and sobbed in the midst of his speech. He was unable to speak for a few moments and when he recovered his composure the Opposition cheered him.

Protesting against the granting of Germany's demands that some of her troops should be allowed to enter the Sudetenland last Saturday, Mr. Duff Cooper said:

"The German government having got their man down were not to be deprived of kicking him."

He also protested against the fact that Mr. Chamberlain signed with Hitler Friday at Munich an Anglo-German agreement "without consultation with his colleagues, reference to his allies, or communication with the Dominions."

"This is not the way foreign affairs of the Empire should be conducted," he declared.

Tremendous Commitment.

As a result of the Munich agreement, Mr. Duff Cooper continued: "We were left with the loss of prestige and also a tremendous commitment, as for the first time in history we agreed to defend a frontier in Central Europe."

Along with Germany and Europe's other big powers, Great Britain agreed to guarantee the shrunken Czech frontiers.

While Mr. Duff Cooper spoke in the Commons, Viscount Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, began a statement in the almost deserted House of Lords similar to that Mr. Chamberlain made to the Commons last Wednesday. He paid tribute to the efforts of Viscount Runciman to effect an agreement between the Czechs and Sudetens and explained the reasons why he was unable to do so.

Mr. Duff Cooper said now that Britain was committed to defend Czechoslovakia's frontiers, "we should maintain an army on the continental basis; we should quicken our rearmament scheme on a broader basis."

He concluded, amid Opposition cheers: "Although I may have ruined my political career I can still walk about the world with my head erect."

American washing machines will be introduced into Paris.

Propose Forced Service For Britain

LONDON, Oct. 3—(CP Cable).—The Times (Independent) today urged compulsory service as an essential precaution for maintenance of peace.

Editorially, it stated:

"The volume of applause for Mr. Chamberlain which continues to grow throughout the globe registers a popular judgment that neither politicians nor historians are likely to reverse.

"Much as the Czechs have suffered they have also shared in the universal deliverance (from war).

"What is now required as an essential precaution upon which peace may some day depend is such an organization of the manpower of the nation as will enable us all to know in advance and prepare for the part that we shall play in an emergency.

"To undertake some service should be compulsory."

London morning papers today examined critically Prime Minister Chamberlain's foreign policy and his statement that he brought back from Germany "peace with honor."

The Daily Herald (Labor) decided the war situation of last week was the "fruit of the foreign policy which has governed Great Britain and Europe ever since 1931."

Triumph for Dictators

"That policy has brought triumph after triumph to the dictators," the paper said. "It has broken the League of Nations and killed collective security. It has reduced British influence in the shaping of international events to the lowest level for 200 years."

"Failing immediate agreement for disarmament, we must redouble the energy of our defensive effort, especially in the air," The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said.

Rice Action Is Dismissed

An action by Cyril Rice to collect damages from Herbert Mason was dismissed without costs by Mr. Justice Urquhart at the conclusion of the Supreme Court Fall Sittings in this city on Saturday afternoon.

Riced claimed doctor's bills, hospital bills, reimbursement for loss of wages and salary and also cost of drugs and supplies which allegedly resulted after Mason had pushed him in the cellar of his home, causing a slight injury to his leg which developed into a leg ulcer.

The jury brought in a verdict indicating Mason had been guilty of assault but when asked the question: "Are the injuries complained of by the plaintiff the result of such an attack," answered, "No, the injuries did not result." The Judge therefore dismissed the action, allowing no damages or costs.

Rice was represented by W. J. Arthur Fair and Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., defended Mason.

W. J. Arthur Fair, counsel for the plaintiff Rice, is making application for a new trial on the grounds that the jury did not complete its verdict.

Another action concerning a mortgage in which Marguerite Lazure is plaintiff and Emmett F. Sheehy defendant. The plaintiff entered a motion through her counsel, Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., regarding delivery and taxation of the defendant's bill, if any, and Mr. Justice Urquhart ordered that the bills of cost of Emmett F. Sheehy be delivered within twenty days, costs of the application to be reserved to the judge trying the case. He refused to make any finding that the bills of cost referred to have any connection with this action, and did not decide whether the plaintiff had the right to taxation, but ordered the taxation for the purpose of the trial. He further ordered that upon payment into the court of $730.00 the mortgage for that amount held by Emmett F. Sheehy be discharged.

The order is without prejudice to the rights of either party in the action, which is set down for trial at the next non-jury sitting of the court.

"It was the best guess I ever made," said Mr. Archer.

Citizens Becoming Hunting Conscious Two Hunters For Every Duck?

CITIZENS of this city and district have become so duck hunting conscious that there are two hunters for every duck in the district, according to veteran duck shooters who have been out regularly on the marshes during the past two weeks.

On Saturday morning the season opened south of Highway No. 7 and there were plenty of the birds but the weather was clear and the ducks were flying high. At Keene the parking ground resembled Riverside Park during a ball game, with cars from all parts of Eastern Ontario jammed in closely. At Second Bridge the same condition prevailed and in the words of one hunter "It was just like Vimy Ridge when the barrage opened up."

Bags were light although most of the skilled marksmen brought home at least a pair and several had between seven and ten apiece. In a few spots which were easily reached the hunters practically stood shoulder to shoulder aiming and firing at the high-flying water fowl.

We Noticed

With its grey stone wall brightened by clinging ivy that glows blood-red in the sunlight; a background of blazing russets, scarlets and golds; a foreground of gorgeous-hued flowers that still flaunt their hardy blooms at each side of wide steps . . historic old St. John's Church is even lovelier in Autumn than at any other season of the year.

Sunday morning church-goers who answered the call of clear chimes that rang out over the city from this stately church on the hill's brow were awe-inspired by its beauty. To look upon it brought peace to the soul, and worship into the heart of the ONE for whom it was built.

450 Children Enjoy 'Y' Party

The Y.W.C.A. Gymnasium on Saturday morning reminded one of a migration of twittering birds when literally hundreds of children, ranging in age from two to fourteen years, flocked into the gym to enjoy the Junior Rally party which opened the gym and club season.

Youngsters played games and danced, did stunts and swarmed up the ropes and stall bars to their hearts content. The little sea gulls from last year's ballet class danced the sea shore pageant number in their adorable little costumes. The oysters from the junior gym performed the oyster-bed dance and the little gold fish and sea anemone added color. The children were all entranced with the costumes.

Later there was a swimming exhibition by clever little performers from the junior stunt classes, and a demonstration of life saving and diving. The swimming pool balcony was crowded with happy, excited children.

An announcement was made by Miss Littlefield that the pool will be open for swimmers and competitive work during October. All gym and dancing classes and club classes begin October 3. (See special schedule in Tuesday's paper).

Refreshments were served to the 450 children in relays in the Domestic Science room and finally, the tired but happy kiddies wending their homeward way all agreed with one tiny tot's expression "That the 'Y' is a lovely placeto have lots of fun!"

Marriage Would Be Less Disappointing If Young People Made An Analysis Of Each Other Before Instead Of After The Trek To The Altar

CONSIDERING that most men and women are neither blind nor imbecile, and that they must have had at least a passing acquaintance with each other before they married, it is a strange thing that they do not discover, on the safe side of the altar, the defects in each other that they find so unendurable after they are tied tight and fast together.

Apparently during the days of courtship they go about in a trance in which they are mentally irresponsible and unable to distinguish between what characteristics they like and don't like in an individual, or to perceive faults and foibles that stick out like a sore thumb. For in no other way can you account for the antagonistic husbands and wives that you see all about you.

It isn't that they were lured into matrimony by deep dark deceits practiced by villains who pretended to be one thing when they were another. Few men and women could put on an act that would fool even a moron baby. Nor would they think it necessary to attempt it, because such is human vanity that the average man and woman think they are a little bit of all right just as they are, and that to pretend to virtues that they do not possess would be like gilding the lily and painting the rose.

Such being the case, how is it then that Algernon and Gertrude do not discover before marriage those qualities in each other that most get upon their nerves after marriage? For example, I get thousands of letters from both husbands and wives complaining of each other's table manners and saying that every meal is made a horror to them by the way their mates gobble their food or handle their silver.

"When my wife begins gargling her soup I hardly dare trust myself with the carving knife," says the man. "It is all I can do to keep from screaming when I see my husband mess an egg around his plate of a morning," says the woman. You can't wonder at it, poor souls. It is a disillusioning experience, but they must have eaten together on some occasion before they married. How come that the finicky one didn't find out then that the other's table manners belonged to the pigsty instead of the Emily Post school?

And there's stupidity. The curse of marriage is boredom. The thing that sets nine men out of ten to roaming is having homes so dull that they would yawn their heads off if they stayed in them. The thing that makes wives fall for any stranger who has a keen line is having husbands who never read anything but the stock market and the comic strip and have nothing to talk about except the grocery trade.

You can't blame 'em. But how was it possible for an intelligent man to spend hours, days, weeks in the company of a Dumb Dora without finding out that she had no more brains than a chicken? How was it possible that a clever woman didn't realize that Algernon never said anything worth listening to except "I love you?"

And congeniality. The wail of the disgruntled husbands and wives is that they have no interests and tastes in common. When a man is a golf hound and the woman is a porch-sitter; when he is a highbrow and she is a lowbrow; when she dotes on symphony concerts and he on jazz; when she wants to step out every evening and he wants to stay at home, it doesn't need any Sherlock Holmes to deduce that they will fight over everything. But why didn't they find this out when they first met, instead of discovering it after they were married?

And there is selfishness. And stinginess. And nagging. And tyranny. None of these faults can any man or woman conceal about their persons. They are as obvious as the noses on their faces, or the color of their hair. They simply cry out to be noticed. Yet a man will go with a girl for years who makes him take her where she wants to go instead of where he wants to go himself; who grabs the best of everything for herself; who makes him spend money on her he can't afford, and never even suggests that she will make one of the wives who grind their husbands to powder between the upper and nether millstone of their self-centered egotism.

A girl will go about with a tightwad who never takes her to any place that costs money, who never gives a cent to a beggar and who haggles over the price of a ham sandwich in a restaurant; then she will be perfectly amazed to find that she has a husband who doles out carfare to her and begrudges her the food she eats.

Funny thing, isn't it, how little men and women seem to know about each other before marriage and how much afterward?

• • • • • •

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a college graduate and earning a good salary. I had to borrow the money to pay for my education and it will take me about three years to pay it back. Now I am in love with a very dear girl and would like to marry her, but refrain from asking her on account of the debt. What shall I do? BILL.

ANSWER:

Tell the girl that you love her, but that you cannot marry her until this debt is paid. If she loves you, she will not mind waiting three years. I strongly object to long engagements that have to drag on interminably, but it is a different matter when there is a definite time limit, as in your case, that you can probably reduce by putting in extra effort.

Don't marry, however, until you have paid back the money that was advanced to you on no other guarantee than some one's faith in your integrity and manhood. If there is any debt of honor on earth, it is that, and if you default on it you are the most contemptible of welchers.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Dear Friends:

Well, I learned this week what Napoleon meant when he said "an army travels on its stomach." (Or words to that effect). For, I have had this 'flu that is going, with cramps and sick stomach and all the discomfort that goes with it.

And food looked nauseating to me, nothing would stay down, all I could do was turn from side to side. I would try this to see if it would settle, but it wouldn't work.

I would try that, but to no effect. And I realized more than ever how dependant we are on our stomach and its digestion. I have always been sorry for those whose ailments settled in that part of their body, for without food we cannot go far.

And yet, the stomach seems to be the most abused part of the body. People will swallow stuff they would not wash their hands in mix their food with no discretion whatever, then wonder why they must pay.

There is no doubt that some people dig their grave with their teeth. They overeat, over drink, then wonder why there is indigestion and sickness.

The funny thing about my getting sick was that I had been listing things I should be thankful for, and I headed the list with "Good health," for I had been feeling not to bad for me.

But I guess I forgot to touch wood. Did you ever notice that when you become concious of something like good health, or a good income, in a very short time something happens to take it away from you?

While you took it as a matter of course, using it wisely, not giving too much thought to it, it stayed. But once you took it out and looked at it, away it fled.

So many people have said the same thing to me. They were just talking of something they appreciated when it was snatched away from them.

One woman was telling me not so long ago, how happy she and her husband were, how fortunate he had been with his job, and two days later he was stricken with an illness which has kept him in bed since.

And another one was so glad about her children, how they behaved, and sorrow, bitter sorrow hit her. I wonder why it should be like that? Why does it come to the surface so that we take more notice of it, then be taken away?

But, all we can do is put up with it, try to see the funny side as much as possible, so that we can get over it the quicker. Altho' some things make such an indelible imprint on us, we never forget them.

So' don't let yourself get dispondent. Van Knebel tells us: "Dispondency is the last of all evils. It is the abandonment of good, a giving up of the battle of life to dead nothingness."

No matter how discouraged you are, you must go on. The world will not stop for your sorrow, neither will the sun stop from rising and setting.

Yesterday becomes today, with vast possibilities, so gather your courage about you like a cloak, for courage is a grand thing and will help you do wonders and get order from disorder, comfort from discomfort. Hoping you escape the 'Flu. Your Friend, ROBERTA.

sage of Bettertimes roses.

Miss Madeline Redmen attended the bride, wearing a floor-length frock of pale green taffeta with matching hat. She wore silver slippers, and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses. Mr. John Law was best man.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Forsyth received in a gown of navy crepe with chenille sleeves and navy accessories. Her corsage was of Johanna Hill roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner will live at 46 Alfred street.

Do You Know?

If you moisten some dry starch with cold water and cover a bruise with it, the injured part will not become discolored?

Tea-water is a good cleanser for varnished or stained woodwork? Prepare it by pouring boiling water over spent tea leaves, then straining the liquid through a muslin cloth.

The scent of fish can be removed from the hands very readily with dry mustard? The odour from the frying pan can be removed by boiling either some tea leaves or vinegar in the pan. The fish odour can also be removed with salt and hot water.

Now That It's Over

One gathers from the writings and remarks of a number of people that the agreement reached at Munich is but a thing of temporary existence. It was something which was drawn up and signed because the nations were not ready to go to war—yet.

There is that feeling of suspicion that there must be something wrong about a deal which could halt war when the troops were being called and when shipping was being warned to make haste out of foreign ports for fear of being impounded. So the conclusion is that the evil day has merely been postponed.

Such process of reasoning leaves out of the question one thing which above all else is important. Just this—that the nations actually paused and sat down to bargain and to reason at what looked like the last minute in the last hour, and that is something they have not been in the habit of doing. They did not do that in 1914; they went right ahead in dull ways. So we can come to no other conclusion than that the method used in 1938 is superior to that followed in 1914. Therefore it is a distinct gain.

There is more: If the old order had prevailed there would have been conferences going on, but they would have been in two places and the participants would have been two different sets of people. There would have been a meeting probably in Berlin and those in attendance would have been the army chiefs of Germany and Italy and such of the smaller nations as might have decided to cast in their lot with them.

The other gathering might have been held in Paris or London and the consulting parties would have been men from France, Russia and Britain, and if any of the lesser powers were inclined to side with them their representatives would have attended. That was the method of 1914 and the business discussed at each of those two separate meetings would have been the plan and method of campaign in the war.

But that meeting at Munich was of a different sort. It brought together not only the people who were preparing to fight alongside of each other, but also those with whom it looked they were going to fight against.

For that one reason we regard the gathering at Munich as being separate and apart from other conferences. It did something else which is worthy of consideration; it gave Mussolini of Italy and Chamberlain of Great Britain their first opportunity to meet. Never before had they seen each other, and we have yet to hear of a better way of understanding an individual than to meet him in person.

This paper does not share the pessimism with which a number of good folk greet the results of the Munich conference. We have been satisfied to follow the course taken throughout by Premier Chamberlain. For months he has stood in a place where the going has been hard and rough even among his own people. He has been taunted and jeered at, but it did seem always that he was right. He was making great and hard decisions not to secure public acclaim but because he appeared convinced they were right. And they were right. For that reason alone this paper believes we can trust Chamberlain in the Munich affair. We do not believe he would put his signature to anything of which he was in doubt; the assurances he received must have satisfied him and with that we are content.

Why Make The Comparison?

When central church bodies gather in conference it is not uncommon to have a discussion on salaries. It is felt that some of the men working in smaller and poorer fields are not receiving sufficient and often enough it is intimated that ministers in the larger centres are receiving too much when compared with the others.

In the most recent discussion on this matter we read that one speaker pleading the case for the men who are not paid much, had a "voice shaken with emotion" when he declared "salaries paid some ministers were a shameful disgrace, and on an average there are many men who do not get as much as local street cleaners."

We have noticed something like that before where either the street cleaners or the garbage men get drawn into for purposes of comparison, and often enough we have wondered what they had to do with it. Men who are cleaning streets or gathering garbage are doing a highly necessary work and if it were not done we would soon hear plenty of complaint. Is it the desire of these speakers at church gatherings to infer that these men are engaged in some menial occupation—or just why is it that the comparison should be made at all?

The Oldest Postmaster Leaves

Governments came and went their way, and there were at times periods when postmasters came and went with the government, but it was never that way with William Casement of Lakefield. He had been in the Lakefield office for 63 years, and that is the longest time any postmaster in the Dominion had served. When Mr. Casement passed away he was in his 84th year and that also made him the oldest postmaster in the service. He was long past the usual time for retirement, but having a post office at Lakefield without Mr. Casement in charge did not seem right. The regulations seemed to bend always and he remained. Appointed to office in 1875 when Hon. Alexander Mackenzie was Prime Minister he had been in the Lakefield post office while the major portion of Canada's history since Confederation has been written.

Above all else the sincerity of Mr. Casement was at once apparent. One felt quickly in his presence the reason why he had never been disturbed in his office, and the reason was that everything he did would be right and just. We believe to a great extent he imparted that feeling to others and the influence of such a man in any community is something difficult indeed to estimate.

His strength has been measured in smaller qualities within recent months but Mr. Casement was not known to complain, rather would he express thanks for such measure of health as was given to him. Lakefield and its district will not soon forget William Casement.

It Seems So Stupid

But he is going to spend the next five years in penitentiary because he robbed a bank. Did it alone and had with him a toy pistol. He did not even have a car in which to ride away and depended on his legs to carry him to freedom with a couple of thousand of dollars. He seemed to have overlooked the fact that his legs were neither faster nor better than those owned by a number of other people.

It would be interesting enough were a young fellow like that to state definitely just what he had in mind when he entered a bank with a toy pistol, secured the money and then tried to escape on foot. The plot is something which might do well in comic opera but it turned into tragedy when the court said "Five years."

It looks much like a case where a good spanking would have done the culprit a deal of good.

When Dogs Chase Sheep

There was a report recently of two dogs worrying sheep on a farm, and five of the sheep were killed. As is so often the case the dogs got away. A farmer explained to this paper that when dogs start to worry sheep there is a greater loss than appears at the time. He said he had seen sheep dead without a mark on them and his explanation was that the animal had died from exhaustion and fright. The sheep is a nervous thing and in its domestic condition is not accustomed to running. When the dogs come the sheep are at once seized with a feeling which is not short of panic and they run as hard as they can and as long as they are able. They will keep that up until they drop in their tracks if the dogs are not driven off.

Our informant said the damage did not end there as the effect on the ewes was particularly harmful. Many of them would never breed again. The owner of the sheep of course collects some damages, but the injury which has been done is far in excess of the amount recovered.

The Idea May Spread

From Rome comes the report that the peace conference at Munich may result in something being done about the war in Spain, and that "something" would be the withdrawal of the Italian troops from the conflict. That step was stipulated in the Italian-British friendship agreement, a document which has not yet become operative because one of the clauses states that a preliminary step to its operation is the removal of Italian troops from Spain.

Whether Mussolini's opportunity of meeting Chamberlain may have a beneficial effect on the Italian leader is something which will be evident shortly. Strange as it may seem Mussolini had never seen or met Chamberlain before. but it is highly significant that following the meeting at Munich there should be a despatch from Rome intimating that the removal of Italian troops from Spain was being considered. If four men could settle a matter which threatened to plunge all Europe into war then it is not too much to anticipate they could also settle the affair in Spain.

Should Make It Clear

Attorney-General Gordon Conant does not possess unbounding faith in the ability of Ontario municipalities to pay their bills. For that reason he does not favor the idea of the Provincial government guaranteeing loans which the municipalities now desire to secure from the Federal government for the carrying on of public works.

Mr. Conant referred to loans which a number of municipalities secured from the province under the "Municipal Loan Fund," and more recently in 1919 under the Ontario Housing Plan. The province lost several millions of dollars. Admittedly the housing plan was rather badly bungled by some of the municipalities, and if the province lost money on it the same can be said of some of the municipalities.

There is a particular case in point at the moment and it has to do with the town of Bowmanville. There they plan a better water supply and plans were all made to proceed with the work. The Dominion government was ready to advance the money at a much lower rate than could be secured by the town issuing its own debentures, but it was necessary to have the guarantee of the Provincial government that Bowmanville would actually repay the loan. And this guarante, according to Mr. Conant, is the one thing which is not going to be given.

All of which is rather confusing and leads one to wonder again if we have not too many agencies working at the business of running this country. The Dominion government passes legislation providing for loans to municipalities for certain self-liquidating works, and in the provisions writes down that the province will have to guarantee the loan, and it apparently did that without knowing whether the province would or would not do anything about it. Meanwhile Bowmanville, believing the Federal enactment to mean what it says, goes ahead with its plans and bases them on the belief the money will be forthcoming as soon as the Provincial government approves. In the end the town finds itself in a blind alley because the Provincial government will not do what the Dominion government had apparently taken for granted it would do. It does look as though our warring forms of government might well have a Munich conference and find out what they intend to do before passing any more muddling legislation.

NOTE AND COMMENT

This is the time of year when the trees begin to adopt a sort of loose leaf system.

One writer with a fairly good memory wants to know what has become of that fine old phrase: "He left to accept a more lucrative position."

Since 1925 Turkey has built 1,910 miles of railway. Shucks—we could have sold them that already laid and still have had too much left.

Three billion buttons are made in England every 12 months. Yes, we know where they come from, but where under the sun do they all go?

The reception to Chamberlain in London showed that American football crowds are not the only folk who know how to cheer.

A Russian scientist says that man should live from 125 to 150 years. That means of course if he is a careful or a lucky driver.

It transpires that King Gustaf of Sweden was among those who sent an appeal to Hitler for peace. The Fuehrer's fan mail is assuming record proportions.

John Hay of Tonawanda, N.Y., makes the claim he has not missed his Sunday School class in 55 years. If John had a record like that in some of the service clubs he'd be so covered with badges and pins by now that he would look something like a quilt in the making.

There was a picture in the paper of Marshall Field III. of Chicago who had received on his 45th birthday $100,000,000. When he is 50 years of age he gets some more, and the total is estimated at half a billion. It is difficult not to raise the question at times when these great fortunes are mentioned if during the process of their making all the other people concerned were getting their fair share.

¶ Alfalfa got herself a hat, don't know just where she got it at, she says the thing is chic; it does not sit down on her brow, and I was wondering just how, she ever made it stick.

¶ Alfalfa's face is large and round, her cheeks are plump and they are sound, she'd stand a lot of hat; but this affair she just brought in, it seems to have so little brim, and none of it is flat.

¶ Alfalfa puts it on her dome, when she is starting out from home, or when she has a date; and then she wants her folk to say, before she settled on her way, if how the thing's on straight.

¶ They do the best they can no doubt, but they don't know what it's about, they can't tell by a look; they should have rules and charts today, they should be saved and put away, or printed in a book.

¶ Just how Alfalfa keeps it on, when she has left the house and gone, is something I don't know; I've seen her holding to her head, as though she moved in silent dread, for fear the wind would blow.

¶ Grandmother's bonnet well I mind, was not of the uncertain kind, for it was neat and trim; it seemed to set down straight and firm, and it could neither blow nor squirm—'twas tied beneath the chin.

WHEN Charles II was king, the English crown and sceptre were stolen from the Tower of London in broad daylight. The thief was a notorious criminal named Thomas Blood, and he effected his daring theft by disguising himself as a clergyman. He was caught the same day, but the king so admired his audacity that he set him free and gave him a pension.

ABOUT MEXICO

THE high sombrero worn in Mexico is, curiously enough, never seen in Central America.

About two-fifths of the inhabitants of Mexico are pure Indian, while one-fifth is white; the rest are mixed-breeds as a result of wide intermarriage between races. Mexican diplomats, however, are forbidden to marry into another race.

Most hen yards in Mexico are not behind the houses, as we might expect, but on the flat roofs.

The word "Spaniard," in certain districts of Mexico, is identical with the word for "thief." There is good foundation for this similarity; the Spaniards own most of the fertile land.

HITLER NEEDS SPANK.

(Claresholm, Alta., Local Press)

THE WORLD has been breathlessly awaiting Hitler's next move in international developments. This man is getting far more attention than he deserves. He reminds us of a young chap who whipped a horse and buggy through a crowd at a fire in North Tillsonburg, Ontario. Finally one certain man remonstrated with him and the reckless horseman raised himself up in the buggy with whip in hand, ready to strike back But this man of the crowd wasn't taking any. He jumped on the buggy step, grabbed the driver by the back of the collar, bent him over and soundly spanked the section of his anatomy more simply named by a word of three letters. Would to God that someone would metaphorically do the same to Hitler.

GERMANY NEEDS WOOL.

THE VICE-PRESIDENT of a German firm which employs 16,000 people, recently arrived in Sydney, Australia, from the Far East where, he said, his firm had received orders for fighting planes, but he refused to disclose which power had given the order. His firm was producing about 40 planes a month for the German air ministry. He had gone to Australia seeking orders for Diesel trucks, built by his firm, in exchange for Australian wool which Germany needed.

• The Report Taken to London

FROM Lord Runciman's report of conditions as he found them in Czechoslovakia:—

"I have been left with the impression that Czechoslovakia rule in the Sudeten areas for the last 20 years ....has been marked by tactless lack of understanding, petty intolerance and discrimination to the point where resentment of the German population was inevitably moving in the direction of revolt.

Local irritations were added to these major grievances. Czech officials and Czech police, speaking little or no German, were appointed in large numbers to purely German districts; Czech agricultural colonists were encouraged to settle on lands transferred under land reform in the middle of Geman populations; for the children of these Czech invaders schools were built on a large scale; there is a very general belief that Czech firms were favored as against German firms in allocation of State contracts and that the State provided work and relief for Czechs more readily than for Germans. I believe these complaints to be in the main justified. Even as late as the time of my mission I could find no readiness on the part of the Czechoslovak government to remedy them on anything like an adequate scale."

"It has become self-evident to me that those frontier districts between Czechoslovakia and Germany where the Sudeten population is an important majority should be given full right of self-determination at once. If some cession is inevitable, as I believe it to be, it is as well that it should be done promptly and without procrastination. There is real danger, even a danger of civil war, in the continuance of a state of uncertainty. Any kind of plebiscite or referendum would, I believe, be a sheer formality in respect of these predominantly German areas. The inevitable delay involved in taking a plebiscite vote would only serve to excite popular feeling with perhaps most dangerous results."

And Lord Runciman concludes:

"I consider, therefore, that these frontier districts should at once be transferred from Czechoslovakia to Germany, and further that measures fo their peaceful transfer including povision of safeguards for the population during the transfer period should be arranged forthwith by agreement between the two governments."

• Caring for Foster Childrn

THE CONVICTION and sentencing of a couple at Guelph in connection with the death of a ward of the Children's Aid Society should serve as a warning to those foster parents who might not be inclined to treat their children properly. Fortunately, many orphans are given good homes where they receive the same tender care that would have been given to children born in those households, but the Guelph trial shows that some are not as carefully treated as they should be. The sentences of a year on the woman in this case and of six months on the man, the two being convicted of negligence, was imposed by Mr. Justice Godfrey to act, he said, as a warning against exploitation and to teach guardians that children are not there so that all work may be got out of them.

"This sentence must be given to impress foster parents to treat children kindly," declared His Lordship. "That is their legal obligation."

Says The St. Thomas Times-Journal

This case emphasizes the need of close supervision on the part of Children's Aid Societies to make sure that all children placed in foster homes are receiving proper treatment. Unfortunately some children are secured with the purpose of getting as much work as possible out of them. They are not treated as children and have little time for play, being kept busy with one chore after another. Should they offend in some of the offences peculiar to children they are severely punished, their age being no excuse. Such unnatural parents must be made to understand that they cannot be Simon Legrees. The Guelph sentences will no doubt act as a restraining influence on those foster parents who fail to show any of the kindly attributes of parenthood. All known cases of cruelty or neglect should be reported to the authorities that the offenders may be punished. The law must teach men and women that when they adopt children they are expected to act as human beings in whom the bowels of compassion have not completely dried up.

• The Effect of One Good Life

By LAWRENCE BROWN

ABOUT fifty years ago a young Chinese boy, Charles J. Soong, was a stowaway bound for America. He landed finally at North Carolina where he was adopted into a good home and sent to school. He became a Christian and when he returned to China after his college graduation he married a Christian woman. They founded a Christian home.

Each child of that family was destined to become a leader. One daughter married Dr. Sun-Yat-Sen China's first president, another became the wife of Dr. Kung, a Christian Nationalist; while the third girl, May, has become the first lady of the Chinese people, the wife of General Chiang-Kai-Shek. The sons also as well as the daughters were educated in America. And all returned home determined to make China a better country.

The baptism of General Chiang Kai Shek has been spoken of as one of the most important conversions to Christianity since the days of Constantine. He gave three reasons for his desire to be a Christian—the examples set by his wife and mother-in-law, the spirit of forgiveness shown his troops by nurses in a hospital they had harmed, and the need for "a God like Jesus Christ." Chiang Kai-Shek has done more in three years to unify China than the previous three thousand years had accomplished. He spends an hour each morning in prayer. The Bible is precious to him, especially during his captivity in Sian.

European dictators do not wield such individual and personal power over so large a number of persons as does the Generalissimo. Even in the darkness of the present war there is all over China a new spirit, missionaries and travellers report,—that of vital Christianity led by and flowing through two radiant personalities—the general and his wife.

One wonders what the future of that country would have been if a little stowaway many years ago had not found a welcome in a Christian home.

(Renfrew Mercury)

ONTARIO'S PREMIER speaks of President Roosevelt's promise re the defence of Canada in case of foreign attack as "very commendable," but does not agree with him as to joint Canadian and American development of the St. Lawrence River. Mr. Hepburn is firmly of the belief that at the present time more electric power along the St. Lawrence is not required; also he takes the position that today all navigation needs along the St. Lawrence are already provided. Mr. Hepburn is right. He is better acquainted with the situation than is Mr. Roosevelt, who sees in the St. Lawrence scheme only another way to spend a colossal sum of money in the hope of bringing back better times. The undertaking would be completed in a few years, mainly through use of labor-saving machinery, and all that would remain would be the debt. Also there would be no compensation for the huge amount of land submerged for all time, to say nothing of the obliteration of many miles of the choicest of scenery.

HERE'S A POSER.

—From letter by Ontario Association of Real Estate Boards to Premier Hepburn. Well, revenue this year from motorcar and gasoline taxes is estimated by Mr. Hepburn at $28,200,000 and expenditure of the department of highways at $9,650,000. Just what would the association suggest?

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

AND JESUS went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people.

And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them....

And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him, and saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented.

And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him. The centurion answered, and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed....

And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour.—Matt. iv, 23, 24; viii, 5-8, 13.

To The Editor

SPECULATING

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Would you please help me out. I can't quite decide whether the emblem of Germany is wolf, wildcat or dog. Now you may say that's an insult to my dog, but wait—If it is wolf, we have so little hope of peace for long because as soon as he becomes fed up with the meaty bone, back he comes greedy again and again.

Should it be wildcat, we may in time tame him to be quite a pet, yet never safe for children to play with.

However, here's hoping it is dog because if we keep him happy, use him kindly, he may become in a short time a very good friend and in some distant time become very humble and obedient.

NOT AFRAID OF HITLER

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—History and humanity will record Mr. Chamberlain as the greatest and most courageous Englishman since Pitt. He had the courage to wish for peace and the saving of women and children and the poor—if indeed not such a world wide revolution as the world has not yet seen. There are those who in their furious rage against Hitler would have let all that priceless treasure go for a moment of triumph—which might never have come. Now Lord Runciman sent by the British parliament to Czechoslovakia to inquire, found that the Czechs were "intolerant" and persecuted the Sudeten Germans the Poles and the Hungarians. He found that "the Czechs could have forestalled all this trouble my making any reasonable effort."

Justice was not on the side of the Czechs. So the war, was to be for the punishment of Hitler? That could not be. That would be to lose our head fear of Hitler. So the great four Mussolini, Hitler, Daladier and the immortal Chamberlain kept their heads and for the present at least and with a hope for the future saved us from such a futility as the last war proved to be and from the coming into power of the red grant of the east. "Peace hath her victories, no less renouned than war."

Best Millbrook Fall Fair In Years Attracts Crowd of 2,000

MILLBROOK, Oct. 3.—The best Fair in years, especially in the live-stock section, was held on Friday by the Millbrook Agricultural Board, and drew to the local exhibition grounds close to two thousand people. The ideal autumn day made the following of each event most enjoyable.

In the main building competition reigned in each class. Nineteen quilts were exhibited in the ladies' work, a fine display of afghans, bed jackets and housedresses, the latter a new addition to the prize list revised for this year.

70 First Prizes

Mrs. L. E. Bryant of Wooler, was the outstanding winner in the ladies' work with 70 firsts to her credit and Mrs. Ira Lowe of Mount Pleasant receiving 40 seconds. The judge was Miss Mary Elliott. Mrs. Ira Lowe received a silver pie plate donated by Warne's of Peterborough, for most entries in ladies' work.

Thirty firsts were won by Miss L. Cooper of Tyrone in the domestic science section. Next in line was Mrs. J. A. Carl with four firsts and 13 seconds. Both ladies will receive duplicate prizes for winning in white bread, buns, rolls, light layer cake, dark layer cake, Scotch short bread, apple pie, pumpkin pie and angel cake, as a special prize offered by the millers of Robin Hood Flour.

Mrs. J. M. Armstrong was awarded the special prize of a silver plated rose bowl, donated by Simpson Eastern for first place in the collection of baking. Judge of entries was Miss Eleanor M. Taylor.

The plants and flowers were placed in brilliant profusion in the centre stalls and were judged by Mr. David Jordon of Peterborough. Ten firsts were won by Mrs. J. W. Hamilton; three firsts and seven seconds by Mrs. J. Willan; and four firsts and four seconds by Mrs. W. J. Webster.

Dairy Winners

Five firsts and two seconds in the dairy entry came to Mrs. I. Lowe of Mount Pleasant. The special prize of best ten pounds of butter in crock was allotted to Mrs. H. G. Best, also of Mount Pleasant.

Attracting a great deal of attention was the collection of garden vegetables by Mr. G. Fraise for Chamberlain

In his opening remarks, the Fair Board President, Mr. Percy Stinson stated that the relief of the people of Canada and the world in the knowledge that there would be no war, should be shown by thankful hearts for answered prayers and for a man like Neville Chamberlain.

As a fitting gesture, he asked that every man, woman and child would salute the Flag and led by Mr. B. B. Dawson, Principal of the local Public School, sang the National Anthem, as it was never sang before.

Following a short adress made by Frank Richard, M.P. for Durham, Mr. Cecil Mercer, M.P.P. was called to the foreground to make the first draw for the $25 prize.

Ticket number 21435 was first drawn and after a five minute interval, unclaimed. Ticket 15174 was then drawn, held by Mrs. H. G. Best of Mount Pleasant.

Ex. M.P. Mr. F. Bowen of Orono made the draws for the second prize of fifteen dollars, and similar to the first, the initial number, 18-174 was unclaimed. Mrs. W. H. Armstrong of Millbrook held the second number 16098.

The first draw by Deputy-Reeve, Alfred Merle of Percy Township, was lucky. Mr. John Lunn of Millbrook, was awarded a cheque for ten dollars on ticket no. 24612.

All winners were asked to pay 50c for their cheques.

Without a doubt, the best Midway in years drew scores of young people to spend their nickels and dimes. A ferris wheel, merry-go-round, roulette games, shooting galleries, bingo ets, were sources of enjoyment.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

At first the Tin Soldier was angry with Knarf and Hanid the two shadow-children with the turned-about names. "I don't like people who go around tripping and falling on my nose," he said.

"But you do keep tripping, don't you?" Hanid asked.

"And you do keep falling on your nose?" adde Knarf.

"Yes . . . I do. But just the same you shouldn't go around talking about it. It makes everyone think I'm kind of funny."

However, the two shadows promised that they wouldn't mention this again to anyone. Then the Tin Soldier looked pleased and said: "All right. You can come with me to King Fat-Wat's castle, but first we must wait for the King's Messenger. Ah, here he comes now!"

The two shadow-children expected to see a horse come dashing down the road. It was a turtle with his shell painted blue and gold and a red handkerchief knotted around his neck.

"General Tin?"

"At your service, sir," the Tin Soldier answered, saluting.

"I have a message from His Majesty the King." He handed it to the Tin Soldier.

"I, er—left my glasses home," the Tin Soldier murmured. "I'm afraid I can't read very well without them. Here, read it for me, please," he said giving it to Hanid.

She opened and glanced at it quickly. This is what it said:

Dear General Tin: Happy Birthday to you! This is just to let you know that I am giving you a surprise party when

He went galloping to the castle

you arrive at the castle. Hurry as fast as you can as I am already starting to eat the ice-cream.

Your true friend,
KING FAT-WAT.

Now Hanid didn't think she ought to read the king's message to General Tin. Because what good would his surprise party be if he knew all about it?

"Read it!" the Tin Soldier commanded.

So Hanid took a deep breath and read aloud:

Dear General Tin: This is just to let you know that I started to make ice cream and fell in the freezer. Hurry as fast as you can.

"My goodness!" shouted the Tin Soldier. "We've go to get to him!"

So they all jumped on the turtle's back and he went galloping off to the castle.

AFRAID TO MARRY

by HELEN WELSHIMER

Written for and Released by CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, obtains a job as a model shortly after her father loses his fortune in a financial crash. The same day she learns that Craig Denby, the man she loves, married another girl. Afraid of marriage, Judy had put him off once too often. Her father goes west with her stepmother, her own mother, remarried, is abroad and Judy moves to a small hotel. She finds solace in the ecmpany of Ronald Birrell, brilliant young attorney from Tennessee who has just joined the firm of her father's lawyers. When Judy calls her best friend, Marjorie Barton, Craig answers the phone for Marjorie is giving a little party for Craig and his bride and does not desire to be disturbed.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 9

JUDY CLUNG to the telephone receiver, in the drug store booth, from which she had called Marjorie Barton.

Craig's eager, frantic voice was urging her to speak: "Judy, are you there? Judy, it's Craig. Where are you? I've been hunting for you . . . Judy—Judy . . ."

So she had not dreamed him. She had not imagined that life of which he was so much a part. It had been true. Very quietly she replaced the receiver. That was over. He must not find her. He should never see her in this new, hard-working world. He had chosen a girl named Mary.

She could not contact Marjorie again. It was not safe, for Craig and others would be around. She sat for a moment, loathe to leave because a voice she loved so much had filled that small booth just a minute before.

Someone tapped impatiently on the glass of the door. A man with a nickel wanted to make a call. She opened the door.

"Say, you look as though you saw a ghost," he greeted her. "Feeling all right, lady?"

"Oh, I'm fine—I'm splendid!" she answered.

"Better get a cup of coffee. Got another nickel?"

Judy held out her hand, where the four coins she hadn't needed for the telephone call reposed. She had thought, when she changed the quarter, that perhaps she and Marjorie would have so much to say to each other—

She ordered the coffee. The man's kindness reminded her of the philosophy which Ronald Birrell had mentioned He had told her she should branch out, and discover how the less fortunate lived. They were kind. They shared. Where had Ronald learned so much? Sipping the hot beverage, she thought of the cabin in the Tennessee mountains from which he had come. She fell asleep, thinking of it still.

The sun shone with a glorious challenge the next morning. There was a rhythm of laughter under the city's rumble. She had heard Craig's voice! Heard it, and turned it off, as though he were someone on a radio who could be banished with a click of a button. Yet, because of that ethereal contact, she was happier.

In her happier mood, she showed the sketch that she had made to one of the models.

"It's good," the girl commented. "Listen, sister, I've been here a long time, I know the boss well. Let me slip it to him. I can put it over. Got any more?"

"Why, yes." Maybe this was better. Yet Judy preferred going directly to the manufacturer. But this model, Rita Cleeberg, was trying to be kind. Judy might offend her if she refused her help. She handed her half a dozen sketches.

"Keep mum about it, won't you?" Rita said. "If word gets out you're sketching, every other girl will pick up a pencil and the boss will be so provoked he'll pitch 'em all into the wastepaper basket."

Judy heard nothing about her sketches for a week. Then she was asked to appear in a new model one day. Usually, as new dresses were made, they were fitted on the girl who would wear them. She had worn frocks that were ready, that first day, merely because the former model had left.

Someone brought the costume to her. She glanced at it in surprise. It was the gray suit that she had designed, the first sketch that she had given Rita. Then her eyes flashed with delight. So the company had surprised her! It had accepted the sketch, made the suit, and asked her to pose in it. She must thank them all, at once.

"Buyer from Scranton waiting. Better hurry," someone called.

There were other clothes to model when the gray suit had been seen and an order placed, so it was an hour before Judy sought Rita.

"I don't know how to thank you," she said simply. "I'm so glad they liked my suit."

"Your suit?" the girl asked coldly. "The gray one—designed from the sketch I gave you."

"You're imagining things. That was a design of the regular staff man. He threw away your sketches. Better stick to modeling, kid."

Judy did not hesitate. She knocked at the door of the president of the company, eyes flashing, hands plunged into the deep gingham pockets in her smock.

"It's about the sketch which I submitted to you," she began. "Rita asked to bring it to you personally. Now the staff artist claims credit. Could he—did he have the same idea that I had?"

"You made some sketches?" the man asked.

Judy told him the story briefly. "That dress was made from Blobber's own idea—he does our work," the employer said, rather wearily.

"I see—but how could two people have the same idea?"

"You run along and talk to Blobber."

The designer and the model named Rita greeted her coldly. The whole situation was quite apparent. Rita and Blobber were in love. Blobber had been falling down. Rita had seized on Judy's ideas as a way to help the man and also establish herself more firmly in his favor.

Judy went back to the president, but they followed her.

The man shook his head. "Why should you tell me how to run my business? How do I know they were your sketches? I know only what I saw. Blobber made a good-looking design and I took it. He has some more . . ."

"Mine," said Judy briefly.

"Maybe if you don't like our ways you'd better leave," suggested the employer.

"Maybe I had," Judy agreed. "May I have my sketches please?"

"No good. I tore them up," Rita explained.

"Wait. She did give you some sketches?" asked her employer.

"I'll get them. I have the pieces."

They were not Judy's sketches that the girl brought back. They were some of her own, poorly conceived and drawn. The employer shook his head.

"Now who would buy a dress like that, Miss Rogers? You have big ideas, and no sense."

"You'll pay for this," Judy answered. For the first time she wanted to tell them who she was. She wanted to frighten them with her name. Then she realized that her name meant nothing now. Its financial backing was gone. To these people she had been any girl named Judy Rogers, of the socially important heiress.

"Better stay with us, Miss Rogers," the kindly tones of the manufacturer suggested. "You'll learn. Maybe you didn't really mean to say those ideas were yours, Blobber and Rita can teach you a lot."

"They are mine," Judy insisted. "I have carbons at home to prove it."

"Go get them," the man told her.

Frantically Judy searched through her pocketbook. The papers were not them. The maid had been in to clean the room, and the wastepaper basket was empty. For that matter, she might have thrown the drawings away on any other evening. Her job was gone unless she could prove her claims. Otherwise the manufacturer would never believe her again, and she would be let out soon.

In all the city there was no one to help her. No one. Craig? Oh, yes he would do his best, but he knew nothing of this world she had been combating. Marjorie? She knew less. Her aunt? She would tell the family about everything.

The family lawyers—in the old days every problem had been taken directly to them, left in their faithful, capable hands, and forgotten. But now . . .

Ronald Birrell had fought his way up. Maybe he could help her. He would know that she had not given up. That she was struggling. As if it mattered what he thought!

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, October 4

A very lively and progressive day is forecast from the important mutual aspects of the planets. Surprising or quite unexpected events may occur, causing much perturbation or upset conditions. However, all in the pursuit of major objectives or propositions drastically affect the future and its success. Aspirations and ideals are high, and elders, superiors and powerful influences are at work to encourage these and assist in putting them on firm foundations.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves launched in a year of large interests and surprising events, with major propositions or sudden opportunities of a quite unpredictable nature causing a sudden reorientation of the objectives and the surroundings. Important persons have a part in this, either furnishing capital or otherwise contributing to sound results. Seek such co-operation with confidence, but be careful in financing too recklessly.

A child born on this day may be progressive and energetic. It may have high ideals and possibly startling ambitions. These may be aided by elders, superiors or those of affluence, who may be generous with bequest or insurance.

Collegiate Notes

JITTERBUGS OR ICKIES.

The annual election of officers for the Students' Council began last week. The two parties, Jitterbugs and Ickies, were named in typical modern swing style. The presidential candidates and leaders of the two parties are Bill Davidson and Alex. Young. Davidson is leader of the Jitterbugs and spoke on Monday morning. Young spoke Tuesday. The other members of the teams speak on alternate mornings. Misses Barbara Scott and Catherine White and Gordon Jameson have already spoken. The remaining speeches will be given this week, and then on Thursday the two nominated presidents will each speak. The voting will take place on Friday, with the results to be announced by Principal Dr. H. R. H. Kenner on Monday.

The parties:

Jitterbugs—President, Bill Davidson; Vice-President, Gordon Jameson; Secretary, Miss Barbara Scott; Treasurer, Hugh Heslip.

The Ickies — President, Alex. Young; Vice-President, Miss Catherine White; Secretary, Miss Margaret Westbye; Treasurer, James Sands.

The speeches supply much humor to the morning assemblies and so far have been cleverly written and well delivered. Many colorful posters boosting the two parties now adorn the corridors and locker rooms. The posters show clever design and originality in thought.

MORE ELECTIONS.

The other two elections given less prominence are the election of officers for the Boys' and Girls' Athletic Associations. The votes are taken by show of hands and not by ballot.

G.A.A.—President, Joan Ottewell; Vice-President, Iris Whalen; Secretary, Barbara Richardson; Treasurer, Alice Gallagher.

MORNING ASSEMBLIES.

The morning assemblies are brighter than ever this year. John Hooper of Form V. and Miss Isabel Weddell of the teaching staff are leading the singing on alternate mornings.

The orchestra consists of Miss Merrill Smith, pianist; Bob and David Graham, saxaphone and trumpet. Last week they introduced to the school "Alexander's Ragtime Band" from the picture of the same name.

FOOTBALL.

P.C.V.S. is backing three football teams at the school. The seniors, last year's interscholastic champions are again coached by Teacher H. L. Bamforth. The juniors are coached by David and Jim Hall, while Mr. Cornell is putting the third team through its paces.

All three teams should go well this year. The seniors have only a few of last year's team left, such as Ab Leether, E. Ward, P. Turner, D. Diplock, Bob Parnall, and have such junior stars from 1937 as Ken Gillespie, R. Scriver, Bob Ferguson and John Elliot.

The juniors have more of the old gang back but the third team is an entirely new squad.

The first two teams are classed with Oshawa, Bowmanville and Lindsay. The schedule opened Saturday in Lindsay.

The third team will meet Grove, Trinity College of Port Hope and probably St. Peter's of this city. All in all it should be a good season for each team in its own group.

CAMPUS FLASHES.

Don Duncan, ex-senior star, is acting as manager for the senior team this year. Don had a lot of tough luck last year, but still shows his interest is in the team by taking on the manager's job. This gives him the responsibility of arranging for transportation for out-of-town games. It would be greatly appreciated if you would offer your car for the next game....There promises to be much more school spirit shown at the football games this year. It is hoped that there will be displays and parades before and after each game. This should give the teams the heart to go in and fight and to win....The junior football team is to be equipped with new sweaters this year. They will be garnet with grey trimmings and numbers....Ribbons for the athletic events are to be sold by the B.A.A. this year as a means of raising funds....The Ickies party amused the students on the mornings a repreesntative of person's picture on the screen in the auditorium. It is believed the work was done by Hugh Kenner, of the camera club.

MOTION PICTURES.

P.C.I. showed its film talent last week when the motion pictures taken by Ben Ackerman were shown on the screen. These pictures were taken at the cadet officers' picnic to South Beach last June, at the P.C.I. ball games and at various other school functions. A plank in the Jitterbug platform is to have weekly showings of such pictures.... The school baseball team, coached by W. E. Jackson, won the Junior City League championship this summer. Congratulations gang!...It is rumored that Alex. Carlisle is still having trouble settling his timetable....The football teams are practising at the Oval this year as Riverside will not be available for a couple of weeks. The games, however, will be played at Riverside and the admission is still only a quarter.... The annual field day and track meet will be held at the Exhibition Grounds on Wednesday afternoon, October 5. This is one of the very important school events. Each student is expected to be there whether participating or not. Officially it will be a school holiday....Bill Harle, star backfielder of last year's Orfuns, is playing on the half-line for P.C.I. seniors this year. Donnie Diplock has been out all week with a cold.

CADETS.

The first aid and signalling examination results were announced last week and cheques and certificates were presented to those successful in passing. About twenty candidates received their certificates from Dr. Kenner last week.

Potatoes Steady At 75 Cents Farmers' Market

The market of farm produce on Saturday presented all the definite aspects of autumn, settling down to the standard staples, such as potatoes, apples, cabbage, celery, and so on.

Apples were a feature, and probably the most attractive variety was the McIntosh Red. Norman Moncrief quoted 45 cents a peck for a fine sample of this fruit, but you could buy windfalls for somewhat less.

B. Isaac of Norham sol dhis McIntoshes at $1.60 a bushel. He comes from the northern fringe of the Northumberland County apple belt. Mr. Isaac brought in a sample of Northern Spies, a few bushels to sell at the rate of $4.50 a barrel. He told The Examiner he expected to be at the Peterborough market all through October and probably later.

Mr. Isaac usually has a card on his fruit bearing his name and the prices of his apples.

"I think people like to know who they are buying from," he remarked. "It seems to me it creates more confidence in the seller and in the market as a whole. If you are prepared to stand up for the quality of your produce you won't hesitate about putting your sign out."

Another sign of the changing season at the market was the display of fresh pork shown by E. A. Hunter of Otonabee. His prices were 16 cents for front quarters and 18 cents for hinds.

Likes White Stars.

Potatoes were steady at 75 cents a bag. One buyer, a local alderman of several years ago, commented that he was looking for six bags of White Stars. He said he had come to prefer this variety to the Irish Cobblers and others he had tried. Incidentally he expressed the opinion that potatoes should never be less than one dollar a bag, if the farmer was to get a fair return on all the work he had put into the crop. "I don't like to see them too cheap nor too dear," he said to The Examiner, "and the average value should not drop below the dollar level."

Congestion of butter in the Canadian produce markets, and the lack of export outlets, has reacted against the value of butter fat. From the steady level butter had maintained all last winter and up to summer, it has recently receded to the extent that you could buy all the butter you needed at 23 cents a pound on Saturday.

Cheese Values Higher.

The present price of butter fat at the creameries is about 20 cents a pound, but at the cheese factories it is worth between 30 and 40 cents. Forty cents may not be far out either way. And the most regrettable fact is that Canada is not producing anything like the quantity of cheese she could sell overseas. All the warnings of the Government dairy experts and others in touch with the market have come true, and the dairy farmer is aware of it. All those wrecks of old cheese factories are shabby monuments to the unwisdom of a large section of the farming community in so far as the dairy industry is concerned.

Egg Prices Steady.

Eggs were firm at a range of prices from 25 cents to 37 cents, according to size. The 25 cents was for the pullet size and the 37 cents for the largest.

Some of the first ducks of the season were quoted at one dollar each. Apparently there is going to be a mighty appealing market next Saturday. That will be the Thanksgiving market, and with good weather it should be just about the best of the year. Chickens at 23 cents a pound were in good supply with a lively demand, also.

Tomatoes have slumped off to a late variety selling at 90 cents a bushel, or 20 cents for the six-quart basket, and 30 cents for eleven quarts. Squash of all sizes were from 5 to 20 cents each; carrots, three bunches for 10 cents; cucumbers, 2 for 5 cents; celery, excellent stock, 10 cents the bunch, or two for 15 cents.

The cauliflower display was never better than on Saturday, and the prices were 5 to 20 cents on the basis of size. Big cabbages were quoted at a "nickel" each; red cabbage, 5 cents; big white onions, 25 cents a six-quart basket; and pickling onions, 10 cents a quart. Some other onions sold at 20 cents a basket.

Crabapples were 25 cents a quart and beets three bunches for 10 cents. Broccoli, 5 cents a bunch; parsnips, 6 quarts for 20 cents; and home-grown grapes, 25 cents a basket.

Honey Prices.

Just another plug for Peterborough produced honey. Somehow The Examiner got into conversation with Vincent Eastwod abut honey, and the chairman of the City Trust Commission has a surprisingly extensive knowledge of the habits of the bee. Mr. Eastwood ought to rate high in Tom Shields' league. He tells not only the history of the bee, but also the virtues of its product, especially as an energy food, as shown by the practice of swimmers in taking honey during a long distance swim.

Peterborough honey this season is of excellent quality, and the prices eight pounds of clover honey for $1, and eight pounds of the amber for 90 cents; four-pound palls sell at 55 cents and 45 cents.

Buyers are again reminded that Saturday will be the Thanksgiving market.

cheering the army, but they somehow found even greater cheers for their new Fuehrer.

Hitler's automobile was preceded from Selb, Germany, by two armored cars and detachments of brown-shirted storm troopers, who remained at the border. Airplanes flew over as Hitler entered the new territory. The chancellor rode with his adjutant and Henlein, the official welcomer.

About 2,000 German troops commanded by General Walter von Reichenau had rolled across the frontier at Wildenau, in camouflaged trucks, for the early occupation of the Asch-Eger region, third of the zones being taken over progressively by the Nazis.

Troops Take Over.

This column met a second of about 6,000 men in Asch. Their arrival in Asch ended the Asch free territory self-government established when the Sudetens chased out Czechoslovaks Sept. 21. Hitler's troops at once took over street policing from Sudeten party volunteers.

As the German troops marched in the Sudeten free corps which Henlein organized to combat Czechoslovaks marched out, wearing civilian clothes, steel helmets, and Swastika arm bands.

The local heroes' march was like that of tired veterans returning from a long war. The excited crowd cheered them, too.

Long lines of little girls in pigtails waved swastikas and chanted "one people, one Reich, one Fuehrer."

The troops rode in with dahlias stuck in their gun barrels.

The troops were en route all night. Many slept until they reached Asch, where the cheering throngs awakened them.

Propose Forced

of its own, the newspaper pointed editorially to the resentment raised in many quarters against the "unnecessarily high" price paid for peace.

"Peace for its own sake is a gain immense indeed," it said. "Nevertheless the satisfaction that hails it is not by any means undivided. There are many who believe that the price which has been paid for it is not only high, but unnecessarily high. During the week-end a voice of criticism has begun to raise itself in sometimes demonstrative terms.

"A minister (Alfred Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty) has resigned and certain supporters of the Government, as well as members of the Opposition, have left no doubt as to the sense of grave misgivings.

Czech Sacrifice Overlooked.

"Amid the prevailing jubilation it seems to be completely overlooked that of all the contributors to peace the greatest are the Czechs. Surely, as victims of a peace negotiated over their heads, they are entitled to warm public acknowledgment of Great Britain and France, instead of the icy silence which has existed hitherto.

"To Great Britain the moral crisis is clear. Failing immediate agreement for disarmament, we must redouble the energy of our defensive effort, especially in the air."

The Daily Express (Independent) criticized Prime Minister Chamberlain's commitment of Britain as a guarantor of Czechoslovakia's new frontiers.

"For the future of our course is plain," this newspaper said. "We do not mean to attach ourselves to any Power in Europe. We shall follow the path of isolation."

The editorial termed the guarantee given Czechoslovakia an unwise departure from that "wise principle" of isolation.

"Mr. Chamberlain had the good sense to refuse that guaranty while Czechoslovakia was strong," it recalled, "What possible explanation, what sorrowful reason can justify a guarantee now that Czechoslovakia is weak?"

Both "Scrutator" in The Sunday Times (Independent) and J. L. Garvin in The Observer (Conservative) agreed that one of the principal "errors" of the Treaty of Versailles has been corrected. Both said that the Anglo-German anti-war statement at Munich was as valuable—if not more so—as the Four-Power accord regarding cession of Sudetenland.

They agreed that the declaration against war might serve as the point of departure for organizing a new Europe.

"Scrutator," who has been a particularly outspoken critic of the Franco-Soviet pact, expressed satisfaction at the fast that Moscow was not represented at Munich.

Garvin, who has long favored closer Anglo-German relations, praised the Hitler-Chamberlain statement, but added that any durable accord between Germany and Britain must be made between strong countries.

Defence Weaknesses Bared.

"The ordeal of last week exposed notoriously the lamentable deficiencies in the arrangements for defence in the democratic systems both of Britain and France," he said. "This is the weak point of the Government's position in our own country, and to this the attention and insistence of both Houses (of Parliament) should be unsparingly devoted."

The Sunday Express (Independent) said that both the Order of Merit and the Order of the Garter have been mentioned as a reward for the Prime Minister, but that he will accept no honor until after his work has been approved by Parliament.

Prime Minister Chamberlain Chats With Il Duce

Prime Minister Chamberlain, it will be recalled, appealed to Mussolini to act as mediator in a last-minute attempt to avert a European war over the Czech-German crisis.

21st Anniversary Is Held By St. James United Church

The twenty-first anniversary of St. James' United Church was observed yesterday by a special thanksgiving service.

Rev. Archer Wallace, D.D., of Toronto, was the guest preacher, who spoke to a large congregation at all services, with a special message of thanksgiving for peace, at the three o'clock Sunday School hour.

A very fine musical program added to the inspiration of the day as arranged and led by Cecil Lapp, th organist. In the morning the anthem chosen was "Holy Art Thou", with Mrs. Dorrington taking the solo part, and a ladies' quartette, "Sweet Hour of Devotion" was sung by Mesdames Robinson, Monks, McKinstry and Kitney.

"Hark, Hark, My Soul," was the evening anthem. Mesdames Butcher and Doig singing in solo parts, Ernest Davis sang in fine voice the solo "The Earth is the Lord's," and "O, Word of Peace" was the appropriate selection by a mixed quartette including Mrs. G. Cuff, Mrs. Dorrington, Mr. Hanlen and Mr. M. Wood.

Dr. Wallace, in his splendid message led the congregation to a broader and higher conception of God on this anniversary occasion.

Two passages from the Old Testament formed the basis for his theme: "Surely the Lord is in this place and I knew it not" and "Their gods are gods of the hills." From these words he wove a story which demonstrated "that God can not be limited."

Limited God

"Nearly all religions began with the idea of a limited God. Many of the early Hebrews had the feeling that God was within the temple and that once they were removed from it they were outside the jurisdiction of the Almighty. Today we are not so inclined to believe that God is confined to one sopt. There are no parts of the world where the Spirit of God does not operate. God dwells in the hearts of people everywhere, whether in China or in Africa.

Sometimes we do limit God to certain occasions, but He is present at a marriage ceremony as at a death. There is no experience that that cannot be made a stepping-stone to a higher, better life, and trouble may be a means of finding God. We can get a blessing from pain as well as from joy, for God is in every experience. He inspires the woman in her kitchen, the man in the factory and the sailor on the sea.

Interest in Human Being.

The effort to segregate life is a superficial division. It cannot be put into watertight compartments, for God is interested in human beings all the time. If we believe this it should invest everything we do with a deep spiritual significance and all of life will be lived to the glory of God.

In closing, the speaker illustrated his subject by relating the story of Shackleton's last dash to the South Pole, when he carried with him a small phonograph with but one record, "Abide With Me." God is therefore not limited to civilization but is present even at the outposts of the world.

His closing plea at this anniversary time was for each to realize that God is really a part of every phase of the human life.

Assisting the visiting minister at all services, the Rev. Fred Craik, the pastor took charge of the opening devotions and introduced the speaker to his congregation.

A notice before a Strand pub read: "We have always sold beer, but never so fast."

Nevertheless London was left many a reminder of the grim days when people dug or stood in line for hours waiting their turn at gas mask fittings. Public parks were filled with great piles of newly-turned earth surrounding trenches in which the populace would have sought shelter from air raiders if the Munich four power conference had failed.

Gas Oven Test Fatal.

One man was killed in a trench collapse. A little girl was seriously injured when buried in another trench. A man died when he sought to test his mask by placing his head in a gas stove oven.

Even children were rescued in cases where they had gas-proofed a room and donned masks, then turning on the kitchen gas. The masks are not proof against illuminating gas.

The disposition of the people still was to express relief and thanksgiving over the passing of the crisis, though Opposition groups, Liberals, Labor and Communist, expressed as well as some Conservatives, violent disapproval over what they considered the betrayal of Czechoslovakia.

People in some newsreel theatres applauded Hitler and Mussolini, but those in labor districts hissed them. Mr. Chamberlain still was the man of the hour and his image on the screen was greeted with tremendous shouts.

Nearby in Whitehall a different temper was displayed by persons who placed a wreath on the cenotaph with a card reading: "In memory of Mannook, McElroy and Kennedy. We fought to defend democracy—not to betray it."

Marriages Fall Off.

As the crisis waned the rush of marriage-bent couples to registry offices and churches suffered a sharp slump.

At Westminster Abbey, Dean Paul F. D. De. Labilliere remarked that "for once it seems to be impossible not to break through the silence of reserve and to voice the nation's gratitude to our Prime Minister for, under God, we believe we owe our reprieve to him."

The Dean did not forget the Czechs, adding: "Let us remember those who have turned their backs on their home, their work and possessions to go out to start life again in a strange district."

Almost 3,000 stood in a queue in rain to enter City Temple where they heard service conducted by Rev. Leslie Weatherhead who asked them:

"Do you feel a little uneasy, as though you had made friends with a burglar on condition that he took nothing from you or your immediate friends, and that you would say nothing about what he took from somebody else? I feel like that. I hope the burglar has been converted because a converted burglar can do as much good as a converted Imperialist like John Bull."

When the 100,000th car was completed at the South Africa plant of an American company the first three drivers were the South African Minister of Mines, Minister of Native Affairs, and a Senator.

armies there were moments of confusion.

Several clashes were reported in the southern zone, near Krumau, between Henlein followers and their political opponents after the Czechoslovak army withdrew.

The Sudetens welcomed union with Germany in typical Nazi fashion. But there was anxiety in the hearts of Jews, German Social Democrats and the few Czechs who had not joined the flood of refugees fleeing into the interior of the republic.

Refugees were moving both ways, Czechs and Jews and non-Nazis moving out of the Sudeten district and Henleinist Germans entering the territory about to be occupied.

Jewish refugees accounted for 20,000 of an estimated 70,000 who sought shelter in Prague, Brno and other cities. Red Cross and other organizations provided refugee stations in social institutions, hotels and other establishments.

The Opposition was encouraged by the resignation of Alfred Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty, who gave as a reason his "profound" distrust of the government's foreign policy.

The Opposition leaders, however, faced a difficult parliamentary problem. Despite outspoken criticism of the Munich agreement by some influential Conservatives, it generally was conceded that the electors were grateful to Mr. Chamberlain for saving peace and that they would return him to office if he put the issue before the country in a general election.

Early Bird Wins

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(AP).—Two Gunmen entered a filling station and announced a holdup. "The early bird catches the worm. In other words, I'm fresh out of cash," replied Philip Zitek, the attendant. He added that a lone gunman had robbed him an hour previously. The late comers left, grumbling.

Chief Of Staff Orders Demobilizing Of Million French Reserves

Paris, Oct. 3.

GENERAL Marie-Gustave Gamelin, chief of staff, today ordered the demobilization of more than 1,000,000 reserves called to the colors at various stages during the Czechoslovak crisis.

The first reservists to be demobilized following the four-power Munich accord are expected to return to their homes over the week-end. At the same time measures have been taken to free vehicles and animals requisitioned for national defence purposes.

The partial demobilization marked France's jubilant return to normal, peace-time life on a day it had feared it would be at war.

Lakefield Driver Escapes Unhurt As Truck Plunges Into Ravine

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 3.—Colonel Lane of Lakefield miraculously escaped injury on Saturday evening last, October 1, when the left front tire on the large truck in which he was driving home from Burleigh, blew out, causing the vehicle to get out of control and swerve across the road.

Mrs. W. J. Tedford, who saw the accident, said the truck seemed to gain in speed as it left the highway and, barely missing a large maple tree and a telephone pole, smashed through the strong wire fence, breaking off three wooden posts, and travelled about 100 yards down a field, leaving in its wake, a trail of snapped-off cedar trees.

The truck kept going until it hit a large rock on the edge of a gulley, when it flipped over and landed upside down at the bottom of a thirty-foot drop. Mr. Lane crawled out of the cabin through a window, quite unharmed.

"It was a rough ride all right," he told the Examiner. "I bounced around the inside of the cabin like a fly in a bottle."

Mr. Lane is employed by the Johnston Construction Company and was returning from work on the Oregon Trail when the accident occurred. He was driving a truck belonging to F. S. Coyle of Lakefield.

Peace Bonus Paid

WILMINGTON.—A "peace bonus" of $5 today lined the pockets of a billboard company's employees. Paul Hessler, company president, said the bonus was given after settlement of the European crisis, so employees would "remember that peace and not war was declared."

Constable Pleads Guilty

HAMILTON.—Constable Roy Hughes pleaded guilty today to theft of $4 in marked bills from a restaurant and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment. Hughes, a member of the force 11 years, admitted taking the money from Reginald Freeland's lunch room on James Street North.

Parish Greets Native Son And Its Founder

At the church of the Sacred Heart, his first and only parish Archbishop M. J. O'Brien of Kingston celebrated Mass at 9.15 o'clock this morning in the presence of a large congregation. Some of the priests of the district also attended including Rev. V. J. McAuley of Cam[illegible]ford, the first curate during Archbishop O'Brien's pastorate, Monsignor Kelly of Cobourg, Rev Dean F. J. O'Sullivan, Rev. Paul Costello of Hastings and Rev. J. B. Ferguson of Warkworth.

The children's choir sang the hymns during the Mass, and a group of little girls from the Sacred Heart school presented to His Grace a bouquet of roses, which he placed on the altar of the Blessed Virgin

Rev. J. J. O'Brien in an address of welcome recalled he fact that Archbishop O'Brien had founded the church of the Sacred Heart on a firm and lasting basis. "He laid the foundation of religion, education and charitable works in this parish, of which we are still reaping the reward." Father O'Brien mentioned the recent honors paid to the Archbishop by Pope Pius XI. "The Holy Father made him a Count of the Catholic church, a noble of the greatest kingdom the world has ever seen, the kingdom of Christ established on earth."

In addressing the congregation, Archbishop O'Brien said he was grateful to Almighty God for the opportunity of being with you under the happy auspices of this morning on the feast day of her who is affectionately called The Little Flower. You have been wonderfully kind to me, oh as a boy running around the corner nearby, and the friend and neighbors of 40 and 50 years ago. If the people of Kingston had any remaining suspicion about me I feel sure it was entirely removed by the character your representatives gave me last Wednesday night."

Loyal Assistance

Archbishop O'Brien spoke of the work "bees" that used to be held in the parish and at St. Joseph's school in Otonabee, and of the loyal assistance he had received "from the older men of the parish who have gone before Almighty God. I hope they saved their souls. I remember the first Sunday here, November 21, 1909, and of how the people cooperated with me in all the undertakings of the parish. If the foundation of this parish was soundly established, it was not laid by me but by the co-operation of the people. What a joy it was to come back here after I was made Bishop and find one of my dearest friends your pastor. After all I was only here four years, and Father O'Brien has been with you the other twenty-five years. What progress you have made is due to his efforts and your cooperation with him."

Founding of a school

Archbishop O'Brien said one of the happiest events during his pastorate was the founding of St. Joseph's School in Otonabee "where the children in the country section of the parish learn not only the three R's of education but also where they receive a knowledge of God. One of the pathetic aspects of his visit His Grace said, was to see and realize the changing contours of the church. So many of the older people had gone to their reward, and in their places were the little children from school "who do not know us and who were not of our time here." But that was the way of life, he added, you pressing closely upon those who were advancing in years.

His Grace expressed gratefulness for the kindly things said about him by the representatives from his old parish who attended the jubilee celebration in Kingston last Wednesday night, and said he hoped "God Almighty will always bless you."

Church Calender Text Coincides With Munich Peace

A MEMBER of St. John's Church pointed out to the Examiner today a strikingly interesting coincidence of the text for Friday, September 30 in the church calendar for the year.

"He maketh peace in thy borders," was the text chosen for that day by the editors and compilors of the calendar some time last year when the publication was being prepared for the printers.

And on Friday, September 30, the efforts of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Neville Chamberlain, to secure peace for his nation and for his neighbors in Europe were crowned with success.

The quotation from Holy Writ considered in the light of recent events seems to have been almost prophetic. At least it could hardly have been more appropriate for that historic day. The calendar texts for September were taken from the 147th Psalm, including that wonderful phrase "He telleth the number of the stars and calleth them all by their names,' 'also "He hath strengthened thy gates ....Sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving..who maketh peace in thy borders."

Tenders Called On Addition Loblaw Store

Loblaw Groceterias Company Limited are calling for tenders for the construction of an addition to their Peterborough store on Charlotte street. Plans were completed only on Friday, and a group of contractors has been invited to submit bids by 9 a.m. Tuesday, October 4.

The addition, as proposed, will have a 37 foot frontage on Charlotte street with a depth of 120 feet, corresponding to the depth of their present store, but it is understood that it will be under its own separate roof, occupying the property from the present wall to the new building J. T. Braund is erecting over the creek.

Tenders will be received by H. E. Witmer, staff architect in Toronto. The following firms have been asked to figure on the general contract: Anglin-Norcross Ontario, Limited and Bennett-Pratt Limited, both of Toronto; J. K. Sheehy Construction Co., Ltd., H. T. Hickey, W. J. Braund and T. C. Ephgrave of Peterborough. The addition will be one storey in height, concrete foundation, brick walls, tar and gravel roof, hot water heating. The contract does not include the store front, the Examiner was informed.

The plans do not show what connecting link will be made between the two buildings, it was said, but presumably connecting doors will be put in later. From the fact that the contractors have the plans before them only during the week-end it is obvious that the Loblaw Company is in a hurry to get prices with which to proceed at once with their project.

No Rip-Rapping On Otonabee River

In regard to the government riprapping work here Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C., has received the following letter from Hon. P. J. A. Cardin, Minister of Public Works

"Permit me to acknowledge the receipts of your telegram of the 26 inst. in reference to the proposed protection work at Peterborough. In reply I would inform you that the work under consideration is not located on that portion of Point St. Charles fronting on the Otonabee River which the district engineer reports is, as you state, practically all filled with sawdust, edgings and slabs."

DUCKS NOT PLENTIFUL.

Chief Dan Whetung of Curve Lake reports that the ducks have not been especially plentiful in Chemong or Buckhorn Lakes so far. The late flight has not started and the fall ducks are not as numerous as usual at this season of the year. "Perhaps they know it is going to stay warm for a while," remarked the Curve Lake chief to-day.

City Ministers Offer Prayers Of Thanksgiving

All denominations offered prayers of thanksgiving on Sunday to the God of Peace who had seen fit to turn the fast travelling tide of chaotic events of the past few weeks into a state of comparative tranquility and near record congregations were noted in many of the city churches.

Mothers and sweethearts who for the past month had been harassed by the thought that war was inevitable and that its beginning might take their loved ones to the front, all bowed their heads in thanksgiving that war had been averted and to pray that British diplomacy would continue to keep the horrors of war from becoming a reality in central Europe.

Clergymen almost without exception made reference in their sermons to the history making conference at Munich during the past week, and they were unanimous in their praise for the fine work of Neville Chamberlain.

George Street United.

"History is a great corrective. It gives perspective and proportion. It clears the vision for the understanding of to-day, that we may know how to grapple with the realities of life now, and at the same time prepare for to-morrow," said the Rev. M. C. Parr at George Street United Church.

"We live in an enmeshed world. The peoples of the world are bound together in the common webb of life as never before in history. They are now only in contact, they are interlocked. For good or ill all nations are brought into intimate contact and are compelled to adjust themselves to a new world. Our generation must wrestle with the problem of how to make the gears of civilization mesh. These gears clash and grind and rebel now. They must be made to mesh effectively and smoothly, for mesh they must or the machine will be wrecked.

"The world will nevcer be able to pay its debt of gratitude to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain for his initiative effort to express the mind of the world in its conviction that the one thing that matters to-day is human value.

"I personally feel that war being averted is now only due to the peace propaganda through the years. Since 1914 and 1918, but also through the power of the radio and prayer. Let us continue to pray that this public opinion against war will continue to be so strong that no nation will dare to think of an aggressive warfare.

"We thank God for the Munich conference."

St. Andrew's United.

Rev. E. W. Young referred to the events of recent weeks in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday night.

During the last few weeks he said we have had the consummation of an age. The world has set in judgment upon war, and pronounced an irrevocable sentence. There were two figures before the world with different scales of values. One glorified war, the other hated it in his soul. What a difference there was between 1914 and 1938. A few days more delay would probably have prevented the Great War with its awful spiritual degradation, and loss of life.

The people of Germany and Italy cheered the peacemakers as heartily as the people of England. We have finished an era of human history and entered upon a new epoch. War will never again have the old footing in our human civilisation. We owe a priceless debt to not only Mr. Chamberlain but to the entire British Cabinet for their strenuous quest for world peace.

All Saints' Church.

Speaking in All Saints' church at a service of thanksgiving for the peace that has been achieved so far, the rector, Canon J. Douglas Paterson referred to the dizzy heights on which the four leaders stand to-day. The very fact that they have become united over this issue makes them responsible for the future state of the Czechoslovak nations and the orderly taking over of the occupied parts. There must be a new minority population if justice must be done to them.

Then there is the world view. If they could bring about peace in this issue they have the power to compel arbitration in Spain and in China and the world demands to-day that they use this power. These nations control the source of supply of munitions and no private gain or profit must be allowed to cloud the issue. They must give us a world peace and if they fail they will never be forgiven by God or man.

St. Paul's Presbyterian

At St. Paul's Church, the Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr referred to the difference of opinion regarding the agreement signed at Munich "Whatever our opinion may be, however," he said, "there can be no disagreement over the fact that everyone heaved a sigh of relief when the news came over the radio. To be as it were sitting on the brink of a precipice, and then to be suddenly relieved from that oppressive feeling of impending evil is an experience fearful and unique. Thanks to God for His marvellous intervention at this time should come from all of us." The congregation stood, sang the doxology, after which there was a prayer of thanksgiving, and the singing of the National Anthem.

Knox United Church

Speaking at the anniversary services at the United Church in Fraserville, Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, minister at Knox United Church made reference to the Christ's promise of the Church, "The Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it." "During the past few weeks, it seemed that those gates were thrown wide open and civilization was about to be consumed, but the King, President Roosevelt, Mayor LeGuardia of New York and other statesmen did not overlook a great force in the matter: the appeal to the Church. They called people to prayer and in answer God worked in his seemingly obscure way through the minds and personalities of leading statesmen and with the result that those gates can claim no victory."

Motorist Escaped Death Trap Near Hastings

Gerrard Fraelic, Hastings, was pinned beneath his car after it crashed against a tree on the north road to Norwood Saturday night. Leaking gasoline caught fire, and the metal framework of the automobile was red hot when Fraelic was rescued. Dr. W. N. Campbell directed the raising of the car to release him.

Fred Goodfellow, Cecil Hayes and George Davis will have lake trout for dinner today. The trio caught a total of 15 while fishing at Jack's Lake yesterday and the heaviest was four pounds. The trout were all a nice size and showed plenty of fight. The fishermen used copper lines and minnow bait.

A GOOD DAY

The tag day held under the auspices of the Unemployed Association on Saturday was the most successful the association has had and as a result the sum of $189.69 was raised for the Christmas fund. FIELD DAY

Upwards of five hundred students both boys and girls will vie for honors in track and field events at the Exhibition Grounds on Wednesday afternoon when the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School will hold the annual field day. If the weather of the past few days continues the afternoon should see some school records shattered as reports indicate students have been training diligently for the program.

BECOMING A RACKET

"This adjournment business is becoming a racket," said Magistrate Langley in police court this morning when told that a man charged with illegal consumption of liquor wanted another adjournment. He had already had one and today's request was only granted when Inspector Reid informed the court the accused had raised $5 of his fine and wanted further time to get the balance. Magistrate Langley warned the accused that he would have to be ready on Friday of this week.

THE MALE CHORUS.

The Peterborough Male Chorus goes into second week of rehearsal for the coming season Tuesday night with a practice at the Y.W.C.A. at 8 o'clock. The chorus has already been augmented with new members in every section. The type of music presented by the director, Charles Renaud, at the opening practice last week was a delightful revelation to the members and it will comprise a program of such variety and appeal that its success is assured. Male choristers are cordially invited to enroll up to the maximum of 45 members and are asked to attend Tuesday night's rehearsal.

AUTUMN GLORY

Beech and maple wood are clothed in Autumn splendor and Sunday when the afternoon sun sent slanting shafts of light through the hardwood glades, is created a picture of exceptional beauty. Hundreds of motorists took the Apsley and Buckhorn roads for a look at the scenery and others motored along Rice Lake or towards Warsaw, where the gay colors made a pleasing vista. For those who prefer walking, trip to the top of Armour Hill amply repaid the sightseers. To the north the Trent Canal stretched like a smooth blue ribbon and along its banks the trees were points of color.

WEEK-END AT CAMP

Boys of the East City Neighborhood Club returned last night from their first week-end camp, highly delighted with the experience. Forty-seven of them and eight leaders holidayed at the Rotary Boys' camp on Clear Lake, under supervision of Y.M.C.A. officials. M. C. Munro and Darcy Windsor were directors. The camp was made possible by the boys' parents and friends. There was never a slack moment during the two days, fun was at its highest pitch, as many of the youngsters had never been in camp before. Bob Adams and Tom O'Connell were the two boys chosen as best campers.

"UNREALITY"

"UNREALITY" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ Scientist, Peterborough, Ont., on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "Let not him that is deceived trust in vanity: for vanity shall be his recompence." (Job 15:31). Selections from the Bible included the following from Isaiah 40: 10, 17, "Behold, the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: All nations before him are as nothing; and they are counted to him less than nothing, and vanity." Correlative citation from the Christian Science textbook included the following, "In the vast forever, in the Science of truth of being, the only facts are Spirit and its innumerable creations. Where the spirit of God is, and there is no place where God is not, evil becomes nothing—the opposite of the something of Spirit."

"Old Faithful" Returns To School But Is Bent On Higher Education

"Old Faithful" is back at school again. Peterborough's tame crow, pal of all school children, is bent on higher education again this year.

All summer long "Old Faithful" has been holidaying, learning golf as a hobby. He has been a frequent visitor at the Peterborough Golf Club, has astounded golfers with his outlandish language.

But now vacation is over and "Old Faithful" must go back to school. For the past two years he has followed youngsters to public school, perched on domestic science class windows, invited youngsters out to play ball with a raucous "Strike One, Play ball!" Last year he changed allegiance, sought higher education at the Peterborough Collegiate for a short time. But his mind was not equal to Latin and French and such mysteries, so back he went to public school.

Apparently "Old Faithful" feels he has learned quite a bit this summer by listening to irate golfers address golf balls and so he's making a second stab at Collegiate. This morning he was perched on the limb of a tree in Confederation Square as pupils filed to school. "Hi there! Strike One, Play Ball," he called down to astonished youngsters.

Young Farmer Left Holding Bikes When He Proves Too Good-Natured

An incident on Charlotte Street last Saturday night proved that there is one farmer who has never read the story of the boy who turned the grindstone and if he did the moral of the school book story was wasted.

The farmer's good nature was his undoing and because of an act of kindness he was left "holding the bag," the bag in this case being five bicycles. It is the old story of a "city slicker" seeking the friendly cooperation of a generous minded farmer, the latter believing he was doing a good turn, and being a good neighbor only to find in the end that he was misunderstood and lucky not to be arrested for the theft of bicycles.

The farmer was standing near the curb shortly aftern nine o'clock close to a pile of bicycles which stacked against a store wall, when a young man asked him to lend a hand. The newcomer had been the first to place his wheel against the wall and five others had been placed against it, while he was in the store.

The bike rided handed the five bicycles to the farmer, one by one until he was able to wheel his own from against the wall. Then instead of helping put the wheels back in place he jumped on his bike and disappeared down the street.

Now we find the poor helpless farmer standing with his arms around the cross bars of five bicycles which are too far from the wall to stand up.

The man made desperate efforts to push the wheels against the wall but in vain and finally he dropped the whole shebang on the sidewalk. At that moment a policeman was walking by and believing the farmer intended to walk away leaving the bicycles cluttering up the sidewalk, gruffly commanded, "You can't leave these bicycles like that, put them back where you got them.

"But I don't own the bicycles" answered the now thoroughly bewildered youth.

"You don't own one," answered the surprised constable, then suddenly it dawned on him that here perhaps was the answer to the epidemic of bicycle thefts.

"What were you handling those wheels for if you didn't own them," he queried the farm youth who by this time was beginning to feel that he was well on the way to a night in jail.

With much further questioning the boy blurted out how his act of kindness had misfired and at the conclusion of the tale the constable and a few spectators broke into chuckles then helped place the bicycles back against the wall, while the youth feeling a little more comfortable vowed as did the boy who turned the grindstone that in future he would go his way looking neither to right or left.

A SURE CURE

Police Sergeant Jack Thompson is a man of few words and a believer in the old household remedies for common ailments. On Saturday night Constable Clair McGillen was in the guard room at the station sneezing and coughing when the Sergeant came on duty. "I think I'm getting a cold," said the rookie. "Oh you do eh, well you trot over to the 'Chinks' and buy a three-decker Spanish onion sandwich," said the Sergeant, and added this was a sure cure for an incipient cold. The junior cop went his way and in a few minutes returned with a sandwich that was not a three decker but had three layers of thick slices of onion. He ate the sandwich and within an hour beads of sweat were standing out on his forehead. At four in the morning when he went off duty, there was no sign of the cold.—McG.

Kawartha Club Trophies Are Presented

The closing field day of the Kawartha Golf Club was held on Saturday in ideal weather with a large number of the members in attendance.

A novel game of golf was played over the last nine, the hole in each green being placed in the most unusual places that could be imagined. This was followed by putting, approaching and driving competitions.

A representative group of the Peterborough Golf Club attended as guests of Kawartha. At the conclusion of the sports events, dinner was served in the club-house, the president, R. M. Glover, presiding.

At the head table were R. M. Glover, president Kawartha Club; Ross L. Dobbin, president Peterborough Club; I. F. McRae, vice-president Kawartha; H. T. Bradburn, vice-president ePterborough Club; R. MacMorran, secretary Kawartha Club; Alex. Donnelly, Peterborough Club; Chas. Cummer, past-president Peterborough Club, and B. T. Burgess, chairman handicap committee.

R. M. Glover, in his opening remarks, sounded a timely note when he said that it was fit and proper at the present time to rejoice and have a good time now that peace was assured and the war clouds had rolled past. He welcomed the members of the Peterborough Club that had turned out, and thanked them for the good wishes that their presence expressed. He mentioned that members of the Kawartha Club had been present at a similar occasion at the Peterborough Club last Saturday, and expressed the opinion that interchanges such as these could only lead to lasting friendship between the two clubs.

Trophy Put Up.

A trophy had been put up for annual competition between Peterborough and Kawartha to be known as the Glover-Dobbin trophy. This he felt would develop interest in the game in Peterborough and district, and some day he hoped players would be developed who could take their place in the major competitions of the Dominion and be a credit to the city.

Mr. Glover expressed appreciation to all those who had been responsible for the operation of the club. He said that it would be difficult to find a more beautiful place in the province.

Ross Dobbin introduced the members of the Peterborough Club, who were asked to stand and receive the greeting of the Kawartha members

Mr Dobbin expressed his pdeasure at the happy relationship between the two clubs.

The presentation of trophies followed and were presented by the President.

D. C. Durland Trophy (Club Championship)—Won by S. Whiddon; runner-up, W. B. Brown.

Kawartha Cub—Won by R. Wylie; runner-up A. Winslow.

B. I. Burgess made the following presentations for events run off during the field day:

Low Gross—C. Ackerman.

2nd Low Gross—H. Hunter.
Low at 17th—C. Westbrook.
High at 17th—C. Low,
App. and Putting—F. Wemp.
2nd App. and Putting—R. Pogue.
Longest Drive—H. Barker.
Best Average—R. Bathgate.
Shortest Drive—A. Maden.

In closing the proceedings Mr. Glover thanked the pro. Ben Norris, for his interest in the club and urged the members to take more lessons as a means of getting greater enjoyment out of the game, and remarked that there is nothing that does more for his health than the game of golf. He asked the younger members to take an interest in the club, its operation and to get into the game.

Hastings Youth Narrowly Escapes Death

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Oct. 3. — Gerrard Fraelic, of this village, miraculously escaped death from injury, burning and gas here on Saturday night, when the car he was dirving went into the ditch and crashed with terrific impact against a tree. The roof was driven in over the youth and he was pinned underneath.

A passing motorist discovered the accident some minutes later and Fraelic, unconscious and the motor still running and red hot due to the radiator being punctured. The motorist rushed into the village for aid and a number of men with the aid of fence rails succeeded in removing the unconscious form from the mass of twisted wreckage.

Dr. W. N. Campbell, who directed removal of the youth and attended him at his home, said: Fraelic had probably been in the car for over half an hour before he was released and that it took about ten minutes to revive him. He is suffering from numerous bruises centred about his chest, and shock.

Wiring Burned.

William Wellman, town constable, who rushed to the scene of the accident, said the motor of the car was heated to such an extent that all wiring had been burned and that fire was sure to have followed had not the motor been shut off. Opinion of the constable is that the car must have been travelling at a rapid rate to produce such damage and mark the tree nine feet above the ground.

The accident occurred on the Norwood road, half a mile from the village limits on a dangerous curve.

Fraelic was said by police to have been driving Dr. J. A. MacDonald's car of Hastings and was alone. Provincial Constable David Sylvester of Peterborough, was called to investigate.

Customs Receipts Show Increase

Sustained business improvement in the city as indicated by the customs and excise figures for the month of September which total $197,742.83, an increase of $37,871 over the same month last year.

The total is made up of the following items: Import duties $98,785.63, excise tax $98,851.20 and miscellaneous collections $106.00. September 30th finishes the first six months of the fiscal year for the customs departments and collections so far exceed the one million dollar mark.

P.C.I. GRIDDERS OPEN SEASON WITH A 14-13 WIN IN LINDSAY

Leether's Deadline Kick In Last Two Minutes Gives Bamforth Gang Nod

A long kick to deadline by Leether late in the game Saturday gave P.C.I. seniors a 14-13 C.O.S.S.A. victory over Lindsay on the latter's gridiron. With the count tied at 13-all, the Peterborough punter booted for the winning point a minute and a half before the final whistle. It was a close win for the 1937 senior school grid champions of Ontario.

A big crowd of rugby rooters witnessed a tidy tussle between two evenly-matched squads. As usual in the first game of the season, the players looked green on many plays and fumbles were fairly frequent, but it was a tight tussle and always exciting. P.C.I. had a 2-0 lead in the first quarter, but Lindsay outplayed them through the second and third, with 1-0 and 12-5 frame margins. Coach Bamforth's boys came on strong in the windup chukker to have a 7-0 edge in scoring.

Straight football marked the fray as the rival coaches contented themselves with getting a slant on their 1938 squads in action for the first time. Only a few forward passes were tried, with but one clicking, the quarterbacks calling for plunges, end runs and kicks. P.C.I. had an edge in kicking, Leether getting more distance than Deyell.

Harle Stars

Bill Harle was the individual standout for the winners, the short compact halfback blasting through the rival line for two touchdowns, and reeling off a lot of yardage all afternoon. The line looked fair and the back division good in spots, though the club lacked the aggressiveness shown by last year's fine crew. Wilf Ferguson starred throughout for the losers, with a beautiful performance as he whirled through the locals repeatedly for long gains. He was ably assisted on line plunging by Sharpe.

Leether kicked to deadline early in the first as P.C.I. swept through the opposition to keep Lindsay hemmed in their own territory, short Scugog punts failing to hold them back. A Lindsay fumble gave P.C.I. possession on the homesters' 40-yard chalk and they ploughed up only to be stopped cold a few yards out. Later Diplock got within kicking distance and booted one to deadline to make it 2-0. The only score of the second quarter came halfway through when Lindsay threatened on plunges and end runs, working the ball to the 40-yard line, with Deyell larruping it to the deadline. P.C.I. once worked the ball to within five yards of the Lindsay goal-line but were again stopped in their tracks.

The third was full of action, with Lindsay having an edge, mainly due to fine bucking and shifty end running by Ferguson and Sharpe. P.C.I. penalties also handed the home crew a lot of yards. Ferguson kicked to deadline from 10 yards out and later Deyell skirted end for a neat 50-yard gallop to the shadow of the Peterborough posts. Sharpe went over for a try which Deyell converted. Lindsay pressed again but Scriver recovered a fumble and P.C.I. barged up close, with Harle taking it through for a touchdown. It was not converted. After a march up the field on straight grid tactics, Ferguson plunged 10 for a try, which was not converted, and he later ran back a kick 50 yards but Lindsay lost it on a fumble.

Opening the fourth quarter down 13-7, P.C.I. fought hard in a ding-dong battle. Lindsay pressed for a space but on a quick kick exchange, P.C.I. pushed them deep in their own area. A blocked Lindsay kick gave P.C.I. the pigskin on Lindsay's 10-yard strip, and Harle bucked through for a try. Diplock converted to tie up the score. Play ranged up and down the next five minutes and P.C.I. had a fine chance to kick once but a bad snap and short kick changed the scene. They got it later and worked up to the 40-yard line where Diplock punted to deadline for the winning point. P.C.I. played safe the last minute or so of the contest. The teams:

P.C.I.: Flying wing, Foster; halves, Diplock, Harle, Scriver; quarter, Leether; snap, Johnston; insides, Gillespie, Rose, middles, Ainsley, Parnell; outsides, R. Ferguson, Ward; alternates, W. Ferguson, Campbell, Elliott, Turner, McNeill, Moorhead, Freeman, Gibson.

Lindsay: Flying wing, Elliott; halves, Sharpe, Ferguson, Deyell; quarter, Warrian; snap, Maxim; insides, Kingsborough, Balfour; middles, Wright, Hill; outsides, Nesbitt, Maxwell; alternates, Walton, Cresswell, Betts, Begley, Joyce, Stewart, Campbell, Rainbow.

Officials, J. Lamb and J. Kirkwood.

Mushroom Scare

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 3.—(CP)—To make sure they were about to eat mushrooms and not toadstools, two farmers near here let the dog try them first. They watched closely, but Rover seemed happy about the whole thing. So they ate the mushrooms. Imagine their horror when a short time later they found the dog dead. The next morning a neighbour dropped in to apologize for running over their dog.

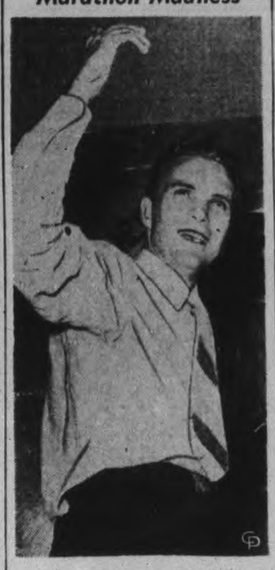
Marathon Madness



Quite a furore in the world of nonsense was created, when J. Smith Perebee played 144 holes of golf in one day, not so long ago. An epidemic of dizzy marathons followed till J. Smith himself decided to top things off by playing 600 holes of golf in four days, travelling across the continent to do so. He accomplished the feat and is seen here as he stepped from the airliner he used for his hops. He started in Los Angeles and wound up in Westbury, N.Y.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

COACH BAMFORTH'S P.C.I. senior squad—school champs of Ontario last year—are starting out again where they left off early last December. Still winning, but Saturday's struggle in Lindsay was closer than a rich guy's pals. It was 14-13, the winning point being punted by Leether a minute and a half before the last toot on the referee's trumpet. P.C.I. outplayed Lindsay in the first and fourth quarters but looked like a beaten bunch through the second and third. They are green yet and don't resemble that starry squad that waltzed through last year, but it's early in the season. They were just playing straight football as their coach looked 'em over—and there is a lot of promise apparent in the team. They ought to look 50 per cent better before long. But the Lindsay lads will be tough enough to take. They were.

• • • • • •

IN FERGUSON AND SHARPE, the Scugog mentor has two aces—and a pair of aces look good in any hand! "A second Ford Loucks," a local chap said to us of Ferguson, and he sure can whirl his way through the enemy like Topsy tearing over the broken ice. Sharpe slaps into rival lines like a crazy cyclone, too. But Bill Harle stole the honors with two touchdowns for the Garnet and Gray, and he will be a big help all season. Leether and Diplock did some fine kicking and might have won easier had they booted for singles a few times instead of vainly trying to pierce a stonewall defence near Lindsay line. The local line and backfield look fair and will do okay as they get trying new plays. Yeah, P.C.I. is still a grid force to be reckoned with in Central Ontario school circles, despite the loss of so many of the '37 championship club.

• • • • • •

As Close As War Was

COACH DAVID'S local juniors had tough luck to lose a 12-11 tilt to Lindsay, the latter gang hoisting a placement through the uprights in the final quarter to come from behind. Ackford played a fine game for the young P.C.I.-ers and the team gave promise of coming along okay. It was just a tossup between the squads all the way through and we imagine these teams will put up a fierce fight when they collide here the last of the month. It seemed like half the Collegiate teaching staff was on hand in Lindsay Saturday to cheer the boys along, headed by Principal H. R. H. Kenner.

• • • • • •

RAILBIRDS who witnessed the practice game of the Orfuns, split into two squads, at the Exhibition Grounds on Saturday saw some neat defence work. Good blocking and tackling was the order and Orfuns ought to round into a tough crew to march through. They must develop a tricky open attack and are working on it now, and we still dunno how the kicking will be. Toby Westbye is not being counted upon much, as he has been out too long—and won't be in real shape for a time. Mike Loucks was about the only one who did much galloping Saturday and they couldn't seem to pin him down when he got underway. He pivots like a toe-dancer and runs like Midnight Grattan doing the half-mile circuit. The bunch will drill nightly in their final week of practice before opening in Montreal next Monday.

Imps Win As Balmies Don't

TWO of the senior O.R.F.U. teams had exhibition games on Saturday, Beaches against Varsity in Toronto and Imperials against Tigers in Hamilton. The Imps rolled up an impressive 19-1 victory, mainly through the fine forward passing and hoofing of Bummer Stirling. Despite the big loss of the late Orm Beach, that Sarnia squad is still the team to beat in this grouping. Varsity were outplayed by the Balmy boys but copped a 10-6 win, fumbles and some poor plays by the Ponton pack in the last half proving costly. But the Beaches will be tough enough in group games. Montreal Nationals couldn't book a game for Saturday and will stick to straight practices this week for their tilt Monday with Peterborough. It promises to be a most interesting autumn in senior football circles.

HEIGH, HO, and it's off to Orangeville they go—the Petes' lacrossers tonight. They tackle the Inglewood-Caledon Combines at 8.30 in the second game of the group final series. A full team were to leave from here by cars about 2.30 this aft. A win for the locals will send 'em into Ontario finals 'gainst Wallaceburg, but a loss tonight will force a third tussle with the Combines on neutral grounds. Series with Wallaceburg is due to commence this week-end—and it won't be long now, lacrosse fans.

Ya Shoulda Played Us, Toronto

STRATFORD NATS made it two straight in O.B.A. semi-finals over Toronto on Saturday with a 7-1 win right in Toronto in 10 innings. They broke loose for six runs in the 10th in what we're told was only a fair fracas. Schoolmaster Craig outpitched Roy Downing all the way, and his buddies bashed the ball hard in overtime. Main clubbers were the Nats' centre fielder, catcher, shortstop and third-sacker. Local ossifers and several players from here witnessed the ball game. There were no O.B.A. officials in sight, except Bill Smith before the game, and he told the locals to get together with Stratford and make arrangements regarding a series between the Nats and Petes. Which the two clubs' officers did.

• • • • • •

NEITHER CLUB wanted to go north to meet Creighton Mines, nor did either care to play Wednesday, so they tossed for Saturday. The Nats will come here next Saturday, and the Petes go to Stratford on Monday, Thanksgiving Day. But yesterday, the O.B.A. wired the Petes that the locals were to go north this Wednesday to meet Creighton and play the return one here Saturday—keeping the northerners over till Monday if a third game should be necessary. The Petes have declined to entertain this and will go ahead with their Stratford series, unless the latter club changes its mind. That's the dope for the present. Looks like the O.B.A. officers are gunning for the Petes, eh? As a gee told us Saturday: "It's time that Toronto clique in the O.B.A. was cleaned out again as in '28 when the Central League and Western Ontario combined to clean house on the association."

Tweed Landmark Being Demolished

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Oct. 3.—One of the oldest houses in Tweed, said to have been built nearly a 100 years ago, is being torn down. For a number of years it has been occupied by Mrs. Dan Lindsay.

Mr. Raphael Rashotte has purchased the house and lot and plans to erect a modern dwelling on the site of the old one. The house was occupied in 1869 by Mr. Charles Garrett and his parents, and it was an old house at that date.

Later when the railroad was constructed through Tweed about the year 1880 it was used as an office by the company.

The framework of the house is made from heavy timber and there is evidence that the timber has been used previously in another structure. In spite of the fact the material must be well over a century old it is perfectly sound.

Thus another link of the past is severed. The house which Mr. Rashotte plans to build will be thoroughly modern in every way.

Brinton Wins Final Game Soccer Year

Ideal weather prevailed on Saturday afternoon for the final game of the local soccer season when the Brinton Athletic defeated their keen rivals—Canadian General—by the score of four to two, in a smart exhibition game of the code.

At the conclusion of the tussle, the President of the P. and D. F. A., presented the Spalding Cup to the league winners — Brinton — on behalf of the association. Captain Eric Jones accepting the trophy for his team and executive.

Opening Very Fast.

Both teams settled down to combination right from the kick-off. Jones, playing at inside right, along with Asa Downer, formed the new Brinton right wing to introduce the triangle plays that found the C.G.E. full-backs intercepting at the right moment. Then Goodhue and Ross of the C.G.E. evaded the Brinton defense with the former dribbling his way to goal where Adams, Brinton goalie, gathered up a terrific drive. At this point the Brinton goalie was brilliant between the sticks with his smart efforts against the drives of McMaster and Ross at close range. Earle broke up a Carpet boys attack to send Keith away on the wing, who rattled a lightning drive in below the crossbar for the equalizer. They came right back again through Goodhue on the left wing who slipped in between the full-backs to send a parting shot right acros the goal. In less than two minutes from the interval, Jones put his team ahead when he gathered up a loose ball to hit inside the upright into the net. A little later, Clark made the count read, Brinton 3, Canadian General 1.

Electrics Unlucky At Goal.

On resuming, the C.G.E. attack set a steady barrage of shots upon the Brinton goal to realize that the custodian was the greatest obstacle to their success. Eventually McMaster scored one of his old-timers from an oblique angle that went sailing in below the crossbar. Play ran from end to end at a rapid pace with the half-backs confining the issue to mid-field and it appeared that the players were taking the game like a cup-tie to keep the combination plays working to perfection. An individual breakaway by Newt Downer terminated in Curtis, C.G.E. goalie saving, but the force was too much behind the ball to keep it from counting. Brinton Athletic 4, Canadian General 2.

Stratford Wins In Semi-Finals

TORONTO, Oct. 3—Stratford Nationals, champions of the Intercounty Senior Baseball circuit, advanced into the final round of the O.B.A. playdowns on Saturday at Maple Leaf Stadium by defeating Toronto Brights, T.A.B.A. titleholders, 7 to 1, in a thrilling ten-inning game before some 1,150 sandlot fans. The Nats scored six times in the extra frame to clinch the verdict. They won the first game in Stratford 8-3.

The semi-final tussle was one of the best contested encounters witnessed in the Queen City in recent years and featured a tense pitching duel between Manager Roy Downing and Earl (Schoolmaster) Craig, with the former contributing one of the finest displays of his career over the regulation route, while the latter was equally effective, particularly in the pinches when he displayed a pronounced coolness under fire.

Both markers registered by the respective gladiators in the early part of the game were unearned, revealing the closeness of the play during the entire first nine innings. However, as the two teams swung into the tenth inning, the Classic City nine chilled the Toronto supporters with a devastating three-single attack by McGillivray, Miskimmons and Carrick, the latter's blow proving to be the tie-breaking stroke which started the visitors on the road to success.

Manager Downing failed to untrack in the tenth and gave way to Al Yarnell with the count three and two on Hannigan. Yarnell's first pitch was outside and the batter strolled to jam oil corners. Later, on a perfect squeeze play in the direction of the hot corner, a costly overthrown to the initial sack obliterated Brights' chances of climbing back into the contention. It was an unexpected ending to a well played game.

Kalmusky and McGillivray shone around the keystone sack for the winners, while Spero and Wilkinson were continuously in the spotlight in the same location for the losers. Given was the kingpin slugger of the afternoon, clickin for three-in-five, all single, while Radiff continued his telling stickwork in the series with a triple and a single.

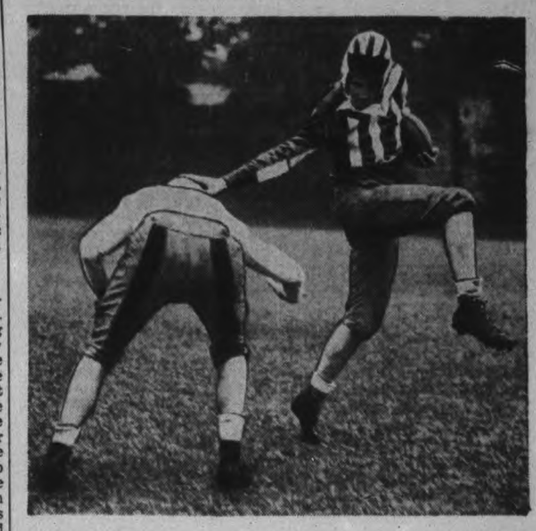
FACTS ABOUT FOOTBALL

Keep Your Eyes On The Ball Use Both Hands When Tackled

By LEW HAYMAN



THE CROSS-STEP . . . most effective way to avoid tacklers

Today we'll talk about the very basis of any attack, in fact one of the fundamentals of the game itself, carrying the ball, and from there we'll move on to one of the ways to avoid tacklers while carrying the ball, the cross-step.

First you must know how to carry the ball. You won't get very far if you haven't got that down pat to begin with. Fumbles are usually caused in two ways, (a) when being tackled or (b) when receiving the ball. When you are receiving the ball from the snap or a teammate on an extension play the commonest fault is failure to follow the ball with your eyes until it's in your hands. NEVER LOSE SIGHT OF THE BALL IN ITS FLIGHT.

Relax When Receiving

Don't fight the ball. By this I mean don't get tense and so unable to receive the ball in an easy manner. Relax, take the ball in your hands, giving slightly as contact is made, and then guide it to your body. When receiving, fingers should be spread and wrists slightly cooked. Fumbles are costly in any game. CONSTANT PRACTICE gives you the feel of the ball so fuss with one just as much as you possibly can.

Once you have the ball and are running in the open field the ball should be carried under the arm AWAY FROM THE MAN OR MEN ABOUT TO TACKLE YOU. One end of the ball is placed under the arm pit and the other in the palm of the hand, with the arm along the outside of the ball. When plunging, the ball is carried against the stomach, with the ends in the palms of the hands, held snugly. WHEN TACKLED HAVE TWO HANDS ON THE BALL. You will probably use for straight arming, but if that is not successful bring it over to help the other one hold the ball.

When You Have the Ball

Now about running with the ball. A ball-carrier's objective is to cross the opposing goal line and, while striving to attain that objective, to drive for yards, struggle for feet and fight for inches. Often defeat or victory hinge on mere inches. Never give up as long as you have freedom of leg action. Hard-running backs pay dividends. That extra effort might mean an extra yard and eventually that may mean a touchdown.

When running with the ball always scan the field, that is, with one quick, look around you, size up the situation, taking hasty note of where your teammates and the opposing players are situated. Get the knack of judging distances accurately and then quickly decide on the course you are going to take. In order to run the distance you intend to with any degree of success you must develop the ability to elude tacklers. This is done mostly by using a straight arm, changing direction and using the cross-step, sidestep, pivot and change of pace while running.

The Cross-Step

To my mind the cross-step is by far the most effective of all manoeuvres used to elude tacklers in the open field. I say this for two reasons, 1, because it confuses the tackler, as the ball-carrier commits himself only at the very last moment and then may go to either side; and 2, because the change of direction is made while the runner is in full stride without any loss of time.

In executing the cross-step head directly at the opponent, then, when about a yard in front of him, lead with one leg as if you intended going in a certain direction. Then cross the other leg over, at the same time swinging the hips in the direction of the crossing leg. The ball, as in all cases, must be carried in the farm farthest from the tackler, so as to allow for a straight arm against the opponent.

In today's picture note the lead foot, seemingly ready to go straight ahead, the other foot swinging across in the cross-step, the application of the straight arm and the position of the ball in the arm away from the tackler. This step is taken a full speed, with high knee action, so that, in case the tackler does get through to grab you, the action of your legs may break his hold.

TOMORROW we'll go over a variety of important points: bucking the line and sidestepping and pivoting while carrying the ball.

CUBS WIND UP SCHEDULE TWO GAMES AHEAD OF PIRATES

Cubs Beaten By Cards 7-5 In Final; Feller Fans 18, Loses 4-1; Greenberg Fails To Top 58 Homers

By Sid Feder
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

The baseball world took a deep breath today and wondered just a little how come it still retained some semblance of sanity at the windup of as wacky a season as the game ever has worked its way through.

There was still the problem of getting the world series out of the way, but that was up to New York Yankees and Cubs, who begin the classic in Chicago Wednesday. The rest of the fellows finished their work yesterday, and, saved for the finale the silliest situation of all—Master Bobby Feller of Cleveland fanning 18 batsmen in one game for a major league record, and losing the game anyway.

Of course, there was no question of sanity involved when it came the magnates' turn to count the profits. You can't laugh off more than 10,000,000 paid attendance for a season, no matter how hard you try. That's a new all-time high for one campaign, and shows just what a tight season can do to arouse fan interest.

Surprise of the year were Cincinnati Reds under Will McKechnie. He took the 1937 cellar occupants to fourth place. They even put on a fancy finale yesterday by trouncing the Pirates 5-4, while St. Louis Cardinals, in sixth place, whipped the Cubs 7-5. The Cincinnati pitcher in the windup was Johnny Vander Meer, who turned in the greatest hurling job of the year with two straight no-hit, no-run games, something never done before.

Feller Fans 18

In the American league, Detroit Tigers wound up under Del Baker, after a surprising dismissal for Mickey Cochrane in mid-season. They ended the campaign on the up-beat, taking the Indians twice 4-1 and 10-8. It was in the opening game that Feller fanned his 18 for a new all-time high. Hank Greenberg went through the afternoon without a homer and thus failed in his chase after Babe Ruth's 60-for-a-season record. Greenberg was stopped at 58.

Perhaps the outstanding development of the year was the epidemic of sore arms that struck the long-time star pitchers. Dizzy Dean, after costing the Cubs $185,000, a record price for a pitcher—hurled only 75 innings. Carl Hubbell and Lefty Grove, certainly the two greatest left-handers of this generation, were stricken, Hubbell forced to undergo surgery and Grove shunted to the sidelines with a mystifying "dead arm." Paul Dean and Schoolboy Rowe were returned to the minors. Van Lingle Mungo wasn't any more use to Brooklyn than their double-header win over the Phillies yesterday, 7-3 and 7-2. Despite that success, they finished in seventh place.

Two other managers, besides Grimm and Cochrane, "got the bounce" during the season. Gabby Street was let out by St. Louis Browns, although he, with the help of Buck Newsom, one of the year's four 20-game pitching winners, pulled the Brownies out of the cellar. The Cards and Frankie Frisch came to the parting of the way. Another was added to the ranks of unemployed when Jimmy Wilson, wily pilot of the Phillies, resigned over the final week-end.

Foxx Comes Back

By way of adding a few parting shots: Jimmy Foxx came back, sinus and all, to win the American league batting championship; Ernie Lombardi did it in the National . . . Lou Gehrig and Paul Waner finished up under .300 for the first time in their careers . . . Casey Stengel, jinxed all the way, did a neat job of master-minding the Bees into fifth place in the National . . . They lost their finale 3-2 to the Giants yesterday. . . . With Vince DiMaggio fanning four times for an unofficial season total of 129—a new big league record . . . Joe DiMaggio's 32nd homer gave the Yanks a 6-1 windup win over the Red Sox. . . . A's and Senators split the finish—Washington 5-2 in the opener; Philadelphia 4-2 in the afterpiece . . . Browns did the same with the White Sox; Buck Newsom clicking 4-2 in the first; the White Sox 3-2 in the second.

British Golfers Trim Canucks Women's Open

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—(CP).— Five members of the victorious British golf team which defeated Canada five points to two in the International match teed off here to-day with 89 other competitors in the 18-hole qualifying round for the Canadian women's open golf title.

The field of 94 will be trimmed to 32 by the end of the day and match play will start to-morrow winding up with the finals on Saturday.

Clarrie Tiernan, a chubby Irish girl from Dublin whose sparkling golf contributed to the British win Saturday, is on the experts' list of favorites to win the open championship, now held by Mrs. John Rogers of Winnipeg.

A little Scotish girl from Perth, Jessie Anderson, is also seen as a title threat due to her superb game in the singles of the International match when she toppled the highly-rated Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto 4 and 3.

The British won the two foursomes in the International match as well as three of the five singles.

Marmora Squad Defeats Stirling 33-0

MARMORA, Oct. 3.—Marmora High School rugby team met the Stirling High School team for the first time this year and won by the score of 33-0.

At the beginning of the frist quarter Gazley forwarded a pass to Leonard who netted five points. It failed to be converted. A buck by Harris shortly after and converting it made the score 11-0 for the home team.

In the second quarter a tackle by Leonard saved a positive 5 points for Stirling. Harris then placed the ball and converted it, the score becoming 17-0. H. Reynolds got away to a clear field but was overtaken, the score thus remaining 17-0 at the end of the first half.

Marmora lost ten yards by failing to make a left lateral on a forward pass shortly after the third quarter began. McInroy completed a farword pass for a touchdown but failed to convert it. The score became 22-0. Harris secured the ball and was away for the second touchdown of the third quarter. He succeeded in converting it, the score becoming 28-0.

During the last quarter E. Reynolds made a line plunge and secured the last touchdown of the game. It was not converted and the score remained 33-0 throughout the remainder of the game.

Marmora Girls Win

The girls' softball team also met Stirling girls' team, Marmora winning by the score 36-27. Following the games, lunch was served in the hall and dancing became the chief amusement of the evening. Music was provided by Mr. H. Linton.

Queen's Tumble 15-1 Before Riders Varsity Takes Beaches 10-6 In Final Pre-Season Battles

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Though performances in the East's exhibition football circuit are not to be taken too seriously, with players lacking condition and coaches experimenting, they provide the only basis for speculation on the regular schedules.

And with official opening of the section's season less than a week off, speculation is rife on the changes for an overthrow of Queen's in the Intercollegiate Union and Toronto Argonauts in the Interprovincial. Sarnia Imperials still are the "tops" in the Senior Ontario, however. These three were crowned champions last year.

Saturday's results in the final pre-season exhibitions left the impression Queen's perhaps are the weakest in the college group. The Collegiate champions took a 15-1 pasting from Ottawa Rough Riders of the Big Four while University of Toronto achieved an impressive 10-6 over Balmy Beach of the O.R.F.U. to retain the Toronto city championship.

Continuing their warmup work against intermediate opposition, University of Western Ontario Mustangs defeated Dundas Bombers 15-5 and McGill University romped over Royal Military College Cadets 36-5. The college circuit was the only one with all teams in action.

Imperials Humble Tigers

Imperials, prepping for a try at an eighth successive O.R.F.U. championship, scored their second straight victory over Big Four opposition by licking Hamilton Tigers 19-1 at Hamilton. With Hugh (Bummer) Stirling showing the way, Imperials got going late in the second quarter after Tigers held them to a single point in the first. Stirling passed to Mike Hedgewick for one touchdown and to Bernie Moroz for the second.

The rebuilt Tigers showed no offence that could gain with any consistency against the heavier and better-drilled Imperials. Their lone single came in the second quarter.

University of Toronto Blues surprised a crowd of 13,000 with their hard-fought victory over Beaches, who only a week before had downed Argonauts, the National champions, in the first game of the series. A second-quarter attack, featuring Cam Gray's touchdown pass and placement field goal, scored all the points.

Though Beaches subdued the hard-harging Collegians in the second half they crossed their line only when Murray scott dropped a ball on his three-yard line and Sammy Sward plunged over.

Queen's, shutout 5-0 in their first game last week, had little chance against the Rough Riders. The Ottawans led 10-0 at half-time on a single, Tiny Herman's placement and Dave Sprague's touchdown and Arnie Morrison got another major in the third quarter.

Redmen Show Strength

McGill's play against the Cadets confirmed the impression they left on observers after beating Montreal Cubs last Saturday. Gaining almost at will on the ground, the Redmen rolled seven touchdowns over the R.M.C. line with big Bob Keefer, outstanding on the backfield, scoring two.

Forward passes led to all three Mustang touchdowns against Dundas. Lyn Thompson passed to Clem Faust for two and Faust tossed the other to Brian Casey late in the second quarter, when the Bombers tightened their pass defence they held the Collegians even.

Eskimos Nip Bears 35-0 In First Win Bronks Take N. Dakota 38-0

WINNIPEG, Oct. 3.—(CP).—Alberta's entries in the Western Interprovincial Union featured a five-game football program in the west Saturday with two of the season's highest scoring displays.

Bob Fritz, Edmonton Eskimos scored their first victory of the year with a smashing 35-0 win over University of Alberta Bears in an intra-city exhibition while Carl Cronin's Calgary Bronks were equally as impressive in walloping North Dakota State Teachers' College 38-0.

University of British Columbia Thunderbirds won their second straight Vancouver Big Four Football League game, defeating Vancouver Meralomas 19-0. Regina's Western Canada junior champion Dales journeyed to Saskatoon to vanquish University of Saskatchewan Senior Huskies 13-5 and Winnipeg Blue Bombers scored a 16-6 triumph over North Dakota State University behind Wayne Sheley's brilliant passing.

Harold Sutton led the Edmonton scoring parade with two touchdowns and a convert from placement. Bob Fritz crossed the last line twice and Eddie O'Brien and Ernie Stevens once each.

Native of Calgary, Jimmy Gilkes led the touchdown parade against North Dakota Teachers with two major scores. Paul Rowe, Johnny Mike Sullivan, Buzz Buzzard and Chet Hagen scored a touchdown each. Only two major scores were converted.

Blue Bombers made little headway against North Dakota State in the first half of the game here and Greg Kabat's field goal was the only score. Sheley's passes to end Bud Marquardt set up touchdown plunges by Eddie James and Russ Rebholz in the second half. Kabat converted James' score.

Lindsay Team Defeats P.C.I.

P.C.I. juniors were nosed out by Lindsay in their first C.O.S.S.A. contest on the Scugog gridiron Saturday by a 12-11 score before a good crowd of school followers. A placement by the homesters late in the fourth quarter gave Lindsay the victory after a tight tussle between two well-matched squads. It was a good early-season game, marked mostly by straight football.

The Peterborough gang had an 8-7 lead at halftime and had an 11-9 edge most of the fourth frame, but the extra three points kicked by Kirley from the 20-yard line finished them on the short end of the close score. Both sides showed signs of inexperience, typical of juniors at the start of the season, but both indicated grid promise and put up a stiff battle throughout.

Two Majors

Each club scored a touchdown in this game, McQuarrie went over for Lindsay in the second on a line buck, no convert being made. Ackford got the Peterborough try on an extend from Ainsley. P.C.I. counted a safety touch on an attempted placement, Ackford kicking. The same player booted one to deadline, and in the fourth hoisted the ball through the uprights for a placement. Lindsay got a lucky safety touch, when a kick back of the line hit a local player before coming out. They also booted two singles to account for their total. The losers tried hard at the last to notch it up again, a long forward pass being successful but a kick on the final play being short. The teams:

P.C.I.: Flying wing, Thompson; halves, Ackford, Ainsley, Gillespie; quarter, McPherson; snap, Bullock; insides, Hamilton, Melbourne; middles, Graham, Douglas; outsides, Taylor, Cauley; subs, Matthews, Perry, Saunders, Gracie, Dundas, Ferguson, Horton.

After a private service which was held at his home in Toronto on Friday evening, the remains were brought to Lakefield by motor.

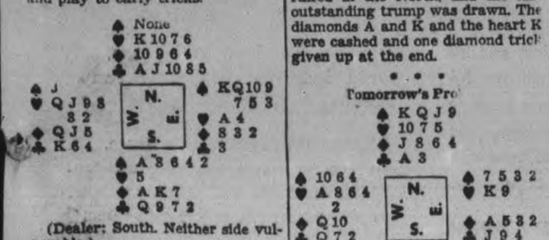
LOOK IN THE MIRROR

IF YOU COULD peer into a looking glass back of each defender, you could certainly make some nice plays based on exact knowledge of what each held. Upon occasion you can get just as good a result by using your ears in combination with your eyes. Some of your information comes from their bidding and all the rest that you really require is furnished by the cards they lead and play to early tricks.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

The bidding on this deal was 1-Spade by South, 2-Hearts by West, 3-Clubs by North, 3-Spades by East and 5-Clubs by South.

Against this bid, East led the spade K, which was taken with dummy's A. Declarer then led the heart 5 and when West could not produce the A, considering the single-ton, but played the J, North allowed it to hold. West then led a club hoping to give North the impression that the K was held by East. However, North stopped to consider that for his 2-Heart bid, West must hold the club K at least, so he took the finesse. His next step was to ruff a heart, which dropped East's A.

North then was able to lead a trump, which was followed by another heart ruff. Next came a spade ruffed in the North, and the last outstanding trump was drawn. The diamonds A and K and the heart K were cashed and one diamond trick given up at the end.

How should South play to make 3-No Trump after the lead of the heart 4?

Carl Hurl Is Junior Champ Lakefield High

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 3. — Carl Hurl won 33 out of a possible 35 points to carry off the junior championship in the Lakefield High School: annual Field Day competition held on the High School Grounds on Friday afternoon. Donald Yale, with 28 points, carried off the boys' senior championship, and Doris Chittick scored 22 points to win the senior girls' championship. Sybil Lennox scored 18 points to gain the junior championship for the girls. The runners-up were: Junior girls, Betty Millage, 15 points; senior girls, Margaret Hunter and Loena Shearer, tie, 12 points; junior boys, Bob Smith, 15 points; senior boys, Don Hurl, 20 points.

One-mile race.

The Dr. Mackenzie Memorial Cup, which is to be presented annually by the Lakefield High School Board to the winner of the mile race in the Lakefield High School's annual Field Day competition, and which was up for competition yesterday for the first time, was won by Bill Nichols, a senior student in the Lakefield High School who managed to hold an early lead in the mile race to cross the finishing line well in advance of his competitors. Joe Moher and Philip Leahy put up a stiff battle for second place with the blue ribbon going to Moher, who finished the mile run scarcely more than a matter of inches ahead of Leahy.

In previous years the prize for this race was a cup donated by the Late Dr. A. W. Mackenzie, head of the Lakefield Preparatory School. This prize was known as the Mackenzie Cup. Since Dr. Mackenzie's death the High School Board have arranged that a trophy to be known as the Dr. Mackenzie Memorial Cup will be donated each year to the winner of this race, in memory of Dr. Mackenzie, who was always a warm friend of the Lakefield High School. This cup will help to keep the memory of Dr. Mackenzie fresh in the minds of the High School pupils, and keep alive the spirit of friendly rivalry and good sportsmanship existing between the Grove and High Schools during Dr. Mackenzie's lifetime.

A cup for the senior boys' championship, which is donated by Kenneth Mackenzie, headmaster of the Lakefield Preparatory School, was won by Donald Yale.

A beautiful afternoon brought out an interested and representative crowd of spectators, and the sports were run off with creditable despatch by W. F. Munro, assisted by Miss B. Dunn, E. H. Brohman, and Rev. G. F. Kelly. The competitions were keenly contested, particularly in the case of the feminine participants, and the brand of sport produced was well above the average. All in all, Lakefield High School's 1938 Field Day might be termed a most successful one.

After Momentous Meeting

Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, RIGHT, is pictured with J. P. T. Thomas, prominent member of parliament, as they left the famous law-making edifice after the special session called by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain. It was during this meeting that word came from Adolf Hitler inviting Chamberlain to join in a four-power parley concerning the critical German-Czechoslovak situation; news which caused shouts of joy to echo through the austere halls of parliament.

Rich Resources Gained By Germany In Hitlers Czechoslovak Coup

BERLIN, Oct. 3—(AP). — Plebiscites are to determine the final extent of success crowning the ambitions of Germany, Poland, and Hungary for Czechoslovak territory. Until the voting in disputed areas is over, it is difficult to say what each stands to gain.

But Germany, of course, gets the lion's share.

Here is an estimate of some of her gains:

From 75 to 100 per cent. of Czechoslovakia's rich textile industry.

About 90 per cent. of the Republic's porcelain and mineral oils industry.

Glass, 86 per cent.; lignite, paper and cement, 80 per cent.; ore smelting and electro-technical goods, 70 per cent.; coal, 66 per cent.; chemicals, 60 per cent.; and sawmills, 55 per cent.

Germany's territorial acquisitions at Czechoslovakia's expense cover the frontier regions of the south, west and north through rugged forested territory—a line approximately 500 miles long.

Four world famous spas—Karlsbad, Marienbad, Franzenbad, and Teplitz—frequented by many North Americans and European royalty, are to be incorporated in the German Reich.

The same fate is in store for the famed Joachimsthal radium mine—the most important in the world before radium was discovered in the Belgian Congo and later in the Canadian North-West. Joachimsthal produces from 1.4 to 2.4 grams of radium annually.

Lignite mines of Northern Bohemia — now used by the Skoda arms works in Czechoslovakia—will become German, with their annual output of 16,000,000 tons. Most important lignite deposit, known as the Breux-Teplitz-Komotau Basin, is estimated to contain more than 10,000,000,000 tons. Lignite is important in the production of synthetic benzine, and hence is of great value to Germany.

Mission Circle Lays Tea Plans

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 3. — The Golden Links Mission Circle held its first meeting, following the holiday season, on Tuesday at 8 p.m., at the parsonage, Della Mae Sisco taking the chair in the absence of the president, Phyllis Kidd.

The devotional study was taken by the leader, others assisting being Elsie Theobald, Jean Fisher, who with Miss Sisco took up the lesson from Ephesians third chapter, Jean Burnham, and Margaret Smith leading in prayer. Anna Rowland told the missionary story, and Leitha Edworthy sang, "Jesus, with Thy Church Abide."

A discussion of ways and means of raising money led to the decision to hold afternoon teas during the winter, and to emphasize the fall thankoffering. Jean Burnham and Anna Rowland volunteered to write the monthly letter to Margaret Luxon, and Mrs. D. Lunn to express the sympathy of the Circle to Miss Hetherington, in the loss of her brother.

Mrs. A. L. Siscoe took up the final chapter of the study book, and after the benediction the hostess, assisted by her daughters, served homemade candy.

Water Strikes Comfort To Londoners

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 3.—(CP)—The Public Utilities Commission of this Western Ontario city of 80,000 persons today looked forward with confidence to an uninterrupted water supply for many years to come. London is the largest city in Canada dependent entirely upon underground supplies for its water.

Twenty well turn out 10,000,000 gallons a day to give the city a pure and plentiful supply, but only a few weeks ago the utilities commission was worried over a possible water shortage. Test drilling was started at likely spots and a lucky strike brought in three wells close together and giving a total of 3,000 gallons.

"That takes care of our worries for many years to come," General Manager E. V. Buchanan commented. "If these new wells stand up—and we believe they will—our present supply will be adequate until the city's population reaches around 100,000."

Thirty years and more ago London, the "Forest City," was faced with the alternative of searching for underground water or putting in a costly system of mains and filtration plant to bring in water from Lake Erie, 26 miles away, or Lake Huron, 40 miles to the north.

Near Springbank Park, a civic playground centre, artesian wells with water of exceptional purity were found. They were named for Sir Adam Beck, the late hydro knight who played a prominent part in the city's life.

It was then discovered the district, through ancient glacial drift, was spotted with many underground reservoirs—large supplies of water that seeped through gravel deposits 60 to 150 feet deep and were held in surrounding rock.

The newly-discovered wells tap just such a supply and are within a mile or so of the original Beck wells. Unlike the first wells, however, the new ones are of the deep well variety, while the Beck artesian supply comes from what are known as "flowing wells." The water springs to the surface and is collected in a series of basins and stored in a large revervoir atop Reservoir Hill, one of the show places of the district.

The Beck well system originally comprised 20 wells, but under modern methods more water is taken from just four wells. This is through the use of centrifugal pumps that allow the drawing of a tremendous amount of water through a 12-inch pipe. Now 1,000,000 gallons a day can be taken from a well, while 150,000 gallons was considered exceptional in days gone by.

While maintenance of pumping equipment in deep wells is high, the water having filtered through gravel is free of bacteria, thus requiring little or no treatment necessary in the use of surface water supplies from lakes or rivers.

Other cities in Western Ontario likewise get their water from underground sources. Among them are Kitchener and Stratford. In some places throughout the Dominion wells are used as a supplementary supply, but no other city as large as London is so fortunately situated in the matter of water.

Fannie Brice Acts To Free Billy Rose

LOS ANGELES, October 3. — (AP).—A year ago, Billy Rose, who is 38, said he was going to ask Fannie Brice, who doesn't give her age, to divorce him so he could marry Eleanor Holm, who is 24.

Today Fannie will take first legal step to comply with her third husband's repeated requests for freedom.

Martin Gang, the actress' attorney announced yesterday that Fannie's suit for divorce would be filed here in Superior Court today.

Although Rose, short-statured stager of the big spectacles, and Eleanor, a swimmer who doesn't follow conventional training formulas, have been telling reporters for months about their "if" engagement, Miss Brice will not name Miss Holm in her action, Gang indicated. She will charge mental cruelty and desertion and she will not ask alimony, Gang said.

500,000 Berliners Roar 'Heil Fuehrer' As Hitler Arrives From Munich

Berlin, Oct. 3 (AP)

A CROWD estimated at 500,000 gave Chancellor Hitler a triumphant, thankful welcome today on his return from the four-power peace conference in Munich.

The fuehrer's special bomb-prof train arrived exactly on schedule at 10:40 a.m. (4:40 a.m. EST) while brass bands blared and tens of thousands in the station square thundered "Heil! feuhrer!"

Leading men of the Nazi party, government and armed forces, headed by Field Marshal Hermann Goering, awaited the chancellor on the platform. During the night almost every inch of the station walls had been covered with flags, foliage and flowers.

Airplanes roared overhead as he rode to the chancellory through streets guarded by shoulder-to-shoulder lines of storm troopers, and more than 100,000 school children yelled themselves hoarse in greeting.

Game Of "Post Office" Is Halted, When Too Much Vigor Put In "Kiss"

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Oct. 3.—A new pastime among the younger folk of this village was introduced in a local restaurant yesterday but was short lived. A group of young men and girls had congregated in a corner of the building and seemed to be playing "post-office," a kissing game.

One of the young ladies had been recipient of a prolonged "smack" when she discovered her lip was bleeding. The young modern Casanova may have put too much vigor into the game or some one may have pushed their heads together but at any rate the game came to an abrupt ending with one casualty.

LONDON, Oct. 4—(AP).—Great Britain speeded up rearmament today in an effort to preserve the "Munich peace."

As opposition to Prime Minister Chamberlain's settlement of the German Czechoslovak dispute entered its second day in the House of Commons, it was suggested freely that the new arms campaign would include some form of conscription.

Diplomatic circles said that even the prime minister was not prepared to believe that Chancellor Hitler had no more territorial demands in Europe, as the German Fuehrer asserted just before he, Mr. Chamberlain, Premier Mussolini and Premier Daladier of France agreed to split up Czechoslovakia as the price of peace.

Three steps in British rearmament were expected in some quarters:

1. Increased air raid protection activity and a concerted effort to grow more food.

2. New attempts to keep Hitler from dominating Yugoslavia (with which Germany reached a new commercial agreement yesterday), Poland, Rumania and Bulgaria by cooperating politically and econocially with those countries.

3. New political and economical efforts in Czechoslovakia to try to keep what is left of that country from forming an alliance with Germany.

Home office officials considered it essential to press air raid protection activity now while the fear of last week's war scare still is fresh.

Lesson to Smaller Nations.

Both Opposition and Government members of Parliament pointed out that the small Continental nations could not fail to take a lesson from the fate of Czechoslovakia, forced to relinquish territory to Germany and Poland, and perhaps Hungary.

An attempt was deemed possible also to regain the confidence of Russia by renewed British activity in trying to get foreign fighters out of Spain.

An indication of the Prime Minister's confidence of Parliament's support was seen in a Government motion signed by Mr. Chamberlain, Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Minister of Colonies Malcolm MacDonald. It will be voted on on Wednesday when debate on Mr. Chamberlain's peace move ends. It seeks a vote of support, declaring "that this House approves the policy of His Majesty's Government by which war was averted in the recent crisis and supports their efforts to securing lasting peace."

Theft of Tennis Ball For Winter In Jail Backfires As Judge Levies 50 Fine

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 4 (CP)

JOHN BOWMAN is a disappointed man today but his disappointment could have been worse.

Bowman stole a tennis ball during a disturbance at a club here Saturday and hoped he would be imprisoned five months, Police Chief Friend explained yesterday to Magistrate Frank Elb.

But the judge thought otherwise. "I am not going to have it recorded against me that I sent a man to jail for the theft of a tennis ball," he said.

Bowman appeared more hopeful when he was sentenced to a fine of $50 or two months for intoxication.

"Can't you make it five months?" Bowman asked. The judge shook his head.

Stiffer Terms Not More Crime Blamed By Nixon For Bigger Jail Population

TORONTO, Oct. 4 (CP) — Although Ontario's prison and reformatory population is "extremely high," Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, examining the situation today concluded that stiffer penalties for some offences and not increased crime, were largely responsible.

"The situation is not alarming," Mr. Nixon said shortly after he had announced that the Ontario government farm at Monteith would be converted into an industrial reformatory. He said many offences, particularly motor vehicles law infractions, were regarded far more seriously today than in the past.

The result was, he said, that prison sentences were now imposed for offences which in the past have been punished merely by fines. Furthermore, amendments to the criminal code had increased the penalties for drunken and reckless driving.

Another reason suggested for the increase in the population of the smaller county prisons was the recent intimation by the attorney-general to magistrates that they must discontinue the practice of ordering vagrants to "get out of town." That old practice had virtually been stopped, Mr. Nixon explained, and therefore many more vagrants served jail terms. This was particularly applicable in northern Ontario where the mining areas attracted "floaters."

The increase in population of Burwash industrial farm to an all-time high of 670 prisoners is attributable to the recent plan of segregating all "third offenders" in that institution, the minister explained.

Must Stand Trial

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., Oct. 4 (CP)—Frederick Pearson was committed for trial yesterday on a manslaughter count laid after the death of William Hicks in an automobile accident Sept. 3. Pearson admitted in a statement read to court that he had been drinking and felt drowsy when the accident happened. Hicks was driving with Pearson in his car.

Girl Wears Dress For First Time In Past 10 Years

Truro, N.S., Oct. 4.

WHEN the Nova Scotia ploughing matches open here today one of the competitors will be a 20-year-old girl who wore a dress this summer for the first time in the past 10 years. Roberta Ruddock can work better in slacks or breeches.

Miss Ruddock came to Canada from Colchester, England, 10 years ago. Because of her continuous farm work she wouldn't find dresses handy, she says. J. J. Duffus of Peterborough is the judge.

Autumn Storm Kills Eight Over Britain

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(CP Cable.)—A fierce autumn gale swept the British Isles to-day, taking a toll of at least eight lives.

Three persons were killed and nine injured when a tree crashed through the roof of a double-decker bus in South London. The bus was filled with passengers bound for their day's work. It took two hours to release some of the victims.

A nearby tree smashed the roof of the house and wrecked the bed in which Julia Besley, 14, was asleep. She was not hurt.

Shipping was endangered along all coasts. Telephone services were interrupted and roads blocked by trees. Pembroke recorded a gust of 93 miles per hour while the gale averaged 70 miles an hour in many districts.

The Margat lifeboat stood by the four-masted schooner Westward all night when the schooner was driven on to the sands. Later a tug took the Westward—the only windjammer holding a passenger-carrying license— in tow.

South Hard Hit.

The gale attained a velocity of more than 60 miles per hour around London. Southern England was hardest hit. Channel service was disrupted except for the Folkestone-Boulogne Line.

The three killed in South London bus accident were Charles Baker, 60; O. Nutter, 60; and an unidentified man of about 55 years. The most seriously injured were William James Stone, 52; William Miller, 29; and Albert Scenling, 33, all of South Norwood.

Heavy rains began to fall yesterday in Glamorganshire, causing the Rhondda River to overflow its banks. Tregaford, in Wales, was flooded. Several women and children were reported marooned in their homes. Pratically all communications in the Rhondda Valley were disrupted.

Other telephone lines to northwest England and to Dublin were down. Last night, Bury St. Edmunds in Suffolk was in complete darkness for an hour when high tension lines were blown down.

Airlines cancelled all flights.

River Overruns Banks

Two persons were drowned and 30 families rendered homeless when the river boundary wall at Trehafod, Pontypridd, collapsed. The breach in the wall released a torrent of water in a few minutes a depth of five and six feet and forced residents into the upper storeys of their homes. The marooned families ultimately were rescued by rowboats.

Cross-channel ferry service between England and France was disrupted by the gale and hundreds of stranded passengers at Boulogne and Calais were given temporary accommodation in local hotels.

A number of vessels were driven to shelter on the east and south coasts. Others were tossed like corks in the mountainous seas.

Distress signals were sent out during the night from the freighter Wentworth, on a voyage from Rotterdam to Montreal. The ship's rudder was disabled by heavy seas off the Azores and for hours she drifted helplessly before the raging gale. A reassuring message came from her skipper to-da yand two tugs were dispatched to her aid from Penzance.

Hungary Calls Veterans Over 45 Years

Cabinet Debates Move As Czechs Study Slovak Demand

BUDAPEST, Oct. 4—(AP).—Numerous war veterans more than 45 years old had orders to report to the nearest army recruiting station today as the Hungarian government pressed its claims to Hungarian minority territories of Czechoslovakia.

The requisition of certain raw materials and orders prohibiting the exports of metals, textiles, chemicals and leather were made known today, apparent indications that Hungary was preparing for all eventualities.

While the foreign office awaited Prague's answer to a note in which the immediate beginning of negotiating for the return of Hungarian territories was asked, a cabinet meeting was called for this afternoon to decide what measures should be taken should Czechoslovakia refuse to comply with Hungarian demands.

Slovaks Speak Up

PRAGUE, Oct. 4—(AP).—The Czechoslovak government today was negotiating with representatives of the Slovak minority on the question of complete autonomy for Slovakia.

Minister without portfolio raised the question in the name of the Slovak people's party.

The official view was that there was no obstacle in the way of granting autonomy for the 49,000-square mile Slovak section of eastern Czechoslovakia provided Slovakia remained a part of the republic. An agreement was expected in the near future.

The relation between Czechs and Slovaks in the new state was first defined by the Pittsburgh pact of May 30, 1918. This agreement between Czech and Slovak societies in the United States was that Czechoslovakia, whose independence then had not been proclaimed, should grant "cultural self government" to the 3,000,870 Slovaks.

Hitler Continues Tour

CARLSBAD, Sudetenland, Oct. 4.—(AP).—Chancellor Hitler continued his triumphal tour of the Sudeten areas today, making his first stop at Falkenau.

He was expected to continue from there to Carlsbad. German troops preceded the Fuehrer here, marching from Eger by way of Falkenau with air squadrons leading the way. The entire population turned out to welcome the soldiers and shower them with flowers.

The Eger district, third zone to be occupied under the terms of the Munich four-power accord, was under army rule pending establishment of local government along Nazi lines.

German currency already was replacing Czechoslovak money. The exchange rate was one mark (about 40 cents) to 7½ Krohen (about 25 cents), giving a nominal profit to the Reich's new citizens.

Grey Owl's Fortune Tied Up By Dispute

TORONTO, October 4.—(C. P.)—Hugh Eayrs, Toronto publisher, said in address here, the "considerable fortune" of Grey Owl, noted author and naturalist who died early this year near Prince Albert, Sask., has not been distributed because of conflicting claims against the estate.

Disposition of the estate, he said, was found difficult because of publicity surrounding the identity of Grey Owl. His widow had been unable to collect any part of it.

Following the death of the naturalist, who had described himself as a half-breed, it was stated in some quarters he was born in England of white parents.

Algomans Tame Down On Wolf Episodes Now Go In For Catching Deer By Hand

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 4.

THERE'S a new game in Algoma district, home of the famous Algoma wolf—catching deer by hand. Robert Agnew, cottaging at Harmony Bay on the Batchawana road, saw a two-year-old doe in a bay 75 feet off shore.

About that time the Department of Highways road grader came along with Ed Labelle and Max Wannamaker. Labelle took off his shoes and sox, rolled up his pants and waded into the water. When he went to touch the doe, the animal ran to shore and into Wannamaker's arms.

The matter was reported to the game warden and the deer then was turned over to Bellevue Park here.

In Tight Corner Over Czech Crisis Daladier Seeks Powers To Rule Without Parliament

Gold Watch Glistens In Potato Patch After 16 Years Lost

Dundalk, Oct. 4.

WHILE picking potatoes on the farm of Clayton Sprott at Badjeros, Albert Moore picked up a lady's gold wrist watch. Immediately he recalled his sister-in-law, Mrs. John Densmore, now of Redicksville, having lost her watch while crossing this identical field sixteen years ago. The case was as bright as when lost, but the crystal was broken and the dial faded. The works had only two rusty spots.

PARIS, Oct. 4—(AP).—The cabinet today unanimously approved Premier Edouard Daladier's plan for decree powers to "rebuild France's economy and finances."

The Premier's proposal, which was to be submitted to parliament after today's debate on the Munich four-power accord, was approved after two cabinet meetings, the second meeting with President Albert Lebrun.

The extent and nature of the powers to be demanded were not disclosed in the communique, which also declared the ministers had unanimously approved a declaration defending the Munich agreement which Daladier was to read in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon.

The critical situation and the possibility of Daladier's demand almost overshadowed the stormy debate which the Premier faced in the Chamber of Deputies on his foreign policy, which gave France peace at the price of German expansion in Central Europe.

The most pressing problem facing the country was financial troubles caused by the tremendous expenses of mobilization and the precipitous flight of frightened capital from France.

Cost of mobilization and the hasty re-stocking of war supplies has been estimated at 10,000,000,000 to 15,000,000,000 francs about $269,700,000 to $404,550,000).

That drain, which more than exhausted the government's legal borrowing limits from the banks of France, was reflected in the fall of the franc yesterday to 178.98 to the British pound.

Below Last Pledge.

At the time of the last devaluation, the Premier assured the country the currency would not be allowed to drop below 179.00. Efforts of the Exchange Control Fund managed to halt the drop two centimes from the maximum on the official Paris exchange, but in London it went to 179.06.

There was little doubt Daladier would ask Parliament for full power to rule by decree if he decided his parliamentary majority could be held in line.

Thirteen deputies, most of whom are bitterly opposed to the government, demanded the right to question the government, thereby disrupting Daladier's plans for a demonstration of the "nation's solidarity."

In the face of formal interpolation demands—each of which carries the right to make an hour-long speech—the government revamped its program and was reported to have decided to demand a vote of confidence which it seemed certain to get, although the majority may be fare from the unanimous approval Daladier sought.

W. H. Casement Laid To Rest At Lakefield

(By Staff Reporter)

LAKEFIELD, October 4. — A giant maple, in all its goldenhued autumn glory, spreads today over the grave of William Henry Casement, Canada's oldest postmaster and one of the most beloved men in his community.

When the body of the 83-year-old man was borne to the grave in Hillside cemetery yesterday, it was almost more of a home-coming than a departure. For when Henry Casement was a youngster the land that is now a cemetery was his father's farm. Seventy years ago he planted a maple tree there, and it was beneath this great tree he was buried.

There was something fitting and proper in such an end to a life of service, of loyalty, of firm endeav-

Last Minute News Flashes

PARIS — A Havas News Agency dispatch from Prague tonight said the Czechoslovakian government of General Jan Syrovy had resigned.

PARIS—Premier Daladier let it be known today that France would seek the friendship of Germany and Italy and at the same time continue to increase her armed forces as a sure guarantee of peace. Reading his declaration on the Czechoslovak crisis to the Chamber of Deputies the premier said France wished to add to her "old and tried friendships" with Great Britain and Russia the "support of renewed or new friendships."

ROME—Diplomatic sources disclosed today that overtures for the settlement of differences between Great Britain and Italy had been begun in a meeting between the Earl of Perth, Britain's ambassador, and Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano.

Sees Dangerous Year Ahead But Holds War Is Never Inevitable

Ex-Premier In His Maiden Lords' Speech Lauds Chamberlain's Success, But Would See Country Better Prepared

LONDON, Oct. 4 (CP Cable).—Earl Baldwin, in his maiden speech in the House of Lords, today called for the mobilization of industry to bring Great Britain's defences to a satisfactory point with the least possible delay.

The former Prime Minister paid warm tribute to his successor, Neville Chamberlain, for his decision to visit Chancellor Hitler.

"I know of no other man who would have brought it to a successful issue," Lord Baldwin declared.

Answering those who felt war must come eventually, Lord Baldwin said, "War is never inevitable in the distance and if there were a 95 per cent. chance of war at some future date, I would hang onto the five per cent. until I died."

"I would mobilize our industry tomorrow," he said, in warning that the coming year was bound to present many difficulties. "On how we face them might depend the settlement of Europe and of the world," he warned.

Recalling the scene in the House of Commons when Prime Minister Chamberlain announced the Munich conference, Lord Baldwin said "It was just as if the finger of God had drawn a rainbow once more across the sky and ratified again his covenant with the children of men."

Remember Grey's Face.

"My mind went back to that day in August, 1914, he said, referring to the day Great Britain decided to go to war against Germany, "and I have never forgotten Edward Grey's face, the face of a man who looked as if he had been through hell, and I thought the skies were completely black."

Lord Baldwin spoke in the House of Lords after Lord Strabolgi, Labor, who expressed the opinion that the Czecho-German quarrel would have been composed in an "honorable settlement" if the British fleet had been mobilized at the time of the Nazi congress at Nuremberg.

He charged that for the past fortnight Great Britain had been living under a dictatorship.

Lord Baldwin declared that "when the Prime Minister took that decision to go to Berchtesgaden there was nothing else on earth he could have done and I thank God that he was able to do it."

He was given a tremendous ovation. It was his first speech in Parliament since May, 1937, when, still a commoner, he spoke in the Lower House.

Tories Leaning To Fascism Says Laborite

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 4—(CP Cable).—Chancellor Hitler made his decision to invade Czechoslovakia as early as September 14, Leslie Burgin, Minister of Transport, stated to-day in the House of Commons.

Defending the Munich settlement of the German-Czech crisis, which resulted in cession of Sudtenland to the Reich, Mr. Burgin declared there was "no scrap of evidence" that Hitler would have backed down.

The Fuehrer would have risked a world war to incorporate the Sudeten areas of Czechoslovakia in Germany, and, said Mr. Bergin, "I entirely fail to subscribe to the view that anything would have changed his plans if the Prime Minister (Chamberlain) hadn't acted as he did."

As the second day of debate on Mr. Chamberlain's foreign policy began, the Opposition in the Commons also resumed its attack on the Munich accord.

Herbert Morrison, Labor front bencher, claimed the prestige and influence of Great Britain had been lowered in Europe and the world as a result of the settlement with German.

Mr. Morrison described the government's policy as "a cowardly drift" which brought the country to the brink of war. Since 1931, he said, Britain had been "submitting to blackmail," had scuttled the moral authority of the League of Nations and turned its back on collective security.

Whales Liven 85-Day Honeymoon In Chinese Junk With Jap Bride

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 4.—(AP).—There were times, Dr. E. Allen Peterson admitted to-day, when he and his crew wished they had never started their 85-day crossing of the Pacific in a frail Chinese junk.

Refreshed after the first night in nearly three months spent in a bed which remained horizontal, instead of bobbing around like a cork," the 37-year-old osteopath who turned sea captain recalled experiences of his voyage from the Orient to Southern California—much of it spent battling whales and fog.

Dr. Petersen, with his bride, Tane, California-born Japanese, consummated a long ambition when he brought the 36-foot junk Hummel-Hummel into San Pedro yesterday with two Russian youths, Nick Permanoff and Victor Ermeloff, as crewmen.

Fog was their biggest problem, the doctor said, for after two sunny days out of Yokohama, they went through a month of murky gloom, seeing neither sun nor stars.

As for whales, they were present during most of the voyage.

"They were 70 or 80 feet long—twice as long as the boat. And they looked really vicious.

"We realized one way that we were surrounded by six of them. They were diving under the craft and we were afraid they would tip it over. They gave us some bad moments before deciding to swim away."

Pilot Lands Airliner By Lantern Light As Accident Blacks Out Chicago Port

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP)

AN ACCIDENTAL "blackout" of the Chicago Municipal Airport virtually paralyzed the crossroad of the United States airlines during the rush hour last night.

A break in a power cable plunged the huge airfield in total darkness for more than an hour. The 14 radios in the control tower went dead.

An American air line ship from New York, with Pilot Tommy Claude and first officer Patrick Boyer at the controls, landed in the dark with the aid of flickering lanterns on the field.

Pilot J. H. Walker of another American air line plane, arriving from Fort Worth, Tex., with 15 passengers aboard, stayed aloft for about 10 minutes and then prepared to land in the dark. The lights came on as he was half way down.

Fast Freight Piles Into Fruit Train, 3 Cars Burn, Line Tied 4 Hours

HAMILTON, Oct. 4. — (CP). — Crew of a giant Canadian National Railway locomotive escaped unscathed to-day when the westbound Toronto-Fort Erie freight train it was hauling crashed into the rear end of a standing fruit train on the main line at Stoney Creek and became the centre of the blaze that quickly spread through the mass of splintered wood.

Five cars of the fruit train were wrecked, the caboose and two cars loaded with grapes being destroyed by fire. Two other loaded refrigerator cars were overturned on the south tracks. Traffic over the subdivision was blocked for four hours, replacement of several tracks being necessary after the wreckage was removed.

Four men who were riding in box cars on the westbound freight escaped injury.

A third freight train that was standing on the south track, awaiting clearance to use a passing track, missed being involved in the wreck by inches. Its crew immediately sped to Winona, switched over to the north track and returned, haul-

Blinded By Blast, Laborer Sees Dimly After Grafting Of Rabbit's Eye

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 4 (AP)

FRANK L. HOFFMAN, 61, a laborer blind since last spring, can see dimly today—but whether his improvement is permanent depends on whether his body can keep alive the eye of a rabbit which was transplanted to his eye socket last week.

Dr. Paul Fleming, who performed the delicate surgery last week, said Hoffman could distinguish between light and dark already.

But a Johns Hopkins specialist who preferred not to be named said that similar operations had been done in the past and the cornea of the rabbit "invariably" became paque in a few weeks or months.

Hoffman was blinded by corrosive chemicals he was spraying in a stable last spring.

The eye was taken from a laboratory rabbit and connected to Hoffman's optic nerve in a 15-minute operation.

Terror Tales Anger Hungary

Demand Immediate Negotiations By Czechoslovakia

BUDAPEST, Oct. 4.—(AP). — Newspaper reports of "increased Czech terror" angered Hungarians to-day, while the government pressed Czechoslovakia for immediate negotiations on Hungary's minority claims.

Mass meetings in various parts of Hungary demanded immediate occupation of Czechoslovak territory inhabited by 800,000 Hungarians.

The government handed Czechoslovakia a new note last night asking negotiations at once and requesting guarantees that the discussions would be conducted in "the right atmosphere" to assure a quick solution.

Some newspapers declared Czechoslovak legionnaires plundered and burned numerous Magyar-inhabited villages in Southern Czechoslovakia. (The reports lacked confirmation).

Dispatches from Bratislava said eight Hungarian-speaking recruits were shot there for insubordination).

The travellers said they saw no indication that the Czechoslovak army intended to leave these so-called purely Hungarian districts, as the Hungarian government demanded, "unconditionally and immediately."

Border Strengthened

Reports from the Hungarian side of the Danube said Czechoslovak troops had reinforced barbed wire lines along the border and that additional war equipment was being brought up. Concrete walls were reported being built as protection against tanks on highways connecting Czechoslovakia and Hungary.

Premier Beld Imredi and other cabinet members assured the nation that Hungarian minorities would "soon be free from the Czech yoke."

A Foreign Office map showing locations of Magyars in Slovak territory in 1910 indicated some 8,000 miles were populated then by Magyars. Other Hungarian statistics show about 4,000 square miles as peopled now by purely Hungarian minorities in 740 communities, beginning southeast of Bratislava and extending to the eastern corner of Czechoslovakia. The region is primarily agricultural, but includes rich mines and forests.

Tweed School Is Closed By Village M.O.H.

TWEED, Oct. 4.—(Special.) — Tweed consolidated school was ordered closed to-day for one week by Dr. M. G. Dales, Medical Officer of Health, following the death from scarlet fever last night of Ross Kleinsteuber, ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Kleinsteuber of Lodgeroom, a little settlement about five miles from the village. The boy was taken ill Friday evening and died late on Monday. It was said that a sister showed symptoms of the disease, but it was also reported that in her case there was no definite diagnosis of scarlet fever.

The action of Dr. Dales was solely precautionary and does not indicate any general outbreak of the fever, the Examiner was informed. There are four surviving children in the bereaved family.

dustrial mobilization, Lord Baldwin asserted that "there is nothing more important from every point of view than that insofar as the defence of this country is concerned there should be no difference of party."

"I am in entire agreement with those of you who would push on to bring up our defences to a satisfactory point with the least possible delay," he continued.

"I cannot help wondering when people talk as though there were something unclean in having to face discussions with dictators if they realize that one of our greatest difficulties throughout the last five years has been how to get into contact with the dictators.

"It troubled me long before I was prime minister. It (the difficulty) became obvious, since dictators will not use the machinery of diplomacy. They have scrapped that machinery.

"If you want to get anything to them it has got to be told to them direct by a man with a policy.

"There are dangers, I know. It is hard for a democratic prime minister to commit himself in the same way as man with absolute power.

"That is a risk that must be taken unless you are willing to ostracize them completely, with results that may be formidable for the whole world.

All Make Mistakes

"War is different today from what it was up to the last three or four years. No prime minister ought to commit his country to war unless he is convinced that that country is ready.

"I have no desire today to dwell on the past. I want to speak of the present and a little of the future. If I look at the past I know we have all made mistakes. We have all gone wrong at one time or another.

"There is one observation at this moment on the lips of many people —'you have got to fight some day; fight now.'

"No greater fallacy was ever uttered. War is never inevitable in the distance."

Asserting that in war there always would be fearful casualties, Lord Baldwin concluded his address by saying:—

"The children of men of all nations have their part to play now in these fleeting hours that are before us. They have their part to play, and may rulers of all nations be guided with understanding and with knowledge."

Dangerous Precedent

Viscount Samuel, Liberal, declared Czechoslovakia must be completely neutralized and her status made analogous to that of Switzerland.

The Anglo-French guarantee for the new Czechoslovakia was a dangerous precedent from a constitutional viewpoint, Lord Samuel argued, because it was done without consulting parliament. But it was done under circumstances of extreme urgency and no important section of opinion really opposed the guarantee.

Lord Strabolgi said there should be a colonial settlement but warned "the spectre of war will not be removed by surrender to threats of blackmail, or by paying danegeld (tribute), whether in the form of colonies or anything else."

He contended the ranks of Labor were essential to the government and said "you will not get help in rearmament if you are going to take this country into a new alliance which, in effect, has enlarged the anti-comintern pact" (between Germany, Italy, and Japan).

Of Germany, the Labor peer said: "Jews in Vienna are being made to clean the lavatories of storm troopers; Prince Von Starhemberg's mother is being made to sweep the streets in Vienna because she was a member of the monarchist party.

"That is what Nazi domination means. That is to what you have handed over the unfortunate Czechs and Jews in the occupied Sudeten districts."

Prime Minister King Unveils "Peace and Liberty"

Berlin Looks To New Prosperity With Fading Of War Scare

By Rudolf Josten
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

BERLIN, Oct. 4.—(AP)—Hopes are high among Berlin political and economic theorists that the world may look forward to an upsurge of prosperity, now that the war scare has dwindled.

They argue that the Munich four-power accord on peace restored confidence among European nations.

Germany will profit from the industries and raw materials received by absorption of Czechoslovak Sudetenland, one informed economic spokesman acknowledge today. The Reich already has begun plans to link the newly-acquired industries with the German four-year plan for econmic independence.

Some contend the establishment of a long-term international credit system could be the spring-board for adjustment of trade wars.

Germany's first task is working out ways to diminsh unemployment and put the Sudetenland industries—mining, porcelain, shoes, munitions —to work. The Reich did the same thing after the return of the Saar Valley in 1935 and the annexation of Austria last spring.

A Deal With Czechs?

One prospect is some sort of German-Czechoslovak trade affiliation. German trade experts express a desire to start soon financial negotiations with Czechoslovakia, particularly on the conversion of Czechoslovak money in Sudetenland into German currency.

The international commission named by the Munich conferees is speeding preparations for plebiscites in disputed districts to establish definitely Czechoslovakia's new border lines.

Army headquarters here announced troops still were busy clearing away Czechoslovak mines, so that entry into the Sudeten area at will could not yet be permitted to all.

(An advance unit of German Black Guards (SS) surrounded more than 500 Czechoslovak soldiers at Falkenau yesterday. The Czechoslovaks were held for three hours, then permitted to depart without their motor equipment and arms. Czechoslovaks indicated they would protest to the International Commission.)

ing the heavy locomotive from the tangle of burning cars. The solid iron units at the front end of the mogul were white hot and scores of ties were ignited as the engine was moved clear of the fire.

Trailing 70 Cars.

Officials attributed the accident to the fact the westbound freight's speed did not slacken quickly enough to avoid a crash. It had slowed, to four miles an hour and only the ponderous weight of its 70-car train caused it to forge into the standing train.

There was a heavy fog during the night and rails were somewhat greasy. Clouds of fog occasionally floated by as wrecking operations were begun.

Superintendent Pringle said that four carloads of grapes and the caboose would be a total loss.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E Knapman of Saltfleet said they were awake when they heard the rumble of an approaching train, followed by a crash. They saw the fire from their home.

"My wife called the Stoney Creek fire brigade and asked them to rush help and I hurried to the scene. Search was organized immediately to make sure no person had been injured. When I arrived, the fire was just starting but it was blazing fiercely when the firemen arrived about 10 minutes later."

Beaverbrook Urges General Election

LONDON, Oct. 4.—(CP Cable)—Under the heading "Let Opinion Be Tested," Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard urges, from the consideration of the national interest, that a general election be called at the earliest convenient date.

Referring to the resignation of Alfred Duff Cooper from the cabinet and a growing divergence of opinion in the ranks of the government's own supporters and the public regarding the Munich four-power agreement, the Standard says:

"Let the issues be clarified. Let policy be crystallized and laid before the electorate for its endorsement. Let all doubt as to the country's wishes be dispelled—by a verdict given at the polls.

"The need today is not for recrimination about the past, nor for partisan tactics. What is wanted is an opportunity for the electorate to have future policy clearly expounded and for the voters to return a fresh parliament with an indisputable mandate to carry out that policy."

to subscribe to a "betrayal of their own country."

The debate will continue tomorrow when a government motion to approve the foreign policy will be introduced. Labor is expected to propose an amendment and debate may not finish until Thursday.

In the House of Lords, the Labor peer, Lord Strabolgi, contended an "honorable settlement" of the Czech-German quarrel could have been reached at the time of the Nuremberg Nazi party conference if the British fleet had been mobilized.

He declared "we imposed on these (Czech) people terms much harsher than the Treaty of Versailles without giving them a chance or any hope." Labor, he said, would resist the Anglo-French guarantee of the new Zech frontiers, "as it would only lead to more anguish."

Proof Of Shame?

When Mr. Morrison said the £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) loan Great Britain already had arranged to make to Czechoslovakia was "proof of the shame of the British government," cabinet members heatedly shouted: "Take the country's opinion of that."

The Labor speaker said Mr. Chamberlain's broadcast to the Empire and the United States last week "gave a very dangerous impression of sheer funk."

There were repeated opposition cheers for Mr. Morrison and shouts of "No!" from the treasury benches as he continued to denounce the prime minister.

He said Mr. Chamberlain in his conversations with Chancellor Hitler "could have been in an immensely superior position strategically if, instead of being a rather nervous spokesman of Britain, France, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and possibly of other powers in Europe."

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 4—(CP).—Winnipeg wheat futures were 1⅝ to 1⅞ cents lower at the end of a quiet session to-day. Light sales were inspired by lower Liverpool cables and lack of export demand resulted in little recuperative power. October closed at 58⅜, November 58⅝b, December 58¼ to ⅜, and May 61¾.

Prices opened almost a cent lower on scattered commission house selling and before the end of the initial hour losses increased to almost two cents.

Liverpool sagged 1¾ to 1⅞d.

Cash wheat dealings continued quiet.

Coarse grains, however, were slightly lower near the close, while flax futures eased through lack of support.

They have four daughters, Mrs. Blake Monkhouse, Sardis, Miss Ferne Smyth, Los Angeles, Mrs. L. S. Hudson, Mission City, and Mrs. Frank French, Victoria, and one son Harold of Port Alice, who, with the exception of the last named, were all visitors to Chilliwack for the celebration.

Fashions

You'll marvel at how youthful and slim you look in this smart butcher type apron. It is made of old-fashioned calico print in yellow and white. Right up from the hem, comes a gay purple tulip to give you a pocket. The stem and leaves are in fresh-looking green, matched by ric-rac around the neck and deep armholes. Cut it out. One! Two! Three! It's finished. Note the generous wrap-around to the back to save your frock. Suspender straps prevent it from slipping off the shoulders. Solid colored cottons are equally effective. It makes a very inexpensive and lovely "shower" gift.

Style No 3487 is designed for sizes small, medium, and large. The medium size requires 2¼ yards of 35-inch material with ⅛ yard of 35-inch dark and ¼ yard of 18-inch light contrasting for applique and 4½ yards of braid.

Children Growing Up In Large Families Have a Better Chance For Success In Life Than Those Who Come From Small Families

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—A very large part of our present moral and social problems is caused by spoiled children, and children are pretty sure to be spoiled when there are only one or two in the family, no matter how good the parents are, though, of course, you can find individual exceptions to this rule. Divorce, crime, immorality, and so forth, are bound to get worse as families become smaller and the number of spoiled children increase in spite of everything the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and P.T.A. and the schools can do. The remedy for many of our social and moral ills is the old-fashioned family of ten or more children.

R. M. H.

ANSWER:

Undoubtedly the limiting of families to one or two children is responsible for the great number of spoiled brats in our midst who grow up to be hoodlums, are pests in the communities in which they live, curses to themselves and who bring grief and shame to their parents. Having only one or two children, doting fathers and mothers have more money and time to devote to cultivating selfishness, egotism and arrogance in the individual child than they could if they had a baker's dozen of them.

Besides, children discipline each other with a thoroughness and severity that few parents would have the nerve to use. They play no favorites among themselves. There are no pampered white-haired darlings in their midst to whom they give the best of everything and whose shortcomings they condone. Johnny acquires altruism by having his tendency to grab beaten out of him by older brothers and sisters who make him play fair, or else—. Tommy has his self-esteem punctured by ridicule. Mary ceases to weep when she finds that her tears get her nowhere.

So so it goes. It is rare to find a man or woman who has grown up in a big family who cannot take life on the chin, who is not disciplined and self-controlled and who has not had all the pompousness and pretense sweated out of his or her soul. There is nothing more salutary than the cruel candor of a brother or sister, and fortunate are those who are blessed with it in their formative years.

A famous child specialist said not long ago that what most of his little patients needed more than anything else was plenty of wholesome neglect. And that is what the child who belongs to a big family gets.

He doesn't grow up thinking he is the center of the universe as the ONLY child does. He doesn't have the spotlight continually turned upon him. He doesn't have a circle of adoring relatives worshipping at his feet. He isn't indulged in everything he wants. He is just one of the bunch of kids who has to stand on his own feet and fight for what he wants, and he has a far better chance of growing up into a strong man than the petted and spoiled ONLY child has.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have always wondered why my husband married me. He is one of the men who is wrapped up in his business and it requires him to be continually on the go. He never even had time to court me, only by letters, telegrams and long-distance telephone calls. I had to meet him halfway across the country for the wedding ceremony. He didn't marry for a home because he knew he would never have time to be in one. He didn't marry for companionship, as we are together only for about twenty-four hours every month. Understand I am happy and glad that he married me and he seems satisfied, but why did he do it?

MRS. R. A. A.

ANSWER:

No one knows why any one else marries. Least of all does the individual himself know. It is all part of the sweet mystery of love that makes each of us crave a mate, some one who belongs to us, some one who is closer to us than any one else in the world, some one who is just part of us.

Some men marry for a home. Others because they want children. Others because they are weak and self-pitying and want a woman to mother them, fuss over them and tell them that their failures are somebody else's fault. Many men marry because they have a queer idea that marriage is a stabilizing institution that will change all their tastes and habits and turn them from being rounders into staid citizens.

But many a woman like yourself wonders why her husband married her. She wonders why he established a home that he never stays in any longer than he can help. She wonders why he tied himself down to one woman when he wants to play around with many women. She wonders why he burdened himself with the support of a family when he begrudges every cent it costs. And, most of all, she wonders why he picked her out for a wife when apparently nothing she does pleases him and he rarely speaks to her except to find fault with her. But she never finds out why he did it.

• • • • • •

DEAR MISS DIX—What can be done to compel a man almost 50 to assume the responsibility for the support of his family? He has an A-1 education, general and professional, yet for five years he has done nothing but sit and reflect what a cruel world it is. He makes no effort to make a living.

BAFFLED.

ANSWER:

If a man lacks energy and initiative, there is no way to supply it artificially to him. Laziness is the most incurable of all vices. The only people who have profited by the depression are those to whom it has furnished an alibi for not working.

Autumn Tea Is Held at Central

Chrysanthemums in beautiful shades adorned the Kindergarten room of the Central School for a pleasant Autumn tea that was held under the auspices of the Central Home and School Association.

Guests were received by Mrs. J. H. Quirt and Mrs. Poulson, and tea was poured by Mrs. R. J. Bolton and Mrs. K. S. Wightman at the attractive tea table, which was lace-covered, and centered with a silver basket of scarlet salvia.

Mrs. L. Raper was treasurer for the occasion, Mrs. A. Payne and Mrs. F. Honor were general convenors; kitchen arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Constable, Mrs. G. Metcalfe and Mrs. H. Delahaye, and other assistants were Mrs. N. Stanger, Mrs. L. Callander, Mrs. A. Hempstead, Mrs. Burns, Mrs. Fleetwood, and Mrs. R. Wilson.

Musical numbers played by small Miss Ruth Callander, and a duet by the Misses Lenore Skitch and Helen Miller added to the pleasures of the afternoon.

American toys are to be sold in India.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Put up the sword!" The voice of Christ once more
Speaks, in the pauses of the cannon's roar. . . .
O men and brothers! Let that voice be heard,
War fails, try peace; put up the useless sword."—Disarmament.

Dear Friends:

The other day a few of us were talking about war and rumors of war. Everyone was against it, and I advanced the theory which others have also advanced, that women could stop war.

Some were doubtful, but could not explain why. Some were utterly sceptical. Some said women did not start wars, so how could they stop them.

Yet, I still say that women could stop war. But it would need the women in all the world to do it, and how are we to get into the countries that want war, to get them on our side.

After all, women are people just as men are. They are the ones who go down to the gates of death to bring another life into the world, and when I say gates of death I mean just that.

The easiests of births cause dreadful pain, the complicated ones are a horror to experience, and to see them is dreadful.

So why should any woman go through all that, train a boy, educate him, love him, then send him out for another mother's son to destroy.

Death is bad, but there are worse things. We have those with us yet in hospitals and sanatariums, who were the victims of the last war, and death would have been much easier to them and to those who love them.

Yet, what are we going to do if another nation makes war against us? What altho' we know in our hearts that the agressive ones will be beaten. That will not stop the ghastly things from happening to men, and the heartache to women.

Disarmament is not the cure unless all disarm, and that they apparently will not do. It seems as if the only thing to do is to be prepared, for if any nation thinks they have no chance to beat the other nation, they will hesitate to attack.

And so, if you are one of those who deplore the fact of money going to munitions, and aeroplanes, and battleships, and enlisted men, remember how much money was blown to bits and of no use to anyone in the last war.

Remember too, that when Britain and France were prepared the other nations would not attack, so if preparedness is the solution, let us prepare.

Few people will start a quarrel with a big strong man. It is the little ones they pick on, and if money must be spent, at least our men are getting a job out of it, instead of killing each other.

The only way a bully or one who wants to be powerful no matter who suffers can understand, is when they run into another who will not stand their bullying, nor allow him this power.

Prayer may seem sissified to you, but it is the most powerful thing in the world, so, if we cannot make munitions, nor fight, nor defend our right and rights of others we can pray that the mad bullies who crave power so much, may have all power taken from them.

One person might have little effect, but if we all join in, all the mothers and fathers of sons, sisters, cousins, aunts, sweethearts, each and everyone of us, that would be something for God to listen to and answer.

For it affects each one of us. There is a dearth of men right now, so if women predominate, let their voices rise to heaven that war may be abolished. That is our part, so let us do it. Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Do You Know?

A little heating will often improve the flavor of nut meats? Sprinkle a thin layer of nuts on a shallow pan and heat them for five minutes or so in a moderately-slow oven Cool.

Salad oil should be stored in a dry, cold place? Keep coffee, tea, sugar, baking powder, spices, soda, cream of tartar and cereals tightly covered in a dry, dark place.

Iodine stains can be removed by soaking the stained area in two cups of warm water and soap suds in which one tablespoonful of household ammonia has been dropped?

Mildewed linen may be restored by soaping the spots while wet, then covering them with fine chalk scraped to powder and rubbing it well in?

"Y" Fall Rally Well Attended

The Y.W.C.A. was filled to overflowing with happy, excited girls Monday evening for the 'Y' Fall Rally, which opened with an ornamental swimming and diving exhibition by the Silver Finette Club.

The girls met in the library and Green Room, and were welcomed by Miss L. Brownscombe, who outlined the classes for the coming season, which will include gymnasium, dancing classes, badminton and basketball, club groups, etc., all to commence this week. Swimming will continue in the pool, where the girls are working toward Royal Life Saving Society Examinations, and school groups are practicing for the final championship events.

This month a handkerchief school will be held, and the reading club of last year will be continued. An interesting new Elocution class is included in this year's program, and will be conducted by Miss Gwen Parnell.

A moving picture program was shown during the evening through the courtesy of the Central Finance Corporation, and pictures were also presented of the 'Y' Girls' at Stoney Lake. Parts from the Pageant were done in costume for the guests to violin music by Miss E. Foster accompanied by Miss Quinlan at the piano.

Coffee and cake were served in the lobby, where a lace-covered table was decorated with autumn flowers. Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner and Mrs. T. Barrie presided at the silver services, and were assisted by other members of the social committee, including Mrs. R. Parsons, Mrs. R. Cutting, Mrs. J. Middleton and Mrs. H. Beal. Mrs. S. L. Smoke was in charge of refreshment arrangements.

Don't Keep on Having Constipation!

If constipation's got you down—so you feel heavy, tired and dopey—it's time you did something about it. And something more than taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat only the things most people do, the chances are that a very simple fact causes your constipation—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, eat crisp, crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1.

Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Sold by every grocer.

A Simple Document

It is not often that one has opportunity to look at one of those peace agreements. Not even at a reproduced picture of it. While Chancellor Hitler and Premier Chamberlain were in conference a few days ago they took occasion to draw up an agreement. It was just a simple typewritten document and the centre clause—for there are only three—states:

"We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo-German Naval Agreement as symbolic of the desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again."

At the conclusion of this simple document there are two signatures, that of Hitler and Chamberlain. There is not a word about the party of the first part or the party of the second part; it does not begin with a preamble nor does it contain a single "whereas." There is not a scratch of a pen to indicate it "was given under my hand," nor is there a place for a great seal or the signature of witnesses. A man selling a 30 foot lot in a municipality would have to go through a more rigid process than these two men pledging their word that Germany and Britain would henceforth strive to live in peace. After all the qualities which give value and strength to any document are not the elaborate surroundings in which it is drawn or signed, but rather the sincerity and good faith of the people who sign their names.

The Women's Institute

At the organization meeting of a women's society we noticed the presiding officer in making an appeal for greater interest during the fall and winter, suggested "We can make this just about the greatest organization in the country.

They say the field for organizations is overdone but not for the right kind. If we set our hands to it we can be away out in the lead before the season is over."

We have no objection to such vision, but without naming this particular organization we suggest it has a powerful competitor in the field in the Women's Institute. We regard that as the leading organization in Ontario today and it has had more to do with improving and strengthening the life and outlook of homes in the country and villages than any other agency of which we are aware.

The Women's Institute seems to belong to the women themselves and that is where it gets its strength. The manner in which they arrange their programs, the practical value of the topics which they discuss bespeak the presence of that one great asset which is known as personal interest. The Institute seems to have developed also the policy of collective and personal kindness, and when there is a community project which receives the support and endorsation of the Women's Institute it can right then be regarded as well on the way to completion. If we were asked to write down a list of organizations which are performing useful service we would not hesitate to head the list with the Women's Institute.

Cost Him His Life

Gabriel Poirier, a youth of 15 years who lives on a farm in the Laurentian Mountains, has been added to the long list of those who have been killed from an attack by a bull.

In this case the report refers to the animal as a "pet bull", something which is difficult to understand because there is no such thing in existence.

The animal was raised on the farm and in this way the boy Gabriel may have considered he knew it well. Probably it never before had shown its real nature and on that account the attack would come as a complete surprise.

There are animals around the farm which can readily enough be put in the pet class. We have seen bottle-fed lambs which would follow people around the farm much the same as a dog and horses come also in the class of friends. But not the bull. The Examiner has referred to this matter before and does so again because of the belief of some of our best-known cattle men that a bull is never to be trusted. It cost the lad Gabriel his life because he believed he had a "pet bull."

He'll Get Married

At the beginning of each week there are always reports from many places telling of traffic accidents where people have been injured—sometimes killed. It has become more or less routine news in which only those in the immediate vicinity are interested.

But here is one which is different. Reginald Tollon, a railway mail clerk, was in an accident on Saturday, and when he had been attended to his injuries were listed this way:

Forehead laceration requiring several stitches to close.

One eye cut, badly swollen and discolored.

Body bruises and abrasions.

One arm sprained.

But Reginald had planned to be married on Monday and he caused a communique to be issued from his bedside saying he would be right there on the dot to take part in the ceremony, and under no consideration would he think of postponing the event.

That's the spirit! And during the honeymoon that black eye will heal. Reginald has been schooled in the theory that the mail must go through and his own wedding is just as important as any bag of letters he ever handled.

Even In Democracies

We have become accustomed to hearing and reading much about one-man rule and we regard it as something which is applied to Italy, Germany and Russia in particular. So much depends upon what one man says or does that we do not like it, and we prefer to think of all the people having something to do with the way in which they are governed.

And yet in the crisis through which the world passed only a few days ago it is a fact that few men had anything to do with it, even on behalf of the democracies. The man on the street who casts a ballot now and then had nothing whatever to do with it; he may have been a mightily interested spectator, but that was all.

Premier Edouard Daladier of France was the one man from that country who had power to sign his name to an agreement, and the terms of the agreement were settled in the room where they were signed. They were not previously known to the people of France because they were not previously known to their Premier.

Much the same can be said of Premier Chamberlain. He was closely in touch with his cabinet, but he took it upon himself to make the first move in a personal visitation to Hitler. Parliament was not asked to sanction that trip. It is worth noting too that after the other matters affecting the four powers had been settled at Munich that Chamberlain and Hitler must have had something which was like an after-meeting when they decided to draw up and sign an additional document saying that Germany and Britain would not in future fight against each other. In that particular Chamberlain seems to have possessed just as much one-man power as did Hitler and he did not hesitate to sign on behalf of the British people although they previously had known nothing at all of this move.

President Roosevelt was spokesman for one of the greatest democracies in his appeal for peace, but he neither asked for nor received the sanction of Congress for what he did. He merely went ahead and did what he considered was right and he considered himself justified in speaking for the population of United States.

So it is that even under a democratic form of government we depend a great deal more than we may care to admit on the action and judgment of few men, and often enough it narrows down to one man.

As It Was On The Tenth

The annual chicken supper at the church on the corner of the Tenth Concession and the Broken Front Road always took place on a Monday evening and supper was served in the Sunday School part from 6 o'clock until 8 or thereabouts. It was generally a good half hour over the officially announced closing time. The ladies known as the Willing Workers Society used to object at times because Monday was wash day, and getting that attended to and being at the church for most all afternoon, and then staying after it was over to wash and stack the dishes made a pretty long day. But Monday it remained.

Grandfather always went down to the church a little early on that day. He held some sort of an official position and figured he should be on hand. Some one always had to help him tie his white dickey on for he never went near the church unless he was dressed fitting the occasion. He'd land in there about 5.30 or a few minutes after and first of all offer a few words of encouragement to the ladies and would inquire not too urgently if there was anything he could do.

As a rule grandfather considered it well about 5 minutes to six to go into the school and take a last look to see if the seating was just as it should be. He used to remark that a little final inspection might save a deal of confusion later on, and of course no person welcomed confusion and grandfather's motive seemed of the best.

It always did seem uncommon strange though that just at the time for the people to come in from the church where they had gathered to wait grandfather would be shifting a few chairs at the table which was nearest the kitchen door, and of course when the crowd started coming in it seemed the most natural thing that grandfather should just be seated along with the rest, and nearly always at the corner seat where he contended one always had a little more elbow room and freedom of action, although he was heard on several occasions to remark he sat there so it would be easy to move in case any of the Willing Workers wanted him to do anything. Grandfather disliked crowds and he disliked waiting for his meals so there was always a lingering though unspoken suspicion that he had a well-baked plan in mind when on the Monday of the chicken supper he arrived at the church a little in advance to take a final look at the seating arrangements.

Algoma's Going Soft

There is a new deer in Bellevue Park at Sault Ste. Marie and we read in the Sault Star how it happened. Robert Agnew was at his cottage at Harmony Bay and he saw the deer standing in the water some 75 feet off shore. Then we read "along came the Department of Highways road grader with Ed. Labelle and Max Wannamaker."

To continue: "Labelle took off his shoes and sox, rolled up his trouser legs and waded out nearly to the deer. When he went to touch it the animal dashed to shore and ran plump into Wannamaker's arms."

After which they took the deer to Agnew's house and dried it off and warmed it up a bit beside the kitchen range and then put it in the fish house, after which it went to the park.

Simple enough, but it does look as though the men in Algoma were going a little soft particularly when they shed their boots and sox and roll up trousers when going paddling into a puddle of water.

That is just what a man in any other part of the world might do, but not what we have been taught about those who inhabit the great open spaces around the Sault. Jim Curran in his Star used to tell of a woman who tossed a policeman over the woodshed, and now he must be content with tales of a man who takes off his shoes and sox and rolls up trouser legs before wading in the water! Going soft.

Through these holes are dumped the debris of the dismantled floors, leaving finally only the building's steel skeleton.

CHAMBERLAIN'S FLIGHT

(Manchester Guardian)

THE LONDON morning papers bearing the news of Mr. Chamberlain's intention appeared unprecedentedly early—an hour before midnight. Around Piccadilly Circus people were emerging from the theatres just then. The sudden rush of newsboys was bewildering to them, but almost before these newsboys could shout out their papers were being sold. As people saw the headlines there was an instant's silence; then there were slow ejaculations, and then they were laughing, cheering, some waving their hats. Everyone was certainly astounded.

VISITORS TO ENGLAND AND INCOME TAX

Editor Examiner:

Sir: In consequence of a legal decision there has been a complete change in the basis of liability to English income tax in the case of visitors.

It is fairly well known that a visit of more than 182 days in a financial year involves liability and in order to avoid this liability it has become the practice for funds to be remitted for living expenses in the year prior to that in which the visit is made.

The decision referred to above completely alters the position and readers making arrangements for long leave in England or for return there on retirement are advised most strongly to obtain reliable advice as to the present tax position.

The old methods of minimising liability are not only useless in most cases but may now have the opposite effect to that intended.

Yours faithfully,
WILFRED T. FRY.

HE KEPT ON TRYING

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Your editorial entitled "He Would Not Quit," referring to Premier Chamberlain reminds me of some verses we had in our school books of some 50 odd years ago concerning King Bruce of Scotland—The first verse ran something like this—

King Bruce of Scotland flung himself down,
In a lonely mood, to think.
He was a monarch and wore a crown;
But his heart was beginning to sink,
For he had been trying to do a great deed,
That would make his people glad;
He tried and tried but could not succeed,
And so he became quite sad.
Just then King Bruce espied a spider trying and trying to reach a certain spot, he failed, and failed, but would not give up, but after long effort he began to make the grade, for, steadily, steadily, inch by inch,
Higher and higher he got,
Till a bold little run at the very last pinch,
Put him into the WISHED FOR spot.
Bravo! Bravo! the King cried out,
All honors to those who try;
The spider up there
Defied despair,
He conquered and why should not I.

And so King Bruce tried again and this time he did not fail.

Yes, we are all so profoundly thankful to-day for the millions of prayers both public and private that have been answered and that there were men whom the Lord could use to bring peace in some measure to earth. Our very heartfelt thanks to Premier Chamberlain and President Roosevelt for his timely aid. Truly he did what he could and the Italian Premier acted at once and we are thankful for this. God bless them all and as Tiny Tim would say God Bless us all and He has done so.

Yours sincerely,
ENGLISH WOMEN.

DUMMER TOWNSHIP TAXPAYERS

Editor Examiner:

Sir: It is quite difficult and unpleasant for me to let my mind flit back over unpleasant thoughts of bad roads, when we are able to travel hundreds of miles of excellent roads such as we have found in other parts of Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. These above stated roads have lead us through most barren, picturesque sparcely populated or forest regions, in some cases inferior, and others superior to our Dummer Township sections, yet having wonderful roads. We wonder why we do not have better roads leading to our most beautiful lakes such as Stoney Lake. The Stoney Lake section has farmers and cottagers who have owned their homes and used these designated roads many years and yet are forced to struggle over them when at times seemingly impassable. There is little or nothing done to improve conditions while the taxpayer's money goes elsewhere to improve roads, in many cases those taxpayers will never have a chance to use. It shows poor judgment, lack of co-operation and unprofitable use of tax money.

There are township roads that should have had improvement but for the above stated facts these roads have been dealt with unwisely.

The road extending from the Clarina church toward the Nepheline Mine is one the councillor in charge has not been given the amount due that territory and the amount necessary to properly go ahead with improvements. This shows lack of co-operation with all concerned. Yet consider the tax money paid by those farmers and cottagers going elsewhere.

There are portions of the roads leading to Stoney Lake from the Dummer shore that are very rocky, narrow and at times almost impassable. Such conditions are driving the tourists away to seek pleasures by way of better roads and retards the advantages and conveniences of the farmer and cottagers who do regularly pay their taxes and live there.

There is the 6th line leading to the entrance of Stoney Lake, where a farmer has repeatedly asked yearly to be improved. That slight necessary improvement has never been done for the yearly taxpayer and citizen but instead, the councillor in charge has ordered done what he thought should be done regardless of the requests of the farmer.

On this same 6th line there is an entrance to Stoney Lake. One congenial family travelled over this entrance for years without complaint. Two others could use a better entrance, but private, by paying $1 yearly for trespassing and parking. This sum of $1 being requested to keep it a private drive. But for the sake of $1 these same two cottagers requested or demanded the 6th line entrance be improved by the council. This same councillor in charge of that section gave instructions for the entrance to have the great improvement anyone may see by visiting that spot. All this was done with other councillors and all concerned having little or no knowledge of what was being done.

This shows an attitude that the opinion and co-operation of all concerned were not needed or possibly wanted.

These same two cottagers could have used two other nearby publicly opened entrances to Stoney Lake. One of the two parties now uses the three entrances just as is chosen by the weekly customers. The cottager who so openly demanded improvements unnecessary has weekly during the seasons, spent time and money to drive more than one hundred miles to enjoy pleasures our yearly taxpayer and farmers cannot afford to enjoy. Yet it has been publicly announced that upon Oct. 4th this same cottager's cottage will be sold for taxes which he failed to pay various years.

It looks quite unreasonable when we have council members a reeve or any other public official who fails to see respect and comply with the needs and rights of a law abiding taxpayer.

Go visit the Clarina church extension, the many other township roads. Visit those which the councillors use mostly and by all means that 6th line entrance to Stoney Lake.

When you see that it is only a muddy, stumpy weedy bottom with very shallow water at all times you will also wonder who used such poor judgment as to order such improvements for people who do now and can use other open public entrances.

Study that particular case from an honest taxpayer's viewpoint. Should the demands or requests of a delinquent taxpayer be placed ahead of the needs and rightful requests of yearly citizens and loyal taxpayers?

Are not respect of taxpayers rights and co-operation overlooked in the great rush for votes and power by force made eminent?

Mrs. Joseph Hamilton.

THEIR TROUBLES.

(Port Arthur News-Chronicle)

THE QUESTION of Nova Scotia rights has been brought into the open again, due to a controversy which has developed as a result of the publication of articles describing extreme conditions of poverty in the Maritime Province's fishing and coastal villages.

Premier Angus A. MacDonald has challenged some of the statements but there can be little doubt that extreme conditions exist. They are cited, in fact, by those who put the blame on Confederation, stating the results of that pact have not been as expected.

In this connection, however, it is probable that if there had been no Confederation the people now blaming it for poor conditions would be appealing for some such thing as a corrective.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

HEARKEN UNTO ME, my people; and give ear unto me, O my nation: for a law shall proceed from me, and I will make my judgment to rest for a light of the people. My righteousness is near; my salvation is gone forth, and mine arms shall judge the people, the isles shall wait upon me, and on mine arm shall they trust.

Lift up your eyes to the heavens, and look upon the earth beneath: for the heavens shall vanish away like smoke, and the earth shall wax old like a garment, and they that dwell therein shall die in like manner: but my salvation shall be for ever, and my righteousness shall not be abolished.

Hearken unto me, ye that know righteousness, the people in whose heart is my law; fear ye not the reproach of men, neither be ye afraid of their revilings. For the moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool: but my righteousness shall be for ever, and my salvation from generation to generation. Isa. li: 4-8.

A Bit of Nonsense

Shut Him Up

The explorer was describing one of his narrow escapes to a crowd of people. He said:

"And fell out of bed," cried a voice.

Discipline Lost In The Life Of Many Today

Ten million lost voices, the voices of the men who died for their ideals in the last war are calling to-day to the men living to observe the three precepts of duty, discipline and defence, Stafford Lusk, of the T. Eaton Company Training Department told members of the Lions Club at their regular bi-monthly banquet meeting held Monday night at the Kawartha Club.

"In this world of chaos we must cling to some form of ideal to-day, said the speaker, and my talk this evening starts with a boyhood ideal, a mental picture so to speak of the man I as a boy hoped some day to be; a man who is able to face all situations with calmness, courage, and steadfastness."

The speaker then went on to describe the past few years as being filled with noise, tumult and trials, which had affected not only business but also social life to such an extent that leadership was needed in every phase of activity to a greater degree perhaps than at any other time in the world's history.

Strength of Family Unit.

"The strength of a nation as we know lies in the strength of the family unit, and it is imperative that we re-create in the family circle that strength and variety of character that produces leadership and steadfastness in the face of any crisis," he declared.

"If each of us is to take our proper place in the progres sof life, there is a duty we must perform, not necessarily a duty of giving one's life for one's country but any worthwhile contribution to our fellowmen." As an illustration he referred to the driving sense of duty which kept the late Madame Currie in her research work until she finally completed her task.

"We must observe three things if we are to prove worthy of our heritage, the first is we have a duty to perform, the second, discipline must prevail in our lives and last we must look to the defence of our country, our home and our ideals."

Lost Discipline

"It seems to me that in our general relationship of life we have lost discipline, and there are so many prime examples of the utter lack of discipline today to prove this statement."

"In recent years there has been a lot of indifferent and careless statements made, one in particular I heard from the lips of a politician who said "Every man who enlisted during the last war was a fool." My three buddies, all college men died in the war, one was shot down over the North Sea, one perished in a flaming aeroplane during an aerial battle over the French border and the other was killed in the trenches. When I think of those solid specimens of humanity who if they had lived could have contributed so much to life I feel that they call us today to obey our sense of duty, to discipline our lives and if necessary to defend our country, and our ideals."

Everyone Hates War

"We all hate war, and I saw it at first hand as a member of the Royal Air Force during the last conflict. War in its reality is cold, hunger, mud, and death in its most horrible form. In spite of this I feel our ideals deserve protection, and today I believe the voices of that lost battalion of noble men and fine youths who had so much to live for but who gave up their lives that the best things of life might be retained are calling to you and me to do our part in this same work."

In conclusion the speaker said: "The foregoing are simply my own personal thoughts. You may argue with me on many points but I am sincere when I say, if we are to play our parts in the game of life we must obey the three rules of duty, discipline and defence."

The speaker was introduced by Herb Jameson, manager of the local branch of the Canadian Department Stores and at the conclusion of the talk, J. E. Girven voiced a warm vote of thanks to the speaker for his interesting and valuable talk. Fred Cripps, president of the Lions Club was chairman.

Jack Marshall reported that his committee had started work on the amateur night program which would be held again this year, and he also announced a radio worth $100 would be purchased by the Club and tickets sold on it, in order that sufficient money might be available to provide the musical instruments needed to complete the Lions Club Boys' Band. Keith Braund, reporting on the progress being made by the band, said the parents of all those in the band are invited to attend the regular practise next Thursday night. He paid tribute to Bandmaster Stuart for the fine work of teaching the young musicians.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

Oh, it was a wonderful birthday party for the Tin Soldier! And he hadn't known a thing about it.

You see, his friend King Fat-Wat, who ruled the land on-the-other-side-of-the-wall, had arranged it all as a surprise.

The Tin Soldier had come galloping up to the royal castle with Hanid and Knarf, the two shadow-children with the turned-about names. They weren't galloping on a horse. Oh no—they sat on a turtle's back.

Down the road they came, full speed.

Suddenly they came to the castle. They all ran across the garden and "A wonderful idea!" the Tin Sol-The Tin Soldier rang the bell.

They could all hear the sound of voices from inside. But no one came to the door. "I'm sure something terrible has happened," worried the Tin Soldier. "King Fat-Wat has fallen inside the ice-cream freezer. We must get inside!"

So they rang the door-bell again, this time much more loudly than before. Still no one came.

"Let's climb in through the window," Knarf said.

"A wonderful idea¾" the Tin Soldier said. "I'll hoist you both in."

With that he hoisted Hanid in. Then he hoisted Knarf in. But he couldn't find anyone to hoist himself in.

All of Royalty There.

When the two shadows turned around they saw they were in an enormous room. And there, sitting at a great round table, were King Fat-Wat and Queen Marybelle, and all the little princesses, and the Royal Gardener, and the Royal Shoemaker, and the Royal Carpenter, and all the royal cousins and nephews and nieces.

"Surprise! Surprise!"

"Happy birthday!" they all shouted.

"But it isn't our birthday," said Hanid and Knarf. "It's the Tin Soldier's birthday. He's waiting in the Wht ietig enll thm thmdw outside. We'll let him in right away."

"I don't think you should," said Queen Marybelle. "It's a surprise birthday party, and if he comes in the surprise will be over."

But just then the door opened. The Tin Soldier turned the knob and the door opened right up. It wasn't locked. And when he came into the room everyone knew that he would have to be told about the surprise, so that all shouted, "Surprise! Surprise!"

And the Tin Soldier ate so many cookies and so much ice-cream that when he returned to the playroom the next morning before the children woke up, he had a stomach like Mr. Roly Poly.

AFRAID TO MARRY

by HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, obtains a job as a model shortly after her father loses his fortune in a financial crash. The same day she learns that Craig Denby, the man she loves, has married another girl. Afraid of marriage, Judy had put him off once too often. Her father goes west with her stepmother, her own mother, remarried is abroad and Judy moves to a small hotel. She finds solace in the company of Ronald Birrell, brilliant young attorney from Tennessee, who has just joined the firm of her father's lawyers. When Judy calls her best friend, Marjorie Barton, Craig answers the phone. Judy submits some dress designs to the wholesale house where she is modeling. When another employe steals them, she appeal to Ronald for advice.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 10

If only, only there were Craig! If this were last summer, he would have told her to forget it all and marry him.

Half an hour later she faced Miss Martin in the Heaton offices.

A familiar voice interrupted, deep and humorous. "I've been expecting you," it said.

THE FRIENDLY spirit in which Judy Rogers had come to Ronald Birrell evaporated as she heard his voice saying:

"I've been expecting you."

She did not comment on his statement until she was in his private office. Then she faced him and spoke slowly:

"Why were you expecting me?"

"Won't you sit down? I'd like to, and I can't while you stand, you know."

She dropped into a chair. It was deliciously soft and deep after the hard-bottomed chairs and benches of the wholesale house Ronald sat down at his desk, long legs spread out, hands back of his bright head, and grinned

"I'm sorry, Judy Rogers, but there are no dividends to amount to anything to report I'm having Miss Martin prepare a check for you, for what it's worth"

"You mean that there is some money for me?" Judy gasped

"A little. Isn't that why you came?"

Judy's eyes flamed with red lights, and she stood up. "No! I thought we were bankrupt. I don't see how there could be any money. I came for some advice. I . . ."

She turned to the door. In one more moment she would cry, and he would laugh again.

In a quick stride Ronald crossed the floor, took her hands into his strong tanned ones, and looked into the tear-flooded brown eyes.

"Judy, I'm sorry. I didn't mean to hurt you. I thought you came to collect. And I hated to think so, and took a coward's way out. I tried to hurt you. Judy, will you forgive me?"

"Why do you care if I borrow or collect? You hate me, and my kind."

He dropped her hands. "No, Judy don't. That's the trouble, you see. Now what was it that brought you here?"

I don't. That's the trouble, you see. back and forth across the deeply carpeted office twice when she finished. Then he said:

She told him briefly. He walked a sketch, anything?"

"Nothing. I've searched everywhere."

"The double-crossing scoundrels! They should be dragged into court and brought to terms. Or maybe we could arbitrate. But Judy—Miss Rogers, we must have some proof. I believe you, but a judge wouldn't."

"Then there is nothing I can do?"

"I'm afraid not. But I'll not give up. Maybe I can frighten them into confessing. Mind if I try?"

"Of course not. I think you are being fine. I can't pay you, you see, for a long time."

"I don't want to be paid. We still handle your father's affairs. We hope to be busy with them some day again. This is something personal I'm doing for you."

"It was a check for $100 that Miss Martin brought in presently, and Ronald handed to Judy.

She took it, folded it, and passed it back to him. "I'm strictly on my own. If there is any money, give it to my father, please. I'm doing fine."

Ronald put his hands on her shoulders and his gray eyes scanned hers. "You're mighty plucky, but you shouldn't have to go through this, Judy, give up. It's not a girl's racket."

She drew away. "Give up? But you got me into it. I mean you suggested that I couldn't fight life."

He groaned. "Don't I know it? And haven't I been cursing myself for seven kinds of a fool ever since? I was a conceited kangaroo, Judy, give it up, won't you?"

"And starve?"

He glanced at her quickly. "Is it as bad as that?"

"You know the family finances."

"But your mother—isn't she helping you?"

"She thinks I'm with my father. She has a lot of expense. They bought a new villa on the Riviera, you see. I'm 21. I ought to get by somehow—and I'll be a designer, too. It may be only kitchen aprons!"

"Sure you will! Judy, I owe you an apology. I thought you were doing the smart society gag—living on an income and being democratic ♦♦ ut a job. I didn't know it was this bad."

"Oh, I'm all right. The rent's paid for another month. I have a dozen cans of soup and some chocolate bars laid by, and money to last a few weeks."

"Where are you staying?"

"I'm keeping that as a secret."

"If anything should develop about your argument with the wholesale house, where shall I contact you, then?"

"I'll telephone your secretary."

"It won't work. After all, your father's lawyers have been your guardians for a long time. We claim the right. We must have your address."

"No. I'm sorry. I'm not coming out of hiding . . . that is, until I've made good. I thought I was when my sketch was accepted, but look how it turned out."

"You are making good, Judy." She noticed that he used her first name, as though it was a familiar sound on his tongue. "Do you think those people would have stolen your sketches if they hadn't been ace high? That's a sure sign that you have the stuff in you. Don't be sad about it. You should rejoice. You can sketch other dresses, can't you?"

"Of course."

"Then do it. The world will want to be clothed in Judy Rogers' frocks some day."

When Judy left the office, she felt happier than she had for several days. She wondered why Ronald had not taken her to lunch. She was oddly disappointed, let down, when she thought of it. He had been interested in her. Much as she had been aggravated by his attitude, she admitted that she had found something attractive in it. Well, she would have a sandwich and some tea before she went out to search for a new job. Here was a place . . . the place that Ronald had once taken her.

She sat down at a table along the wall, ordered a tuna fish sandwich on toast and a pot of tea.

She was half through her luncheon when Ronald entered. There was a girl with him. A girl with yellow hair. Miss Martin, of course, Judy decided in that first swift glance. Then the girl turned her head. It wasn't Miss Martin. It was someone much prettier, much more self-confident.

The girl was looking up at Ronald, and as they passed the table at which she sat, Judy noted how purple and wide the girl's eyes were, how well the slim black suit fitted her lithe body. She looked expensive.

"And she is as out of place in this eating place as I was the day he brought me here," Judy commented inwardly.

She didn't want any more of the sandwich. She drank the tea quickly, without sugar or cream.

She told herself that she was upset over the sketches, her loss of a job, everything. Not for a second did she admit that the shining-haired creature with Ronald Birrell had anything to do with it. She decided to go to a movie.

All through the picture the leading man took turns changing places with Craig. It was always that way. But Ronald's head of bright red hair struck itself impudently before her eyes now and then, too. She brushed it away.

The news reel began. The hunting season was opening. A group of people ready to ride to hounds on Long Island, was shown. There at the front, smiling ♦to her eyes, was Craig. Craig, who had said: "Judy, Judy, where are you?"

ROSENEATH

Prayers Offered For World Peace

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, Oct. 4.—References were made to the peaceful settlement of conditions in Europe, by local ministers at services Sunday. Rev. L. M. Scott of the United Church offered prayers of thanksgiving for peace, and Rev. Lemon of Norwood Anglican church, preaching a harvest home sermon in St. James Anglican Church here devoted his sermon to God's method in working out His purposes in spite of blundering mankind. Mr. Lemon's talk was based on 2 Kings 6: 15-17. He cited the historical background of Elisha, and asserted that angelic forces are as instrumental today in guiding and delivering mankind as in Elisha's time.

Products of the garden and field, with cut flowers were artistically arranged at the front of the church and on the altar was placed a great loaf of home-made bread.

Surprise Party

Friends and relatives of Mrs. Frank Nichol honored her on her seventy-fifth birthday by planning a small surprise party in her home on Saturday evening.

The W.I. of which Mrs. Nichol had for many years served as president showered her with birthday cards, as did the W.A. of St. James Anglican church. Mrs. E. J. Milne, the eldest niece, presented Mrs Nichol, at the tea hour, with a birthday cake iced in white and decorated with a scroll of pink and green. Included among those present were: Mrs. E. J. Milne, R. A. Nichol, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Drope, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Nichol, Stewart and Doreen, Miss Jessie Johnson and Mr. G. Irish, Roseneath; Mr. and Mrs. S. Leach, Mr. and Mrs. N. C Leach, Whitney and Don, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Adams, Fenella; Mrs. Aron Leach, Fort Worth, Texas, and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McKee of Oshawa. During the evening Miss Doreen Nichol and Whitney Leach favored the gathering with piano solos.

Grain Fleet Moves

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 4.—(AP)—A fleet of 12 freighters bearing more than 3,000,000 bushels of grain was en route down the Great Lakes today. It was the largest fleet to head toward this port this season. The movement was bringing grain for prompt unloading at Buffalo docks and elevators and was the forerunner of heavy shipments scheduled to cross the inland seas until Navigation closes.

CAMPBELLFORD

Masonic Temple Is Dedicated

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 4.—That the meeting had been made much more happy by the good news from the other side of the world was the opening remark made by W. Y. Mills at the dedication by the Chapter of the new Masonic Temple here on Friday evening. "Happiness is the keynote of Masonry," stated Mr. Mills of Kingston, Grand First Principal of the Grand Chapter of Canada who was guest speaker at the banquet following the dedication ceremony. "Today we are all going around with lighter hearts....we have all been worried about the catastrophe that might take place and now we are to be spared and we have found that there is still a semblance of humanity in Hitler. What we need now more than ever is that great faculty, feeling and spirit of faith. Faith is the watchword we need in these perilous days. Faith never seems to lose its appeal."

Continuing in the same serious vein the speaker claimed that life was an endless repetition "men like to go to the same places, see the some people, sing the same songs. If you want no ideas read old books, if you want old ideas read new books. What we need is more faith in our country, in God and in ourselves, and the time has now come when we should take our teachings more seriously. Freemasonry still has a great part to play in the international relationship of the world."

Two Jewels Presented.

An interesting portion of the meeting was the presentation to Dr. O. C. Watson of the twenty-five-year First Principal's jewel and also a First Principal's jewel to H. T. Scott.

Mr. J. O. Benor, First Principal, was toastmaster of the evening and L. B. Glover proposed the first toast of the evening following the banquet to the King and the Royal Arch Masons. The toast to the Grand Chapter of Canada was proposed by J. O. Herity of Belleville, who in speaking of the new temple said he wished to compliment all those associated with the work which "has produced such excellent results."

Other speakers included C. Alex. Sollett of Peterborough, Grand Superintendent, Ontario District No. 10; Edwin Smith, Toronto; H. T. Scott, who proposed the toast to "Our New Masonic Temple," which was responded to by A. J. Meyers; Dr. O. C. Watson to "Visiting Companions," responded to by J. W. Odell.

Music was supplied by the orchestra under direction of Mr. A. Hazel and vocal solos were offered by Mr. George Lucy and Raymond Wragg.

TRENT RIVER

A number of the young people of the United Church congregation met Friday night at the church for the purpose of organizing for the winter months. Rev. A. McLachlen was in charge. Mr. M. McLachlen read a story about Thanksgiving, "The Four Lost Words," and also conducted a Bible contest. Owing to the small attendance it was decided to withdraw the organization meeting for two weeks, in the meantime Mr. McLachlen expressed the wish that by that time there would be a larger attendance. The Mizpah benediction closed the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Apted arrived Thursday from Toronto spend a few days at their summer home.

Mr. S. Luckford landed an 8-pound muskie Friday afternoon while trolling down the Trent.

For Wednesday, October 5.

An interesting day, but one in which personal indulgence in pleasure or social engagements may lure from the more sordid or commonplace activities, is read from the ruling planetary directions. Friendship, comradeship, or more sentimental or romantic ties may be paramount and incite to extravagance.

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a pleasant and rather merry year, in which social, romantic, or domestic matters may be paramount. Indulgence, show, and bids for the limelight may create financial stringency or embarrassments.

A child born on this day may have very high ambitions for prestige and personal popularity, bidding high for friendship, social or conspicuous standing rather than

Hydro Rates Are Revised

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Oct. 4.—The regular monthly meeting of Hastings Hydro Commission was held in the council chambers Monday night. All members were present with exception of H. G. Fairman.

Consumers in arrears of payment were discussed and the secretary, T. A. Coughlan was instructed to forward notices to each and follow up with a cut-off order if the notice was not heeded. Dr. W. E. Wilson, chairman said accounts should not be paid the secretary but should be paid to the bank or the linesman E. M. Hess, in the case of a cut-off issue. Dr. Wilson explained, the secretary was not appointed for that purpose.

The August power account from the Ontario Commission was $307.65. A pay sheet of $200 was passed including work done on rural lines.

The local commission is about $100 short of meeting the pay sheet due to financing the building of the rural lines for the Ontario commission. The building has been going on for three months and the Hastings commission had not been reimbursed by Hydro. The chairman instructed Mr. Coughlan to send the bills to the Ontario Commission immediately. It was revealed that the hydro officials had advised the Hastings group to dispose of some of its bonds. E. M. Hess was granted permission to purchase two cartons of street lights.

Following are the revised rates of power, which will show on the consumers accounts rendered about Oct. 12:

Domestic—first rate, 4½c; second rate, 1 1-5c. Minimum monthly charge $1.11.

Commercial—first rate 4c; second rate, .01c. Minimum monthly charge $1.11.

Each of these monthly charges are subject to a discount of 10 per cent for prompt payment. The horsepower rate of $42 was unchanged.

Bulgaria has banned the exportation of corn.

Mutual Life PLANNED Insurance — saves you money . . .

Planned life insurance is like a planned house. Instead of buying a policy haphazardly you sit down with a trained Mutual Life representative, discuss the future income needs of your family and yourself, and are given a sound, fundamental "insurance plan" which, if followed, will give you and your family future income at ALL times when it is likely to be needed most.

There will not be any gaps in protection. There will be:

Income for you—to meet emergencies; to educate your children; and to retire in ease;

Should you die, there will be income to pay outstanding debts; income with which to raise and educate the family, and permanent income for your wife.

It may not be possible to embark on the complete plan at once, but rather to build it gradually as your means permit. But it is the PLAN that is important. A discussion with one of our representatives may save you or your family a great deal of worry and actual cash, because planning gives you maximum protection at minimum cost.

our: for he was placed there beneath a thing of startling beauty that he had helped to create, that unfolded all its glory to receive him, that was still in the prime of life.

Church Filled.

Lakefield citizens whom he had served, rich and poor alike, for sixty-three years, filled the United Church to pay impressive tribute to the man who had grown up with the village. There was not a vacant seat in the auditorjum nor in the balcony during the impressive funeral ceremony. They were for the most part old faces in the church, faces of old friends of long standing who came to bid their comrade farewell for a brief time. With them were fellow lodge men of the Masonic Order, the Canadian Order of Foresters, and many fellow postal employees.

His body was brought from his home a few doors distant to the church, more than sixty fellow members of the Clementi Lodge, A.F. & A.M., acting as guard of honor.

The funeral service at the church was conducted by Rev. G. F. Kelly, pastor of the United Church, assisted by Rev. J. P. Jull of Brooklin and Rev. W. J. Wesley of Camborne, both former pastors in Lakefield.

Source of Strength.

God sometimes places in a community a man who is a source of strength and protection for those suffering from the battle of life, declared Rev. Mr. Jull in his address. Such a man was Mr. Casement, a man who brought stability to an entire community, "a man to be trusted, to be depended upon in the midst of trickery and deceit." He stood ever ready to give sympathy, assistance, "he was always there," he said in tribute.

"There is no man here I venture to say who can think of Lakefield without thinking of William Casement," he said. "How many of you have not gone to him for help or advice at one time or another? It is impossible to estimate the influence this man has had on this community."

He stressed his great simplicity, his essential stability, his great temperance, and his loyalty to his friends, his community, his country.

"He held his work as a great charge. He handled your messages of love, of hope, of cheer, of sorrow, with the same care you yourself would have done. Your interests were sacred to him." He stressed Mr. Casement's high sense of public duty, related how he had served as Warden of the County and Reeve of the Village and said, "He had a lofty conception of citizenship."

Never Paraded Religion.

"He was diligent in church attendance, nor was it lip service he was paying. He never paraded his religion, but he did something infinitely better, he practiced it." Rev. Mr. Kelly led in prayer and Rev. Mr. Wesley read the scripture.

At the graveside masonic rites were performed for the man who had been treasurer of the Clementi lodge for more than sixty years. Floral tokens were heaped high about the grave, in mute token of the high esteem in which he had been held.

Pall bearers were W. J. Charlton, A. V. Hill, J. H. Sherin, Gavin Graham, E. J. Bailley, and Albert Darling.

Famed Halifax Detective Dies

HALIFAX, October 4.—C.P.). — As colorful a career as any that ever emerged from the pages of a dime thriller was ended today with the death of Nicholas (Nick) Power, retired Halifax police chielf. As a detective with a photographic memory, Power won international fame.

He died at his home here yesterday, aged 96. He had retired as Chief of Halifax police in 1907 after 43 years on the force.

Most famous of a dozen exploits that brought him world-wide acclaim was his breaking of a conspiracy that was aimed at the life of the Prince later to become George V of Great Britain.

Back in 1883, in th days when a British fleet based at Halifax and royalty in the city was almost a monthly occurrence, Prince George was on one of the naval vessels going through the mill as a midshipman. Ashore was Detective Nick Power with 19 years of service as a cop.

On a routine check-up of hotel, Power noticed two men his instinct told him would bear watching. When they left their rooms he slipped in, searched their luggage and found a bag of dynamite. With the baggage stubs for other luggage, he went to the railway station and found two diving suits and apparatus for setting off the explosive under water.

Power arrested the two. They were members of a ring who, dissatisfied with settlement of the Irish Land question, had planned to strike a blow at England through assassination of the young Prince George.

Rewarded with Medal.

To his death, Power cherished the bronze medal presented him by Prince George for his feat.

Power was able to glance at a police circular, sometimes unaccompanied by a photograph, and recall vividly its information months later.

Once he indirectly was the cause of the suspension of the extradition treaty between Great Britain and the United States.

A Family Tragedy

MONTREAL, Oct. 4.—(CP). —A coroner's jury decided yesterday that 33-year-old Mrs. Jos. Quesnel murdered her two children by feeding them wine containing enough strychnine to kill 25 persons and then committed suicide. Two other children sipped the wine but recovered after medical aid.

Prior to the tragedy late Saturday at suburban Longue Pointe, the woman penned a note to her husband saying she was "sick and discouraged....quarrelling and worrying over finances and everything else had made a wreck of me."

Horse Swims Golden Gate For Bale of Hay In Record Of 23 Minutes, 15 Seconds

San Francisco, Oct. 4 (AP) BLACKIE, stout hearted 12-year-old horse, swam more than a mile across the golden gate entrance in record time Saturday and won a bale of hay for his stunt.

He swam the ¾ mile course in 23 minutes and 15 seconds, bettering the record of "Buster" Olds, Olympic Club distance swimming champion, by one minute and 15 seconds. After crossing the imaginary finish line, Blackie swam 15 minutes more before he stepped ashore.

Ritchie Roberts, owner of the horse, went along for a wet ride. He held on a cord attached to the horse's tail, but occasionally helped by paddling. William Kyne, western racing man who bet the horse couldn't do it, will give a banquet in Blackie's honor.

City Purchases Property On Little Lake

Purchase of the former McDonald estate property from Samuel H. Abbott for $1,500 was authorized by a bylaw passed by the council Monday night.

An option was obtained by the council several months ago, and although the proposed purchase met with some opposition in discussion, the attitude of the council finally swung to unanimous support. By acquiring the lots which front on Little Lake, the city is assured of the Dominion government expending at least $7,200 on extending the stone rip-rap of the bank from the present end of the work at the foot of Lake street to what is known as Point St. Charles.

Alderman Bradburn pointed out that the bylaw should specify some definite purpose for which the lots were to be used, instead of the general terms of "the purpose of the corporation." City Solicitor Huycke said he had followed the Act in drafting the bylaw because he did not know what definite purpose might be set out. "If any ratepayer began a motion to quash it we would have to take a chance."

Alderman Gordon suggested that the bylaw specify "for park purposes."

"We could plant a dozen elms or so and make it a park," Alderman Stocker commented.

Alderman Glover said the council had mentioned the possibility of transferring the Board of Works yard to that property. Another possible use at some distant period in the expansion of the city would be as an approach for a bridge across the narrow reach of the river to Burnham's Point.

Alderman Glover said he had learned that the Dominion Government intended to rip-rap the shore of the lake 625 feet at an approximate expenditure of $7,200.

Another bylaw approved Dr. J. E. Middleton's plan for the subdivision of his property on Monaghan Road.

Restaurant Bylaw

Alderman Cotton informed Alderman Gordon that the restaurant bylaw would probably be considered this week. It is "under way," he stated, and relates to the heights of stalls in the Home Lunch, Paris, Louis, Canton and Sanitary restaurants.

Resolution by Aldermen Wilson and Stocker gave notice of the council's intentions to construct concrete curb and gutter on the east side of Monaghan Road from King to Bolivar street; also a sewer on Monaghan Road from Bolivar street 242 feet northerly as a local improvement.

To Repair Uniforms

Instead of buying a new issue of overcoats for the firemen, Alderman Juby, chairman of the fire, water and light committee, told the council that the present uniforms would be repaired, cleaned and pressed. Charles Schooley's bid of $95 for this work was accepted by Ald. Juby's motion, seconded by Ald. Glover. The chairman reported further that new overcoats would be needed for Chief Gimblett and Assistant Chief George Smith.

Have No Surplus

Replying to the council's application for a grant of $5,000 to be expended on the construction of a bridge at the London street dam as proposed by Alderman Gordon some time ago, the Utilities Commission wrote that their waterworks department had a debit balance of $3,042.20 at the end of 1937, and could not meet the council's request.

"I think they've done some juggling around," Alderman Gordon commented, "but it doesn't matter any way since the Board of Works is going to build the bridge."

"The War Is Over"

A St. Catharines resolution calling upon the Dominion Government to declare its loyalty to Great Britain in her efforts to maintain world peace was simply received. "The war's over," Ald. Gordon remarked.

Turn Over Tax

A letter from C. W. Foster of the Dominion Stores Limited, Toronto, referring to a report of the council resolution to the Ontario government proposing a two per cent turnover tax on chain stores affirmed in part as follows: "The primary producers appreciate the fact that a distribution system made possible through the chain stores has brought relief to them especially in the marketing of surplus crops, as well as marketing more readily and more profitably the various products they raise.

The end sought in discriminatory taxation against a corporation will not be gained through this means. If we conduct our business in such a way that consumers, employees and producers are all given proper service and consideration, and the methods used are right and proper, then success will attend these efforts.

If the opposite situation exists, taxation will not be necessary to remove the business, business it will fail inevitably from lack of support on the part of these people it attempts to serve.

It would be a pleasure to meet you at some convenient time and discuss this matter, and we ask only that full and proper consideration be given such matters before taxation measures are recommended or levied."

Copies of the resolution had been sent to other municipal councils in Ontario inviting their endorsation of the proposal. London, Kitchener and Niagara Falls took no action, but the council of Belleville concurred in the Peterborough motion.

Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Public Welfare, wrote that resolution would be considered when legislation was being prepared for the next sessions of the Legislature.

NITWIT HUNTERS

An Indian from Rice Lake said this morning that many of the duck hunters who have been shooting along the lower stretches of the Otonabee and Rice Lake during the last few days should be using anti-aircraft guns instead of ordinary shotguns. He claims that he watched several hunters blazing away at high flying ducks with pump guns and was satisfied that the guns would not shoot even halfway to the ducks, they were flying so high. He is of the opinion that unless the hunters use a little common sense there will be a shooting fatality soon.

IN FATHER'S SEAT.

Seldom in the municipal change and flow of events does a father see himself in the mayoral chair he once occupied. Wm. H. Bradburn and his brother Rupert looked in toward the end of last night's meeting when the council was in committee of the whole passing a bylaw in its second reading with Alderman Herbert Bradburn in the mayor's chair. No doubt it must have been pleasing to Mr. Bradburn to see his son in the seat of responsibility he once occupied, and also to have realized that Peterborough citizens do appreciate the efforts of those who serve them in the municipal administration.

Neville Chamberlain in the Sudeten crisis that brought the great nations of Europe to the brink of war was expressed in the following congratulatory resolution by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman McIntyre, at last night's meeting of the city council:

"That the council of the Corporation of the city of Peterborough express its gratitude to the Right Honorable Neville Chamberlain, Prime Minister of Great Britain, for his untiring and successful efforts in making a settlement on behalf of Great Britain and the British commonwealth of the imminent crisis so seriously threatening war involving Great Britain and the British commonwealth.

And this council also wishes to express its confidence in and gratitude to Prime Minister Chamberlain in his efforts resulting in the saving of life and property and in saving the British Empire the devastating effect of a world war."

Claim Chinese Train Orang Outangs To Throw Grenades

Shanghai, Oct. 4 (AP)

AN OLD CHINESE and Japanese legend about orang outangs was applied to the Oriental war today. A Japanese correspondent reported he had it from a reliable Japanese source that the Chinese had 5,000 orang outangs trained to throw hand-grenades. The correspondent said he was told the Chinese had been capturing and training the animals in southwestern Provinces for the past ten years. There are many legendary stories in the Orient of trained orang outangs.

List Of Lots For Building Given Council

A special meeting of the City Council may be held later this week to accelerate completion of a list of vacant lots owned by the city and worth approximately $50 each, in compliance with the Dominion Housing Act.

The list was compiled by W. J. Henry, city assessor, but was referred last night to the property committee for the purpose of revising the estimated values. Alderman McCannan agreed to take up this detail at a meeting of his committee tonight at 7 o'clock.

The lots have been located on a map, fulfilling another requirement of the Housing Act, and it is intended to review twenty-five other lots of different values which the council wishes to sell to citizens intending to erect houses. The committee's report is to be forwarded to the council, and Alderman Gordon's motion, seconded by Alderman Glover, contemplated the calling of a special meeting of the council in the immediate future, probably this week.

Relief Bill $7,849.10.

The city's relief expenditure in September amounted to $7,849.10, itemized as follows: Provisions, $4,528.65; milk, $637.07; fuel, $424.37; clothing, $389.76; rent, $1,395.70; medicine, $3.85; doctors, $469.70.

Fire Loss $465.30.

Chief Gimblett reported fourteen fires last month and total loss to buildings and contents $465.30. There were 610 inspections.

Council Invited.

G. G. Torrance, secretary-treasurer, invited the council to attend the Canadian Legion's celebration of Remembrance Day in Confederation Square.

The Legion's invitation was accepted by Ald. Gordon's resolution, seconded by Ald. McIntyre.

A. J. McClellan and H. G. McKenzie, representing property owners on Monaghan Road, between King and Bolivar Streets, requested in a petition that the street be improved with a curb and gutter.

Minister Grateful.

Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture in the Ontario Government, wrote the council expressing his appreciation of the kindly reception extended to him on the occasion of his visit at which he formally opened the Peterborough Exhibition. The Minister also gratefully acknowledged Hon. G. N. Gordon's kindness in escorting him on a tour of the city.

Rugby Openers Here Saturday

Owing to the senior ball playoff in Riverside Park here this Saturday, the senior school rugby opener that day in Peterborough between Oshawa High and P.C.I., 1937 champions, will be staged at the Exhibition Grounds. It was found impossible to switch the game, so Coach Bamforth has set it for two o'clock on the southend gridiron, feeling that rugby fans who wish to see the ball game can take in the first half of the grid opener and still witness the diamond playoff. The junior joust between Oshawa and P.C.I. will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Exhibition Grounds.

County Clerk Auctions Off Lots For Taxes

"Let's have some quiet here; I can't talk my head off," said Miss Jennie Batten, county clerk and treasurer, in the role of auctioneer of lands being sold for taxes in the county council chamber this morning.

Miss Batten looked rather pointedly in the direction of Alderman G. N. Gordon who was sitting at one side of the crowded chamber.

A few minutes later Mr. Gordon made a bid on a lot in Douro, and his offer of the amount of the taxes due was recorded.

"Are you buying it for yourself," Miss Batten casually asked.

"Sure I am. You don't think I'm going to make a present of it to somebody," Mr. Gordon answered.

Represented By Reeves

Most of the municipalities were represented at the sale by their reeves or other officials. Only one lot in Asphodel was on the block, one in Otonabee, several in Douro; three or four in Harvey, a few in Smith, and two or three in Ennismore.

Other townships such as Belmont, Methuen, Dummer, Chandos and so on bulked large in the long list of properties on which taxes had accumulated to the extent that they were registered for sale with the county treasurer. Interest in lake front lots was indicated by brisker bidding. Most of the other remote properties failed to attract attention, and if they are not redeemed they eventually revert to the possession of the respective townships.

Any buyer of a lot this morning cannot obtain ownership for a period of one year and a day, the time allotted for the redemption of it by the present embarrassed owner.

200 Acres Offered at $9.07.

There were islands in lake quoted as low as $2.34; and you could buy 200 acres in Belmont for $9.07, the arrears on one property of that acreage. Evidence tending to support the contention of some of the reeves who appeared before the special board of valuators several years ago to the effect that there was a great deal of scrub, slash and rock land in parts of the county, appeared to be presented in the extent of the sale list today, the low value levels and also the lack of buyers. Townships that argued before Judge Smoke, Judge O'Connor and Fred Morrow that their valuation should be low, and consequently their assessment, might have found ample supporting facts in certain aspects of the tax sale.

Non Support Case Laid Over A Week

"If this man does not make some arrangement in the meanwhile to take care of his wife and children we propose to go ahead with this case next week" declared Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., in asking for an adjournment this morning in a police court case in which a local man was charged with non-support.

Magistrate E. A. Gee consented to the adjournment, at the same time suggesting to the accused that he should remember his children and do what he could for his family.

The accused declared that he had been paying $10 a week toward the support of his wife and children until he was taken ill some months ago. "I started work again only seven days ago," he told the court.

He added that he was not living with his family. He was willing to live with his children but did not want anything to do with his wife.

Hunts Fox, Bags Deer

WATERBORO, S.C., Oct. 4.—(AP).—Rob R. Middlebrooks of Asheboro, went fox hunting and bagged a deer with a walking cane. The buck, frightened by the fox hounds, darted from the woods, ran into a fence, and was hurled back, dazed. All Middlebrooks had to do was to swing lustily with a hickory cane.

Gliding is to be taught at secondary schools of Japan.

ODD RULING BY REFEREE GIVES LOCAL LACROSSERS A 13-11 LOSS

Throws Out 3 Petes Goals To Give Combines A Win And Force A Third Contest

A referee's ruling on the illegal use of undersized sticks by Peterborough players gave Caledon-Inglewood Combines a 13-11 win last night in Orangeville over the Petes and deadlocked the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior "B" finals ot one game apiece.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter Referee Bruce Leighton of Toronto called for a measurement of sticks of the rival players, and his investigation showed that Norm Worthy of Peterborough, who had counted two goals, and Whitton, who had counted one, were using sticks which didn't conform to the rule which says sticks must be not less than seven inches in width or wider than twelve inches. The same applied to Harold Harris of the home team, who had counted one goal. The sticks were discarded by the players.

Goals Deducted

At the end of the regulation time, with the score deadlocked 14-14, Leighton ordered three goals deducted from Peterborough's total and one from that of Caledon-Inglewood, which left the Combines winners by 13-11. The capacity crowd of 1,200 fans were puzzled by the decision of the official, and the visiting delegation sent up a terrific howl of disapproval. The Petes officials said they planned to send a delegation to O.L.A. Secretary Gene Dopp in protest against the referee's ruling. The unusual ending to a hard-fought and closely contested game still left officials wondering where and when a third and final game to decide the Senior "B" title would be held.

This morning, the Petes had cooled off and decided to go ahead with the third and deciding game of the series, and it will be played at 8:30 this Wednesday night in Lindsay, the winner to meet Wallaceburg in O.L.A. senior "B" finals.

Fast Fray

A big crowd saw a lightning-fast fray last night, with play clean and exciting, but the odd ruling by the referees spoiling things at the last. Whitton, Westonfelt and Worthy turned in an outstanding performance last evening and the whole visiting club looked good. They held their own on a foreign floor and deserved at least an even break. The homesters were in top form and played smart, speedy lacrosse throughout. The Harris brothers and Nelson and Walsh were the best. Penalties were 5 to 4 for the winners.

Worthy scored three goals for the Petes, with Magee getting two, Dundas a pair, King, Creighton, Loucks, Reid and Whitton, Chute and Westonfelt one apiece. The score was 4-3 in the first frame for Peterborough, 8-7 for Combines at halftime and 11-10 for them going into the fourth, when the Petes had a 4-3 edge. The teams:

Petes: Goal, R. Creighton; defence, J. Creighton. Westonfelt; centre, Worthy; wings, E. Creighton, Vitarelli; rover, Loucks; alternates, Chute, Miller, Magee, Dundas, King, Reid Whitton.

Combines: Goal, Chambers; defence, Wilson; Puckering; centre, H. Harris; wings, G. Harris, Walsh; rover, Nelson; alternates, Coulter, Hall Patterson, Rockburn, Gowland, Jones, McConnell.

Referees—B. Leighton and G. Thoms.

Cubs Greeted By 300,000 On Their Return

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—(AP).—A roaring reception by thousands of cheering Chicagoans keyed Manager Gabby Hartnett and his Cubs Monday for their World's Series warfare against New York Yankees, opening Wednesday.

Fresh from their amazing drive to the National Baseball League championship, the team rode through the downtown district in a triumphant parade. Some 300,000 citizens declared an impromptu holiday and turned out to greet the Cubs, borne through blizzards of confetti in open cars.

Hartnett was, of course, the No. 1 hero. A broad smile spread over his tomato red face as he waved both hands to the people, who shouted from the sidewalks and windows of skyscrapers in crowded La Salle street at the City Hall entrance, scene of the official reception.

Open to Criticism

To every one who got close enough to pump his big hand Hartnett could only say:

"Hell, this is swell."

At the city hall the players were led to an open platform to receive congratulations of Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

The Cubs, before motoring downtown to receive their official reception, decided upon division of their World Series spoils and passed up the man who managed them through eighty-one games this year and through five and a half previous seasons — Charlie Grimm. Twenty-five full shares were voted and the twenty-sixth share was split three ways. A purse of $4,090 was voted to be divided between nine rookie players and club attaches.

Why no share was voted to Grimm is certain to become a subject of controversy, but those close to the players believe it was mainly due to the fact he did not come down from his broadcasters' booth in St. Louis Saturday to congratulate them when they won the pennant. Today, however, he sent a laudatory message to Hartnett. It was read at Mayor Kelly's welcoming reception.

By their failure to vote Grimm a share the Cubs put themselves open to criticism as in 1932, when they failed to giving anything from the post-season pot of gold to Rogers Hornsby, who was succeeded by Manager Grimm in midseason. In the World Series the Yankees made capital of this, giving the Bruins a sound verbal lacing, calling them "cheapskates" and "chiselers" from the dugout.

Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, was surprised at the decision of the players to exclude Grimm.

"I believe it was a trifle short-sighted on the part of the boys," he said. "However, it is strictly a question for them to decide. Grimm has done very well financially, the Cubs not only paid him for his time as manager but also up to the end of the year."

Harnett retired to plan the strategy he will use against the Yankees in the opening game of the series at Wrigley Field Wednesday. He made only one thing clear in advance—he did not figure on starting Dizzy Dean in the first game. The fact he would not use Dean indicated conclusively he would choose the National League's ace, Bill Lee, who won twenty-two games and virtually pitched the Cubs into the championship.

"I don't want to be mysterious," Hartnett exclaimed, "but it won't be Diz. Now you can do your own guessing until tomorrow I'll announce my starting pitcher then."

Owner Wrigley would like to see Dizzy pitch at least one of the games in the series and he will probably get his wish, since he laid $185,000 on the line to acquire the great man.

"Actually we bought Dean for this series," Wrigley said. Everybody laughed when I said that, but we wanted a stop-gap pitcher. Dean proved that when he stopped the Pirates and he will be a great pitcher for us in the years to come."

The Yankees come to town today in their usual role of odds-on favorites to clout the Cubs into submission in five games or less.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

ANY TIME Secretary Bill Snyder wants to resign from the O.B.A., it will be all right with a lot of baseball officials here and there. It may not be Bill's fault that the O.B.A. consistently balls the ball playoffs up like a kitten with a roll of yarn, but he seems to have a lot to do with it. These may be harsh words directed at a big shot like Secretary Snyder but scribes wreck not of big names when they start sniping. We know the Inter-County League bunch didn't feel too kindly toward the Ontario Baseball Association mouthpiece in recent weeks, especially when he informed 'em two Toronto umpires would handle last Saturday's struggle between Stratford and Toronto in Toronto. They protested it, in fact, but won the game, anyway. The north is criticizing him bitterly. Niagara Falls were sore at having to travel through Toronto to play Peterborough. And the Petes have been fairly boiling for several weeks at the secretary.

* * * * * *

SNYDER informed the locals a long time ago that they'd playoff with Toronto about the middle of September. That fell through when the T.A.B.A. refused to have a winner ready. Then he told the locals that they'd meet Toronto after they beat the Falls. But the Petes defeated the Falls and still had to sit back and watch the T.A.B.A. winner and Stratford playoff. And Snyder said he hadn't told the Petes any such thing—though the locals have a letter to prove otherwise from him. And furthermore, he tried his darndest to force the Petes to bring Creighton Mines here for a series, the Petes taking all the financial risk. As we said before, he may not be entirely to blame, but it looks like he hasn't changed with the years—he still lets the T.A.B.A. officials push him around. He lives too close to Toronto, we suppose.

* * * * * *

Willyum Got Very Mad

SHOWING the way Secretary Bill Snyder feels toward the Central League winners—after Oshawa had bucked him bitterly twice in '36 and '37 over northern playoffs and Toronto umps—he was talking on the 'phone to Prexy Vern Dawson of the Petes yesterday. Well, he advised the locals that, since Creighton Mines had dropped out, the Petes and Stratford would have to play Wednesday and Saturday this week. The local president informed him that the clubs had both declined to play Wednesday and would stage their games Saturday and Monday. While he was talking, Snyder banged the receiver in his ear. Yeah, cut him off! Evidently pretty peeved at the Petes. Well, that's fair enough, as the locals don't think much of Snyder.

* * * * * *

SO THE PETES go into the senior O.B.A. finals 'gainst the Stratford Nationals, here Saturday and return game Monday. The locals think they can take the Nats for the title, too. If they get a break in the weather, the locals ought to pack in the customers in this final serial—and their chances of an Ontario senior ball title, for the first time in history, are excellent. Creighton Mines have droped out and will pull out of the O.B.A. It's too bad, but they can blame the T.A.B.A. for stalling tactics and the O.B.A. for not forcing the issue weeks ago with Toronto. The Petes cannot be blamed for demanding their rights. The north should never be permitted into playdowns, anyway, only given a bye into finals—as no club, themselves included, will risk big money in long travel at this time of year. The efforts of the O.B.A. this year, as so often in the playoff past, must receive the crown of science in achieving the perfect vacuum!

* * * * * *

They'll Need The Shovels

PREXY MAX SWANSTON of the C.O.B.L. is thinking of calling the semi-annual meeting of the league for Peterborough on Oct. 22nd. It would be an evening session that Saturday as the Sarnia Imperials play the Orfuns here the 22nd. The game would draw many from Oshawa and Belleville—so why not the ball moguls! Delegates should bring shovels as there will be a lot of dirt tossed about at this gabfest.

* * * * * *

UP IN ORANGEVILLE last eve, there was much ado about everything as the Petes were presented with a 13-11 loss at the hands of Referee Bruce Leighton and the Inglewood-Caledon Combines. The score was 14-all at the end of the fray, but this is what happened. At the end of the third quarter, the Combines' manager asked the referees to measure the Petes' sticks. Two were found to be too narrow—those of Worthy and Whitton. Some of the Combines' sticks were also examined and H. Harris' weapon was found under-sized. The rule calls for a penalty to players using incorrect sticks and also for goals scored with these sticks to be thrown out. No penalties were handed the players, and no mention made of goals disallowed—not till after the fourth frame ended. The Petes were in their dressing-room, ready to come out for an overtime session when they heard the crowd leaving. Then they found the ref. had deducted three of their goals and one from Harris—and the locals said Harris had switched sticks with his brother, who had scored four! Well, there was the deuce to pay, but that's how it stood.

* * * * * *

'Phone The League Of Notions

THE PETES will probably protest today to the O.L.A., but in the meantime they will play the third tilt in Lindsay tomorrow (Wednesday) eve at 8.30 'gainst the Combines—and it ought to draw another huge crowd of fans from here. A win for the Randle bunch means a game here Friday night against Wallaceburg, the first of the Ontario finals. If the Petes lose, they will try hard to get a replay on last night's tussle—and they should. The rule strikes us as being as silly as the word "obey" in the marriage ceremony! How can a referee tell whether a guy used the same stick all through the tilt, or how many of his passes figured in goals? Why measure some sticks and ignore others, and why wait till the end of the game to d educt goals? It was a most peculiar ending to a fine lacrosse fray—and we imagine tomorrow night's tilt will be a humdinger, too.

* * * * * *

LINDSAY SCRIBE writes of the P.C.I. win: "Lindsay's initiation into senior company was a bright one because they lost to a team which they will probably defeat next time out. They lost because a quick kick by P.C.I. found the ball rolling for almost 80 yards, where a subsequent short kick by Lindsay left the pigskin in Peterborough possession in a dangerous spot. Lindsay should have no trouble with Peterborough in future games." Well, well. "The reason Peterborough won can be mentioned as one player. Leether, Peterborough kicker, was hoisting the ball in a most capable manner and was gaining considerably on exchanges. They also had a good ball handler in Harle, who plunged and skirted the ends successfully many times." The Scugog scribe refereed this rugby scrap.

Lawn Bowlers Present Annual Prizes

In addressing the members of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, who had gathered for the annual meeting of that club, President K. Sloane, said that looking over the past season in his opinion the outstanding features were the atmosphere of friendly feeling, good sportsmanship, and of successful competition.

He paid tribute to the board, to different chairmen of committees and to all bowlers.

In making the reports of the different committees Fred Dearborn on behalf of the green committee outlined the work done and expressed the opinion that it will be next year before the real benefit will be felt. At this junction of the meeting a hearty vote of thanks was extended to the ever popular caretaker, Charlie Butcher.

In presenting the report of the games committee, R. Hendry, gave a favorable report of the work done by his committee. He referred to the passing of Tommy McDonald. He pointed out that our local tournaments had not been supported as well this year as other years, and he gave some suggestions for next year's games committee and begged all to support next year's officers to the limit.

H. Freeman, speaking on behalf of the open tournament, showed a nice report and received a good hand.

The chairman of the membership committee, H. Clegg, gave his committee all the credit for the work done in the early part of the season. He paid tributes to the president for his untiring efforts on behalf of the club. He modestly referred to his committee as being the first one to finish their work and hoped all would pull for a bigger club next year.

E. L. Sackville, on behalf of the Coronation tournament, gave a lengthy report, and during his address he appealed to the members to consider that whereas this was the first year of such an undertaking that much money had to be spent that will not be necessary another year. He expressed thanks to all who had in any way helped to put over this big event.

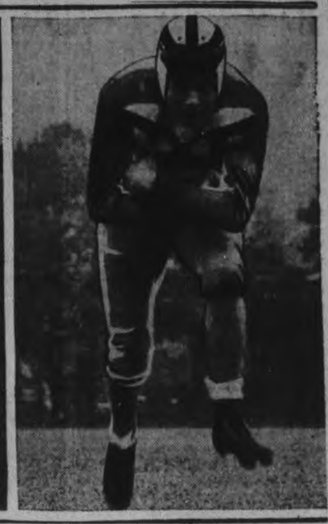
Prison Hires Thief

McALESTER, Okla., Oct. 4.—(AP)—Three days ago Dr. W. R Armstrong completed his five-year auto theft term at the state penitentiary. Today he was back at the prison—as a staff member receiving $175 monthly. His work as an inmate instructor at the Stringtown subprison school brought favorable attention. So prison officials named him director of academic course at the prison school and resident physician.

FACTS ABOUT FOOTBALL

Carry Your Body Low, With Your Head And Eyes Up, When You Are Going To Break Through The Line

By LEW HAYMAN



SIDE-STEPPING A TACKLER

Without wasting any time we'll talk about some of the tricks of running with the ball.

Plunging

In today's picture showing a plunger in action, he is about to hit into the line. Note how his arms and body are well over and ahead of the ball. His steps are short and choppy and he keeps his feet wide apart to get the most power and drive into his effort. He is in a crouching position, but HEAD AND EYES ARE UP. The ball-carrier has to see where he's going and he can't if he keeps his head down and plunges blindly into the line.

Plunging backs must run with their body low, increasing their speed with every step. When met by opponents take short, digging steps, always keeping the feet well apart. Fight for that extra yard or inch. Once you get by the line of scrimmage, straighten your body, change direction, and race for the open field, using a high knee action in running.

Side-Stepping

Side-stepping is a dodge used mostly when running in the open field. The idea is to get the tackler out of position by means of a decoy movement. Incidentally, in referring to ball-carriers when I say the "inside leg" I mean the one nearest the tackler, and the "outside leg," of course, means the one farthest away from him.

PLUNGING

In executing the side-step, you lead the tackler with the inside leg. As you lead with it, put your weight on its toes, lean forward with your body and keep the knees well bent. Just as the tackler commits himself, that is, prepares to tackle you, spring sideways, allowing the decoy leg to become limp and at the same time apply your straight arm. If your straight arm is to be of any use, you must keep the arm extended and the elbow locked when contact is made with your opponent.

Pivoting

Pivoting is used mostly by runners on plays close to the line of scrimmage, generally as the secondary defence closes in. It is a dangerous dodge and should be particularly discouraged in the open field.

The ball-carrier heads directly at the tackler, plants his outside foot in front of him, at the same time applying a straight arm with the outside hand. The pivot commences by swinging the inside leg around and extending the straight arm to force the tackler away. It also serves the purpose of aiding the force you get into your pivot. AT NO TIME DOES THE RUNNER LEAVE HIS FEET. Instead he uses a high knee action with short, choppy steps.

Should the tackler get through your straight arm, throw your hip towards him as you pivot. Always keep the body low and lean towards the new direction you will take when the pivot is completed, thus taking advantage of every bit of momentum.

Change of Pace

The secret of success in using the change of pace lies in the art of running at ALMOST TOP SPEED, and yet being under sufficient muscular control to put on an extra burst of speed just as you reach the tackler.

The runner often acts as if he is slowing down a bit, and this makes the tackler relax. Then with a quick burst of speed the ball-carrier can outdistance him before he gets set again. This manoeuvre is generally used when the tackler is moving from the side to meet the runner. The idea is to get a flying start as against practically a standing start for the tackler.

The glaring fault of most ball-carriers is that they attempt to dodge TOO FAR IN FRONT OF THE TACKLER. You can't receive the tackler if he can see plainly which way you intend to go. Most runners tend to run at an angle to the tackler, whereas they SHOULD ATTEMPT TO RUN STRAIGHT AT HIM, unless they are exceptionally fast runners.

TOMORROW we go into the hoofing end of the game, and I'll discuss the proper way to kick.

BITTER FIGHTING MARKS WELTERWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT

Luftspring Cuts Genovese Down In Thirteen Rounds To Win Welterweight Title

TORONTO, Oct. 4.— (CP). — Sockin' Sammy Luftspring, no longer the seemingly timid back-pedaller of six months ago, is ruler of Canada's welters by virtue of a cool, methodical attack that beat rugged Frankie Genovese into submission in 13 rounds.

The pride of Toronto's Jewry took three rounds to get the measure of Genovese before 10,000 surprised ring fans last night, then went to work with both hands to cut the Italian down. He did that at 2:55 of the 13th round when Referee Herschel Osborne decided five trips to the canvas in one round was enough for anybody.

Luftspring, weighing 143 pounds to Genovese's 146½, stripped Frank of the Canadian welterweight crown with smashing rights and lefts to the head and body that floored his opponent for four counts of nine and one of two seconds' duration. Luftspring showed that months of battling in foreign rings had turned him into a smooth ring workman.

It was Luftspring's third victory over the Toronto Italian who took the welter title from Vancouver's Gordon Wallace last winter.

Queen Mary Team Beaten By Central

Queen Mary soccer team dropped two valuable points to Central eleven in the Public School Soccer League, on Monday afternoon, by the score of 3 to 0. Both teams were evenly matched but the losers lacked the finish around goal.

The teams settled down to combination and made many visits on goal to test the custodians. Queen Mary forwards hemmed the Central defense into goal where Kinmont missed by inches. Exchanges continued even for a while until a foul against a west-end player proved costly as Kiff registered from twenty yards out to open the scoring. Play ran from goal to goal at a rapid pace until half time. Central 1, Queen Mary 0.

On resuming, Central set a steady attack upon the Queen Mary goal to find the losers making good use of the opening left but always failed to carry their objective to a successful conclusion. Seven minutes from the finish, Millen met a pass from Lee to register the second counter. A little later, Kiff sent a long shot from mid-field right into goal. Ward Queen Mary goalie saved the drop shot smartly but Clark rapped home the re-bound. Central 3, Queen Mary 0.

Queen Mary—E. Ward, goal; R. Blonden and L. McCarthey, full backs; F. Mortimer, W. Jones and M. Demart, halves; R. Loucks, A. Lester, B. Kinmont, G. Matthews and D. Dundas, forwards; subs, J. Bond and J. Franks.

Central—N. Drummond, goal; F. Kiff and P. Melklejohn, full backs; G. Hanes, J. Parsons and G. Burns, halves; B. Millen, W. Smith, S. Clarke, L. Batten and G. Lee, forward; subs, H. Stewart, W. Griffin and B. Young.

Referee—D. Buchan.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Oct. 4. —(CP).—Once a mighty power in Canadian lacrosse, St. Catharines stood on the heights again to-day as its Athletics awaited the Canadian Senior finals with New Westminster Adanacs.

The A's stepped into the finals here last night with a 25-8 victory over Cornwall Seniors before 4,000 fans, many of whom remembered the city's last Ontario champions of 27 years ago. The Athletics overcame Cornwall in two straight games, winning the opener of the eastern finals Friday 17-11.

At the same time New Westminster earned the right to oppose St. Catharines by defeating Medicine Hat 25-8 in the Alberta city.

The Athletics will line up against the Adanacs in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Friday night in the first of a best of five series to determine the Dominion titlists.

Chicago Betting Still 3-1 In Yanks' Favor

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 4 (A.P.). — New York Yankees, fresh off the train, join the Cubs in a final workout at Wrigley Field to-day in preparation for to-morrow's opening game of the 1938 World Series, which is certain to be witnessed by a capacity throng of 44,000.

The Cubs, still picking ticker tape out of their hair from the rousing welcome home given them yesterday, chose to do their limbering-up before noon and then turn the park over to the visiting firemen from the American League.

The town is pretty much excited about the big event which has dropped so suddenly and dramatically into its lap. Hotels already are crammed and tickets for the first two games here are understood to be getting scarce. There isn't much betting. The locals think their club, on the crest of a great winning streak, has a good chance to jolt the formidable Yanks, but they aren't letting their enthusiasm run away with their financial judgment. Unofficial odds hereabouts favor the Yanks by about 3 to 1.

Unless he gets a powerful hunch to do otherwise, Hartnett is certain to throw his starry young right-hander, General Bill Lee, against the Yankees' Lefty Gomez when they take the field at 1.30 p.m. (2.30 p.m. EST). Lee pitched in two games for the Cubs when they lost the 1935 World Series to Detroit, four games to two. He started one and was the relief hurler in the other, but neither was credited with a victory nor charged with a defeat.

Hopes With Lee

Chicago's chances seem to hinge on the possibility that Lee, a 22-game winner this year, can stop the Manhattan murderers twice, and maybe three times He has speed, a sharp curve and stamina. Yank adherents however, point to the fact that few pitchers ever manage to fool DiMaggio, Dickey, Gehrig and the others twice running. They might do it once, but the next time they find that the Yanks are laying for them.

The Yankees carry into the series a club batting average of .274, against the Cubs' mark of .269. Also, and vastly more important, they nudge the ball for home runs, triples and doubles, while the Cubs specialize in singles. The Cubs will get some runs, but they've got to hope for a dazzling performance by their mound staff. Both are fine fielder clubs, and the Yanks have the best throwing outfield in the business.

The Yankees are seeking their third straight world championship, a record which up to now has defied all the great clubs in history. So the Cubs figure that the percentage is all on their side.

Scenes As Cubs Beat Pirates Out of the Pennant

Here are two scenes from Wrigley Field, Chicago, as the Cubs beat Pirates out of pennant. TOP, shows Gabby Hartnett, manager of the Cubs, who banged out the game-winning homer in the second tilt, as he singled in the first inning to drive over the first of his team's 10 runs. Al Todd is the Pirate catcher. BELOW, Lloyd Waner, Pirate outfielder, slides safely back to first base as Rip Collins takes a throw from Phil Cavarretta in right field that almost catches the Pittsburgher. Both scenes are from the final game of the series.

Over 10 Million Ball Fans Pass Toll Gate

By Hugh S. Fullerton, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (A.P.). — Add together that exciting National League pennant race, the Yankees' slow start in the American League, the unusual interest aroused by such individual feats as Johnny Vander Meer's two no-hit pitching performances and Hank Greenberg's threat to break the home run record and you come to the fact that major league baseball attracted more fans during the 1938 season than ever before.

An Associated Press survey to-day revealed that the season's paid attendance for the two big leagues was 10,227,891. The two champion clubs, the Yankees and Cubs, both went over the 1,000,000-mark in home-game attendance and the two leagues proved about equal in drawing power, the American holding the edge, 5,225,455 to 5,042,436.

The figures, in some cases, are only approximate, for several clubs are reluctant to disclose official attendance. At any rate, the total of more than 10,000,000 cash customers is at least as high as that of 1930, when the previous all-time high mark was reached. The attendance that year was given in "round numbers" as 10,000,000. Last year the total was 9,447,497.

Besides the new record total a new single-game record was set at the Yankee Stadium on May 30, when 83,633 fans turned out. This eclipsed the previous Stadium high of 66,629, made in the 1936 World Series.

Detroit Tigers showed the greatest drop, from 1,181,000 to 893,000.

Bowmanville Lost To Caledonians

MILTON, Oct. 4.—In the third and deciding game of the third round of the O.B.A. intermediate B playdowns, Bowmanville dropped a close game to Caledonia at the Milton Park, before a bumper crowd by the score of 6 to 5.

The winners got away to a flying start, a muffed double-play ball in the third frame accounting for three runs. If ever a team displayed fight it was Bowmanville, trailing three runs going into the ninth, they staged a rally gathering four hits. With one run across the plate, the bases loaded and two away, Slemon hit a hard drive through the infield good for two runs and the centre fielders' bad throw to the plate scored another. The game was sensational and when the plate umpire called a runner out for interference to leave the count 6 to 5 for Caledonia, it caused much excitement.

Phillips and Simms, the starting pitchers, were both driven to the showers, Withers, who replaced Phillips, twirled great ball, striking out six and only allowed three hits in five and two-third innings. Avery, C. Montgomery and Clark, with two hits each, were high hitters for the winners. B. Bagnall and Slemon were prominent with the bat for the losers.

Batteries—Simms, Gordon and Gourlay; Phillips, Withers and Osborne.

Umpires—Curzon, of Toronto, and Johnson, of Oakville.

SPORT SPICE

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Oct. 4 (A.P.). — Dr. James Stotter, New York plastic surgeon, will fly to the Coast to see what can be done about fixing up Maxie Rosenbloom's map so Old Slapsie can go for those lover's roles in the movies....Hank Greenberg, who came within three homers of being famous, has turned barnstormer, and will give the Yanks and Cubs a little competition next Sunday when he appears with the Bay Parkway semi-pros.

Most New Yorkers look on the Cub victory as a personal triumph for Gabby Hartnett.

Cholly Grimm forgot to go down to the clubhouse from the broadcasting booth to congratulate the Cubs the day they clinched the pennant, so yesterday when the Bruins split up the series swag they conveniently forgot to include Mr. Grimm. . . (He was down for a full share, too.)

Al Schacht, who begins clowning in his 19th World Series to-morrow, already has dipped into pro football and would not be adverse to entertaining the amateurs except they don't pay.

Jack Corbett, president of Syracuse Chiefs, is getting in a little early winter training at Lake George, N.Y.....Rumors persist Connie Mack will throw hard-hitting Bob Johnson on the market this winter, if anybody has the price, which will be plenty.

Young Spike Briggs is telling Detroiters the Tigers will not win the pennant in 1939, but will in 1940.

Hartnet Signed On For 1939

CHICAGO, Oct. 4—(AP)—On the eve of the world series there was one worry Charles Leo Hartnet, "Leo the Lion" didn't have—worry over a contract to manage the Cubs in 1939.

Philip K. Wrigley, owner of the Cubs, said today Gabby Hartnet would have been retained next year even if he hadn't led the team to the pennant.

Gabby says he will catch the opener tomorrow, even if they have to lug him to the plate in a wheel chair. The first and third fingers of his right hand, injured by foul tips last week, still are swollen and sore but that won't stop him. The third finger, when taper, will not hamper his throwing. The index finger is discolored and still swollen. For 13 years Hartnet snatched balls out of the air without a scratch, but within the space of a month he suffered a broken right thumb and two split fingers.

Highland Lass Pacing Lady Golfers

By Ross Munro
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 4 (C.P.). — A trim Highland lass with zooming drives and uncanny approaches, Jessie Anderson of Perth, Scotland, shared the spotlight to-day along with a few established Canadian women golfers as the open tournament entered the first round of match play.

Pacing the field with a one-under-par 37 for the first nine of the 18-hole qualifying round over the Royal Ottawa Golf Club course yesterday, Miss Anderson faltered slightly on the way in when she forfeited two strokes for a lost ball, but wound up with a 79.

This tied her with Ada Mackenzie of Toronto and Mrs. W. G. Fraser of Ottawa for medalist honors. The Toronto star finally was named medalist for the best score on the home nine.

The field of 94 was trimmed to 32 in the qualifying match, but there was no major upset.

Both Tigers, Cubs Being Rebuilt Under New Coaches With New Stars Grooming Fast

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Oct. 4 — (CP). — Husky, fleet-footed youngsters, whose names for the most part are strange to senior football fans, will carry on for Hamilton Tigers and Montreal Cubs in the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union this season. Nothing in their pre-season work indicates either club will upset the favored Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders.

Both Tigers and Cubs are being rebuilt under new coaches with Jerry Brock, a former Cornell University centre, at the Tiger helm and Johnny Macdonald graduating from the senior Quebec Rugby Football Union to lead the newly-named Cubs.

The Tiger stalwarts who roared loudest on the big four scene during the past five years have retired. There is no Brian Timmis on this year's club, no such outstanding backfielders as Frank Turville or Hawley (Huck) Welch or no outsides like Seymour Wilson and Jimmy Simpson, the tackling tartars who were supreme a long time. Simpson broke his jaw in practice and will not play again.

Most of the stars who performed for Montreal Indians in the big four last season have joined Montreal Nationals of the Senior Ontario Union. So far Macdonald has not found replacements to fill the shoes of Johnny Feraro, Tommy Burns, George Pigeon, Len Hutton and Ernie Hempey. Juniors and intermediates will predominate on both Tiger and Cub lineups.

Start Off Poorly

Tigers were not impressive in their only exhibition start, losing 19-1 to Sarnia Imperials last Saturday.

Ten of last season's Tigers, who finished in last place, from the foundation around which Brock has fitted the rookies. George Mountain, Bill Law, Abe Zvonkin, Jimmy Dunn and Bob Smith will provide weight and experience on the line. Truman Painton, Bob Richardson, Norton Freeman and Dennis Whitaker are backfield holdovers.

From Italy-Canadians, junior Canadian champions in 1937, Brock has plucked Bill Myrmylyk, a burly half, quarterback Hardy Awrey, outside Sam Passmore, Leonard Dright and George Stevens. He got Ambrose Withers from Dundas Bombers, Ontario Intermediate champions, and Al Imrie and Allan Turnbull from McMaster University, intermediate intercollegiate champions.

Whitaker should take care of quarterback duties in capable fashion and can boot a good placement as well. Their kicking will be looked after by Freeman, who played a season as substitute with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Macdonald, with little weight on the line for ground power, has concentrated on passing and running for the Cub attack. Like Tigers, his reserve strength is low and only a few players have previous big four experience.

Indian Stars Left

Remaining of the 1937 Indians are Lauri Mathieu, a swift backfielder, Harry Ditofsky and linemen Glenn Brown and George Bailey. Brown will hold down one middle-wing berth with Jerry Searight, formerly of Calgary Bronks, in the other. Rod Elliott, a Montreal graduate of University of Maine, will call signals from quarterback.

Macdonald will have at least one experienced and capable outside, Lloyd (Danny) Daniels of Toronto, a star with Balmy Beach last season. Daniels likely will be paired with Jimmy Hamilton, one of the boys who played for Macdonald with the Notre Dame de Grace Yellowjacket squad of the Senior O.R.F.U.

The best of the others making their bow to senior interprovincial play are Doug Bennett, who will kick, flying wing Ross Wood, centre Mac Parsons and Archie Harfield, who will team with Bailey as an inside.

YEARLING'S PRICE

DONCASTER, England—(CP).—James V. Rank, owner of Scottish Union, this year's St. Leger winner, paid $65,793 for a yearling at a sale here. It was the highest price paid for a yearling at auctions since Dorothy Paget paid $77,915 two years ago.

TRUST YOUR LUCK

THERE ARE TIMES when you must act as if you feel lucky. Perhaps your contract is impossible unless some important card is right where you want it to be. In that extremity steam up your confidence and press your luck. At least half of the time you will be rewarded, and anyway you have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

After a pass by East, South started the bidding on this deal with 1-Club. North responded with 1-Spade, South called 1-No Trump, North 2-No Trump and South 3-No Trump.

When West led the heart 4, East won the trick with the K and returned the 9. West captured the trick with the A and led another round to clear the suit. After winning with the Q, South decided to try out the club suit. Before giving up control, he reasoned that if West held the diamond A his contract was doomed, as West held two good hearts. Working on the assumption that the diamond A was held by East, South played the club 8 and allowed it to ride to East's 9. East returned a low diamond, hoping to get West in, but South went in with the K and with the club suit breaking was able to claim the remainder of the tricks.

Temple Band Pays Visit To Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 4.—Once again citizens of Campbellford and neighboring villages were privileged to hear the Peterborough Temple Band, that splendid organization under leadership of R. G. Routley. Arriving in town on Saturday with Major C. Warrander in charge two open air services were conducted during the evening which attracted large audiences. It was the second time the Temple Band had visited this town in the past year owing to the efforts of the energetic local leader Captain Sharpe. On Sunday services were held at the Citadel in Campbellford and in the afternoon an open air meeting was conducted at Warkworth.

Sunday evening a special musical program was presented in St. Andrew's church at 8.30, following the regular services in the evening.

Following is the program presented: March, The Canadian by the Temple Band; vocal selection, Take Time to be Holy, male voice chorus; cornet solo, Wondrous Love, Bandsman G. Kennedy; Festival selection, The Old Wells, the Temple Band; March, Colonel Miner, Saxophone Party; Favorite, London Bridge, Saxophone Party; Excerpts from the Masters, Temple Band; vocal selection, Sweet and Low, male voice chorus; chime solo, Onward Christian Soldiers, Bandsman H. Barton; Euphonium solo, Silver Threads, Bandsman A. Mills; hymn, Christ of Calvary, arranged by Bandsman E. Victor, by the Temple Band.

Rotarians Hear Rev. W. G. Davis

That the Japanese occupation of Manchuria has not resulted in any great intereference with the activities of the Christian missionaries in that country was an interesting statement made to the Peterborough Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon today by Rev. W. G. Davis, Presbyterian missionary, who gave an informative address upon conditions in Manchuria Rev. Mr. Davis, in fact, declared that the work of the missionaries had been expedited by the improved railway service brought into being by the Japanese.

Rev. Mr. Davis who was introduced to the club by H. B. Cowan, who referred to the successful work accomplished by the guest speaker in Manchuria said that the Japanese who were fond of using nicknames called his home city in northern Manchuria Taonan, the "Dust Capital." The Japanese did not like Taonan because of the prevailing dust and the missionaries did not like it for the same reason. Taonan, he explained, was situated on the edge of the Gobi and when the wind blew the dust covered one's face and filled ears, eyes and noses.

The Chinese, the speaker said, were just as clean as they could afford to be for water was an expensive luxury in many parts of the country and the only means of keeping clean, in many cases, was the bathhouse and the vast majority of Chinese had not sufficient income to pay the moderate charges made by these institutions. The Japanese went even further than the Chinese and their system of parboiling themselves daily kept them spotlessly clean.

His part of Manchuria, Rev. Mr. Davis said, had been untouched by war. There had been no resistance and consequntly little or no bloodshed and raids by Chinese patriots who tore up sections of the Japanese railway were the only signs of trouble that occurred in the Taonan region. The official attitude of the Government was religious freedom and there had been no interference with the work of the missionaries. In some sections further south some over-zealous officials had caused a little trouble at first but this situation had been ironed out satisfactorily

Rotarian R. F. Downey moved a vote of thanks to the speaker for his interesting address.

Before the luncheon adjourned President James Dutton wished a safe and enjoyable voyage to Rotarian R. K. Magee, who left last night on a five week journey to South America.

With The Boy Scouts

All Saints are active in three sections now and we offer our sincere congratulations to the new Rover crew. May their activities be plentiful and happy.

District Commissioner recently paid an official visit to the troop.

Scouter Art Rose has formed a new patrol, henceforth to be known as the Pow-wows. This patrol has a membership of all the patrol leaders and seconds, and promises to make marked improvements on the standing of the troop. Their aims are similar to my outline last week—all first class, and after the woodman's badge. The Pow-wows went on their first hike last Saturday, taking in first class cooking and judging distance—the first two badges they are aiming for are Woodcraft and Pioneering.

A number of boys from the troop were picking apples for Scout Apple Day with Scouter Sturrock on Saturday.

Two other boys are training for masters-at-arms. All Saints and the scouts of Peterborough, give a scout welcome to Bud Homewood, late second in the 1st Milton troop and now P.L. of the Crow patrol in the All Saints troop.

We are sorry to report that three of the Cub pack met with accidents during the week. They are Walter Wheeler, Clinton Mowry and Ray Cairnes.

Akela led the pack in an Indian war dance, after which Akela Peter Domenic of Sacred Heart told the cubs an interesting story.

The mothers and fathers are invited to a euchre party to be held under the auspices of the Mothers' Auxiliary at the home of Mrs. Cairns, 111 Stewart street, when the quilt will be drawn for.

ST. GEORGE'S PACK.

Apple Day activities were predominant at St. George's, where we found some boys stringing Apple Day tags and others painting the baskets. A.S.M. George Siddal took some of the boys in first aid work. Rev. Mr. Gault paid a visit to both the troop and pack.

On Saturday, the Cubs went ahiking and built a fire enclircled with cans of pork and beans, and thanks are accorded to the Rev. Mr. Gault for the hot dogs so well enjoyed. It was the largest turnout of cubs held at St. George's for some time, and two St. Paul's cubs were guests of the afternoon.

It is anticipated that a leaders' conference will be held in Peterborough this Fall, with leaders being invited from all the district from Prince Edward County to Bowmanville and up as far as Campbellford. More about that later.

On Tuesday evening, the local post office was subject to a raid when St. John's Rover Crew paid an official visit. The boys were shown every detail of sorting, distribution, etc. The stamp collectors among them were ready to cut loose, but were successfully held in order. Returning to the den, Apple Day tags were strung in good order.

It is with some regret we learn that the old Central crew has disbanded, but the fact that it opens the door to start three new crews more than recompenses the loss. The first, of course, being All Saints and we hope in the near future Sacred Heart and St. Luke's.

St. John's cub pack held an entirely new program—a night ramble. The pack was divided into two teams. The first team with Bagheera at the head made the trail. Shortly afterwards, Akela followed with the second team, from Hunter street at the church, east to Mark, along Douro, north on Armour road to Park Hill road, travelling west to Elcome Crescent, then to Water street, via Dublin, Waterford and College they arrived at the bandstand in Victoria Park where they held their closing ceremony.

Nineteen cubs attended St. Paul's cub pack on Friday; several new chums being present. The pack are happy to welcome Eric Edmundson as a new assistant to Akela, and hope to have lots of happy hunting with him.

On Saturday afternoon, the pack hiked up the river side; lighting the camp fire on the bank opposite the waterworks; there cooking supper, arriving home about 7 p.m.

ATTENTION, ALL CUB PACKS.

The Bill Coleman Memorial Trophy competition ends for the year on October 31, at the end of this month. Every pack is requested to compile and send in its records by November 15. The points are awarded as follows::—

1.—Attendance, 100 points. To be based on the average attendance in proportion to the number in the pack. Any boy "going pu" shall be counted present for the balance of the year. All other losses in pack shall only count attendance to the date of leaving pack.

2.—Programs, 100 points. Programs of meetings shall be judged on balance cub work.

3.—Tests passed. Tenderpad, 20; first star, 30; second star, 50; proficiency badges, 10 points each.

4.—Log Book, 100 points. These points are to be based on the general report of the above requirements and not on the literary accomplishments of the writer.

A special committee has been appointed for judging the points, and we hope every co-operation will be accorded. The trophy will be given to the winners during the week of November 22.—The Skipper.

Russian Children Learn Britain, France Buy War Delay With Slices Of Czechs

Moscow, Oct. 4 (AP)

THIS was the simple tale that the pioneer Pravda, Soviet Russia's newspaper for school children, told today to explain how Germany was ceded the Sudetenland:—

"As might have been expected, nothing good for peace or Czechoslovakia came out of the Munich conference.

It was not a real conference but a bargain between four imperial beasts of prey with England and France paying for postponement of a world war with slices of the unfortunate Czechoslovak republic.

"Under the appearance of defending the peace, the big capitalist states surrendered the small country to be torn to pieces by German Fascists.

"The governments of England and France tried to conceal their crime under loud protestations about safeguarding the peace of Europe.

"They soon will have to pay for their ignoble policy," the story ended.

Cars Bump Fenders On Havelock Street

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Oct. 4. — A minor traffic accident occurred at the corner of Oak and George streets in Havelock, during Saturday evening's rush period, when a car driven by James Thoms, of Belmont, struck the right rear fender and bumper of another vehicle driven by Dan Heard, also of Belmont.

Thoms coming from the west said that he was momentarily blinded by the lights of an approaching car, and did not see Heard crossing the intersection from the stop street, until too late. Neither car was seriously damaged and the drivers settled among themselves.

Collective Security Must Be Aided By Canada, Says Sen. Wilson

OTTAWA, Oct. 4—(CP).—Canada "must assume some responsibility for the defence against injustice and unprovoked aggression of all other nations," Senator Cairine Wilson said last night in a statement on the recent European crisis.

Senator Wilson, President of the League of Nations Society in Canada, and Vice-President of the International Federation of League Societies, summed up the gains and losses from the crisis, found lessons and hope for the future in them.

Canada's national policy must be oriented on a collective security basis, she said. Just as individual citizens support a policy for peace and order within a municipality so must Canada support such a policy in the world.

"I hope that the government will be able in the future to maintain more intimate and sympathetic contact with the groups of workers in the cause of peace throughout Canada. Until the job is recognized as a joint project of our government and people we can hope for little progress."

On the "constructive" side, Senator Wilson set forth the following lessons from the Czechoslovakia settlement:

The German dictatorship was forced to recognize at least in principle the interests of other nations whereas it previously affirmed nothing on earth stood above German might and right.

The world demonstrated it was prepared to make a stand against aggression.

The objectionable features of the Versailles Treaty now have been completely liquidated and an opportunity has come to give the League of Nations a real test.

The unfavorable "truths" arising from the crisis were listed by Senator Wilson as follows:

The world last week may well have been on the verge of embracing a world peace system but "our leaders continue to subscribe to a concept of anarchy which actually permitted the World War of 1914."

A surrender, abandoning Czechoslovakia, bulwark of liberty and democracy, was made "under the threat of naked force in the hands of an unscrupulous dictatorship."

The new barbarism represented by Germany may now be free to extend to the Black Sea and to other continents.

Scared By Screams

TORONTO, Oct. 0—(CP).—Three men, one of them armed, last night attempted to hold up Louis Freedman, proprietor of a grocery store, but were frightened away by the screams of a woman.

Freedman and his wife answered a knock at the rear door. Three men faced them, one pointing a revolver. Mrs. Freedman ran into the kitchen and screamed. The men disappeared down a lane.

YANKEES DEFEAT CHICAGO CUBS 3 TO 1

Cubs Unable To Overcome Early Lead

Two-Run Outburst In Second Gave Yankees Lead

By Paul Mickelson
(Associated Press Writer.)

WRIGLEY FIELD, Chicago, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Turning on the air famed batting power for 12 hits against Bill Lee and Jack Russell, the world champion New York Yankees defeated Chicago Cubs, 3-1, in the opening game of the world series here today before 44,000 disappointed fans.

Lee, backbone of the Chicago hurling staff, was combed for 11 hits by the Manhattan sluggers before he retired for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. Red Ruffing held the Cubs to nine hits, including a triple by Manager Gabby Hartnett, and was never in serious danger.

Ruffing and Joe DiMaggio alone of the Yankee line-up failed to get in on the clubbing. Bill Dickey, tall catcher, was the biggest explosion with four singles. He scored what proved the winning run in the second inning and drove across Tommy Henrich with the final run of the game in the sixth.

Lee Starts for Cubs.

Both managers stood pat on their previously announced pitching selections and lineups. Louisiana Bill Lee, 22-game winner and hero of Cubs' last-month drive to the National League pennant, started for Chicago. Big Charley (Red) Ruffing, also a right-hander, who paced the Yanks' pitching staff to the American League championship, hurled for New York.

Augie Galan's leg injury, suffered a week ago, forced Manager Hartnett to use the outfield with which the Cubs wound up the season. This shifted Frank Demaree from right to cover Galan's left field position and brought the weak-hitting Phil Cavarretta into right field.

First Inning

Yankees—Crosetti worked the count to three and two and then was called out on strikes. He protested to Umpire Moran but it did no good. Rolfe sent a bounder off first base and Collins threw to Lee to put him out, after slipping in the infield. Henrich was called out on strikes. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Cubs—Hack fouled off several pitches and then singled sharply to left centre for the first hit of the game. Hack was out stealing, Dickey to Crosetti. Dickey's throw caught the Cub third baseman three feet off the bag. Crosetti threw out Herman. Demaree fanned, swinging at a high pitch. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Second Inning.

Yankees—Hack took DiMaggio's grounder near third base and threw him out. Gehrig walked on four pitches. Dickey slashed a single into right field and when Cavarretta tried to catch Gehrig with a throw to third Dickey went to second, Gehrig making third easily. Herman fumbled Selkirk's easy bounder, Gehrig scoring. Dickey going to third and the batter reaching first safely on the error. It was scored as a run batted in for Selkirk since only one man was out at the time. Gordon's hard roller went through Hack and into left field for a single, scoring Dickey and sending Selkirk to second. Ruffing grounded to Jurges who threw to Herman forcing Gordon, and Herman's throw to Collins retired Ruffing for a double play. Two runs, two hits, one error, one left.

Cubs—Gehrig took Cavarretta's grounder back of first base and stepped on the bag to retire him. Gordon went back on the grass to take Reynolds' high fly. Hartnett fouled to Dickey off the first base line. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Third Inning.

Yankees—Crosetti flied to Reynolds in centre. Rolf sent a long fly to Demaree. Henrich singled over first, Collins taking the ball several yards back of the bag, but having no chance to make a play. Henrich was caught stealing, Hartnett to Herman. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Collins smashed a long single to right. Judges fanned on four pitches. Dickey took Lee's weak roller five feet in front of the plate and threw him out, Collins advancing to second. It was not a sacrifice. Hack smashed a single to right scoring Collins, and went to second on the throw-in to the plate. Herman's liner bounced off Rolfe's glove for a single but when Hack tried to score on the play, Crosetti, backing up third, recovered the ball and threw him out at the plate. Dickey put the ball on the runner a foot in front of the plate. One run, three hits, no errors, one left.

Fourth Inning

Yankees—Jurges made a fine glove-hand stop of DiMaggio's grounder and threw him out. Gehrig sent a long single to right but was out when he tried to stretch it to a double, Cavaretta to Herman to Jurges. Dickey singled over second, Herman stopping the ball but being unable to catch him. Selkirk popped to Hack. No runs, two hits, no errors, one left.

Cubs—When Demaree tried to dodge a pitch the ball hit his bat and bounded to Ruffing who threw him out. Cavaretta struck out. Reynolds popped to Gehrig. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Fifth Inning

Yankees — Gordon smashed a double to the left field corner, Demaree racing over but being unable to get his hands on the ball. Ruffing sacrificed, Hartnett to Collins. Crosetti struck out, swinging at a low third strike. Herman threw out Rolfe. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Cubs—The clouds were heavy overhead as the Cubs came to bat in the fifth. Hartnett fanned. Dickey dropped the third strike and had to throw him out at first. Gordon made a sensational stop of Collins' grounder with his back to the plate and threw him out. Jurges struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Sixth Inning

Yankees—Henrich slashed a double off the wall in right. He slipped rounding first and just beat Cavarretta's throw to second. DiMaggio flied to Cavarreta in right. Henrich holding second. Gehrig struck out. The count had gone to three and two when Tony Lazzeri, a former Yankee, called Third Baseman Hack to the Cub dugout and obviously told him what pitch to throw to the New Yorker. It was a low ball and Gehrig missed it by several inches. Dickey's high fly fell safely in left for a single, Henrich scoring. Selkirk grounded to Lee and then beat the hit out for a single, just reaching the bag in front of Lee's throw. Collins protested. Dickey went to second on the play. Gordon fanned. One run, three hits, no errors, two left.

Cubs—Lee flied to DiMaggio in deep centre. Hack bat out a bounder down the third base line for a single. Herman rolled to Rolfe who threw to Gordon forcing Hack but Herman was safe at first, beating Gordon's throw to Gehrig. It was scored as a fielder's choice. Demaree popped to Crosetti. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Seventh Inning

Yankees—Ruffing sent a long fly to Demaree in left centre. Crosetti was hit on the left leg by a pitched ball and went to first. On the hit and run, Rolfe singled to right sending Crosetti to third. Jack Russell began to warm up in the Cub bullpen. So did Larry French, a left-hander. Collins made a beautiful stab of Henrich's liner and stepped on first to retire Rolfe who was off the bag. It was an unassisted double play. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Cubs—Cavarretta lined a single to centre. Murphy began to warm up in the Yankee bullpen. Reynolds bounced in a double play, Crosetti to Gehrig. Crosetti took the ball just off second stepped on the bag and easily retired the batter at first. Hartnett tripled to the right field corner. Henrich fell in a desperate lunge at the ball and the big Cub manager galloped to third. Crosetti made a fine stop of Collins' bouncer and threw him out. No runs, two hits, no errors, one left.

Eighth Inning

Yankees—Jurges threw out DiMaggio on a nice play. Gehrig was called out on strikes on a three and two pitch. He thought he had walked and started for first and when Moran called to him that he was out he raced back to the plate and registered a vigorous protest. Several Yankees also gathered at the plate. Gehrig protested so vigorously and seemed about to rush at Moran, that his mates pushed him back toward the Yankee dugout. Coach Art Fletcher finally quieted the first baseman and the crowd booed. Dickey single to right centre. Dickey stole second, Hartnett's throw drawing Jurges wide of the bag. Selkirk filed to Reynolds in centre. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Before the Chicago Cubs came to bat it was announced that the argument on Gehrig's strikeout in the first half of the inning had arisen over a foul tip for a third strike which Hartnett caught. Gehrig apparently let his bat down as the pitch came toward the plate and it nicked the bat. Gehrig did not know this, but the umpire called it that way.

Cubs—Jurges singled to right. O'Dea, the Cubs' reserve catcher batted for Lee. He sent a roller to Crosetti who threw to Gordon forcing Jurges. O'Dea beat Gordon's attempt at a double play and was safe at first on the fielder's choice. Hack rolled into a double play, Gordon to Crosetti to Gehrig. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Ninth Inning

Yankees—Old Jack Russell, veteran right-hander, went in to pitch for the Cubs. Gordon sent a high fly to Reynolds in centre. As Ruffing came to bat the crowd gave him a round of applause. Ruffing was thrown out by Herman. Crosetti's fly fell just inside the right field foul line for a double as Collins, Herman and Cavarretta all raced after it. Herman threw out Rolfe. No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Cubs—DiMaggio raced over to deep left centre to take Herman's fly. Demaree flied to Selkirk near the left field foul line. Cavarretta lined a single to right and went to second when Henrich fumbled the ball for an error. Reynolds popped to Gordon. No runs, one hit, one error, one left.

They Pitched the Cubs Into the World Series

It takes nine men to make a baseball team and more than that to make a team that will stand up over a season's play, but the spotlight centres on the players who go in, in the clutch and come out on top. When Chicago Cubs went into their three-game series with Pittsburg Pirates, 11-2 games out of first place in the National League, they threw Diz Dean, CENTRE, into the first game, and the man with the $135,000 arm came through with a 2-1 win. Old Charlie Root, LEFT, went in, in a relief role in the second clash and came out on top. The ace of the Cub staff, Bill Lee, RIGHT, put the money in the bank by taking the third game for a sweep of the series. Root also hurled the clincher against St. Louis Cardinals.

Stern German 5th Zone Demands, Reparations For Sudetens, May See Commission 'Yes Men'

By Louis Lochner
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

BERLIN, Oct. 5 (A.P.). — A Foreign Office spokesman said to-day that the International Commission supervising cession of the Sudetenland to Germany was confronted by new difficulties in delimitation of the fifth zone of occupation and "the question of reparations for injustices inflicted by the Czechs on the Sudetens since 1918."

As the Commission resumed its discussions to-day the spokesman indicated progress might be difficult from this point on.

"Hitherto it was easy, as the four zones (to be occupied by the German army before October 8) were already fixed at Munich, and only certain technical details remained," he said.

"The fifth zone will prove more difficult. Also there is the question of reparations for the injustices inflicted by the Czechs upon the Sudetens since 1918."

Action When in Control.

Previously an inspired source close to the Foreign Office indicated such reparations would be demanded of Czechoslovakia just as soon as the Sudetenland was completely in German hands."

To the Munich accord was attached a map showing the first four zones ceded by Czechoslovakia for speedy occupation by the German army. Occupation of the first three has been completed or is under way. Occupation of the fourth is to begin to-morrow, to be finished on Friday. Then, the accord said:

"The remaining territory of preponderantly German character will be ascertained by the aforesaid International Commission forthwith, and be occupied by German troops by the 10th of October."

Jailer Jails Soft-Hearted Daughter For Freeing 2 Desperadoes

LEXINGTON, N. C., Oct. 5—(AP)—Lula Belle Kimel, 22, a jailer's daughter, was behind the bars today because she took pity on a youth charged with a capital offence and, according to a confession which sheriff Raymond Bowers said she made, allowed the youth and a fellow prisoner their freedom.

James Godwin, 19, of High Point, and Bill Wilson, 21, of Hickory, escaped Monday from the Davidson County Jail. Several hours after their get-away, police began receiving reports of highway robbery and holdups. One man, Donald Moss of High Point, was shot fatally as he stepped from his car. Police Sergeant W. B. Ridge of High Point said the crimes were attributed to Godwin and Wilson.

Godwin was being held on a charge of first degree burglary in the forcible entering of his aged grandfather's house two months ago. The old man, was badly beaten the night of the robbery. Wilson was charged with a holdup.

Asks Suspension

Jailer T. C. Kimel locked up Lula Belle yesterday and wrote a letter to Sheriff Bowers asking that he be relieved of his duties pending an inquiry.

"I am humiliated and grieved beyond control and have locked my own daughter in jail in order that justice may find its course," Kimel wrote his superior.

Bowers quoted Lula Belle as saying that she released Godwin "after he had gotten religion and promised to go straight" and because she did not want to see him "go to the gas chamber."

Bowers quoted the young woman as saying that Godwin released Wilson and that they left the jail together.

Kimel and his wife were absent at the time.

12-Mile Hike Rubs in Hunter's Lesson After Wife Shoots Bottom Out of Punt

Orillia, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)

JAMES WAINFLEET of Detroit took his wife duck hunting yesterday on Lake Couchiching and he lost everything but Mrs. Wainfleet. The day's take was a good attack of influenza for both of them.

Mrs. Wainfleet opened the expedition by blowing a hole in the bottom of the punt. Wainfleet sat in it and sculled madly for shore, without paying too much attention to direction.

The punt passed over a partly submerged log that ripped the seat from his trousers, carrying a pocket with his watch, wallet, car keys and pipe.

He sighed when they reached shore, looked around and found they were on the wrong side of the lake, 12 miles from where he parked the car.

The Wainfleets forgot about the boat, trudged 12 miles around the lake and struggled with the car door before they could open it without the key.

Today both of them are in bed.

Canadian Company To Spend $200,000 In Methuen In Development Of Nepheline

The Canadian Flint and Spar Company is planning to spend $200,000 on the development of a nepheline quarry and refinery in Methuen township, Alex L. E. Elliott, M.L.A., informed the Examiner today.

"This propsed industry will be of great importance to East Peterborough," Mr. Elliott said, "because it is going to be concentrated in this county, the capital will be spent here, and Peterborough labor will be employed."

The property of the Canadian Flint and Spar Company in Methuen township is said to be east and north of the ridge in which the Canadian Nepheline Company has been working for several years.

Spend $200,000

"Early this year I got a special grant from the Ontario government for the construction of a new road into the property," Mr. Elliott said. "The amount was $10,000 to be spent on the road that will have to bebuilt from the road running north from Oak Lake beyond Havelock. At that time the Canadian Flint and Spar people contemplated setting up their quarry equipment and trucking the nepheline syenite down to Havelock where it would be stored. They also intended to erect a refining plant near Rochester, N. Y., sending the rock by railway across the border to be processed.

About ten days ago I learned the company had changed their plans entirely, deciding to set up their processing plant right at the quarry, and truck the refined product down to Havelock for storage. The industry will need not only the four miles of new road into the quarry, but also the old road will have to be considerably improved all the way down to Havelock."

Statement By Company

Mr. Elliott estimated that the distance from Havelock to the Canadian Flint and Spar Company's property is about twenty-four miles.

Shouts Of Betrayal Get Woman Ousted From House

London, Oct. 5 (AP)

A YOUNG WOMAN dressed in scarlet and gold and shouting, "You have betrayed the youth of the country," was ejected from the public gallery of the House of Commons today during the debate on the Munich agreement. Attendants hurriedly marched her out as she continued shouting, "What we want is freedom."

British Loan Is Main Hope For The Czechs

PRAGUE, Oct. 5.—(AP).—A revamped Czechoslovak government started work to-day on economic readjustments to put the republic, shrinking daily as foreign armies march in, on a stable basis.

Most pressing need was for the $50,000,000 loan promised by Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain. This the dismembered country hoped to get soon, for the loss of industrial areas struck a violent blow at its economic structure.

Financial experts surveyed what probably would be left after the fulfillment of German, Polish and Hungarian claims to minority districts and after plebiscites determine disposition of other regions. They expected a good share of the projected loan would be used for public works projects.

The Czechoslovak government resigned at 9 p.m. yesterday and President Eduard Benes named a new cabinet, retaining Premier Jan Syrovy. Frantisek Chvalkovsky, Minister to Rome, succeeded Kamil Krofta as Foreign Affairs Minister.

Three Slovaks were named—General Vladimir Caidos, Minister of Communications; Imrich Karvas, Commerce; and Vladimir Sajnor, Justice.

The new government was considered a Moderate-Rightist grouping.

Minister Without Portfolio Cermak, a Slovak, provoked the Cabinet turnover when he designed, declaring government proposals regarding Slovak autonomy were inadequate.

Mobilization Costly

One of the main problems was paying the cost of mobilization begun before last week's four-power agreement to dismember Czechoslovakia.

Public works like highways, railways and new administration buildings along the new frontiers were expected to absorb many refugees from the Sudeten districts ceded to Germany.

Economic experts who attempted to form a picture of the future Czechoslovak population would be lost in plebiscites.

On this basis they calculated the republic would retain about 49 per cent of its industrial plants and about 64 per cent of the workers previously engaged throughout the country.

Coal presented a serious loss but the extent of the reduction was not estimated because many mines lie along the Polish border and in land ceded or subject to negotiation.

Simon Advocates Russia Join Other Powers Pledging Czech Border

Admits Munich Terms Harsh And Drastic But Better Than War, End Of Czechs; Labor Move Rejects Policy Of Humiliation

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 5 (CP Cable).—Sir John Simon told the House of Commons today that Great Britain had no desire to shut Soviet Russia out of "any future settlement of Europe."

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, speaking in the third day of debate on the Munich settlement of the Czechoslovak-German problem, urged that Russia should join other powers in guaranteeing the new boundaries of Czechoslovakia.

He proposed a motion that parliament approve "the policy of His Majesty's government by which war was averted in the recent crisis and support efforts to reach a lasting peace."

Labor Amendment

Arthur Greenwood promptly introduced a Labor party amendment which read:

"That this house, while profoundly relieved that war has been averted for the time being, cannot approve a policy which has led to the sacrifice of Czechoslovakia under threat of armed force, and to the humiliation of our country and its exposure to grave dangers; and realizing the intense desire of all peoples for lasting peace, demands an active support of methods of collective security through the League of Nations and immediate initiative by His Majesty's government of proposals for summoning a world conference to consider the removal of economic and political grievances which imperil peace."

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, a member of the "inner cabinet" which advised with Prime Minister Chamberlain during the Sudeten German crisis, affirmed the Prime Minister's desire for a lasting understanding between democracies and dictatorships. He denied Mr. Chamberlain sought a four-power pact among Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy which would disregard other states and "impose its will on Europe."

Harsh, Drastic Terms

Sir John asked the members of the Commons to place themselves in the prime minister's position at Munich and decide whether they would have rejected the terms of the settlement and "destroyed the last chance of averting war."

The terms were certainly harsh and drastic, and open to all sort of challenges and criticisms, but Sir John contended they were infinitely better than the one and only alternative. He asked how many members of the House would, if they could, undo what had been done at the four-power meeting. How many, he wanted to know, would have rejected the settlement "and fling the world into a cauldron of immediate war?"

"I reject," Sir John said, "the doc-

President Benes Steps Out A Beaten Man

PRAGUE Oct. 5—(AP).—The resignation of President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia was officially announced today.

The resignation of the chief of state who had held his little republic together as long as possible under the pressure of tremendous events, was not unexpected although it had been denied several times recently that he intended to step down.

Benes became president of Czechoslovakia in December, 1935, succeeding the founder of the republic, the late Thomas Masaryk.

The Munich agreement of the four big powers, compelling Czechoslovakia to cede the Sudetenland to Germany, represented a complete failure of the foreign policy with which Benes had been closely associated since the founding of the state 20 years ago.

The pressure of Great Britain and France to compel Benes and his government to accept submission to the terms of Germany proved a tremendous blow to his hopes.

Informed persons felt that Benes' departure from office—and possibly from the country—might remove the current acute situation and make collaboration with Germany possible.

Under Hitler's Fire

Benes had been the target for bitter attacks by Hitler and other German leaders and for a scathing campaign of denunciation in the German press.

It was understood General Jan Syrovy, the soldier-premier, would be acting president until an election could be arranged to choose Benes' successor.

The election will be conducted by the national assembly, composed of the chamber of deputies and the senate sitting together.

Benes prepared to broadcast his farewell address to the world tonight.

Some sources said Benes' resignation followed renewed German pressure based on Hitler's personal antagonism to the Czechoslovak president.

It was reliably reported that Hitler had indicated he would be more generous in his negotiations with the new Czech state if a president more acceptable to Germany were named.

Mucker Dies In Slide At Timmins Mine

TIMMINS, Ont., Oct. 5.—(CP)—Buried beneath a landslide of loose rock in a stope on the 2600 foot level of the McIntyre mine today, Fred Kobyluck, 38, of Timmins, died almost immediately, his chest crushed beneath the weight of the loose rock.

His mucking partner, Joseph Michalak, was dug out of a pile of rock which buried him to the waist, and rushed to St. Mary's Hospital. Dr. Robson, McIntyre medical chief, said that although Michalak suffered considerably from shock, there were no bones broken and he would recover swiftly.

Coroner F. C. Evans has not yet set a date for the inquest into the death.

No Obey In Anglican Marriage Rites, Shorter Sunday Services Urged

Toronto, Oct. 5 (CP)

WIDESPREAD, "commonsense" changes in Church of England practice, including omission of the "obey and serve" from the marriage ceremony and abbreviation of the Sunday services, are suggested by Ven. C. Swanson of Calgary.

The suggested changes are in a brief presented at Calgary by Dr. Swanson and published this week in the Canadian Churchman, Church of England organ.

Dr. Swanson would make the marriage promises of both man and woman identical and besides omitting the "obey and serve" and providing for two rings when desired, he feels the "I thee endow" should be changed to "with thee I share."

Dr. Swanson suggests omitting the present general confessions and absolution at the morning service, and "beginning the service with a note of adoration." He observes here "the English are a heavy eating and drinking race, which reflects in a certain national stodginess of which morning prayer is possibly an example."

Spurt In Communistic Activities Seen Result Of Cooling In Franco-Russian Relations

MOSCOW, Oct. 5 (A.P.). — A prediction of sharp revival of Communist international activity, especially in France, was made to-day by some foreign observers following a cooling of Soviet-French relations.

The semi-official newspaper Le Journal de Moscou, often the mirror of Foreign Office news, said emphatically that as a result of the Four-Power Munich agreement France had lost all her European Allies but England, and demanded: "Who can rely on England?"

"Isolation is the price France will pay for Munich, where she received 'not even a scrap of paper,' but only an oral promise from Adolf Hitler," the paper asserted.

It added: "After the capitulation of Munich (where France, Italy, and Great Britain reached an accord on September 30 granting Chancellor Hitler Sudeten German areas of Czechoslovakia, a French Ally), who will believe again the word of France? Who will remain her Ally?

Gives Hitler New Allies.

"Rumania or Yugoslavia (with Czechoslovakia, French Allies in the Little Entente) will not hesitate any longer to swing over to the side of German Fascism."

The Journal did not state specifically that Moscow intended to cancel the French-Soviet pact of May, 1935, but asked: "What is it worth now that France has torn up its Treaty of Alliance with Czechoslovakia?"

The French-Soviet Treaty provided for assistance in case of attack on either party by a third Power. It was regarded widely as France's answer to the threat of German rearmament under Hitler, but because of the acutely anti-Soviet policy of the Nazi regime, the pact also became an obstacle to French-German rapproachement.

More Communistic Work?

With the pact seemingly relegated to the scrap heap, the question was, "What will Moscow do?" Opinions among qualified foreign observers were not unanimous, but some believed one result would be an intensification of Communist activity.

Le Journal said further:

"International public opinion now says what is the value of France's word—the value of her pledges to the U.S.S.R., and of the French-Soviet Pact?

"What now is the value of the latter pact since France has just torn up her treaty with Czechoslovakia—a treaty which bound her much more strongly?

"On whom can France rely now? her sole ally in Europe now is Britain—this same Britain which went behind France's back and signed the naval agreement with Germany (in 1936)....and which to-day comes to terms with Hitler—again behind France's back.

"That isolation was precisely Hitler's aim."

prove just as insistent and intransigent in his demand for handing over all that he claims as beloging to the fifth zone—not yet defined—as he was for the principle of annexation and the unconditional surrender of the first four zone.

(A map published by the Berlin press indicates that the territory claimed as belonging to the fifth zone—for occupation by Oct. 10—or subject to plebiscite would be approximately twice as large as that transferred unconditionally in the four zones. Plebiscites are to be held not later than Nov. 30.

The British, French and Italian ambassadors, members of the international commission, went to the foreign office this afternoon to meet the chairman, Baron Ernst Von Weizsaecker, secretary of state in the Germany foreign office.

Few Recognize Officials

The three ambassadors, Sir Nevile Henderson, Andre Francois-Poncet, and Bernardo Attolico, walked along the Wilhelmstrasse together to the foreign office unrecognized by pedestrians.

(The Czechoslovak minister to Berlin also is a member of the commission, but he was not mentioned as attending this meeting.)

Political observers felt sure that Hitler's demands for reparations also would be insistent. If these observers are correct in their assumptions the ambassadors of Great Britain, France and Italy will be placed in an awkward position.

They are charged with the task of "Negotiating," meaning participating in a give-and-take process, but in reality they are likely to be faced with German demands and asked merely to underwrite them.

An inspired source close to the foreign office said Germany would claim reparations not only on the grounds of justice but also in the interest of peace.

This source pointed out that it was essential that conditions be created for an amicable relationship between Germany and Czechoslovakia. Both nations, it was argued, desire to live as good neighbors to the other.

But a semi-official commentator asserted this goal could not be reached if "Czechizations" in the Sudeten areas undertaken since 1918—when the Czechoslovak republic was born—are overlooked.

It was indicated that Germany would not consider the Sudeten question solved unless reparations were paid.

No Figures Fixed

There was no indication immediately of the amount of reparations to be claimed or on what basis or how they are to be paid.

Observers recalled that Point 6 of the Eight-Point program proclaimed by Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten fuehrer, at Carlsbad, April 24 called for "removal of injustices inflicted since 1918, and reparations for the damages thereby caused."

During the Four-Power conference at Munich last week, a German government spokesman said "that is a question for later discussion," when asked whether reparations for damages allegedly suffered by the Sudetens had figured in the conference.

Crisis Tightens Ties On U.S. Says Hepburn

TORONTO, Oct. 5—(CP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario believes the world crisis that swept nations to the brink of war will leave in its wake a bond of closer economic unity between Canada and the United States.

The fiery Hepburn, internationally known leader of Ontario's Liberal Government, told delegates to the American Transit Association Convention last night European war preparations would reduce exports from North America because countries of Europe sought to become self-sustaining.

He said the international gathering he was addressing was an indictment against "goings-on" in other parts of the world. "Our problems are purely economic and we can thank Heaven we are not in the position of Europe," the farmer-premier said.

Canada and the United States would be brought together more closely in an era that must come if the entire economic structure was not to crumble, he said.

A Warning On Debts.

Warning something must be done to settle the problem of debts, the Premier said the war-time governments of 1914-18 should have taxed war profiteers. If nothing were done, he said, taxes eventually would pay only the interest on debts.

He warned, too, the unemployment situation would have to be remedied

Charge Crown Fee Too Big, Dismissed

LINDSAY, Ont., Oct. 5—(CP).—Judge Sheldon Smoke dismissed in county court yesterday a charge against Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson of wilfully demanding fees greater than those allowed by law.

The complainant, James Thorndyke of Oakwood, charged two Oakwood men, Cecil Barry and Percy Lamb, were summoned to appear in Lindsay court for illegal possession of slot machines. They pleaded guilty in the magistrate's office and were assessed $15. Thorndyke claimed the crown attorney had no right to any costs in the case.

Magistrate E. A. Gee was called as a witness.

Judge Refuses To Swallow Bren Evidence

OTTAWA, Oct. 5—(CP). — Mr. Justice H. H. Davis, Royal Commissioner, will not hold any part of the Bren gun inquiry behind closed doors. This was disclosed to-day in a new exchange of messages between the Canadian and British Governments over the use of documents concerning the British War Office.

The Dominions Secretary, in a cable from London, said consent for use of the documents would be given if the documents were examined in Canada. In reply, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, as Secretary of State for External Affairs, said he could not agree to this condition, and renewed his request for consent to use the documents.

Hon. J. L. Ralston, government counsel, read the cables to-day, as the inquiry into the contract between the Canadian government and the John Inglis Company of Toronto for 7,000 Bren light machine guns continued. Criticism of the contract in a magazine article by Lieut.-Col. George Drew of Toronto led to the inquiry.

When L. A. Forsythe, associate commission counsel, resumed examination of Ronald Sharpe, chief inspector of income tax who served on the interdepartmental committee which reviewed the Bren contract he ran into difficulties with Mr. Justice Davis.

Mr. Forsythe was asking the witness for information on contemplated savings to the Dominion on the Bren contract.

The Judge Speaks Up

Judge Davis objected to repetition of evidence that had been "spread on the record over and over again." The same ground had been covered by the previous witness, Fraser Elliott, Mr. Sharpe's superior in the income tax branch.

(The government claims a saving of $1,300,000 through buying the guns from the Inglis Company because it also had a British contract which reduced the cost of manufacture per gun.)

"I have reached no conclusion there was any such savings," Mr. Justice Davis said. "How can you work out the savings on a contract when there were no other manufacturers tendering?

"I don't want counsel to be misled by my silence, to think I am swallowing this as conclusive evidence."

Major General L. R. LaFleche, Deputy Minister of National Defence, was the next witness.

General LaFleche said the practice of entering upon "cost plus" contracts had started in his department three years ago, but only when it was not possible to arrive at the cost of materials needed by open tender.

trine of the inevitability of war and the theory of the effectiveness of bluff."

The British government, he continued, would work with any or all states towards strengthening peace. He hoped Russia would join in a four-power guarantee of Czech territory, declaring:

"It is most important that she should do so.

The government (British) had no intention whatever of trying to exclude Russia from any future settlement of Europe."

Answers Eden

Sir John took the occasion to answer Anthony Eden directly on his urging that there be no four-power pact for a general European settlement.

"He (Eden) inquired whether the development of the Munich meeting would be the formation of a four-power pact," Sir John said.

"If that question is whether we are willing to enter into friendly discussions in conjunction with France, Italy and Germany, I say most emphatically we do not rule out that consultation at all."

After paying tribute to the admirable attitude with which the Czechoslovaks faced their destiny, Sir John said they had to make "dreadful choice."

"But," he went on, "it was a choice between ceding a portion of territory —which we and France advised—and exposing their state to unlimited invasion and possible destruction.

"I wish to say quite plainly and firmly that the French Government and ourselves did no injury to Czechoslovakia because we brought them to face that alternative.

"This Czechoslovak state was in fact created in its original form in defiance of the principle of self-determination. I confess I find a very great difficulty in believing that this famous formula of President Wilson can in all cases be precisely and satisfactorily applied.

Hydro Vice-Chairman Wishes Petes All Sorts Of Success

ALEX L. ELLIOTT received the following letter of congratulation intended for the Peterborough baseball team and club from W. L. Houcke, vice-chairman of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission: "Congratulations upon the success of your baseball team. I certainly had no idea you would win over Niagara Falls. Naturally we felt that we had one of the oustanding teams in the Province, and I did not think we would have much difficulty in beating anyone. However, yours proved to be the better. May I wish you all sorts of success toward winning the championship." As a former baseball player Mr. Houcke takes a keen interest in the Falls team and in other branches of sport.

HAMILTON, Oct. 5—(CP).—Miss Phyllis Marie Shaver, 19, Hamilton, was killed early to-day when struck by a car driven by Roy Barker, (55 Sherman avenue north), Hamilton, on the middle road beach cut-off at a point where the four lane highway is reduced to two lanes.

The girl had alighted from a car driven by her brother, William Shaver, after it had collided with a truck and was proceeding across the pavement when struck by the Barker car. She suffered a fractured skull, both legs and her right arm was broken. She had a facial fracture and cuts about the face and arms. Coroner Dr. W. A. Weaver, Burlington, has ordered an inquest.

Miss Shaver was returning home with her brother after visiting at the latter's service station opened this summer at Freeman, near Brant street, in Burlington.

MORE ABOUT—

Canadian Company

He showed the Examiner a copy of a letter written by an executive of the company to the Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines in the Ontario Government. The following paragraphs are quoted from it:

"Our primary motive in connection with this new type of mining industry has been to get matters so arranged that we could build our processing plant in Canada and give employment, etc., to Canadian workmen, and in other ways create a Canadian industry based on a deposit of Canadian raw material, rather than expend funds towards creating a similar industry in the United States.

Following long protracted negotiations we now propose to erect a processing plant in Methuen township at the quarry, and transport the finished material over the road (referred to above) to the shipping point at Havelock, Ontario. We shall have a considerable investment in bringing the new Canadian enterprise into operation which will amount to something in the neighborhood of $200,000, and we feel that if we are willing to risk this capital investment in developing a new Canadian mining enterprise you will be only too willing to co-operate in providing the necessary road for transportation.

We believe the road should be treated as a secondary road under the Highways Department, as the township is too poor to maintain it. It is most essential that we have the new portion completed for hauling as early as possible, and the remainder of the road put in reasonable repair. We would very greatly appreciate your most valuable assistance."

Action Under Way

Mr. Elliott told the Examiner he had spoken to Hon. Mr. Leduc about this project, and was assured by the Minister that he would immediately consult the Department of Highways in regard to the type of road needed north of Havelock to the Canadian Flint and Spar lots, and also about how soon the work could be begun.

From the tenor of the correspondence and from other communications relating to the company's plans, Mr. Elliott is confident that a nepheline syenite refinery is going to be a new and important industry for East Peterborough, and especially in the district of Havelock.

Aberhart Criticized

EDMONTON, Oct. 5 (C.P.). — Condemnation of comment made by Premier Aberhart on the German-Czech crisis was voiced in a resolution passed here last night by 600 members of the Canadian Corps Association and the War Widows' Association.

The Alberta Premier said September 25 at the Edmonton Prophetic Bible Conference that the British, French and Russian peoples were "being stirred by that other equally foolish of contractual obligations which demands its fulfillment no matter what the conditions are."

Dr. Stevenson's Suspension Not Criticism

By Harold J. Fair
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 5—(CP).—The Magone Commission investigating conditions in the Ontario Hospital here was scheduled to-day to hear John R. Green, St. Thomas lawyer, whose charges of wrongful detention in the institution led to the inquiry, continue his story of his life there. His testimony is expected to wind up London sittings.

Green appeared on the stand late yesterday after a conference with J. M. Donohue of London, the special counsel he retained. He told of being committed after a trial at St. Thomas that followed his arrest after he "had been doing some drinking." Then he described efforts to leave.

Just before Green began his story, Dr. Stevenson received from Commissioner Lionel Conacher a statement explaining his suspension was not to be construed as criticism. Conacher said the Government fiet suspension of the hospital heads would give the commission a clear hand.

His statement the commission "does not, and did not, at any time feel that your suspension was a reflection on your character or your ability as a' superintendent" was taken by observers to mean speedy reinstatement.

The St. Andrew's Young People's Society planned to hold Hallowe'en crokinole party at their meeting held on Monday evening. Mrs. P. H. MacMillan presided at which it was decided to cancel next week's gathering owing to the Thanksgiving weekend. Josephine and Doris Locke were appointed to take charge of the refreshments for the Hallowe'en social. During the business portion of the meeting it was arranged that delegates should attend the Y.P.S. convention at Knox church Toronto, from Oct. 7 to 10. Those slated to attend were Mrs. M. McFarlane, Misses Merel Black and Violet Patrick. The program for the evening was in charge of Miss Dorothy Reynolds, the literary convenor. Miss Shirley Herriott gave the opening number, a vocal solo followed by a duet by Mrs. C. Vessey and Mrs. P. H. MacMillan. Mrs. M. McFarlane contributed a piano solo and at the conclusion of the program Hector MacMillan conducted a spelling contest The meeting closed with a hymn and the Benediction.

Shortly afterwards, Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested Hector Wambolt, 17, of Wileville, near here, and charged the youth with grievous bodily harm. Veniot's wife said she had seen a youth raise a rifle as she and her husband drove by him in their car.

Curran Backs Claim Norse Relics Found In Ontario Wilds

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Oct. 5—(CP).—New and important evidence that Norse adventurers were the first white men to set foot on North America will be made public soon, J. W. Curran, publisher of the Sault Daily Star, said today in an article in the Star.

He and two other investigators are prepared to report that three Norse relics were actually found in 1931 near Beardmore, in Northwestern Ontario. They were produced in 1935 by James E. Dodd of Port Arthur, who sold them to the Royal Ontario Museum.

Mr. Curran said he investigated with little hope at first that the weapons could be proven to have been found in Ontario. He was assisted by Judge Alexander McComber, senior judge of the Thunder Bay district, and Dr. George E. Eakins of Port Arthur.

The relics sold by Dodd, a railway conductor and amateur prospector were proven to be genuine Norse weapons of the 11th century but their discovery in Ontario was disputed. Dodd said he dug them up while prospecting for gold.

Accepts Dodd's Story

The Sault publisher said:

"I accept Mr. Dodd as a truthful man, and so accept his story as true and exact. There is no question in my mind but that he found the Norse relics where he says he did.

"There are important facts, to be revealed in due time, which will heighten very greatly the interest in the episode and widen its significance."

Mr. Curran asserted the newly-gathered evidence might possibly prove that Norse sailors came to Ontario by James Bay before the year 1100, or 400 years before Columbus crossed the Atlantic, and reached Lake Nipigon by way of the Albany and Kenogami rivers.

Recently Mr. Curran supported a theory that so-called "white Indians," living on the west shore of James Bay, might be direct descendents of Norse sailors.

Should Clean House

The semi-official Italian Informazione Diplomatica Service, in its most recent issue talks glibly enough of war and of the willingness of Italy to fight. Two issues named are some hostility in French quarters and the way in which Russia is said to be interfering in European affairs.

We are willing to grant that Mussolini acted with rapidity and apparent good faith when Chamberlain suggested he should join in the recent conversations with Hitler to avert war. But back of his willingness there did appear to be the stubborn fact that he was not at all anxious to go to war, nor do we believe the people of his country were clamoring for it.

The fact that Mussolini has a war machine at all is evidence of the greed for gain of other nations in the world which sell to him the things which he cannot get at home. One competent authority has stated plainly that if it were not for what Italy purchases elsewhere in the world her great army could be no more injurious than a parade of Boy Scouts.

When the nations are at the business of settling matters we believe they should go more deeply into the whole situation. It is evidence of a form of insanity for peace-loving mations to keep on selling war material to other nations which in turn are going to use the material to keep the world on pins and needles or else actually plunge it into war.

Italy could never have invaded Ethiopia without the material secured from the outside world.

Japan could never have carried the war to China under her own power and resources.

Now that we are at it we would prefer some sort of a mopping up of the whole situation. Britain and United States should lead the movement because between them they have the raw materials which the war lords most desire.

Newspapers Were Right

There was a time and its duration was by no means brief when people used to complain that their newspapers were carrying too much war news. The Examiner knows it is a fact because at various times it has received letters about it, some of which have been published. Other people have often enough told us about it apart from writing letters. It always did seem that when people who talked war had anything to say they had little difficulty—or none at all—in having their views presented to the world. Although the Examiner was aware there was much war talk it has always contended that the newspapers were not creating it; they were merely telling their readers what was going on the world over. If they did not follow that course then they would not be presenting a fair picture of the world as it existed. They would be making it appear that all was well when all was not well.

Events which moved rapidly to a world-wide crisis within recent days seem to indicate that the newspapers had not in any way exaggerated the situation. There had been war talk; there had been war planning; there had been threats of war and everything had been moving along just about the same as the reports in the newspapers had indicated. It had not been a lovely or a wholesome world and the newspapers had reflected it just as it was.

The moment there was a change in the situation the news changed; when there was the feeling that there was a better way out than slaughter it was immediately reflected in the news. Newspapers do not create the news in the first place; they merely record that which is taking place and events of the past few weeks have given staunch evidence of how thoroughly they have been recording that which was true.

Should Help Our Wheat

The new agreements which will have much to do with the future peace of Europe should have a direct bearing on the prospects of selling Canadian wheat. We can produce better wheat in our country than can be grown in Germany, France or Italy, and it would actually pay those nations to buy our wheat.

They have decided in past times to grow much of their own and to import as little as possible, and the reason for that course is plain, nor has there ever been an effort made to conceal it. These nations feel they must grow their own because in case of war the outside supply might at any time be cut off. If not cut off at the source of supply it would stand the danger of being attacked and lost in shipment.

For that reason—fear of war—Canada has found its chances of selling more wheat in Europe pretty well discounted. Even when we have had tremendous surplus stocks on hand the war-fearing nations of Europe have disciplined their people and made wheat-growers of them.

If and when the outlook of Europe changes due to the movement toward common sense and plain understanding, then there should be a greater market for our surplus wheat, and we actually need such markets because the real value of growing wheat consists in being able to sell it.

We Should Do It

It was announced that the Bank of England had been instructed by the British Government to immediately place $50,000,000 credit at the disposal of the government of Czechoslovakia "to help in economic reconstruction, refugee resettlement and other urgent tasks resulting from the Munich agreement."

That something like that should be done had been previously suggested, but the British Government went ahead and did it. It is probable that a much larger amount will be needed and nations and individuals the world over should not hold back from making contributions. And such amounts should be given just as gifts with no expectation of repayment. Germany, the one nation which stands to gain most from the agreement, has opportunity to place herself in a favored position before the world by handing over a suitable portion as compensation.

In Canada we could well afford to participate. When the world war was on we were called upon to spend money at a rate which had amounted in 1919 at $465,000,000 for that one year. When war comes it is compulsory that we pay for it; when peace comes we should do the same thing willingly.

We believe our people recognize that although Czechoslovakia was not represented at the final conference which decided on peace that it was Czechoslovakia and her people which paid the actual price demanded. Had Prague elected to fight then there would have been war and plenty of it. Our country by recognizing that basic fact and acting accordingly with a cash gift would be doing something which needs doing.

Poor Evidence

Court at Lindsay was somewhat muddled by the nature of evidence presented in a liquor case, so much so that the Crown, whose business it is to prosecute such cases, suggested the dismissal of this one in particular.

The reports state a hotel keeper in the district was charged with keeping liquor for sale, and one county constable stated he had secured a bottle there and had then taken it direct to the Provincial Constable as evidence.

The next witness was another county constable who said he was in company with the one who first gave evidence. They had started to take the bottle to the Provincial Police but had stopped in a lane and given another man a drink out of it. Small wonder the Crown desired to clamp down on such a case. If men who are acting as county constables cannot tell the truth in court then it is plain enough that there should be others appointed in their place whose word could be accepted. If the report that these men did actually open a bottle and provide a man with a drink they may have to answer for such proceedings for constables have no more liberty under the law and its observance than have others.

Worth Considering

A man in public life has much else to do beside sit in an office. To illustrate: Hon. P. M. Dewan, Minister of Agriculture, was in Peterborough at the official opening of the Exhibition. He was entertained at luncheon and shown the usual courtesies which are usually extended to distinguished visitors. When he was through he went his way for he had to perform similar services at a good many other places.

At the last meeting of one of the committees of the City Council it was noted that a letter had been received from Mr. Dewan in which he thanked those responsible for the kindness shown him while he was in Peterborough. There was also a letter received at the office of the Examiner expressing Mr. Dewan's thanks for the manner in which this paper has been giving publicity and assistance to the work of the junior farmer movement, and we know of several other letters which followed the visit of the minister to Peterborough. We take it that every place he visited it would be considered necessary and proper to forward more letters of a similar nature.

One may argue that a Minister of Agriculture has plenty of secretarial assistance for such work but the pleasant fact is that men in public places attend to such matters or else make certain some one else does. And what we are coming at is this—individuals or committees receiving these letters of thanks appreciate them. It is actually a profitable investment of time to write them, and a good many individuals who pay all too little attention to such matters might profit by the example. It does not take long to write a note of appreciation for a favor or a kindness done, but it is worth many times the effort involved.

A Beautiful Setting

When the funeral of the Late William Casement was held at Hillside cemetery at Lakefield he was laid to rest by a great maple tree which he himself had planted seventy years ago. When he was a boy the property which is now the cemetery was his father's farm and that is where the tree was planted.

That is something which would happen only in a place like Lakefield where an individual had lived the length of his days and had become almost an integral part of the community and district. It is a high privilege which one would forfeit were he to become a citizen of a large community or if he were to move several times during the course of his career.

There are of course trees in many cemeteries, but most people do not know who planted them; in many cases they are put there and cared for by people whose business it is to do so. But there is a close-tied personal touch and a deep measure of human interest in that note from Lakefield about Mr. Casement being buried by a tree which he himself had planted seventy years ago.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The question of who won the peace threatens to last as long as the query about who won the war after the events of 1914-1918.

Canadians spend six million dollars in Buffalo every year, and it is estimated and that should qualify us as good neighbors.

We notice where there is a house in London which can be leased, and it contains 20 bedrooms and on wash day that would mean 40 sheets.

We notice where one financial writer in United States refers to $26,000,000,000 worth of sick railways in that country, and admittedly that is a whole lot of sickness.

In New Zealand there are 176 candidates in the field for 80 seats in the House of Representatives, and even if it is in New Zealand we fail to see how half of them are going to get in.

At a buck-saw contest at Picton fair some one stole the logs before the event started. That might be hard on a good man with a saw but it would also save the reputations of a number of others who were not so good.

Chief Dan Whetung of Curve Lake Reserve says ducks are slow moving this year as they probably know it will be warm for a while yet. We didn't know that before but we are right glad to hear about it now.

The umbrella which Chamberlain carried with him on three trips to Germany was reported lost but was finally found under a rug in the car. Not many umbrellas in England have a chance to become famous but that one has.

The late Henry Barbey of New York provided in his will that his engineering business be liquidated. That put thirty men out of work but the will also said the thirty men should divide one million dollars.

Chicago man saved pennies until he had 6,400 of them and then took the lot to make the down payment on a car. Correct enough to say that although his down payment was heavy he still owes quite a lot.

Dominion government sold $25,000,000 treasury bills due December 30 at a rate which means interest of .760 per cent. The day seems to be past when one can make a living by lending money to the government.

A man in Leeds was digging a trench in his garden as protection against air raids. The last five feet of a nine-foot trench turned out to be coal and further tests showed there is lots of it. In this case necessity was the mother of discovery.

Man in Hamilton was charged with operating a lottery and his lawyer explained the Dominion government was itself in the same business on the wheat pool. The wheat pool is a large undertaking and the suggestion may have had something to do with the sentence which was a fine of $1,000.

DIFFERENT

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Wee Angus feels now sort of keen, he says he's on a football team, he's learning how to boot; he says that he won't do so good, nor get around like how he should, until he gets a suit.

¶ I asked him if the game was rough, or if they used him sort of tough, but he just shook his head; he rubbed some stuff upon his shin, where he had lost a stretch of skin, before he went to bed.

¶ He has a scab upon his ear, and it looks rather large and queer, one eye's a trifle black; he was explaining where he played, a fellow can't stand there afraid; for he's a quarter back.

¶ When he came in last night I saw, he had a scratch across his jaw, I guessed that he'd been hit; I asked him if it hurt him bad, and he laughed like as though he's glad, it didn't hurt a bit.

¶ When Angus had a tooth pulled out, I mind he let out quite a shout, before the thing begun; he even cried when in the chair, and whimpered coming down the stair, when everything was done.

¶ But when he gets his bruises now, he never wrinkles up his brow, no matter where he's hit; a scratched up jaw, a blackened eye, a skinned off knee won't make him cry—for they don't hurt a bit.

Supplies Came On Election Eve

Last year Beverley Sutton of Sceptre, Sask., wrote a descriptive article for the Examiner telling of crop failures and of dust storms. One result of his letter was a step-up in the filling of cars from this section for the stricken areas of western Canada. This year things have been better, and Beverley, a lad of 15, tells about it.

EDITOR EXAMINER: Sir,—This year every farmer put in all the grain he could get, hoping for a crop, and sowing less per acre as thin wheat stands better in drought. It looked strange to see the grain coming through although the weeds were doing the same. In June there were two or three days when the air was full of dust but it was coming from the abandoned farms. We were all late in sowing as the government seemed afraid to give out the seed until they were sure it was going to rain. Then the feed was held back too and a good many of the people thought it rather funny that it should arrive just the day before the election.

For a time it looked as though grasshoppers were going to be bad again but although some districts had plenty they were nothing like they were a few years ago. On the 23rd of May there was the first thunder storm I had seen in three years. We were working on the rented place and a horse was struck and killed a quarter of a mile off, but on that day we had a rain that lasted for an hour and a-half. On the 10th of June there was another bad storm and it struck near the house charring the ground like burned wood, but we did not mind the storm because it meant more rain when it was needed.

We have had a peculiar disease here and I think I have the name right—enceyhalomyelities — and it attacks the brains of the horses. A number of good horses had to be shot as there was no serum available at the start, and even when it came the drought-stricken farmer could not afford to make use of it. Instead we used old oil around our horses' ears and kept spraying them. We also kept the animals in during the day when the flies were bad and then let them out for the night, and we did not lose a horse.

You need not laugh when I tell you it was grand to see weeds growing in the ditches along the road this year although we have been busy keeping them out of the garden. On July 17 we had a hail storm that did 4 per cent damage but it came slowly and there was little wind with it.

Crops that went in early are away ahead of the others and they run to 25 bushels to the acre, while some of the late stuff where they had to wait for the seed did nothing better than 5.

Strange how the storms hit here and there. Just six miles to the north of us there was a hail storm and the damage from it ran from 40 to a clean 100 per cent. I know of one man, a Mr. Lemsford, who was four miles from home when the storm broke and by the time he reached his house he was so battered and bruised from the hail beating on him that he was in a state of collapse.

Owing to the scarcity of horses father built a sort of barge 8 x 16 feet for hauling from the fields and it had to be drawn by the tractor. I don't think we averaged more than ten bushels to the acre this year and we cut a little early as every day we were afraid of hail. But even a yield like that looks pretty good when you think of the years before when there wasn't a thing.

AS OTHERS SEE IT.

(Bloomington, Ill., Pantagraph)

"A definite statement of United States co-operation in the past two years would have entirely altered the situation, but if the people of the United States are not prepared to interfere in European politics, can the youth of Britain and France be expected to lay down their lives for a cause which is, in any case, hopeless? For even if we did fight, Czechoslovakia would not be saved from annihilation in the first few weeks of such a war."

THIS is the concluding paragraph of a letter published from an English born reader in a New York paper.

He asks why Americans should chide England and France for giving in to dictators, when they (the Americans) are unwilling to do a thing about it, "situated as they are in comparative security."

Americans in fact do not perhaps realize, as this correspondent says, "the abhorrence and dread of war in Britain and France and the constant fear in which we live of a new one."

CHINA'S CHANCES.

(Detroit Free Press)

A CHINESE educator, A. C. Koo, told an audience of Detroit business men Wednesday that China cannot win the undeclared war Japan forced upon it.

"Japan has superior war material, trained troops and an organized army," said Dr. Koo. "They also have more food supplies and materials. China sadly lacks all this."

As the Japanese war machine closes relentlessly upon Hankow it looks more and more as though Dr. Koo may be right in this pessimistic prediction—as far as military victory in the present clash is concerned.

A Japanese victory in the field would not mean, though, that Japan has "conquered" China or that 75,000,000 Japanese can dominate 450,000,000 Chinese indefinitely.

The Chinese have put up a brave fight.

And if their ability to survive 5,000 years in this competitive world means anything it means that in the end they will oust the Japanese from their soil and recover that dominant position in eastern Asia to which their numbers and their character seem to entitle them.

"Now, don't get fussy, George, or I'll never learn. Let me see if I can put it in reverse myself." —Humorist.

• Reporter Went Catching Rats

IT WAS THE LUNCHEON hour and William Atherton (Books) DuPuy was harking back three decades, to the time he outdid Joe Cook by actually spending a night in the White House on the pretext of being a rat-catcher.

"I had only been in Washington a week," Bill was saying, "when one night, there came into the city room of the Washington Post, where I was working, a bustling sort of person with a pack of dogs at his heels and a box containing English ferrets in each hand. He was Barkley, the professional rat-catcher. He wanted to rid the White House of rodents, so the city editor turned him over to me to write a stick story.

"I convinced Barkley he ought to take me with him. He introduced me as his brother to Ike Hoover at the White House, and soon I was looking askance at the policemen on each landing.

"Down in the furnace room we opened the grates of the conduits under and through the executive manse and thrust a redeyed ferret in each one. The ferrets start galloping on and on, Barkley explained, and the rats, sensing the presence of their natural enemy, get up and go away from there.

"We left the grates open, and soon great gray sewer rats, in a frenzy of fear, began popping out. A rat-killing dog stood at every grate and grabbed each emerging rat, gave it a single shake, and it was dead. Before the night was over we had a pyramid of them as high as the kitchen stove.

"Presently piercing screams rent the building, and we rushed to the top of the house where Princess Alice's French governess slept. There had been a corner broken off of a grate in her room big enough to let the fleeing rats in. Six shaggy specimens were galloping about the floor and the governess was putting on a Jimmy Lake exhibition in the middle of her bed and screaming for rescue.

"Archie and Kermit Roosevelt joined us. Archie was quiet and poised, but Kermit, destined 10 years later to die an aviator in France, was a human dynamo chip off the old Roosevelt block. The rat hunt was great sport for them.

"But the climax of the evening, from my standpoint, was the arrival in the furnace room of the President himself. He had heard about these ferrets and the naturalist in him was all agog. Barkley was in another part of the house but there was I, the rat-catcher's brother and presumably able to relate the biological story of these little animals to this denouncer of nature fakers.

"I was stuck. T. R. had never seen a ferret before. (Neither had I, for that matter.) He must know all. I must tell all. Either that or exposure, and the policemen all about already had me badly scared.

"So I had to talk, and fast. The only fact that I remembered about ferrets was a vague one to the effect that they lived in the hedgerows of England. And I knew a scientific work that fitted in very nicely. The ferret, I stated with some pride at the moment, was a "carnivore." I conceived that they might be rough on chicken roosts, and I had picked up some opossum stories that furnished patter. And the beasts were vicious. I had seen them tearing raw meat.

"But as I talked a new obstacle loomed ahead. Barkley had told me that, when he released the ferrets in the conduits, they went galloping on and on, the rats fleeing ahead of them. But he had not told me how the ferrets were recovered when the hunt was over. I knew that I would be asked this question and was groping for an answer. But my inventiveness was stalled. I could not think of a single logical rejoiner to such inquiry. I would be exposed. I wondered, tensely, if I would be shot at sunrise. And I prattled furiously against time.

"Finally the unpostponable arrived. The President, smiled, showed his teeth, said he was 'delighted.' He had but one more question to ask. 'How did the ferrets get back?'

"It was the end. My young, reportorial career had been terminated.

"But at that stressful instant Brother Barkely, himself, kicked the furnace room door open and put in an appearance.

"There is a long-enduring angel who watches over reporters. I was saved. The ferrets, brother said, went galloping on and on for six hours. Then, in exhaustion, they return to the point of release and give themselves up. Which happened, as he had said.

• Will Always Be Injustice

THERE WILL BE those perhaps to say that peace was bought at the price of injustice to Czechoslovakia. The answer is that there can be no government in Central Europe, no order, without injustice. Without some measure of it. The answer, too, is that whatever of injustice might come in Czechoslovakia's surrender of the Sudeten to Germany, or whatever of harshness might be involved in the process of that surrender, it would pale into insignificance before the crime of a world war that could be avoided.

Loss or impairment of the national integrity or strength of Czechoslovakia, a vigorous democracy, is something to lament. But the fate of that nation, says the Ottawa Journal, short of its wanton destruction by an international bully, drunk with dreams of power—a thing humanity would have to resist—cannot justify a drenching of the earth with blood. It was this Prime Minister Chamberlain had in mind when he said:

"However much one may sympathize with a small nation confronted with a big and powerful nation, we cannot in all circumstances undertake to involve the whole British Empire in war on that account."

Hitler bent on world dominion, on government of other nations through fear of force, would be intolerable; would have to be resisted. But certainty must come first that such madness is his aim. It is easy to say—and it is said often—that Hitler is a "maniac"; that we must "stand up for democracy"; that we must fight Fascism and Communism; fight other ideologies. In truth, unless we all be mad, struggle for democracy and resistance to other creeds in government must be restricted to our own lands, cannot—short of attack upon us—involve interference with the affairs or the systems of government in other countries.

Certainly little could be more gratuitously criminal than to array the world into hostile camps according to state ideology. The people of each nation or state must be depended upon to evolve for themselves that form of state organization best suited to their needs. Their system of government, their political philosophy, is their own affair, and differences in such things cannot be regarded as cause for war among nations. No reason exists why the British peoples, or the American, in deep attachment to their own democratic creed, should not work and co-operate in friendship for peace and sanity on earth with all other nations, no matter what their ideologies—with Communistic Russia, with Nazi Germany, with Fascist Italy.

THE OTHER CHEEK.

(Vancouver Sun)

THE STORY IS going the rounds of Vancouver of the German traveller who was astounded to find that in Canada there is such an officer of the Crown as the Leader of the Opposition.

"You mean to say", he ejaculated, "that this man is actually appointed to oppose the Government?"

"Yes, he is."

"And he is paid for it?"

"Certainly."

"Paid for it!" exclaimed the German. "Mein Gott, in my country we would shoot him."

And there is symbolized the fundamental difference in conception between a Democracy and a Dictatorship.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THE LORD is exalted; for he dwelleth on high: he hath filled Zion with judgment and righteousness. And wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times, and strength of salvation: the fear of the Lord is his treasure. . . .

Look upon Zion, the city of our solemnities: thine eyes shall see Jerusalem a quiet habitation, a tabernacle that shall not be taken down; not one of the stakes thereof shall ever be removed, neither shall any of the cords thereof be broken.

But there the glorious Lord will be unto us a place of broad rivers and streams; wherein shall go no galley with oars, neither shall gallant ships pass thereby. For the Lord is our judge, the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king; he will save us.

And the inhabitant shall not say, I am sick; the people that dwell therein shall be forgiven their iniquity.—Isaiah xxxiii, 5, 6, 20-22, 24.

TAXES AND MORE TAXES.

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

GIVING THE MUNICIPALITIES part of the gasoline tax should have been done long ago; the municipalities have to pay for construction and maintenance of roads for the comfort and safety of motorists. Surely it is nothing but fair that they should be reimbursed, in part at least, for what they spend. Whether the tax is increased or not, the municipalities should have part of it.

But the whole scheme is simply addition of more taxes. What the Governments — all Governments — should get down to is one tax—"brass tacks." They might well "lay off" seeking new sources of revenue and spend some profitable hours in considering how to reduce their expenditures.

It is his constant endeavour to see not only that the terms of your Will are scrupulously carried out, but that your beneficiaries receive the explanations and counsel they require. ¶ When you appoint the Toronto General Trusts your executor and trustee you leave your estate in the hands of a widely experienced Corporation; but its services are not impersonal. PORT COLBORNE DEFEATS KEENE IN FIRST OF THE O.S.A. FINALS

Lakefield Team Is Beaten By King Edward

Lakefield Public School soccer team were guests of King Edward soccer team on Tuesday afternoon on King Edward Park in an exhibition game that was full of interest. This was the first occasion that the visitors had played a competitive game and shaped up well in combination but lacked the finished experience of the local boys when in the shooting zone. They were under the capable supervision of Tom Chaplin. The local league leaders won by 5 to 0.

Lakefield Lost Toss

Langton, King Edward, set the ball arolling. Skelcher, Lakefield, punted upfield to test out the custodian and they followed this attack up with combination that was repulsed in the nick of time. Mid-field play continued for a while until Jamieson travelled down the wing and sent a lightning shot across the goal mouth were Langton registered the opening counter. The visitors relied too much on individual play to penetrate the opposing full backs. Just before the interval, Langton and Murduff experience resulted in two more counters being registerd through thir effective combination in front of Lakefield goal.

Visitors Put Up A Battle

On resuming, the Lakefield team made things interesting around the Peterborough goal where Curtis saved two shots in a row and then punted clear. Exchanges continued even for a while. Towards the finish, King Edward boys settled down to combination to confine the activities to the Lakefield goal that brought out the full back abilities of Moore and Kendall. They stood up to the test well but Jamieson, on the Petes' right was always dangerous and it was after the Lakefield goalie had made two spectacular saves that he had to concede defeat from Langton's close-in shot. Anderson got the fourth counter from a pass by Palmer. Charlie Murduff made the score King Edward 5, Lakefield 0.

Lakefield Public School—L. Allen, goal; O. Moore and J. Kendall, full backs; P. Edwards, C. Pearson and S. Hart, halves; A. Jackman, C. Skelcher, R. Millage, R. Carveth and G. Birch, forwards.

King Edward—W. Curtis, goal; A. Lowes and F. Lawson, full backs; D. McGregor, W. Anderson and G. Blackwell, halves; D. Jamieson, G. Reil, C. Murduff, K. Langton and C. Palmer, forwards.

Referee—Stroyan Leith, Sr.

Excused

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 5—(AP).—John Votroubek was called for jury duty. "Your honor," he said. "I have a ticket for the world series game." District Judge Charles Leslie excused him.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

THERE'LL BE high jinks up in Lindsay tonight when the third tilt of the O.L.A. senior "B" group finals is staged at 8.30 between the Inglewood-Caledon Combines and the Petes. The locals are still fuming at the smart stunt pulled by the canny Combines' skipper, and the odd ruling of Referee Leighton which took a tie game and turned it into a local loss. As Bunny Morgansen says in the Tely, it'll be interesting to hear the referee's explanation of that to the O.L.A. executive. The Petes will protest that game, provided they lose tonight, but they feel sure of knocking the Combines into their winter combinations—how are we doing?—this eve. Don't miss the fun, folks, it'll be a gala gathering of Peterborough fandom. (Aside to the Petes: Get your sticks measured early!)

P.C.I. GRIDDERS open their home season here Saturday, a junior joust at 10 a.m. in the Exhibition Grounds and a senior setto at two bells on the southend gridiron. Oshawa High School teams are the opponents. Coach Bamforth of the championship P.C.I.-ers tried to switch the senior scrap, owing to the ball game here that day, but it was no go. However, it'll be an hour earlier than the diamond classic, so fans can see half of it or so. We expect it'll be a right fine football fixture. And the juniors ought to dish up a neat struggle, also.

As Youth Was Served

YOUTH HAD ITS DAY under a smiling October sun at the Exhibition Grounds—well, the sun was other places, too—yesterday when the King Edward School annual field day was held. Oodles of track and field events with plenty of entries and some close finishes. Girl winners were: Senior—Elma Taylor with Jean Castle runner-up; intermediate—Olive Riel, Gertrude Rose being runner-up; junior—Betty Stewart, and Verna Whitmore runner-up; senior boys—Gordon Blackwell, with Charles Murduff second; intermediate—Andrew Brown, followed by Eldon Downer; junior—Henry Smith, with Paul Estlick runner-up. The teaching staff conducted the events in efficient style.

* * * * * *

JAKE BIDDLE saw Stratford play in Toronto and predicted a win for the Petes, saying he fed our gang a few fast ones in the Oshawa series and the locals nearly flattened the left fielder with their drives. And the St. Thomas scribe, chuckling at how Niagara Falls and "the best pitcher in Ontario" were knocked off in two straight by the Petes, adds: "The fate of Mickey Paige's team should be a warning to the Petes to be careful with their adjectives. There's a tendency down east to call the Petes a shoo-in for the Ontario flag." We stand corrected, but we're mighty hopeful. The first fray here Saturday 'gainst Stratford ought to jam in the customers. It'll be the last local ball game of the year—"and high time, too," mutter the football officials!

The North Forgives Us

A SUDDEN SHUTDOWN of the blasting department of the Sudbury Star followed the letter Secretary Jim Dorris sent the Creighton Mines' officials late last week. The Star now says: "A letter received from the Peterborough ball club throws some light on the playoff tangle. And the communication also puts the blame where it belongs, right on the doorstep of the O.B.A. Some heat has been directed at the Petes, but it was not their fault. Peterborough did not receive notice from the O.B.A. in time to insure a playoff with Creighton. The O.B.A. action in allowing the Toronto league to release players for softball competition caused the impasse." It adds Creighton couldn't afford a home-and-home series with the Petes, so withdrew—and will now try to form a northern association for next year.

* * * * * *

THIS FROM Niagara Falls Review: "Harry Wasser said he would be back with the ball club next season, and Frank Mussel will also return if he fails to make a connection in organized ball. Personally we do not expect a return of the Schoolboy, who should have little difficulty catching on with some minor league club. The boy has a lot of stuff and, if given an oportunity, will likely make the grade. If the province has seen a better tosser, we cannot recall the fellow's name, and every outstanding hurler of the past 30 years has come under our observation." There are a few hurlers who saw service in Ontario in the past 30 years which the Falls' scribe evidently didn't see. For instance, Krakauskas, Judd, Williams, Heckman, Whitehouse and others, not forgetting Urban Shocker and all those Canadian League twirlers of less than 30 years ago. Probably McNally and Kitchen of the Petes and Biddle of Oshawa are better, too. And didn't Joe Jakaf-by outpitch Mussel by a big margin here two weeks ago?

And The World Serious

AMID the mighty fanfare of pro ballyhoo, the World Series starts today in Chicago. Yanks should take the Cubs before the seventh struggle, we think. Today and tomorrow, the N'Yawk squad plays at the Cubs' park at 2.30 p.m. They take a day off then and play the next three games at Yankee Stadium at 1.30 p.m., except for Sunday when it'll be at two bells. If it's necessary, the clubs then travel back to Chicago to play Wednesday and Thursday of next week at 2.30 o'clock. Wrigley Field seats 42,000 and the Stadium 70,000 fans. Lee and Ruffing are expected to pitch today, and maybe Dizzy Dean will see action for the Cubs shortly. National and Columbia radio chains will carry these games, and there'll be a local bulletin service at The Examiner.

"I WISH TO GOSH the lacrosse and ball was over here, so all the football players could attend every practice," Coach Bill Irwin of the Orfuns said yesterday. He has been drilling the squad nightly, but players like Murphy, Deadey, Doll, Kearns, Magee, Crowe and Loucks have had to absent themselves frequently for ball or lacrosse practices and games. And these two-game stars will be tied up the rest of the week too, we fear. However, the Orfuns are coming along okay and they hope to make a good showing in Montreal against the strong Nationals Monday in the schedule opener. No serious casualties yet, and Irwin says some of the local talent is going to star in senior company ere the season ends. Probably just a picture practice—when cameramen from the papers pounce down to photograph various players—will be held Saturday, and the team leaves Sunday for Mo'real.

Grimm Passes Up World Series Games, "No Fun When Not In There Playing"

Chicago, Oct. 5 (A.P.).

CHARLEY GRIMM, deposed as manager of Chicago Cubs late in July, is passing up the 1938 World Series opener.

The former Cub leader, now a radio sports announcer, said on his arrival from St. Louis yesterday he didn't plan to watch the Cubs and Yankees.

"I just can't enjoy any game where I don't have anything to do," he said.

Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis barred Grimm from broadcasting the Series on the ground he might be partial to his former team.

Grimm declared he was "not sore" because the Cubs failed to vote him a share of the Series spoils.

"Frankly," he said, "I never expected to be cut in. I don't believe an ex-manager is entitled to any dough."

There were rumors that the Cubs excluded Grimm because he did not go to their dressing-room on Saturday to congratulate them winnig the pennant.

"I figured that an ex-manager's place was anywhere but in the clubhouse," commented Grimm.

Montreal Fans Backing McGill Redmen

(By The Canadian Press.)

(By The Canadian Press)

A decade ago McGill Redmen won their last intercollegiate football championship, and during the intervening lean years attendance figures at times for college games in Montreal were nothing to brag about. But this looks like an "up-beat" year for the Redmen, who have demonstrated all sorts of power in winning two pre-season exhibition games.

And to show that football fans in Montreal are solidly behind the Redmen, more than 8,500 persons turned out last night at Molson Stadium fo ra grid rally featured by a torch-light parade and the burning of effigies representing the other entries in the college loop—Queen's, University of Toronto and University of Western Ontario.

Of course, the majority were old grads and present students but the turnout indicated that a similar crowd, or more, could be expected when the Redmen open the college schedule here Saturday against Western Mustangs.

Mustangs Short Three?

While the Redmen reported in nearly tip-top shape for the battle, it was possible that Mustangs would be without three of their regulars for the game. Wally Hilton is hobbling around with a charley horse, while Osborne Cox is suffering from a leg infection and Claude Moore, fleet half-back, has an injured right leg.

At present the only McGill regular who might be kept out of action is giant Murray Telford. The big middle suffered a bruised leg but the club physician said last night that Telford might be ready by Saturday.

Toronto Argonauts, national champions, may have Bob Isbister for their opening Big Four game against Hamilton Tigers in Toronto Saturday. Isbister reported for drill last night after recuperating for some time from a knee operation.

Coach Jerry Brock of the Tigers is concentrating on open field tackling and better defensive work along the line. Three of his Bengals Tommy Harrison, Tommy Bonk and Red Hart, are recovering from injuries suffered when the team lost last Saturday to Sarnia. They are expected to be ready for Saturday.

MILLBROOK

Badminton Club Opens Season

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 5.—Judging by the splendid attendance at the opening evening of the Millbrook Garrison Badminton Club, held in the Armouries on Monday, a brilliant season is in store.

Friendly games were played until the refreshment hour, when everyone repaired to the club-room lounge, with the executive in charge, headed by the social convenors, Mrs. W. R. Howard and Miss Ruth Thorndyke.

In view of the approaching Thanksgiving weekend, the table was artistically arranged with a low cream bowl of seasonable fruits, around which were placed colored maple leaves, flanked at either end by tall yellow tapers.

Coffee was poured from the silver service by Mrs. Howard with Mrs. M. E. Hobbs, Misses Ada Attwooll and Ruth Thorndyke assisting in the serving.

Two gentlemen on the committee, William Edworthy and Grant Henry, outdid themselves in the decoration of their chocolate cakes. The former's cake was square with a miniature badminton court marked on one side. Held up by two match sticks, a cheesecloth net stretched across it; on the other side two small raquets, made of wire and wood, complete with box of birds, finished the decoration. In anticipation of winning the district cup, the latter had marked a cup with white icing on which were printed the year 1939 and the name of the club. Everyone had a chance to view the cakes before they were cut for serving.

A pleasant social hour was enjoyed by all, when many remained for a game or two before departing for their several homes.

Five new members, Misses Jean Burnham, Muriel and Thelma Ball, and Messrs. J. Turner and G. Ellsworth were initiated.

For the past few years they have made Galt and Preston their stamping grounds, staying at the Preston Springs.

Dave Pinkey has made arrangements for his Stratford M.O. entry to have ice workouts here starting Oct. 11.

Gabby Laughs As He Labors

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (AP)—Getting a line on Charles Leo Hartnett, proud manager of the conquering Chicago Cubs and baseball hero to millions:—

The big, red-faced, laughing "Gabby" Hartnett is the work-horse of baseball and without a doubt its most popular fingure....he has had a remarkable career of 17 years with the Cubs working at the hardest job on the team—catching....he is up and down with every pitc hevery day, while the pitcher performs only once or twice a week....in addition to all the physical efforts Gabby has the signalling and inside part of the game to look after . . one of the reasons for Hartnett's great popularity is that he seems to enjoy his work ....his happiness in baseball is genuine.

With all the grind of his long career he never has lost his joviality ..boyishness has never left him....nobody can laugh like Gabby....he simply winds up and lets go....he laughs all over.

Hartnett has an aversion to "work," although he is the hardest worker in the game....Back in 1921 he was living with his parents in Millville, Mass., and working in a steel mill at Worchester, 26 miles away.

Early To Late

He had to get up at 5:30 in the morning and didn't get back until 7:30 at night. One morning it was 20 below. When he got to the plant both of his ears were frozen. Then and there he denounced work and vowed he would never work again ....He never has.

Ambitions: Five, three of which he has achieved. He would liek to live a 100 years and play a game of ball every day. Manage successfully a big league team. To catch more games than any other catcher. Win a national league pennant and then to lead a team to a world's championship.

Family: In 1929 he married Martha Henrietta Marshall. Children: Two, Charles Leo, Jr., known as Buddy, eight, and Sheilla Ann, three. They reside in their own home, Chicago. He says the best thing he ever did was to get married and adds he would have been better off had he been married five years sooner....

"When you see a ball player who has settled down and saves his money you will see a good ball player," he opines. Born December 20, 1900 at Woonsucket, R.I., eldest of 14 children, nine of whom are still living..Both parents still reside at Millville....Father was a semi-pro catcher....

Appearance: He is six feet one, weighs 220 pounds, brown hair streaked with gray, and greenish gray eyes....An immaculate and stylish dresser....Loves to pull on a big black cigar.

Pop Dies On Parade

TAMPA, Fla., Oct. 5—(AP).—The career of Frank A. Mullan, 69, known as "Pop" to generations of students at the University of Tampa, where he was night watchman ended amid blaring horns and shouting. Dressed in fireman's hat and gaudy blue pajamas Pop was marching in the freshmen's "beat Miami" parade. Without warning, he fell dead.

Twins Of Course

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho, Oct. 5—(AP).—Mrs. May Demott Millward waited outside the maternity ward room of her twin sister, Mrs. Edith Demott Jensen, for "the news." Waiting with her were twin sisters Vella and Valeta Gosselin and Lavon Berg, who has a twin brother. "The news"—twins for Mrs. Jensen.

FACTS ABOUT FOOTBALL

Kicking Is Most Potent Method Of Attack—Here Are Important Rules

By LEW HAYMAN

THE KICKER . . . a split second after his foot met the ball

In Canadian football kicking still predominates and the team with the better kicker has a decided advantage. Kicking, sometimes intentionally, sometimes accidentally often paves the way for breaks that result in scores being made. A short kick, a blocked kick, an out-of-bounds kick, a low kick might easily decide a close game. A fumble by the receiver or a kick that is returned may result in a game turning one way or another. In other words, the winning or losing of a game between evenly matched teams can be traced to a kick or a play resulting from a kick. The kick is used oftener than any other single play in the game, which makes it definitely the most important.

I personally believe punting is a natural talent and that high-class kickers are born, not made. However, the natural ability has to be helped and encouraged along certain correct lines. The difficulty in kicking is not the theoretical learning, but the execution. Kickers must master their art by constant practice, so that their speed, form laying-of-the-ball on the foot, and other necessary actions are so fixed as habits that they become automatic.

The place for the kicker is about 10 yards back of the snap, unless he is slow at getting the kick away, in which case he should be from 11 to 13 yards back. Individuals employ minor varieties in their systems of kicking, but most good ones agree on the following rules:

1. Stand on as firm ground as is possible and relax. Tighten up only as the foot strikes the ball.

2. Do not go up to meet the ball as it comes from the snap. Stand still or a blocked kick might result.

3. As the ball is caught with the outstretched hands, adjust it so as to have the lace on top. Tip the ball slightly upward at the front if trying for height, downward if you want a long low punt.

4. The ball is laid on the foot with the right hand, the fingers of which are well spread along the right side of the ball. The left hand merely steadies and guides the ball.

5. The left hand is well extended while the right elbow is slightly bent. Hold the ball about waist-high in front of the kicking foot.

6. The swing of the kicking foot starts rather slowly, so that when the foot meets the ball the speed is at a maximum.

7. The toes are turned down and the ankle is locked and rigid as the ball is hit.

8. The ball is usually struck just above the height of the knee, that is, a little over two feet from the ground. FOLLOW THROUGH! It's important in any game, and when you're kicking a football the completion of the swing of your foot should be as high as your leg will go.

9. KEEP YOUR EYES ON THE BALL until the kick is completed.

10. The foot should strike the ball with the outside of the instep.

11. Don't try to "kill" the ball. Good timing and meeting the ball properly with the foot are more important than mere power.

The picture today was taken just after contact with the ball, the kicking leg following through and the kicker's eyes on the ball. The kicking foot is tilted slightly towards his left, as he met the ball with the outside of his instep. The ankle joint is locked and rigid and the toes turned down. Balance is maintained by the left foot. An important point is that the kicking leg goes straight through with its stroke, and is NOT, SWUNG ACROSS IN FRONT OF THE BODY.

TOMORROW — More kicking, as we talk about the right way to make placement kicks and drop kicks.

Jump At Start Gives Ports A Lengthy Lead

Keene went down before a strong Port Colborne team in the first of the O.A.S. finals in Port Colborne seven runs to two Monday.

Keene were below form after their long journey and did not show their best till after the fourth. They held the opposition to two runs in last six frames and collected two themselves.

Port Colborne scored four in the third when a fly ball was lost in the sun to go for a home run with two on to take a commanding lead which Keene were unable to overcome. Port Colborne played smart ball all the way and deserved the win.

Keene could do little with Poole, who pitcher great ball for the Ports. Don McCarthy also pitched smart ball to hold the Ports, who have former Intermediate 'A' champions and Class 'B' players on their squad; Also the well-known 'Dinty' Moore, former senior O.H.A. hockey star.

Winners In Havelock High School Field Dav

Phillies Pick Up Merril May

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (AP).—The 'new deal' that Philadelphia's futile Phillies hope to swing under their new manager, Dr. James T. (Doc) Prothro, was off to a fine start today with the acquisition of Merril May, Newark third baseman, and generally regarded as the "prize" of the big league draft meeting.

May has been one of the standouts of the "wonder team" of Newark Bears that has mowed down the rest of the International League for the past two seasons.

Altogether, 17 players were drafted from the minors by 10 of the 16 big league clubs. Only the pennant winners — the Cubs and New York Yankees—the Boston Bees, New York Giants, Cincinnati Reds and Cleveland Indians "passed" on every deal at the meeting.

Two well-liked veterans of the big leagues were brought back when Washington Senators selected gallant Charley Gelbert, ex-St. Louis Cardinal infielder, from Toledo, and Philadelphia Athletics picked Roy (Tarzan) Parmelee, former New York Giants, Chicago Cubs, and St. Louis Cardinals pitcher, from Minneapolis.

Kansas City Pins Hope On Wicker

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 5 (AP). — Kansas City Blues, still in the running but a full lap behind, pint their hopes for victory over Newark Bears in the fourth game of the little world series here tonight on the stout arm of Kemp Wicker.

Wicker blanked the Bears in the series opener at Newark to give Kansas City its lone victory in three games. In the other two games the Blues' pitching was inadequate, the fielding spotty and the batting weak, with 12-4 and 7-1 Newark victories the result.

Manager Johnny Neun of the Bears was slated to send Atley Donald, knocked from the mound in the opener, back against Wicker.

Long Branch Has Fine Program

The Long Branch Jockey Club Ltd., whose meeting opens today, has a number of outstanding attractions, but the highlights are on Thanksgiving Day and the closing day of the meeting Wednesday, October 12.

On the holiday the inaugural running of the Long Branch Canadian Championship for three-year-olds, foaled in Canada, is down for decision. Nominations for this totalled thirteen.

This race is for $2,000 added, with it costing $25 to nominate each horse and $75 more to start with all nomination and starting fees going to the winning owner The latter will also receive a pair of gold-plated horseshoes and to give it a more sentimental touch, the winning owner will be asked to furnish two plates of the winning horse. which in turn will be wrought in gold and presented to the winning owner, so the latter will always have in his possession plates worn by the winner of the race.

The $5,000 added, Mrs. Orpen's Cup and Saucer for two-year-olds foaled in Canada, will be run on Wednesday, October 12, the final day of the meeting. This stake closed with 77 nominations, but after two more payments, but 31 remain eligible, and if ten go to the post the race will gross more than $8,000. It is the most valuable two-year-old stake in Canada, and, for for that matter, it is only exceeded in value by the King's Plate.

There'll be hurdle racing on three days of the meeting, namely, Thursday, Friday and Tuesday, when they'll be called to the post at 1:30. On other days the starting time will be 2 o'clock.

Cubs Go Into The Battle Confident General Lee Can Win Despite Series Odds Of 12 to 5

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 5 (AP)—Unaccustomed as they are to winning a World Series, Chicago Cubs go into their battle against the wonder Yankees today with bounding hopes and a strong hunch that they are going to upset the apple cart.

There is nothing very sensible about their dream. The Yankees look just as tough as they ever did, and you can't imagine how lethal they look when Red Ruffing is pitching and swinging his bludgeon in ninth position. That particular line-up gives the Yankees nine hitters who can, and do, break up ball games.

But that is how the Cubs feel about it. They know that the posted odds are 12 to 5 against their chances, and that the consensus of experts is that the Yankees will cop their third straight world championship in five games, winding up the series in New York next Monday.

Yet the Cubs go into today's tussle thinking they are going to win. They have an abounding confidence in the pitching of General Bill Lee, who faces Ruffing in the first game, and they think they are a "team of destiny," or something. At that, there is something mystical about the fact that General Lee, a big fellow from the banjo belt, is taking another whack at the Yankees.

Capacity Crowds Assured.

A capacity crowd of about 44,000 was assured for today's game and that of tomorrow. Wrigley Field, one of the prettiest emporiums in baseball, with its red brick wall circling the outfield, was a sellout last night. Speculators were demanding up to $75 for a set of single seats to the three games that will be played here if the series goes six games, and the more hardy bleacher fans were in line at noon yesterday.

The Yankees, cocky as ever, think they will knock over the Cubs in four straight games. They are, if anything, a trifle too confident. They clinched the American League pennant some three weeks before the campaign ended, and they haven't played good ball since. They didn't look very good in their practice yesterday.

Everybody is agreed the Cubs are sunk without a ripple if Lee fails them today. Lee has won 22 games this year. He has pitched nine shutouts, more than have been pitched by any other two elbowers in the big leagues.

Their Only Hope.

Lee is a fast-ball pitcher, with a sharp curve that he keeps low and outside. That is supposed to be the only effective pitching against the sluggers of the Yankee batting order.

Gabby Hartnett, catcher-manager of the Cubs, is determined to play in the series, though he is suffering with a couple of damaged fingers on his right hand. His bat is an important factor in the Cubs' attack.

The announced line-ups for the opener were:

Chicago: Hack, 3b; Herman, 2b; Demaree, lf; Cavarretta, rf; Reynolds, cf; Hartnett, c; Collins, 1b; Jurges, ss; Lee, p.

Yankees: Crosetti, ss; Rolfe, 3b; Henrich, rf; DiMaggio, cf; Gehrig, 1b; Dickey, c; Selkirk, lf; Gordon, 2b; Ruffing, p.

Remember When—

(By The Canadian Press)

Referee Harry Ertle announced three hours after the Young Stribling-Mike McTigue light-heavyweight boxing championship bout that it was a draw. From the ring at Columbus, Ga., 15 years ago tonight, he declared it a draw and then gave the verdict to Stribling, the challenger, because angry spectators "intimidated" him.

Municipalities Unite To Push Sarnia To Ottawa As Completely Paved Highway

TORONTO, Oct. 5. — Claiming Northern Ontario's tourist traffic had been lost to the southern part of the Province because of poor roads, forty-five delegates from 20 Ontario municipalities met in Toronto yesterday and formed the Number Seven Highway Association, an organization designed to urge upon the Ontario Government the immediate necessity of completing a paved highway between Sarnia and Ottawa.

While no resolutions were drawn up yesterday, it is expected a delegation will be appointed to approach Queen's Park to request that No. 7 Highway, which followed a northerly route from Sarnia and Point Edward to Ottawa, be placed in a first-class paved condition before next spring.

The Board of Directors is composed of the following: H. D. Marshall, Ottawa; D. J. McRury, Point Edward; W. L. Smith, Sarnia; Mayor J. J. Bradley, Smith's Falls; E. J. Lambert, Perth; Mayor George W. Gordon, Kitchener; Mayor William G. Taylor, Guelph; R. H. MacDonald, Stratford; J. F. Dickison, Arkona; G. C. Henderson, Thedford; David White, St. Mary's; Fred Laughton, Parkhill; and C. C. Lee, Goderich. In addition, directors will be appointed later from Brampton, Collingwood, Peterborough, and Lindsay.

Closer to Ottawa.

Brought together largely through the efforts of A. C. Trussler of Sarnia and a large delegation from that city, the new association went on record as supporting Highway No. 7 as an alternative route across Ontario as distinct from Highway No. 2, the southerly route, now followed almost entirely by United States tourists. It is 465 miles from Sarnia to Ottawa by No. 7, compared with 541 miles by No. 2.

No. 7 Highway, when revised as suggested by the Association, would pass through the following cities, towns and villages: Sarnia, Point Edward, Warwick, Arkona, Parkhill, Ailsa Craig, Elginfield, St. Marys, Stratford, New Hamburg, Kitchener, Guelph, Acton, Georgetown, Brampton, Woodbridge, Thornhill, Langstaff, Unionville, Markham, Brooklin, Manchester, Sunderland, Lindsay, Omemee, Peterborough, Norwood, Havelock, Marmora, Madoc, Maberley, Perth, Carleton Place and Ottawa.

Delegates, who included the Mayors of ten Ontario municipalities, pledged themselves to co-operate in urging upon the Government the necessity of completing the paving along this route. It was estimated that a total of twenty-five miles, in widely separated parts, remained to be finished.

"Highway No. 7 is going to serve more of the province than any other highway," declared Mayor Thomas Henry of Stratford. He pointed out that if this route were completed it would relieve congestion on the crowded No. 2 Highway, and open up a new country for tourists. "We are entitled to have this highway finished because it is one of the oldest in the province," the Mayor added.

Losing Income

Alderman George Stirrett of Sarnia, said Ontario was losing considerable tourist income from lack of an alternative route across the province.

"When tourists leave Sarnia they are informed the roads are bad in the north, so the great majority of them pass across the Niagara Peninsula in one day and don't even spend the night in Canada. If we can head their cars north over No. 7, the entire province will benefit by the added expenditure they are bound to make," Mr. Stirrett declared.

Alderman A. Belanger of Ottawa, added that many tourists from Quebec would enter Ontario if they were assured of a different route by which to return.

Sessions will continue Wednesday at the Royal York Hotel.

Looking Back
On This Date

Sixty years ago to-day (October 5, 1878) John Douglas Sutherland Campbell, Marquess of Lorne, was appointed Governor-General, not because he was himself, but because he had married Princess Louise, the sixth child of Queen Victoria. Her Majesty had been unable to attain her desire that one of her sons should represent her in Canada, and so, as a substitute, sent her daughter. It was not until ten years after Queen Victoria's death that, in 1911, her youngest son, Arthur, Duke of Connaught, came over to Ottawa.

The Marquess of Lorne was to some degree over-shadowed by the Royal blood of his spouse (they had been married a little over seven years, but had no children); but he gave close attention to his duties and proved himself a constitutional Governor in every respect. One instance of this is recalled. He had been sworn as Governor-General on November 25, 1878, just after the elections of that year which had swept the Mackenzie ministry out of office and sent Sir John Macdonald back to power.

The new Governor, absolutely ignorant of our politics except through reading, found himself very soon in a dilemma. The French Conservatives in Parliament demanded the dismissal of Hon. Luc Letellier de Saint Just as Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec in revenge for his having dismissed the deBoucherville ministry in March, 1878. A majority in both Houses of Parliament having demanded such action, Sir John went to Lord Lorne and advised the dismissal.

The Governor-General, unable to find any precedent, asked leave to consult Downing Street. To this Sir John and all his ministers assented. The British Government referred the question back and told Lord Lorne that it was his duty to follow the advice of his ministers, and so the Order-in-Council dismissing Letellier was signed on July 25, 1879. During the debate on the issue in the Commons some Liberals charged that Lord Lorne had appealed to London against the advice of his ministry, whereupon the Governor-General wrote, asking that a public denial be made and that it be made clear that at no time was there any breach between him and the Prime Minister.

Thereafter Lord Lorne's relations with Sir John, both official and personal, were cordial, and it is noteworthy that immediately after the general elections in 1891, in which Sir John won his last victory, he received a cable which read:

Windsor, March 9, 1891.
Heartfelt congratulations.
Lorne Louise.

Lord Lorne, who became the ninth Duke of Argyll in 1900, died May 2, 1914. The Duchess is still alive, now in her 90th year, still interested in Canada, proud of the province to which her fourth name, Alberta, was given, and of the capital of Saskatchewan which she named Regina, as well as Lake Louise, named after herself.

Farming Hazardous In S. Saskatchewan

SASKATOON, Oct. 5 — (CP) — Farming in southern Saskatchewan has "definite limitations" but the industry can be successfully carried on in that area, H. Van Vliet, instructor of the farm management department, said in a service club katchewan, said in a service club address last night.

No matter how successfully scientific study was applied to problems of the southern Saskatchewan farmer it was now realized that farming, in the southern part of this province, will always be "somewhat hazardous" and that the droughts will recur in cycles.

"In considering the problems of the south Saskatchewan farmer, we must bear in mind that wheat is the most drought-resisting crop he can grow, which means the answer to his troubles is not to be found in a wholesale adoption of mixed farming."

Trent River Woman's Father Was Friend Of the Late Joseph Chamberlain

(Examiner Correspondence.)

Trent River, Oct. 5.

PREMIER Neville Chamberlain, youngest son of Joseph Chamberlain was born at Highbury King's Heath, England, near Birmingham in 1869 and his father was well known to Mrs. H. H. Pollock's father, Frederick Madeley of Birmingham, England, with whom he had many business associations, Mrs. Pollock revealed in an interview.

Joseph Chamberlain had large orchid conservatories at Highbury which were thrown open to the public when the annual flower shows were held in the park. It is now a public park with a hospital that was built for the disabled soldiers of the Great War. The premier's father always wore an orchid on the lapel of his coat.

in the economic reconstruction period.

"We are in era of paternalism," the Premier continued. "We have spent $200,000,000 on relief and if things keep up we will have half the population working to keep the other half."

During his address, Premier Hepburn turned briefly to conditions in the United States and he said the farmers had stood by there watching their corn burn without realizing they were to be taxed for "this monumental policy of folly."

Girl Shoots Father To Protect Mother

NEW LEXINGTON, O., Oct. 5.—(AP).—Virginia Annon, pretty 18-year-old brunette, occupied a jail cell today while Perry county authorities checked her story that she shot and killed her 63-year-old father to protect her mother.

Sheriff James Adrian said John Annon was shot and killed with a rifle in his home at nearby Crooksville late yesterday. The officer said Virginia told him she fired when the father attacked Mrs. Annon after a bitter argument over his "allowance."

Prosecutor T. B. Williams asserted that Virginia was being held without charge pending an inquiry.

1500-Acre Marsh Near Cambray Studied As Cranberry Supply

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Oct. 5. — A resident of Bobcaygeon, named Finley, father of six children, was sentenced in Police Court on Monday afternoon to one month in jail when he pleaded guilty to having supplied liquor to minors. The accused admitted to the court that he had received a sum of money from four Bobcaygeon youths for the purpose of securing a quantity of liquor. Constable Hardy of the village stated that he had been called to investigate a fight, and on making investigations had uncovered sufficient evidence to lay a charge against the accused. Three youths involved were charged with illegally consuming. One of them pleaded guilty, but the other two entered pleas of not guilty. Their cases were adjourned until October 14.

A few days ago the Goose Lake marsh near the village of Cambray was visited by a deputation from the Provincial Department of Agriculture in order to investigate the conditions at the marsh with a view to cranberry culture. The delegation comprised Prof. E. F. Palmer, director of Vineland Horticultural Station, George Wilson, Market Commissioner, and G. R. Mollard, a cranberry grower. It is claimed that Goose Lake marsh is a very natural resource, which, if developed, could produce all the cranberries Canada imports annually—about 100 cars. There are about 1,500 acres in the marsh and lake.

Alexander Lang, who resides near the Kirkfield Lift Locks, bagged a 200-pound bear on Saturday near that village. The sounds of dogs barking beneath a tree attracted his attention, and securing his gun, he started out to investigate. He noticed bruin sitting on a branch in a tree, and brought him down with one shot. Farmers in the district have been losing sheep recently, and blamed their loss on dogs. One sheep was found on Saturday evening near where the bear was shot. It had been mangled badly.

Marriage Record

OTTAWA. — An all-time record for marriages in Ottawa was established in September when 179 couples were married, the city clerk's office reported today. The previous record was in June, 1919, when the total was 177.

67 Dwellings Either Built Or Being Constructed In Peterborough And Suburbs

Since January 1st of this year, sixty-seven dwellings have either been built or are in the course of construction within the city limits and in the suburban area close to the city's boundary, and this total almost doubles the figures for any twelve-month period during the past five years. With three months still to go it appears that the total for 1938 will be twice as great as 1937 when the number of houses built was approximately 45.

42 New Homes In City

Within the city limits 42 new houses have been constructed and 14 of these have gone up across the river in Ashburnham. The west end covering a territory west of Park street and north of Charlotte has shown a steady growth with several very fine residences being built both inside the city limits and just outside the boundary. The balance of the 42 permits cover the city with the south-end getting the greater portion.

In Ashburnham there has been marked building activity for the past two years, and a new subdivision has been opened up by the Curtis Brothers on the east side of Armour Road opposite the Nicholls Oval. Two brick houses were built there last year and at present three others are in the course of construction. A sewer has been laid and the Board of Works employees are at present building a sidewalk along the east side of Armour Road to Parkhill Road. It is interesting to note that builders have grabbed off the best building lots as far north as Carlisle avenue, then have taken a jump to the north of Dufferin street where building has started again.

In North Monaghan

The most building has taken place in North Monaghan south of Lansdowne street and on King George street alone six new houses are under construction. In Smith township and in North Monaghan a total of 22 houses have been built with the possibility that a few are not included in this total.

Twenty houses have been converted into duplexes and it is believed that before the year is out, at least three more will be changed into two family dwellings.

Building permits issued by the City Engineer for houses within the city limits during the past five years are as follows: 1934—14; 1935—14; 1936—36; 1937—32, and for the first nine months of 1938 the total is 42. These permits apply only to dwelling houses and do not take into consideration alterations to change houses in duplexes.

The Rambling REPORTERS

A HOUSING PROBLEM?

Nick Hartley, manager of Nick's Cabin Camp on the Lakefield Road has discovered that pup tents are a menace to his business. He had believed that such a tent was used only to cover provisions in a summer camp, but now that also is changed. Last week a car containing four midgets stopped at the camp and rented ground to erect a ten. When they started to put up the little pup tent which was not large enough to accommodate one fair sized man, Nick was certain they would need a cabin, but to his amazement the four tiny men carried bedding from the car, stowed it in the small canvas shelter then as darkness gathered the four disappeared one after another through the tent flap and the quartet snuggled comfortably within the narrow confines of the tent through the night, without any trouble whatever. Nick now thoroughly disappointed scanned the highway for natural size customers to take the last empty cabin on the lot.—McG.

Hunters Find Moose Plentiful

Moose hunting, the cream of big game sport in this country, promises to be better this year than it has been for some time, according to two Detroit sportsmen who stopped while passing through the city this morning with a large moose head and the carcasses of two bears roped to the front of their car.

"Moose are so plentiful in Joliette County, Quebec Province, where we were hunting that the guides estimated fifteen animals were answering the moose calls from the birch-bark horn of the Indian guide," said Harry Nicholls, one of the pair. He explained that he and his partner, Walter Albrecht, also of Detroit, had leased 105 square miles of timberland for hunting purposes, 200 miles northeast of Ottawa and were returning from a ten-day hunting trip.

Each Got His Quota.

Each man got his quota of one moose; one was 12 years old and weighed approximately 1,500 pounds, while the other was 9 years of age and weighed about 200 pounds less. The largest of the two bears, both blacks, topped the beam at 230 pounds and turned on the hunter when he came across it. He dropped the animal with the first shot from a 7.65 mm. Mauser sporting rifle. The other bear was a year-old cub and was killed as it ran.

Spruce partridge are more numerous this year than at any time during lthe fifteen years I have been hunting in Ontario and Quebec, remarked Albrecht. He went on to relate that besides being a regular visitor as a fisherman he has hunted in Canada for thirty years, and always "brought home the bacon."

Both men commented on the fact that completion of No. 7 Highway to Ottawa has opened up a short cut from Detroit to the almost virgin hunting grounds to the north of Canada's capital.

The car stopped in front of Ray Bacon's barber shop and attracted a mob of spectators who ringed the car on three sides to examine the trophies of the hunt.

Collegiate Sought For Banquet Hall

Once again Peterborough's lack of banquetting accommodation came to the fore Tuesday night as the Board of Education received a request from Rev. R. T. F. Brain of St. John's Anglican church for the use of the Collegiate gymnasium to accommodate some 600 expected young people from all parts of the province on October 22.

The provincial meeting of the Anglican Young People's Association will be held here on that weekend and local officials were in a quandary to know where to seat them for a banquet. The Legion Hall was too small, the Armouries too cold, so they fell back on the Collegiate.

Permission was granted after opposition headed by John R. Marshall, who feared such permission would establish a precedent, said it was not the board's concern that this city had not proper facilities. He wanted the same supervision over the banquet as though students were holding their annual dance, suggested that the banquetters would be "running about" with no one responsible for them.

"The Anglican Young People?" queried Mrs. W. R. Morris in amazement. She assured Mr. Marshall conduct of the visitors would leave nothing to be desired by the board, said church officials would be present in good number.

A Healthy Liver

Sedentary workers and those whose occupation forces them to adopt a position in which the body is cramped, often suffer with liver trouble and bowel complaints.

When the body is held in an unnatural position for hours at a time the spinal nerves become constricted by tightened ligaments and improper position of vertebrae.

This reduces the flow of mental energy going to the liver and intestines so they have not the strength to do their work properly.

The cramped position of the body also compresses these organs and adds to their inability to function as they should.

Our spinal manipulation combined with properly regulated exercise and right habits of living do produce decidedly beneficial results in cases of liver and bowel disorders.

If you wish to be healthy we can help you keep your liver in better working order.

A New "Stenog"

At last Mehitibel has taken the place of Archie the Cockroach. Don Marquis of the old New York Sun, both now passed away, used to print stories which he said were written by a cockroach named Archie who jumped from key to key on his typewriter to make his words. Mehitibel was a cat who had nothing to do with typewriters, although those were about the only things that didn't come within her experience. The plagiarist in Peterborough, seen in this picture, is "Smoky," owned by Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Watson, Grand Central Apartments, George Street. He plays at typing daily, but makes many, many mistakes. Dunking O.K.'d

BOSTON, Oct. 5 (A.P.).—Doughnut dunkers need no longer hide their shame behind the sugar bowl, for now they have society's blessing—so long as they call their shots and use the right grip. To dunk is "all right at an informal house party or little snack after theatre," Mrs. Gertrude Kay, head of Amerson College's Drama Department, told a class in social usages, but—it is never correct either unless you hold the doughnut you are dunking between your thumb and third finger of your right hand. All other forms are crude."

1,120 Registered At Collegiate

Answer to criticism of ten years ago was made Tuesday night by Dr. H. R. H. Kenner, principal of the Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School who reported to the Board of Education that attendance this year struck an all-time high, with 1,120 pupils registered.

When the Collegiate's new wing was built ten years ago many people criticised the action in the belief the city would not need the additional space for long years. Since that time the number in attendance has increased by 323 pupils, and rooms are crowded, he reported. All the new wing is needed to accommodate pupils now and some rooms have too many pupils, he said.

Attendance at Public schools dropped from 2,816 to 2,745 this year, Inspector K. S. Wightman reported to the board. The decrease was due in part to an unusual number of Entrance pupils being promoted last year, in part to withdrawal of rural pupils from Smith township.

Nixon Sees Burwash 'Alcatraz' Of Ontario

TORONTO, Oct. 5 (CP) — The new policy of seeking imposition of heavier sentences and prison terms for offences formerly not regarded so seriously is converting the big provincial industrial farm at Burwash into the "Alcatraz" of Ontario.

Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon said yesterday the prison farm near the Northern Ontario mining centre of Sudbury gradually was becoming an "Alcatraz" because of the recent plan of sending the more serious "repeaters" there. The farm population now is at an all-time high of 670.

All constant offenders will be kept at Burwash but all third offenders have not been transferred there, Nixon said. There still are some at Guelph and Mimico, where the population is high but normal.

Most second offenders are sent to Mimico while offenders under 20 years of age are imprisoned at Guelph.

Girl Is Let Go On Suspended Sentence

An Indian girl residing at Burleigh Falls was allowed to go on suspended sentence by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning after she had been convicted on a charge of assaulting another Indian woman on Sunday, September 4.

The affair took place at Burleigh Falls and part of the evidence was heard at a previous session of the court. Today Mrs. Maguire, police matron and Constable Puffer were called by the crown to testify as to the injuries sustained by the complainant.

The accused girl who conducted her own case did not go into the box herself to give evidence but called a number of witnesses, several of whom testified that the complainant had been disorderly on the day of the alleged assault.

However, Magistrate Langley found that the accused had been guilty of assault and suspended sentence on condition the girl keeps out of trouble and gives satisfactory answers when questioned by the provincial police.

City Council Is Called To Meet Thursday Night

Mayor Hamilton has called a special meeting of the council for Thursday at 7.30 p.m. for the purpose of passing a new bylaw conforming with the provisions of the Dominion Housing Act. The bylaw particularly sets forth the location of twenty-five vacant lots valued at $50 as revised by the Property Committee last night Prospective builders of houses for which assistance is obtained from the government may select lots from this list. They are well distributed around the city, and are considered desirable purchases at the $50 quotation.

The committee last night recommended also that the fuel bylaw be amended to permit two coal dealers to use the one and same scales. Tobias Fredenburg applied for a fuel dealer's license. He plans to use the yard of the Scott Coal and Lumber Company and also their scale. With the suggested amendment it was also decided that Mr. Fredenburg be granted a dealer's license.

James B. Brown's offer of $175 for the lot at the northwest corner of Rink and George streets was not accepted. It is understood Mr. Brown intended to erect a gasoline service station on the property.

Pleaded Guilty To Theft Of $62

Brinson Cox pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to a charge of stealing $62 from Hood and Cumming by whom he has been employed and he was remanded until Wednesday of next week for sentence.

On a second charge of stealing an automobile from R. J. Hood, the accused entered a plea of "not guilty" and this case was adjourned until the same day.

Cox made an application for bail but was reminded by the magistrate that he had pleaded guilty to one charge and that therefore, bail would not be justified under the circumstances.

"Can I change my plea to not guilty," asked the accused. "I cannot consent to that," remarked Crown Attorney McElderry, whereupon Magistrate Langley remanded Cox until next week.

A 4-Year Wait

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 5 (A.P.). — Joseph Smith, 86, suddenly decided he wanted to vote. He had lived here 46 years, but had to declare his intentions of becoming a citizen so he could vote. He was informed he must wait a year before he becomes eligible to the ballot—and after November, there won't be another election until 1940.

Letter Posted In Edmonton October 1 Reaches Lakefield 32 Hours Later

Dr. J. C. Smith of Lakefield received Monday morning a letter from his father, Dr. J. Fraser Smith of Edmonton, delivered by the first air mail service from the west. It was posted about 9 o'clock Saturday night and was received at Lakefield 6.45 a.m. Monday. The elapsed time of this mail service was thirty-two hours, about two days less than the usual delivery by train.

Chas. Lacheur, postmaster, informed the Examiner that the Trans-Canada air mail service became effective on Saturday, October 1, between Winnipeg and Vancouver via Regina. By an arrangement with the United States, a nair mail service also reaches from Winnipeg to Fargo, North Dakota, and from there the mail is carried easterly to Chicago, Detroit and Buffalo.

The letter received by Dr. Smith from his father was carried on the inaugural flight from Edmonton to Winnipeg, thence to Fargo and finally to Buffalo. The rest of its trip was by train to Toronto and Peterborough.

The rate of six cents an ounce for the first ounce is charged with five cents for each additional ounce. Letters for the west mailed from Peterborough will be delivered over this same route.

Cheese Patrons Plan To Hold Group Meetings

Two important meetings of Cheese Factory Patrons within the next two weeks in the Peterborough and Campbellford districts are called to the attention of farmers engaged in the dairy industry.

Peterborough factory patrons will meet Thursday evening October 13 in the office of Frank Paterson, representative of the Department of Agriculture, according to an announcement that is being sent out by George Elliott of Norwood, president of the Peterborough county association.

The other meeting will be held Saturday evening, October 22, at Campbellford, and will be addressed by R. H. Mayberry, of Ingersoll, one of the four Canadians who attended the Empire marketing conference at Sydney, Australia, last spring. Discussion at both meetings will include recommendations and other business that will later be considered in Toronto and finally at the annual meeting of the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association in Ottawa.

Conversations with men close to the industry indicate the increasing need of a clear-cut policy relating to the dairy industry that will endeavor to prevent the disjointed conditions reflected by the present low price of butter fat as compared with last season, and especially last winter, with the comparatively level range of prices in the cheese branch of the business.

This was one of the primary questions considered in some of its aspects at the Ontario convention held here late last winter. At that time it was declared that the Government is looking to dairy farmers for guidance for a definite expression of their wishes in the determining of policy for the industry as a whole. From all accounts there has been practically no progress toward the focussing of producer opinion this year.

Butter Fat Value Down

While butter fat was ranging around 40 cents dairy farmers were more than content to supply their cream and milk to the creameries. Everything was going smoothly at that time but to-day the butter fat value is down to about 20 cents. Accumulation of butter is heavy in the warehouses of Toronto and Montreal, and there is no immediate sign of recovery in sight. At the same time the cheese industry has been moving steadily with satisfactory prices well maintained by the export demand. But, Canadian butter cuts very little figure in the export trade because this country seems unable to compete in quality with the New Zealand product.

No doubt, Mr. Mayberry will deal with these phases of the problem at the Campbellford meeting, and probably present suggestions for the Ontario milk producer, providing he doesn't waste any time on the criticism directed by President McIntyre of the Ontario Association in connection with the Mayberry appointment to the Empire marketing conference.

Leaders of the cheese industry in both the Campbellford and Peterborough districts are hoping that the two local meetings will be largely attended. The Government has been proposing that action spring from the producers, at least recommendations of policy, and if they don't attend such meetings as these and take an interest in their own industry, then the question comes up again where is the leadership to come from?

Scared But Steady

RIMOUSKI, Que., Oct. 5.—(CP).—Thirteen-year-old Yvon Beaupre says he was pretty scared about the whole thing, but he bagged a 225-pound deer on what was intended to be a rabbit hunting expedition just the same.

Young Yvon said he came upon the deer suddenly, thought he should run away but decided against it and pumped several shots in the animal's direction. The deer dropped dead.

SHADE OF BABYLON

HOBART, Tasmania — (CP). — Supporting a motion opposing entry into Australia of obsence literature, Canon C. W. Wilson told the Anglican Synod "the stream has become a flood in comparison with which the Babylonian flood was a mere storm in a teacup."

Examiner's Mail-It-Away Edition Brought Greetings From Australia

From Peterborough, Australia, a copy of The Examiner's Mail-It-Away edition has brought greetings to Peterborough, Ont. Jack Boyd, of this city, a member of the Y's Men's Club sent the tourist number of the Examiner to George F. Briggs, secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in the far-away Australian town and in reply he has received the following interesting letter from Mr. Briggs:

"Thank you so much for the fine illustrated paper which you so kindly forwarded.

"The views and location are, of course, entirely different from those of our own district. We in Australia, are situated on the edge of the desert country and are living inside what is known as Goyder's line, this line which marks the end of the "rain" was plotted by a surveyor-general about 1850. Today this line proved to be absolutely correct—one can definitely trace the differing growths i.e. green grass, tall trees, high wheat, etc., in the "rain" areas and stunted growths, dry grass, little or no return from wheat in the dry areas. It is inside this latter belt that Peterborough is situated.

Australia is a great and wonderful country but where one strikes the desert areas she is not hospitable and reluctantly yields even her mineral wealth. Apart from those spaces Australia is just paradise.

I merely started on that line of writing in order to draw the contrast between the pictures of your locality and the scenery of ours.

The town is a railway centre and is the junction for the great ore trains carrying silver, lead, zinc, sulphate and gold ore from the silver-lead mines at Broken Hill to the great smelting works at Port Pirie.

Have handed over your paper to the proprietor of the local paper and he is making it the subject of a write-up."

The Examiner's tourist number went far afield this summer but so far Peterborough, Australia, holds the record for the farthest point reached by the Mail-it-Away edition.

MEET POSTPONED.

Collegiate Field Day scheduled for this afternoon at the Exhibition Grounds was postponed because of inclement weather. A date will be announced some time this week by school officials.

REGISTRATION STARTS

Registration at the Collegiate Night School opened Tuesday night with halls in the building as crowded as though day classes were on. Chief difference, however, was in the more mature age of last night's students.

WOODEN POLES GO

With the Hydro poles on Hunter street being replaced by iron poles it has been necessary to move the signal lights and the fire alarm box from the wooden pole at Hunter and George street. Firemen and Hydro employees were busy today making the transfer.

GRANT FOR FIELD DAY.

Dr. H. R. H. Kenner crept in just under the line with a request Tuesday night that the Board of Education grant the Peterborough Collegiate and Vocational School $50 to defray expenses of the annual field day, slated for this afternoon. The board paid up.

PEDESTRIAN HIT

Robert Simmons, 173 Lock street was hit and knocked down by a car driven by Adam H. Cox, 180 Douro street, as he was walking across the intersection of Hunter and Water streets shortly after 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Simmons was not badly hurt. After he had been hit Cox's car collided with another driven by Harry A. Cordery, Western avenue and the latter machine was damaged to some extent.

BUILDING THREE HOUSES

Purchase by A. S. Newton of a thirty-two foot lot on the east side of Monaghan Road north of Bolivar street was the third sold by the city in that block. Mr. Newton bought another 32 foot adjoining lot and will erect a house costing at least $3,500. The two purchasers of a seventy-five foot property from the city will also each build a house of corresponding value to the Newton dwelling. Nearly $11,000 will be invested by these three citizens in houses in the Monaghan Road block. Mr. Newton paid the city $150 for a lot on Carlisle Avenue on which he intended to build a house.

NEW TIES

A local haberdashery store received a shipment of ties with regimental stripes, two days after Chamberlain and Hitler had banished war clouds from the horizon. The manager figured that if war came everyone would want a tie with a military dash to it, now he is congratulating himself on the fact that he did not overload his stock with the stripes. There is always a steady demand for this style of tie particularly during the Fall season of sporting activities and regardless of whether war breaks out or not, the manager will not be stuck with the flashy neckwear.

MADE GOOD SHOWING.

Members of the Board of Education were pleased Tuesday night when they received a report from Inspecting Officer Captain Millett of Kingston on the showing of Peterborough Collegiate cadets. "Very good" was the notation in every one of 14 divisions of the report. Chairman Dr. G. Raymore Scott complimented the corps and Instructor Craig. "There's just one item where it doesn't say 'very good'" interjected Dr. Kenner. "The uniforms are bad." He told the cadets' uniforms had been purchased in 1930 and "the board hasn't spent a cent on cadets in years." Possible purchase of new uniforms was referred to the supervision committee.

HOLY NAME RALLY

The annual diocesan rally of the Holy Name Society will be held at Downeyville Sunday afternoon.

IN SERIOUS CONDITION

The condition of Roland Ferguson who was badly hurt last week when the bicycle he was riding collided with a bus at Brock and Aylmer streets is reported as unchanged at Nicholls Hospital today. He is still in a very serious condition as the result of the grave injuries he sustained in the accident.

COURSE IN TEXTILES.

A new course in textiles is being offered at Peterborough Collegiate Night School and will be carried on throughout the year if a sufficient number of pupils show enthusiasm. "As though Peterborough people had not already had enough of the textile industry," commented one cynical youth who was standing in front of the notice board at the Collegiate Tuesday night.

ADJOURNED AGAIN

A charge of reckless driving against Michael Murray that has been hanging fire since early in the summer was called before Magistrate Langley in police court this morning and was again adjourned for a week with the understanding that it must be proceeded with then. The charge arises out of an accident on the Lakefield Road and on another charge of having been drunk in charge of a car Murray is awaiting trial. Mr. Justice Urquhart having refused to hear it at the Assizes last week.

Hindu Psychologist To Address W.E.A.

Officers of the Workers' Educational Association report that Dr. Dhami, Hindu psychologist of the staff of the University of Toronto, has been assigned to conduct a course in the study of psychology for them beginning October 17. The class will meet on Monday nights, ten of them prior to Christmas and ten after. The study course embraces 20 sessions which will be held in the Collegiate Institute.

An organization meeting has been arranged for Thursday evening, October 13, in the Public Library at which Dr. Dhami is expected to be present with Drummond Wren of Toronto, secretary of the Workers' Educational Association of Ontario.

The fee for the 20 lectures is $2, payable at enrollment, and the course is only for men and women who may be classed as workers. It is not for those of the professions. The executive officers feel that the attendance should show an increase this season with the engagement of Dr. Dhami for an extended study of practical psychology. The public generally is invited to attend the preliminary meeting, October 13, at the Public Library.

Thanksgiving Day At The Post Office

The public lobby at the Post Office will be open from 6.30 a.m. to 6.00 p.m. on Thanksgiving Day. All wickets will be open from 8.00 a.m. to 12.00 noon. The regular morning delivery will be given by the letter carriers, and the regular delivery by the rural route couriers. The collections will be made from the street letter boxes as usual, and al mail posted will be despatched as usual.

Dental Work Is Inadequate In City Schools

Alarming condition of the teeth of this city's children of school age was once again brought forcibly to the attention of the Board of Education Tuesday night in a report by Dr. J. C. Green, school dental officer.

Dr. Green examined the 375 pupils at King Edward, found they had 687 cavities—not in temporary but in permanent teeth! "This is a matter for real concern," said Chairman Dr. G. R. Scott. Dr. Green's report showed that seventy-five per cent of all the pupils in attendance at the school required dental work.

"Our dental work is quite inadequate," remarked the chairman after Inspector K. S. Wightman had told the board there is no follow-up work done after the pupils are examined. Dr. Green, only employed party time by the board, attempts to do dental work for all who bring reports back from their homes. Those who pay no heed to his report are not checked on, and there is no way of knowing whether they have had their teeth fixed by their own dentists.

D. G. H. Melton related that he and Inspector Wightman had reported to the board last year that if the teeth of school children were to be properly looked after, at least two dental officers would have to be employed by the board. The matter was referred to the supervision committee after Chairman Dr. Scott had remarked that some investigation of the needs should be made this fall and cost of added dental care included in next year's estimates.

AFRAID TO MARRY

by HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, obtains a job as a model shortly after her father loses his fortune in a financial crash. The same day she learns that Craig Denby, the man she loves, has married another girl. Afraid of marriage, Judy had put him off once too often. Her father goes west with her stepmother, her own mother, remarried, is abroad and Judy moves to a small hotel. She finds solace in the company of Ronald Birrell, brilliant young attorney from Tennessee who just joined the firm of her father's lawyers. When Judy calls her best friend, Marjorie Barton, Craig answers the phone. Judy submits some dress designs to the wholesale house where she is modeling. When another employe steals them, she has a dispute, gives up her job and appeals to Ronald for advice. Judy wonders if she is becoming interested in Ronald.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 11

During the next few days Judy Rogers searched again for a job. It rained. It grew colder, and there was a snow flurry. She scanned want ad columns. She relaxed and read the society pages, because the names and the faces were so familiar. It was strange to be living in this world which was so near the one that had been her home, and yet so far removed.

She had arranged for her mail to be held for her at the postoffice. An occasional letter from her mother came. She was sympathetic, not too worried. In her own luxury she did not grasp the economic upheaval which had taken place in her former husband's household.

If her father wrote to her, Judy did not know it. His mail would go to France, and her mother's secretary would forward it on to Judy, so it would be late in coming. True, there was a chance that her mother might see a letter and wonder. Not likely, though. She never troubled herself with details.

It seemed to Judy on a particularly cold evening that all the girls in Manhattan walked with her—young, slim, eager-eyed tired, discouraged. She felt them pressing her, hurrying, trying to make the agencies first ,that they might ask for any available jobs. Judy wanted to laugh. She wanted to tell them that they might as well go home, if they had homes. There were no jobs.

In one employment agency she had met a girl who had been attracted to New York by the coming world's fair.

"I thought there would be thousands of jobs," she moaned. "The City of Tommorrow, they call the fair. It held promise. But every position is gone. Swallowed up."

"Yes, I know. I've been there." Judy had waded through debris and machinery and mud in Flushing park meadow, which was a long ride on the subway, to present an application.

"I think I'll go home. My father is a high school teacher. I can get a grade to teach if I want it," Judy's informant went on.

Judy brightened.

"Where do you live?"

The girl named a town in Iowa.

"Do you think I could teach a grade, too?"

"Have you a normal certificate, or your major in education?" the girl asked. "You must have! You have your background written all over you. Where did you go to school?"

Thoughtlessly Judy named her school. It was one of the ultra-fashionable, ultra-expensive institutions in the east.

The school teacher's daughter changed her frank approach.

"Oh! Then you wouldn't want to teach. You belong to a different environment, I should have known."

"But I don't! I mean, that's ended. I want to teach school—in Iowa."

The girl spoke slowly. "I think you do. But boarding schools don't prepare people for teaching. I'm afraid you couldn't do it without a year or two of normal training."

"I suppose so." Judy could speak French fluently. She could play the piano well. She could sing. Not much, but with a sweet, alto voice. She could row, ride, swim, golf, play tennis, drive a car. She had been leading lady in her class play, and starred a time or two in a Junior league play.

But she did not know the things that were necessary to obtain a job. She smiled, remembering that she had forgotten one qualification. She could wear clothes, and design them.

All this had happened an hour before. Now Judy was on her way home. She saw tall shoulders in the crowd before her, and caught her breath so swiftly that it hurt. There was only one person in all the world who walked with that easy, nonchalant grace. Only one head that faced the world so fearlessly. She should have known that some day she would meet Craig on the street. Paths always crossed. Maybe not for a long t ime. Maybe quite fleetingly. But always, always there came a moment when two people who had laughed and played together looked at each other and remembered.

She wondered if her nose was shiny. One sole was thin. The damp pavement made her foot ache. She was glad people couldn't see soles.

She had avoided Ronald, at first, the day she saw him in a crowd, but she had no sense of evading Craig. He was here. She thought no further.

Then the tall man turned his head. The profile was strange. Craig had not come. The unfamiliar face restored the clarity of her vision. No, she must not watch for him. She must not see a tall man in a crowd and follow hopefully, just to know that he was near. Craig's way and her way had parted. He belonged to somebody named Mary who did bits over the radio.

Her face was white and tired and disappointed when she entered the hotel lobby. A man in a green leatherette chair that was too small for his long legs looked serious when he saw her. He came to her quickly.

"Mr. Birrell!" Judy made her voice cool. "How nice of you to disregard my desires and locate me. I suppose you want me to say I'm glad to see you? I'm not, you know."

"Never mind. I'll do the rejoicing for both of us. I don't think much of this place."

"Since you sought it out, I think you should accept it or leave it."

"No doubt you're right."

Curiosity got the better of her aloofness. "How did you locate me?"

"You aren't a very astute young lady for all your charm. I went to see the goof who makes dresses. He had it."

"Of course. I'm stupid. I can't teach school or work on the fair or anything." Her voice trembled.

"Here, take this, and cry it out." Ronald pushed a big white linen handkerchief into her hands.

"I cry alone—except I don't cry," Judy told him spiritedly.

"Good! I thought I could stop you."

"Have you told anyone about my address?" Judy asked.

"Certainly not! Give me credit for the rudiments of manners, my sweet child. But we are holding up traffic. How about calling a truce and going some place to play tonight?"

The young lawyer's face was eager and kind and the banter was gone from his voice now.

"An eight-hour truce," he said solemnly, but his eyes twinkled. "Then you may cuss me out for the next 80 years. You need some fun and so do I."

Judy knew he had been working hard. She had read about some cases in the newspapers. He had been heralded as a coming genius in the legal world. Society was discovering him, too, but he had no time for it, one columnist explained. The names of a girl or two who found him attractive had accompanied that comment.

"We'll go places where no one knows us," Ronald was saying.

Judy was ready to accept. Now she hesitated. He had said: "Where no one knows US." Not: "Where no one knows YOU." Was there someone whom he wanted to avoid tonight? Maybe the girl with the honey-colored hair and wide purple eyes!

"It's important that I talk to you tonight," he was insisting. "If I go home and get into a tux, will you promise not to vanish until I get back?"

Why not enjoy the evening? Maybe some place—oh, just maybe—she would catch a glimpse of Craig!

"I promise," she answered.

Falls For a Fish

GREENCASTLE, Pa., Oct. 5 (AP) Merle Shindle, 30, broke his wrist in a fall while catching a fish—in a tree. Angling in a nearby creek, he felt a bite and tugged on his line with such force that it caught in the tree, the fish dangling. He climbed after his catch. A limb broke.

DOROTHY DIX

Complexions Can Be Bought, Curves Made or Unmade By Exercise, But Personality Is Something That Has To Be Acquired And Is Essential To Real Beauty

A FAMOUS portrait painter mourns the decadence of beauty in women and declares that the modern girl is not nearly so good-looking as was her grandmother.

These are sad and startling words from one who should know whereof he speaks, inasmuch as he spends his life in portraying the feminine form, more or less divine, but a casual look around among the ladies of our acquaintance will incline most of us to agree with him.

Of course, it may be that the women of the past were not so beautiful as they were painted and as they live in tradition. Very likely the artist flattered Grandmama and gave her more soulful eyes and a more classical profile than she really possessed and that is why Granddaughter runs a poor second to her in pulchritude. But certainly we have to admit that there is now no woman whose face could launch a thousand ships. We haven't even an authentic Lillian Russell or Langtry in our midst; this in spite of the fact that never before in the history of the world has the cultivation of beauty been such an obsession with women as now, and that they spend a large part of their time and millions of dollars annually in an attempt to acquire synthetic good looks.

It has been said that a woman's beauty consists of 25 per cent. nature, 25 per cent. clothes and 50 per cent. personality, hence, if it is true, as the artist says, that women are not so pretty now as they used to be, it is because they fall down on the latter two qualifications.

They have improved upon nature. No woman now is as homely as God made her, unless she is too stupid or lazy to use the artifices at her command. If she is fat she can reduce herself to a stringbean figure. If she is sallow she can buy a peaches-and-cream complexion at a department store. If she has stringy, hay-colored hair she can turn it into such golden curls as only the heroines of fairy stories are born with.

So far as nature goes the modern girl has a distinct advantage over Grandmother in looks, but when it comes to clothes, which are not only the frame that sets off a woman's beauty, but also creates an illusion of beauty even when it is not there, Grandmother scores again, in spite of her hoop skirts and bustles, her lack of the chiffons and the thousand and one gadgets, ornaments and aids to beauty which are at the modern girl's disposal.

For Grandmother never made a figure of fun of herself by appearing in public in britches that reveal how closely the feminine figure resembles a beet. Nor did she turn the searchlight on the defects of her anatomy by going around in shorts. If she had bow legs or knobby knees her flowing skirts mercifully concealed them and she presented to the eye only lines of beauty.

A woman has to be a perfect hag if she isn't easy on the eyes when clothed in trailing chiffons whose colors flatter her and whose lines bring out her best points, but it takes Miss America herself not to be hideous when she masquerades in men's attire. And so if there is a decline and fall off in feminine beauty it is largely attributable to the prevailing feminine mania for throwing away their own clothes and swiping men's.

Fifty per cent. of a woman's beauty is in her personality. That's true. If women are not as beautiful as they were in the past it is because they have lost something that did far more to make a woman's face beautiful than regularity of feature or a peaches-and-cream complexion. It was an expression of gentleness, of sweetness, of purity and tenderness. It was something of the spirit that glowed through even a homely face like a light through an alabaster vase and made it lovely.

Women have grown sophisticated and hard-boiled. Their eyes are shrewd and knowing. You hardly ever see that Madonna look on a woman's face. You hardly ever see even a young girl who has the look of dewy freshness of an untouched rosebud about her. And somehow, some way, it is a blight upon even the most radiant beauty if it lacks that.

But, after all, beauty is in the eyes of the beholder, and whether women are more beautiful now or less beautiful than they were in the past, depends upon your taste in 'em.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Knarf, the shadow-boy with the turned-about name, shouldn't have made his master swing so high. Oh no! It was a very bad mistake. But Knarf learned his lesson, as you shall see.

The children—Frank and his sister Dinah—were having fun on the new rope swing which father had just put up in the garden, under the old oak tree. Dinah sat in the swing first. Her brother pushed her. Up she went. Then she swung back.

As she swung back and forth, her shadow Hanid (which is simply Dinah spelled backward) ran to and fro on the grass, always keeping just under the swing.

Not Good to Knarf.

"Ah, that was wonderful!" Hanid

"Swing much higher."

down on a wooden bench built remarked to Knarf when her little mistress finished swinging and sat around the trunk of the tree. He brother Knarf said: "I don't thin it was so wonderful. You didn't ru fast at all. Dinah was afraid t swing very high. Just wait till yo see me go."

At that moment Frank starte swinging, and Knarf began washin back and forth under him.

"Higher! Swing higher!" Knar shouted joyfully. "Swing muc higher!" he called to the boy in th swing above him.

Did He Hear Him?

I don't know whether the bo heard his shadow or not. But, a any rate, he kicked out his legs an swung high, high up, then he gav himself a push and swung away way back. Knarf ran faster thar ever. He almost reached the edg of the garden wall, stopped for ar instant, then went dashing back almost to the trunk of the tree where Dinah and Hanid, the sha dow-girl, were sitting.

Then the sunshine disappeared behind. And Knarf, the shadow disappeared too! Do you know wha happened to him? He went flying head-over-heels, over the garden wall, until finally he spilled himself head-first into the pond! It was all Hanid could do to pull him out again and get him back into the garden as the sun came out once more.

But he didn't urge his master to swing higher any more.

He was quite content to sit quietly under the tree. He had more than enough swinging for one afternoon.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, October 6.

A day of rather "mixed influences," in astrological parlance, is read from a peculiar chain of planetary aspects. These are of changeable and variable nature, and may incite a variety of experiences and evenots, fluctuating from adverse to fortuitous. There are signs of important contracts or business transactions, which hould be both lucrative and generous. At the same time there is danger of expansion, extravagance and a tendency to "plunge." There also may be some enmity and jealousy. With care there should be much success and progress.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a successful and progressive year, although there may be fluctuations, the usual ups and downs, to cope with, mainly by shrewd conservation of funds and wise expenditures. These may cause enmity and jealousy, resulting in eventual loss or shrinkage in assets.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, progressive and ambitious. It may have generous impulses and much kindliness, despite which it may incite enmities and jealousies.

Many American automobiles are being driven in Syria.

Saving On Stamps

ST. THOMAS, Ont., Oct. 5—(CP)—Found—a way to save money on postage stamps. Instead of using a stamp, draw one in its place. Anyway that's what one St. Thomas girl did who mailed a letter to a friend here. Post office officials said they had never seen the likes.

GET COMFORTING RELIEF FROM Penny HEAD COLD

DO THIS: Put some Vicks VapoRub up each nostril and sniff well back. You'll feel better right away. Next, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; then breathe in the steaming medicated vapors for several minutes. This loosens phlegm and further clears the air-passages. At bedtime, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back so that its long-continued double action can relieve the misery of the cold while you sleep. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice; at the same time its medicated vapors, breathed in direct, bring comfort to the irritated air-passages. Try it. VICKS VAPORUB

Speaks On Visual Education

A brief address revealing some interesting facts and ideas on visual education was given by Mrs. L. M. Richardson at the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association meeting held Monday evening in the Kindergarten room, with the president, Mrs. V. R. Henry, presiding.

Interesting reports by the convenors revealed that committees had been formed and the year's work organized. Bowling activities are to start on the 24th of October, and it was announced by the president that a Regional Conference is to be held October 21, and that a good attendance of members is requested. Plans were discussed for the annual Autumn Tea, which has been arranged for October 27. Members were also reminded of the special services which are to be held at St. Paul's church on Sunday evening, November 6.

We Noticed

...There's something in the air these brilliant, October days...a faint haziness in early morning; sunshine slanting thru' gorgeous leaves; wild geese pointing southward; harvest moons in a deep, starry sky...which draws feminine glances shopward, or toward the smart ensembles of their clever sisters who were completely ready for this exciting new season at the drop of the first leaf.

...For instance, on Peterborough streets within the last few days many, many costumes which exploit the new ideas of the mode have been seen, including: A two-piece tailored suit the shade of red oak leaves, with black carrycul trimming a small pointed collar, neat suede shoes, and a soaring hat with a saucy feather that matches perfectly the rich, deep tones of the wool ensemble.

...And more exciting yet...a grey wool dress that was worn with a three-quarter top-coat of jewel-like purple. A diminutive grey hat had curling purple feathers wreathing the crown, and the perfectly appointed accessories were of soft grey suede.

Is Married In Gown of White Velvet

A charming Autumn wedding took place this morning (Wednesday) in St. Peter's Cathedral at nine o'clock, when Irene Raymond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Raymond of Cobourg, became the bride of Melville Wilfred Anthony, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Anthony, Sr., of 322 Water street.

The ceremony was preformed by Dr. P. J. Kelly, assisted by Rev. E. Welsh. Wedding music was played by Miss Veronica Scollard, and during the signing of the register, Mrs. D. Companaro sang "Ave Marie."

Amid a setting of gladioli, roses and ferns the bride was given in marriage by Mr. Louis Anthony, Sr., father of the groom. She wore a gown of white chiffon velvet that was fashioned on Grecian lines, and formed a slight train at the back. Her white net veil fell softly from a Juliet cap of silver leaves to her waistline, and she wore silver slippers corded with white silk, white mesh gloves, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

The bridesmaid was Miss Jacqueline Gordon, R.N., gowned in maize net over taffeta, made with bouffant skirt, fitted bodice, and short matching jacket. Her shoulder-length veil of matching net was caught with bronze and yellow flowers, and she wore maize mittens, silver slippers and carried Briarcliffe roses.

Mr. Frank Anthony, cousin of the groom, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Meville LeGros and Mr. Albert LeGros, nephews of the groom.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served in the Knights of Columbus Hall, where there will also be a reception for about 200 guests tonight. Mrs. Anthony, mother of the groom, and Mrs. L. Anthony, Jr., will receive the guests, the former wearing brown cut velvet with matching accessories and corsage of Butterfly roses, and the latter in black chiffon velvet with black accessories and corsage of red roses.

After the reception the bride and groom will leave by motor for Detroit, Michigan, and for the travelling the bride will wear a frock of brown sheer, with brown swagger coat and brown accessories On their return they will live in Peterborough.

The gift of the groom to the bridesmaid was a gold chain and cross, to the best man a gold bar pin and tie holder, and to the ushers silver cigarette lighters.

Guests at the wedding dinner included: Father P. Phelan, Father J. Rider and Father McLean, missionary priests from Ottawa, Dr. P. J. Kelly, Father E. Welsh, Dr. V. Masterson and Father E. Grant of Peterborough.

Honorary Presidents—Mrs. F. M. Dela Fosse, Mrs. H. A. Morrow, Mrs. R. M. Waddell.

Recording Secretary— Mrs. J. J. Turner.

Corresponding Secretary — Miss Evelyn M. Morrow.

Treasurer—Mrs. W. Tinker.

Convenors for the various committees are as follows:

Membership—Mrs. E. V. Harphet

Social—Mrs. C. S Browne.

Transportation—Mrs. J. W. Kelly

Samaritan Cupboard—Mrs. Warrander.

Ways and Means—Mrs. D. P. Diplock.

The objective this year is to increase the membership to 3,000 by house to house canvass. With a membership fee of 25 cents, the larger enrollment is desired to provide the Auxiliary with sufficient funds for current accounts without the necessity of raising money in other ways.

Non-active members are welcome, while active members may signify their willingness to assist the Sewing, Social, Visiting and Transportation committees.

As far as possible fees are to be collected during October, rather than at irregular intervals as was necessary during the past year. This will ensure good weather for the ladies who make the calls and facilitate the work of the Auxiliary. Fees will then be paid up to September, 1939.

Jeanette Scott Chapter I.O.D.E.

The October meeting of the Jeanette Scott Chapter I.O.D.E. was held at the home of Mrs. Leslie Welsh, Reid Street, with the Regent, Miss Anne Heiderman, presiding.

After the opening prayer, the minutes were read by the secretary, and communications received were considered. A number of thank-you letters for the work of the Chapter were read. It was decided to give a contribution to a V.A.D. of the Great War requiring medical assistance, and to continue the practice of assisting the Well Babies' Clinic with transportation. Further plans were discussed for the Fall Rummage Sale to be held October 14. A tentative date in November was chosen for the Chapter's Annual Fall Tea, and a discussion of arrangements took place.

The meeting closed with a very interesting Empire study period dealing with India. The subject covered the physical characteristics, climate, and agricultural products of the country. This study of India is to be continued throughout the winter season.

Jessie Anderson Holds Place As Favorite

OTTAWA, Oct. 5.—(CP).—Sixteen golfers remained in the race to-day for the Canadian women's open championship with Jessie Anderson, of Perth, Scotland, still classed as ruling favorite, closely pursued by several veterans and some newcomers of dubious strength.

By to-night the field will be cut to eight following the 18-hole second round match. Mrs. John Rogers of Winnipeg, the defending champion, was eliminated in the first round yesterday by Toronto's Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen and the title is now open.

Miss Anderson continued her triumphant march through the tournament by shooting superb golf in the first round and smothering Dorothy Staniforth of Montebello, Que., 6 and 5. Throughout the International match and in the qualifying round the Highland girl slapped out some of the lowest drives and went right for the pin with nearly every approach. Her showing has been the most impressive of any competitor.

Attention was centred on the match between Winnifred Evans of Vancouver and 17-year-old Marg Esson of Rosetown, Sask., who astounded the championship flight with a 6 and 4 first round victory over the British Curtis Cup ace, Nan Baird.

Soccer Leaders Wind Up Season

The concluding meeting of the Peterborough and District Football Association was held in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms to hear the financial statement for the season and showed that the board had a small balance left in the fund after paying all expenses. The secretary was complimented for the excellent work he had transacted throughout the year.

League Winners Gift.

The Brinton Athletic club were awarded $10 as a token of their winning the league, and the secretary was instructed to hand over the cheque to the club president.

All the clubs were hand back their guarantee fee for completing the schedule except in two cases where expenses had to be taken out.

The Children's Aid and the St. Vincent Orphange were to receive the sum of $4.80 apiece as the collection taken in the Father Phelan Trophy.

The allocation of the Injured Players' Fund was adjusted so that the two players' bills would receive proportionate, thereby leaving the sum of $10 in the fund according to the constitution.

All the monies for the St. John Ambulance game has not been handed over to the secretary, making it impossible to balance the account.

The teams were instructed to get the shields put upon the trophies immediately, otherwise executive will not be responsible at a later date.

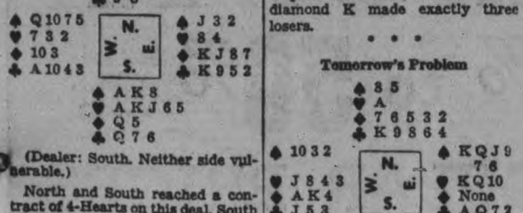
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

PLAY THE PERCENTAGE

ALWAYS IN rubber bridge it pays to forego the chance for extra tricks in order to make a game more certain or more nearly certain. It is sad to see a player strain for an additional 20 or 30 points, only to lose 500 or more points because of the effort. That surely is not "playing the percentage" soundly.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

North and South reached a contract of 4-Hearts on this deal, South having started with 1-Heart, North following with 2-Diamonds, South 3-Hearts and North 4-Hearts.

When the spade 5 was led, declarer realized that he had four losers, two in clubs, one in diamonds and one in spades. His best prospect seemed to be to try to establish diamonds to take care of one of his losers. He won the first lead with the spade K and led the heart 5 to the 9. His next play was a low diamond toward his Q. East won with the K and returned a spade to South's A. Next he cashed the diamond Q and led the heart 6 to dummy's 10. He then ruffed a diamond instead of counting on the suit breaking 3-3. His next play was a heart to the Q, followed by the A and 9 of diamonds, on which he discarded two clubs. He then gave up a spade and a club, which with the diamond K made exactly three losers.

What is the correct defense against South's contract of 4-diamonds?

Canadian Traveller Finds Viennese Worried As Visitors Are Few To City

By Gladys M. Arnold
(Canadian Press Correspondent.)

PARIS, Oct. 5—(CP).—I spent a week in Vienna. What impressed me most was its "gaiety," despite the tribulations of Austria's neighbor, Czechoslovakia. But its gaiety was confined, subdued.

Luxury, frivolity and enjoyment of life would be expected in Vienna. Who could foresee the city transfigured with the joy of being back in the bosom of the "Vaterland" and under the paternal smile of Herr Fuehrer?

My first impression of "Gay Vienna" was when the continental express from Budapest arrived South Station 35 minutes late. The platform resounded hollowly to the tramp of heavy-footed young Nazis just back from absorbing "strength through joy" in two weeks of rain in the southern Austrian manouvres. Five or six porters contemplated the handful of civilian travellers who descended and finally made a half-hearted attempt to intercept the one they judged to be a tourist.

Employees Not Busy

I finally found the employee in charge of the checkroom asleep—it was early in the afternoon—on a chair tipped back in a dark corner. He opened the window and with the interest of a man who hasn't seen a suitcase in six months, made out the slips and put my bags away. A glance into the interior was enough to see 15 or 20 other valises huddled lonesomely on the cavernous shelves.

"Lots of tourists?" I asked brightly. "None," he replied briefly—and then looked at me suspiciously.

"The Ring" that magnificent boulevard which runs for miles in a circle around the interior of the city and vies with the Champs—Elysees of Paris for space, beauty and first place in the world, probably never showed up to better advantage. Kilometres of red bunting and swastikas could not hide the imposing grandeur of the buildings, the light perfection of baroque and renaissant architecture. The view was perfect. When my taxi turned into it we had it practically all to ourselves except for the old camouflaged army truck parked here and there and the trams.

Chicken and Cream

Ah! The terraces, the cafes, restaurants and theatres of Vienna! Where the music mixes so well with chicken cream goulash and Bavarian pastry that indigestion is a myth. I chose the biggest and most beautiful; got my passport ready to show in case a certificate of aryan blood be required (Anglo-Saxons have been graciously admitted to the pure-blood brotherhood) and entered. What glitter of crystal and silver! What spaciousness! What gaiety! No disagreeable crowding; no clatter of tongues as you find in Paris and Budapest.

In one corner three Nazi officers in the uniform of the black guard and that exhilarating little pleasantry, the skull and crossbones on their caps; at the left a group of four—tourists? The hard guttural accent of the north betrayed the fact that they had followed Dr. Goebbels instructions to "see Germany first—especially the new provinces." It contrasts sharply with the soft Viennese German. By the window a fat woman sopping up whipped cream with a crescent-shaped bun, read the "Wiener Tag" Air, space and half a hundred empty tables. The service was perfect—four waiters to the customer.

In the evening one has the same impression of elbow-room. In a beergarden three musicians put up a hilarious front with Strauss, father and son, while any one of a dozen of the choicest tables were offered by the head-waiter. And the same thing may be said for the theatres, restaurants, hotels and cinema. No need to wait one's turn in the travel agencies; no annoying, chattering tourists in the museums and art galleries while in the palace of Schonbrum one has the guide all to oneself.

Nazi Flags Prevail

On the other hand there is the city hall whose delicate gothic architecture has been the admiratioen of visitors for centuries. Surely arches have never shown up so splendidly as now with the enormous Nazi flags behind each to set off their perfection? The National Library, too, has a brand new bronze bust of Hitler in a prominent place among its treasures.

But some people are never satisfied. My friends in Vienna were probably suffering from liver trouble, for they didn't seem to feel a bit jolly over the festive new signs "Adolf-Hitler Place" and the "Herman Goering Place" sign which replaces "Dollfuss Place."

Nor did they seem to care for the new flags decorating the historical monuments; nor appreciate the new paint on the park and ring benches with the inscription "For Aryans Only." And they seemed to be actually annoyed at the sign posted everywhere that "The only true German greeting is 'Heil Hitler'!"

People Curbed

They kept prattling about their friends in concentration camps—others in exile and even one or two completely missing—perhaps having committed suicide. You see they happen to belong to the section of the people who regret a country called Austria even though they have the privilege of forming a part of the Nazi family. They even ask you if you will take a little money out of the country for them.

Yes—Vienna is gay and the Viennese...? Their money has lost half its value, freedom of the press has been suppressed; they can no longert travel abroad freely; the church has been given its marching orders; education is being thoroughly national-socialized; the Jews are being crucified—and those who won't wear a ribbon in their coats: but what of that—they have been saved by the Fuehrer and the crown jewels restored to Nuremberg.

Perhaps the gayest thing of all was the smile of the restaurant proprietor when instead of replying to his parting "Heil Hitler!" as is customary now—we said "Auf wiedersehen."

Good Whisky Needs No Scientific Aids Chemical Industry Told

Glasgow, Oct. 5.

GOOD WINE needs no bush, says the old adage. And good whiskey needs no scientific aids to its production.

At least that's the contention of Dr. R. Gilmour of the Canadian Department of Mines and Resources.

He told the Society of Chemical Industry and the Institution of Chemical Engineers at a joint meeting here that interference by laboratory chemists in whisky and wine production would do more harm than good.

Oshawa Shelves Highway Hopes

OSHAWA, Ont., Oct. 5—(CP). — The Provincial Government has definitely decided to follow the Lakeshore route of the new 4-lane highway through Oshawa, probably as far as Newcastle, Mayor Alex McLeese advised council last night. With other members of council the Mayor pointed out he had taken up the matter of an uptown route with the Deputy Minister of Highways, but that the prohibitive cost shelved the alternative plan. "We were told it would cost upwards of a million dollars to route the highway through Bond street and would necessitate the paving of two extra miles of road. As this expense is over and above the Base Line-Jackson street route, the total expense would have to be borne by the city."

Upon question of Ald. Coleman, the Mayor stated that the cost of the Lakeshore route compared with the two alternative routes had not been given by the department.

"Whether we bear the extra cost or not, they feel they have the best route and will carry it out," Mayor McLesse stated, adding "most fair-minded people will agree with them."

Scenic Route Out.

His Worship pointed out that a proposed scenic route from the highway to the business section "seems utterly impossible."

"A scenic highway such as thought of would cost over half a million dollars, so we must seek a new route."

The Mayor stated that the government would build a spur road at their expense from the proposed clover-leaf at Simcoe street to any nearby street that the city wished to route uptown traffic on. Figures quoted by the Mayor showed that 20,000 cars a day travelled east from Toronto to Oshawa in the busy season, while only 7,000 a day travelled east of Oshawa. A proposal of starting work immediately from the Oshawa end in an attempt to alleviate the unemployment situation will be considered by the Highways Department, but no definite promise would be made.

Alderman Dafoe estimated that it would be five years before the new highway would be paved as far as Oshawa, and three years before the grading and other contracts were completed.

Probe Infant's Death

OTTAWA, Oct. 5—(CP). —Police investigated to-day the death of an unidentified 18-month-old infant boy taken to hospital here by a man and two women. Hospital authorities said the child was dead on arrival.

Investigation yesterday is reported to have shown the child died of a fractured skull, death being thought to have taken place some hours before the child reached the hospital.

The infant's body was brought to hospital in a taxi. The three who brought it told authorities the child fell out of bed and that they offered to bring it to hospial because the mother was ill and could not do so herself.

"Devil's Elbow" Cuve Is Being Removed On Cordova Road

Making improvements on the Havelock-Cordova road, county workmen are now busy removing the treacherous "devil's elbow" curve at Muloney's Hill, for many years a bad spot for motorists unfamiliar with that district. An entirely new road is being constructed at this point, the curve being eliminated by going straight over the hill, as shown here. Working in hard rock the men are shown making preparations for another blast, at LEFT. In the foreground is Floyd Steenburgh, in charge of blasting operations, and at the extreme LEFT, D. R. Mather, general foreman. RIGHT shows the path the new road will take.

Officers Disagree Case Dismissed

LINDSAY, Oct. 4. —Conflicting evidence of two police officers led Crown Attorney J. E. Anderson, K.C., to take the unusual step yesterday of asking Magistrate E. A. Gee to dismiss a case he was prosecuting. The accused was Harry Butts, proprietor of the Kinmount Hotel, who was charged with keeping liquor for sale.

County Constable John Campbell testified that he purchased a bottle of liquor from Butts and took it directly to Provincial Constable Adair without opening it.

He was followed to the witness stand by County Constable R. Hargreaves of Glenarm, who said that he and Campbell stopped in a lane and gave a man named Trumbul a drink before delivering the bottle to Adair.

The conflict in evidence caused a sensation in court. Crown Attorney Anderson immediately jumped to his feet and asked that the case against the hotel owner be dismissed. Magistrate Gee promptly did so and Butts walked out of court smiling.

"No Judge or Magistrate should be asked to convict a man when one police officer's evidence gives the lie to the evidence of another officer," said Mr. Anderson, later.

ROME, Oct. 5—(AP).—A government source today said Arturo Toscanini, symphony conductor, was in Milan, and his acquaintances there said his departure for the United States apparently had been delayed by passport difficulties.

Yesterday his Milan associates reported he had left, presumably for Cherbourg, France, where he had expected to sail for the United States tomorrow. Today, however, he was said to be still in the city.

Baptists Hold Anniversary At Norwood

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, Oct. 5. — At St. Mark's Sunday school rooms was the scene of a very happy gathering on Thursday evening when a large number of friends met to spend the evening with Mr. and Mrs. John Bell, who were married recently. The Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne acted as chairman and after a few brief words on the welcome news of peace, called Mr. and Mrs. Bell to the platform, where a large table was spread with gifts. Mr. Bell thanked all very kindly for the lovely things. His bride also spoke a few words of appreciation and invited all to visit them in their new home in Marmora.

The gathering all joined in singing 'For They Are Jolly Good Fellows.' Community singing, with Mr. J. F. Baker as leader, and Mrs. Swayne at the organ, was enjoyed and the remainder of the evening was spent in cards. Lunch was served at 11 o'clock.

Does YOUR System Make Excess Acid?

Acid Indigestion, Colds, Headaches, Bilious Attacks, Constipation OFTEN START THIS WAY

Some people are what are known as acid-makers. They can't help it—and often they don't know it. The results of an excess of acid may seem just like ordinary stomach trouble — but they can't be put right by ordinary stomach remedies! Excess acid may be the reason why you wake up flat, sour, bleary-eyed, bilious — and the reason why fierce purgatives only leave you in the grip of a weakening habit and the same old symptoms.

But there's one thing that acid can't face. That's the neutralizing power of Vange Salts, the alkaline remedy with the natural mineral spa action. A teaspoonful in warm water surges through your system just like the medicinal spring water far away in England where Vange Salts come from. Excess acid is neutralized quickly, painlessly. Your blood is purified of poisons. Your sore stomach walls are soothed. And that mass of hard, poisonous waste matter lying in your intestines is softened gently, naturally, and passed out of your body. Then do you feel good! It's marvellous! But the most marvellous thing is that Vange Salts are only 60 cents a tin! At your druggist now—but if you're wise, on your bathroom shelf tonight!

Ontario's First Train

Back in 1853, the first steam-driven train in Ontario ran from Toronto to Aurora. The Ontario, Simcoe and Huron Railway marked the beginning of the end of the stage-coach—until then the popular means of travel.

Six years before this memorable event, the Canada Life issued its first policy to a resident of Ontario. It was then, and continued to be for almost twenty years, the only Canadian life insurance company.

With the same enterprise so apparent in pioneer days, the Canada Life continues to safeguard the future of its policyholders and their dependents. Each week, an average of approximately five hundred thousand dollars is distributed to those it serves.

Does Your Breath Broadcast— "I WEAR FALSE TEETH"?

Play Safe—Be Sure—Use Polident

Most people who wear plates or bridges suffer from a special kind of bad breath. Dentists call it—"denture breath."

You won't know if you have it—but it can spoil your happiness. Friends will shudder—people avoid you! And the worst of it is that ordinary brushing cannot prevent it. Neither will mouth washes. For the odor comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum soaks up germs and decay bacteria and causes a vile odor that you cannot detect.

One thing can stop "denture breath"—and that's Polident! This new brushless cleaner has won the approval of thousands of dentists. Users say it's a blessing.

Polident not only purifies false teeth—but also removes all stain, tarnish and deposits. Makes breath sweeter—plates look better and feel better. Costs only 40¢ at any drug store and lasts for many weeks. Money back if not delighted.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Put plate or bridge in ½ glass of water. Add a little Polident powder. Leave in 10 to 15 minutes—rinse—and it's sweet and purified—ready to use!

YANKEE SLUGGERS WIN 2ND GAME 6-3

Two Homers Push Yanks Across Plate

Crosetti, DiMaggio Hit Home Runs With Runners On

By Paul Mickelson
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

WRIGLEY FIELD, Chicago, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Booming home runs by Frankie Crosetti and Joe DiMaggio in the last two innings, each with a mate on base, drove Dizzy Dean from the hill and gave the New York Yankees their second straight world series victory over the disheartened Chicago Cubs, 6-3, before a crowd of 42,108 this chilly day.

Although he had been lifted for a pinch-hitter just before Crosetti crashed what proved the winning homer in the eight, Lefty was credited with the victory and a new record of winning six world series games without a defeat.

First Inning

Yankees—Dean's first pitch to Crosetti was a called strike. Crosetti then sent a long fly to Reynolds who took the ball with his back almost against the left field wall. Dean made a nice stop on on Rolfe's bunt and threw to Collins to retire him in a close play. Jurges went back on the grass to take Henrich's fly. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Cubs—The crowd cheered as Hack, first man up, came to bat for the Cubs. Hack dropped a single in left and another loud cheer went up. Herman struck out, swinging at a sharp-breaking curve. Demaree singled between first and second base into right field sending Hack to third. When Rolfe fumbled Henrichs throw-in Demaree went to second but Hack held third. It was an error for Rolfe. DiMaggio backed against the wall in left centre to take Marty's fly, Hack scoring after the catch. Demaree went to third on the throw-in. Reynolds struck out on a low inside pitch. One run, two hits, one error, one left.

Second Inning

Yankees—Dean was throwing nothing but slow "stuff" to the Yankees. Manager Joe McCarthy came out of the Yankee dugout as the team came to bat and had Umpire Sears tell the fans in the box seats along the right field line to take their coats off the wall. DiMaggio singled over Jurges' head into left centre. It was his first hit of the series. The Cub bullpen became busy as Gehrig went to bat. Two pitchers, Lefthander Larry French and the veteran Righthander Jack Russell started to warm up. Gehrig walked on five pitches. Dickey filed to Jurges who again went back on the grass to make the catch. Marty came all the way over to short right field and took Selkirk's fly and the crowd went wild as Dizzy appeared to be pitching his way out of a tight spot Hack and Jurges collided in going after Gordon's easy roller and it rolled all the way into left for a two base hit DiMaggio and Gehrig both scored on the play. Gomez filed to Reynolds in short left. Two runs, two hits, no errors, one left.

Cubs—Hartnett sent a long fly to Henrich in right. With a southpaw pitching Collins shifted to righthand batter and bounced a single off Rolfe's glove. Jurges forced Collins at second, Rolfe to Gordon but Jurges was safe at first on the fielder's choice. Crosetti threw out Dean on a nice play. No runs, one hit, no errors, one

Third Inning

Yankees—Reynolds ran all the way to the left field corner to take Crosetti's fly. Herman took Rolfe's bounder and threw him out. Herman also threw out Henrich and the crowd roared as Dizzy's "nuthin" ball was definitely handcuffing the Yankee hitters. His curve was breaking more than a foot as it crossed the plate. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

Cubs—Hack beat out an infield hit. The ball went by Rolfe but Crosetti, backing up the play, stopped it. His throw, however, was too late to catch the runner. Herman's bouncer went to Crosetti near second base and the Cub second baseman beat it out for a single. Hack stopped at second. Demaree bunted and Dickey threw him out. Dickey fell fielding the ball and threw to Gehrig while lying on his side. Hack and Herman advanced on the play. It was a sacrifice for Demaree. Marty double to deep centre scoring Hack and Herman to put the Cubs in front. Dickey and Gomez went into a huddle. As Gomez's three pitches to Reynolds were balls, Bump Hadley started to warm up in the Yankee bullpen. Reynolds walked on five pitches and again Dickey and Gomez conferred. DiMaggio raced in and took Hartnett's fly in short centre, the runners holding their bases. Gomez then proceeded to pull himself together and fanned Collins on three fast pitches. Two runs, three hits, no errors, two left.

Fourth Inning

Yankees — DiMaggio fouled to Hartnett in front of the first base line boxes. Collins fell chasing Gehrig's grounder and it rolled into right field for a single. Dickey bounced into a fast double play, Herman to Jurges to Collins. The Cub infield was clicking at a much better rate than yesterday's game. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Cubs—Jurges grounded to Rolfe and was out at first by a shade. Dean received a fine ovation as he came to the plate. He drove the first pitch between Rolfe and Crosetti into left field for a single. Joe McCarthy signalled the Yankee bullpen to get busy again. Hack worked the count to three and two and then bounded into a double play, Crosetti to Gordon to Gehrig. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Fifth Inning

Yankees—Selkirk sent a high foul fly to Collins off first base. The sun had burned most of the clouds away by this time and the day grew warmer. Gordon grounded to Hack and was thrown out easily. Gomez was thrown out by Herman on a slow roller. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Cubs—Herman flied to Gordon on the edge of the outfield grass. Gordon lost the ball in the sun momentarily but recovered in time to take it. DiMaggio ran into short centre to take Demaree's fly. Marty's second straight hit was a line single to left. Marty was out stealing, Dickey to Crosetti. Dickey's throw was perfect just to the right of second base and Crosetti merely had to take the ball and drop his hands onto the sliding runner. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Sixth Inning

Yankees—Reynolds went back to the left field wall to take Crosetti's long fly. Rolfe fanned, swinging at a low breaking pitch. Dean had not yet shown anything like speed. Henrich's bounder almost hit Dean in the face. The pitcher barely knocked it down and then threw Henrich out at first. As he passed the sixth inning hurdle and still was complete master of "Murder's Row" Dean drew a tremendous roar of cheers from the crowd. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Cubs—Crosetti took Reynolds' pop fly in front of second base. Hartnett sent a long fly which DiMaggio took near the 400-foot mark in centre field. Rolfe took Collins' grounder but threw wide to first for an error and Collins was safe. Jurges forced Collins, Crosetti taking his grounder and then stepping on second to complete the play unassisted. No runs, no hits, one error, one left.

Seventh Inning

Yankees—Dean's control appeared shaky as he threw three straight balls to DiMaggio. DiMaggio then grounded out to Hack who threw the ball from five yards back of third base. Gehrig was boeed as he came to bat. Gehrig flied to Demaree near the right field foul line. Marty took Dickey's 400-foot fly in right centre and for the third straight inning Dean had retired the Yankees in order. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Cubs—As Dean came to bat the crowd cheered for a full minute. Dean's second straight hit was a single to right. Hack tried to bunt but fouled two straight pitches. Hack then was called out on strikes. He protested to Umpire Kolls but it did no good as usual. Herman struck out, swinging at a sharp curve which he missed by six inches. Dean was caught napping off first base and was put out, Gomez to Gordon. Gomez ran over to trap him between first and second and Gordon who had been covering the base took Gome's throw and chased Dizzy putting the ball on him 10 yards off first. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Eighth Inning

Yankees—Selkirk lined a single to right. Gordon forced Selkirk, Hack to Herman, but Gordon was safe at first on the fielder's choice, just beating Herman's attempt at a double play. Myril Hoag, a right hand hitter, batted for Gomez. Herman took Hoag's grounder and threw to Jurges, forcing Gordon. The batter was safe in the fielder's choice. Dean made several vain attempts to catch Hoag off first. After fouling off eight pitches and with the count three and two Crosetti smashed a home run into the bleachers in left scoring Hoag in front of him and putting the Yankees ahead. The ball travelled some 350 feet. Crosetti had hit only nine homers during the regular 1938 season. Rolfe was called out on strikes. Two runs, two hits, no errors, none left.

Cubs—Johnny Murphy, square-jawed right hand relief pitching ace of the Yankees, was the New York pitcher. The sun was bothering the infielders. Demaree fanned, on a wide curve. He swung so hard at the ball that he sat down on the plate. Marty's third hit of the game was a single to right and the Cub cheering section, plunged in gloom by Crosetti's homer, came to life again. Reynolds rolled into a double play, Gordon to Crosetti to Gehrig. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

Ninth Inning

Yankees—Henrich slashed a single to right. DiMaggio smashed a home run over the left field wall and into the street beyond scoring Henrich in front of him. The ball went out of the park about 10 feet above the wall and some 25 feet inside the left field foul line. That was enough for Dizzy Dean and Larry French, a southpaw, replaced him after a prolonged huddle of the entire Cub infield. It was apparent that the famous Yankee power held in check by Dean's "nothin'" ball for seven innings and by Bill Lee for nine yesterday was finally breaking loose. Gehrig fanned, swinging at a wide curve. Dickey rolled out to Collins, unassisted. The fourth ball to Selkirk hit him on the left hip and he went to first base. It was scored as a hit batsman, not a walk. Gordon struck out on three pitches. Two runs, two hits, no errors, one left Cubs—It was announced in the press box that the scoring on Selkirk in the Yankees' half of the ninth should have been a base on balls not a hit batsman. Word came up from the Yankee dugout that he was not hit by a pitch, but had wrenched his back in pulling away from an inside ball. Hartnett filed out to Henrich in deep right. Gordon dropped Collins' grounder but recovered in time to throw him out. Jurges walked on five pitches. Jake Powell had taken Selkirk's place in left field for the Yankees at the start of the inning. Phil Cavarretta, a left hand hitter, batted for French. Cavarretta rolled a single through Gordon's legs, Jurges going to second. Hack lined to Crosetti, the shortstop taking the ball off his shoetops. No runs, one hit, no errors, two left.

Nazi Demand Boosted Say Czechs

New 5th Zone Gives Hitler 20,000 Miles Of Rich Lands

GENEVA, Oct. 6.—(AP).— The Czechoslovak delegation to the League of Nations to-day announced that the German members of the International Sudetenland Commission at Berlin had drawn up new demands for the cession of territory beyond that contemplated by the accord of Munich.

A communique issued by the delegation said that the Germans were demanding that industrial and communications centres with a total Czech population of 815,000 either be occupied immediately by German troops or made subject to plebiscite.

(In Berlin yesterday the International Commission, bowing to German demands, decided to hand over to Germany a fifth ceded zone, to be occupied by Oct. 10, which took in half as much territory as all the first four zones of occupation.

(The Munich accord left delimitation of the fifth zone to the International Commission, leaving to it to decide what were areas of "predominantly German population.")

What Hitler Gets

With the fifth zone defined there had fallen into Hitler's lap approximately 20,000 square miles of rich territory, including populous cities. Of this about three-fourths had been assigned him outright by the Munich conference in the form of the four zones to be occupied by the German army between Oct. 1 and Oct. 8.

The other one-fourth, the approximately 5,000 miles of the new fifth zone, was marked for his possession by the international commission meeting at Berlin under a German chairman last night. It is to be occupied by the German army by Monday, Oct. 10.

It will bring the new frontier of expanding Germany to within 30 miles of Pargue, Czechoslovakia's capital, at one point, at Leitmweitz.

More Troops Speed To Palestine As Situation Grows Worse

LONDON, Oct. 6.—(AP).—Great Britain took steps to-day to quell Arab disorders in Palestine.

Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald told the House of Commons four battalions and two cavalry regiments were being rushed to the Holy Land where the British Government admitted there was "a serious deterioration in the general situation."

Sir Harold MacMichael, High Commissioner for Palestine, flew to London to-day to report fully on conditions.

British troops and aviators killed an estimated 60 Arabs in punitive engagements near Mount Tabor and near Safed yesterday. The expeditions set out after Arab bands attacked Tiberias Monday and killed 19 Jews. Arab-Jewish racial strife since July 5 has caused hundreds of casualities.

While the immediate consideration in the mandated territory is the restoration of order, it was recognized at the Colonial Office that arms alone could not solve the problem.

The present policy of the British Government is based on the partition of Palestine into Jewish, Arab and British-corridor sections, despite opposition of both Jews and Arabs to this scheme.

An Inpractical Idea?

The royal commission on partition, headed since Feb. 28, 1938, by Sir John Woodhead, has not yet made its report to the government and some qualified sources believed that body might yet convince the colonial office that partition is impractible.

In any event, the government is urgently examining the views of Jewish and Arab authorities in London and in Palestine. Officials have been confering with the Iraq minister of foreign affairs, Seyyid Taufiq es Suwaidi, who is in London at the request of the government.

It was understood Suawidi advocated changing Palestine from a mandated territory to an independent state allied to Great Britain by treaty.

Under the scheme, Palestine would be governed by an assembly. All Palestine residents would have political and civil rights regardless of race or creed. All Jewish and Arab towns would have local autonomy in educational and municipal affairs. The plan would forbid any future Jewish immigration.

Found Dead In Shack

DUNBARTON, Ont., Oct. 6. — (CP).—Apparently choked by smoke from a stove, Nels. H. Nelson was found dead here yesterday in a one-room shack where he lived alone. Blind, he cared for himself and eked out a living by doing carpentry work. Coroner Dr. P. G. Pearson decided an inquest was unnecessary. Dunbarton is 22 miles east of Toronto.

Roomer Gyps Landlady Out Of $55 By Fake Note, Call To Conant

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—(CP).—Ontario Provincial Police are seeking a man who has victimized a Toronto rooming housekeeper of $55 on the strength of a document purported to have been signed by Attorney-General Gordon Conant.

Immediately the matter was brought to the attention of the Attorney-General a warrant was issued for the arrest of the man who appeared at the rooming house under the name of Frank Martin.

Mr. Conant said Martin secured a room and then some days later displayed a withdrawal form of the Province of Ontario Savings Office made out for several thousands of dollars and purporting to be signed by the Attorney-General. The man is said to have explained that he could not secure the money that day, and on the strength of the order he secured an advance of $25 from his landlady and left owing $30 room rent.

To make his story more impressive he pretended to telephone Mr. Conant in the presence of the landlady.

"It is an obvious and brazen fraud," Mr. Conant said to-day. "People should not be victimized by such outrageous schemes. No effort will be spared to apprehend the scoundrel."

Hitler Answers Eden, Saw Sudeten Misery

BERLIN, October 6. —(C. P.).-Havas)—Chancellor Hitler yesterday criticized Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Alfred Duff Cooper who resigned last Saturday as First Lord of the Admiralty in protest against the Munich accords, for their "pro-Czech bias" on the Sudeten question.

"If in England, a Duff Cooper or an Eden tell me that an injustice has been done to these Czechs, let them visit the Sudeten countries," he said. "I saw terrible misery there.'

Show Lion Kills Jap, Owner Charged

WILDWOOD, N.J., Oct. 6 (AP)— A manslaughter charge was lodged today against a boardwalk side show operator whose circus lion broke out of a cage, tore a man to death and for nearly three hours terrorized this resort city until slain by a policeman's bullet.

Recorder Lynn Burns held Joseph Dobish, 50, in $5,000 bail in connection with the death last night of Thomas Saito, 37, of Philadelphia, a Japanese auction room employee whose mangled body was found in a maze of pilings under the ocean-front boardwalk.

Until five weeks ago the 300 pound killer known as "Tuffy" was one of two lions strapped to a motorcycle side car while the driver roared around a steep-walled bowl called the "Wall of Death." Since then "Tuffy" had been inactive until his escapade last night.

Conscription Ruled Out For Britain

Chamberlain Nips It, House Silent On Safety Of Benes

LONDON, Oct. 6—(AP).—The government refused to answer questions in the House of Commons today as to whether it was doing anything to ensure the safety of Eduard Benes, who resigned yesterday as president of Czechoslovakia.

At the same time Prime Minister Chamberlain spiked talk of conscription during the last day of the Commons debate on the four-power Munich agreement. He told the House his opposition to compulsory national service in peacetime still held good.

As the House met, the prime minister was said to be planning an unparalleled new rearmament project to be ready before the House convenes again in regular session Nov. 1.

It was taken for granted that the Commons would approve Mr. Chamberlain's Munich negotiations since his Conservative party has 416 members and supporters as against 194 opposition members.

Advantages vs Price

Opposition members complained that all the arguments on Mr. Chamberlain's side were much more easily understood by the public than the opposition argument. Throughout the debate of the last three days government speakers stressed the advantages of peace while the opposition emphasized the price of peace.

Commenting on the debate, the Times (Independent) said that if blame for the Munich deal was to be apportioned, none must rest on Mr. Chamberlain's head, but that "few statesmen now living in any country can escape their share of it."

The paper declared it "belongs in the first place to the men who closed their minds against conciliation at Versailles.

"Responsibility belongs secondly to all European statesmen—including the leaders of every English party—who over a period of 19 years have refused, or neglected to take, any steps for the righting of admitted wrongs until they accumulated into the threat of catastrophe to the world."

Black Bear Bagged On Honey Raid Near Cordova Mines

FARMERS in this district will be relieved to learn that another large bear which tipped the scales at 250 pounds was shot by Mr. Ed Bowen.

The animal had been making the farmers anxious for their sheep for the past week or so. Bruin had turned over two hives of bees on the farm of Carl Purdy although the bees were only about six yards from the house when the animal was shot.

Daladier Fights To Put France Back As Leader

PARIS, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Premier Daladier today sought a program by which he could put France's economic and financial life in a sound basis for the struggle to regain France's lost position as a leading European power.

No one in France is mincing words about the seriousness of the situation caused by basic economic defects, international political dissession and diplomatic mistakes.

Only two questions were being asked: What is to be done? Is Daladier the man to do it?

The time limit imposed by parliament yesterday when it empowered the premier to rule by decree until Nov. 15 is recognized as a serious handicap in itself. It is a handicap, however, which Daladier allowed to be forced on him by socialists rather than take the chance of shifting his majority from left to right.

Other limitations, self-imposed by the same fear, were promises not to tamper with principles of the popular front social reform laws, resort to inflation, or impose exchange control.

A Temporary Solution

The only known step in Daladier's program was revaluation of the government's gold stock held by the Bank of France as security for the currency it issues in the name of the government. Financial observers considered that but a temporary expedient which would be worthless unless it were backed up by measures that would raise the general prosperity level by "putting France back to work."

Two solutions were considered by most experts to be open, and both of them were full of danger.

The first, increased production, would involve drastic changes in the popular front social reforms, possibly bringing political strife and the threat of widespread strikes by powerful leftist unions.

The second, drastic curtailment of government expenditures, would challenge the purpose of the whole scheme, since a large part of France's budget is for war preparations, which must be increased if France is to regain her place in Europe.

2 Youths Remanded In London Fraud

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 6 (C.P.). — Two youths, arrested yesterday in an alleged extortion attempt against a London man, were remanded until October 13 when they appeared before Magistrate Donald Menzies in City Court to-day.

Accused, Thomas Smith and Robert Holden of London, were charged with demanding money with menace. They were not asked to plead to the charges.

The court did not disclose the name of the London man from whom the money was alleged to have been demanded. He is being referred to only as "Mr. X." in official circles. The nature of the alleged menace was not revealed.

The two youths were arrested yesterday.

Officials are holding $100 in marked bills and a receipt alleged to have been signed with the name "Thomas P. Smith." Authorities say the receipt acknowledges one payment of $25 and another of $100.

Munich Pact Upheld By 366-144

Premier Rules Out An Election, World Parley, Now

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 6 (CP Cable)—The House of Commons today endorsed Prime Minister Chamberlain's peace deal with Chancellor Hitler at the end of a three-day debate. The government was sustained on the main motion of confidence, 366 to 144, after a Labor amendment had been defeated, 369 to 150.

Mr. Chamberlain declared his conviction that the Munich agreement had averted war.

"I am equally sure I was right," he added. "I think the government deserve the approval of this House."

The government's peace policy, he claimed, saved "Czechoslovakia from destruction and Europe from armageddon."

No Election Now

The prime minister came out definitely against a general election at this time.

"A feeling of relief has been voiced conspicuously throughout the country and I would not allow myself to capitalize on a feeling of that sort to gain temporary party advantage," he said.

Only two events would have necessitated an election, on a new issue needing a mandate from the people, or if Mr. Chamberlain lost the support of his followers. Neither condition he said, had arisen and "I have no reason to suppose either will arise."

This is what Mr. Chamberlain says must be done to gain lasting peace: "In my view we should seek, by all the means in our power, to avoid war by analysing its possible causes by trying to remove them by discussion in a spirit of collaboration and good will. I believe no program of that sort would be rejected by the people of this country, even if it involves discussion, man to ma, with dictators."

Mr. Chamberlain rejected the Labor party's suggestion of an immediate world conference to draft lasting peace proposals, in his view it would be better to have no conference than a conference which probably would fail — "you must have reasonable

Italo-British Accord Plans Ready

Reported Given Rome, Fascists Debate Italian Jews' Fate

ROME, Oct. 6.—(AP)—Diplomatic sources said today Great Britain had submitted proposals for an accord with Italy in the fourth successive daily call of the Earl of Perth, British ambassador, on Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano.

Details of the plan to make effective immediately a settlement of Anglo-Italian differences were not ascertained.

Since the Anglo-Italian Easter agreement was made conditional upon the withdrawal of Italian forces from Spain, it was believed the British Government might have proposed to Italy to withdraw at least some of the infantrymen fighting for General Franco.

Jews Fate in Balance

ROME, Oct. 6.—(AP).—The fate of Italian Jews and final approval of a new legislative chamber were scheduled for consideration at a Fascist grand council meeting tonight.

Also on the program, under Premier Mussolini's direction, was discussion of the general political situation growing out of the four-power Munich conference on the partition of Czechoslovakia Sept. 30.

Since then the announcement that France would send an ambassador to Rome and recognize the Ethiopian empire has provided a new Fascist triumph to be evaluated. Notwithstanding this gesture, informed Fascists expected the policy of the Rome-Berlin axis would be affirmed.

(France has had no ambassador here since 1936 because of Mussolini's insistence any appointee must be accredited to Vittorio Emanuele as King and emperor of Ethiopia.)

The council was expected to adopt measures expelling Jews from all administrative posts of the state and limiting their participation in "the full life of the nation" to their ratio of the population—about one Jew to 1,000 others.

A recent census, subject to rechecking, was said yesterday to have disclosed that there are about 75,000 Jews in Italy. Under the new Fascist antisemitic program, those who have entered Italy since 1919 have been ordered to leave by March 12, 1939.

Some foreign observers believe the Fascist switch to antisemitism was due chiefly to Mussolini's conviction that foreign financial and commercial circles were extending to Italy a commercial war against the Nazis.

Ex-Lacrosse Player Killed In Smash

ELGINFIELD, Ont., Oct. 6 (C. P.). — Ernest Shepley, 37, was killed and four other persons were injured when an automobile struck a truck while rounding a highway curve near here early to-day. The car held five Wallaceburg men, four of them lacrosse players, returning from a juvenile game at Fergus.

Llewellyn Stonehouse, 18, and John Cheff, about the same age, were taken to hospital in London, 13 miles south of here, with head and back injuries. Two other young men were treated for minor hurts at the scene of the crash. Their names were not learned immediately.

Shepley, a former lacrosse player, once played with Oshawa Seniors.

Accidental Death

TORONTO, Oct. 6 (CP)—Verdict of accidental death was returned last night by a jury at an inquest into the deaths of James Simpson, former Toronto mayor, and Robert T. Barton, Winnecoune, Wis., killed in a motor accident last September. A car driven by Simpson collided with a street car.

A rider attached to the verdict recommended periodical examination of all street-car motormen and drivers of automobiles. No blame was attached to George Paul, motorman of the tram.

Stewart Victor In Parkdale

TORONTO, Oct. 6.—William J. Stewart, C.B.E., former Mayor of Toronto, last night was overwhelmingly elected Conservative member for Parkdale Riding in the Ontario Legislature, when he defeated a three-cornered opposition to pile up a majority of more than 5,000 in the by-election necessitated by the death of Fred G. McBrien.

So quickly did Mr. Stewart pick up a lead that within a hour after the polls had closed at 7 p.m. Russell Harvey, C.C.F. candidate, who ran second, had conceded the election.

Late last night Returning Officer John Madden gave the official returns, 185 subdivisions out of 190, as follows: J. W. Stewart, 8,758; Russell Harvey, 3,449; R. T. Harding (Ind. Lib.), 268; and George Thompson (Soc.-Lab), 87.

Only 30 Per Cent. Vote.

From the first returns it became apparent that the voters of Parkdale had elected to remain faithful to the two-party system as against third groups.

Because of inclement weather, it was estimated that only about 30 per cent of Parkdale's 35,000 eligible voters exercised their franchise. Another reason given was that many Liberals did not care to vote against Mr. Stewart because of the acclamation granted him by Premier Hepburn.

Home Standing Same

As in the four previous by-elections, yesterday's voting left the riding's party representation unchanged. Liberals were returned in Brantford, Lambton East and Hamilton Centre. In a by-election to have been held yesterday in Waterloo South to approve Hon. H. O. Hipel's ap-prospects that you will be successful."

Perhaps a conference could be called advantageously at some later date, the Prime Minister said, "but it is no use calling a world conference at which the totalitarian states will be represented until you know they will attend and until you know they will be aiding you in the cause."

Only Conscience Matters

"I have been charged with cowardice, weakness, presumption and stupidity" Mr. Chamberlain proceeded. "I have been accused of bringing the country to the edge of war and have been denied the merit of snatching it back to safety.

"Nobody who had been through what I had to go through, day after day, faced with the thought that in the last resort it would be I, and I alone, who had to say that yes or no which would decide the fate of millions of my countrymen, their wives and families, could readily forget it.

"For that reason I am not here in a mood to try to see what I can do by way of retort. When a man gets to my age and fills my position, I think he tends to feel that criticism and even abuse matters little to him. It is his conscience that matters."

Looking back on recent events, the Prime Minister said he felt convinced his actions had averted war.

Claims No Credit

"I claim no credit for my actions," he added, "for it was only what anyone in my position would feel it his duty to do. I am equally sure I was right in doing it."

The Prime Minister, who was frequently interrupted by cheers from his supporters, declared war today was a different thing from what it used to be, not only in degree but in kind. In the very first hour, if war started today, before any of the professional forces had been touched, it would strike the workman, the clerk, the man in the street, and his wife and children in their homes.

"You cannot ask people to accept such a prospect unless you feel yourself, and can make them feel, that the cause for which they are going to fight is a vital cause — a cause that transcends all ordinary human values and a cause to which you can point, if some day you win a victory, and say that cause is safe."

There was also the important consideration of the British Empire.

Dominions To Be Considered.

"You may think we are the country that is directly affected in such cases," he continued. "But the Dominions have the right to be brought into consultation before we take a step which might have incalculable consequences for them."

Because the number of absentees was not known it was impossible to determine the number of abstentious from the voting among Conservative ranks until official records are made public tomorrow.

One analysis said about 18 Government members were believed to have abstained from the expression of confidence. This compared with forecasts before the vote that 40 might abstain.

Winston Churchill and some other Conservatives abstained but, on the other side, George Lansbury and half a dozen Laborite Pacifists as well as four Independent Labor members also abstained.

Mr. Chamberlain in his speech before the vote, declared he was justified in making the Munich settlement because of the "people's hatred of the notion of starting to kill one another again."

He hinted at a vast new British defence effort coupled with a "new spiritual revival."

Mr. Chamberlain said that when the British government was convinced Sudetenland could not possibly be kept within Czechoslovakia it strongly urged the Czechs to agree to cede the territory.

Betrayal Charge Absurd

"To accuse us of having by that advice betrayed Czechoslovakia is simply preposterous," he declared.

Thus the prime minister contended Czechoslovakia was saved from annihilation and given a new life and national existence in neutrality and security comparable to that of Switzerland.

Peace might yet be gained for "our time," Mr. Chamberlain said, but that meant there must be no disarming until "we can induce others to disarm." To disarm at this time would weaken Britain's diplomacy because to be successful in diplomacy you must have behind it "strength to give it effect."

The prime minister said there would be prompt further examination of civil and military defences "to make good our deficiencies in the shortest possible time."

The emergency had had at least one good result—"it has thrown a vivid light on our preparations for defence, on their strength and their weakness."

Full Defence Probe.

Mr. Chamberlain said the government would not be doing its duty if it had not already ordered that a "prompt and thorough inquiry should be made into the whole of our preparations, military and civil, order to see what other steps may be necessary to make good our defences in the shortest possible time."

Concluding, the Prime Minister said Britain's policy of appeasement "does not mean we can seek new friends at the expense of old ones or, indeed, at the expense of any other nation at all."

He mentioned the "complete identity of view" between the British and French governments, asserting "their objective is the same as ours—that of maintaining the collaboration of all nations, not excluding the totalitarian states, in building up lasting peace in Europe."

Earlier the government had turned down a proposal that Parliament adjourn for 10 days only, rather than until Nov. 1.

Hepburn Sees Unity When Milking Ceases

TORONTO, Ont. 6.—(CP).—National unity can be obtained "only when Ontario is no longer being made the milch cow for the rest of the country," Premier Mitchell Hepburn said in an address last night at a meeting of the Drug Trading Company.

Mr. Hepburn was replying to a speech here Monday by John Imrie, managing director of the Edmonton Journal. Mr. Imrie said there are misgivings in other provinces about Ontario's attitude toward unity.

Mr. Hepburn discussed agricultural policies and criticized the Dominion Government's wheat policy. "If they are going to adopt crazy policies like that, let them apply all over the country," he said. "As it is, Ontario must pay to keep the Western farmer. The so-called Liberal Government in Ottawa has been absolutely callous to this province in the past."

He said Canadians should strive to attain an economic entity with the United States as a protection from perplexed European problems. "I am glad to see the American flag hanging in this hall," he said. "The friendship of the United States means a lot to us."

McQuesten For 20 MPH When Public Comes To Senses

Toronto, Oct. 6 (CP)

HON. T. B. McQUESTEN, Ontario Minister of Highways, today said he was ready to introduce legislation reducing the speed limit from 30 to 20 miles-an-hour in municipalities when the larger centres ask for it and the "public comes to its senses."

Mr. McQuesten said he had always contended that the 30-miles-an-hour limit was excessive. It was "too fast for crowded centres."

Queen's Class Full 31 Turned Away From Medical Course

Kingston, Oct. 6.

THIRTY-ONE students who applied for admission to Queen's Medical College were disappointed. The Medical Faculty decided to limit the first year to forty-six, and seventy-seven made application.

In the second year, it was found impossible to accommodate all those who applied for the few vacancies in the class. Only students who had arts degrees were given the opportunity of joining the second-year class.

Lafleche Traces Steps In Bren Deal

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP) — Hugh Plaxton, Liberal Member of Parliament for Toronto-Trinity was in England with Major James E. Hahn, in October, 1936, when the Toronto manufacturer sought information looking to the manufacture of the Bren gun in Canada, Major General L.R. LaFleche, Deputy Minister of National Defence, stated at the Bren gun inquiry to-day.

Tracing the steps leading up to the contract under which the John Inglis Company of Toronto, headed by Major Hahn, is to make 7,000 Bren light machine guns for the Canadian government, General LaFleche told of communications which passed between London and Ottawa in November, 1936 after Major Hahn reached England with an introduction to Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner.

Early in November, he said, he received a cable from Mr. Plaxton, saying Hahn was held up in obtaining information from the war officer because advices from Ottawa had not reached the High Commissioner. The witness had taken the matter up with the External Affairs Department.

A message was also sent to Canada House asking that Hahn cable his impressions of the possibility of making guns in Canada and a message from Hahn was received on Nov. 23, 1936. It said the gun could be produced in Canada, at a factory cost of approximately $350 based on a run of 50 per week, on single shift operation. The War Office was interested and there was a possibility of their financial cooperation, Major Hahn said.

Trailer Test Case Won By Detroit

DETROIT, Oct. 6.—(CP).—Right of a city to pass legislation restriction the use of trailers within city limits was upheld in a test case here expected to have international significance, Circuit Judge G. A. Miller recorded a verdict today upholding Detroit's trailer regulatory ordinance against a suit launched by the National Trailer Coach Association and the Trailer Manufacturers Association.

These associations earlier announced plans for a series of legal battles to eliminate restrictive trailer regulations, passed in most Canadian Provinces and many of the States in this country.

The Detroit legislation, used as a model in several parts of the country, was the first to be tested. The association announced immediately the verdict would be appealed.

Toronto Mayor Blames Carelessness Not Speed For Accident Increase

Toronto, Oct. 6 (CP)

CARELESSNESS and not speed has increased accidents and fatalities in Toronto, Mayor Ralph Day said today in commenting on a statement by Edward Dunn, traffic inspector, that speed was the cause.

"Driving habits of most Toronto motorists are bad and in my opinion reckless," Mayor Day said. "They do not observe stop signs and most particularly the general practice of driving as close to the centre of the road as possible and forcing people who wish to pass to pull out into the path of oncoming traffic."

Inspector Dunn said yesterday increase of the speed limit from 20 to 30 miles an hour increased the number of accidents and fatalities.

Britain Will Rue Munich Pact Says Churchill

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Oct. 6—(CP Cable).—Drawing on all the bitterness and force of his oratorical ability, Winston Churchill yesterday swept into the leadership of parliamentary forces arrayed against Prime Minister Chamberlain's bargain with Chancellor Hitler as incorporated in the Munich agreement.

The former Liberal and present-day Conservative rebel took the floor a few minutes after Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had asked members to place themselves in Mr. Chamberlain's position at Munich and decide whether they would have rejected the terms of the Czech-German settlement and "destroyed the last chance of averting war."

These two veteran members highlighted the third day's debate on the government's actions in the Czechoslovak-German crisis. Sir John was the lawyer, driving home his points in clear and logical order. Where the Chancellor of the Exchequer used rapier thrusts, Mr. Churchill employed the technique of the broadsword, clothing his thoughts in precise and fiery English.

Sees Britain Sorry.

Mr. Churchill predicted Great Britain would rue the day the Munich agreement was signed by Mr. Chamberlain, Chancellor Hitler, Premier Mussolini and Premier Daladier. It was "a total, unmitigated defeat," would lean to German domination in Europe, would result in the small nations distrusting French and British friendship—and might mean the destruction of the democracies themselves.

Here are some typical Churchillian sentences:

"The utmost the Prime Minister was able to gain for Czechoslovakia has been that the German dictator, instead of snatching his victuals from the table, has ben content to have them served to him course by course....

Charge Mother 21 Tried To Kill Family

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 6—(CP). — Mrs. Leona Warwick, a blonde, attractive, 21-year-old mother, was charged in city court to-day with attempting to murder her three small daughters.

Officials claim she left the little girls in a room with gas pouring from three burners of a cooking plate. They were rescued by Detectives before they had been exposed to the gas long enough to suffer any harm.

She was arrested on a vagrancy charge. When she appeared in court to-day the more serious charge was read.

3 Martha Raye Suits Settled Out Of Court

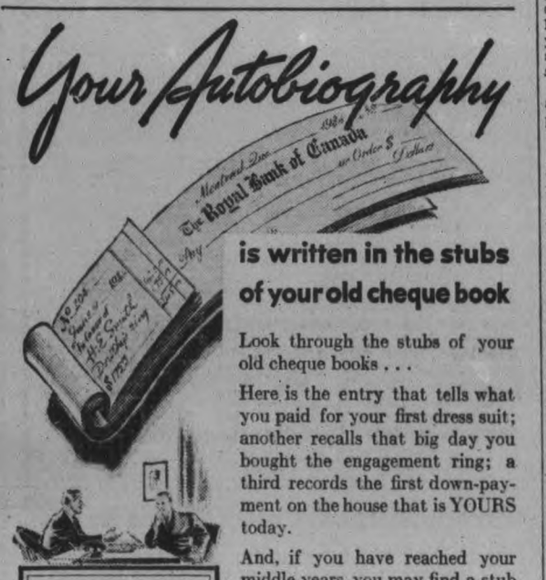
Your Autobiography



is written in the stubs of your old cheque book

Look through the stubs of your old cheque books . . .

Here is the entry that tells what you paid for your first dress suit; another recalls that big day you bought the engagement ring; a third records the first down-payment on the house that is YOURS today.

And, if you have reached your middle years, you may find a stub that tells of your daughter's wedding, and of the christening mug you gave your first grandchild . . .

Those cheques you issued in days long past were no mere slips of paper. They were symbols . . . of food, clothing, and sheller . . . education and growth. Into them were written homely, intimate events of your own personal history.

Justice Fullerton Dies In Winnipeg

WINNIPEG, Oct. 6—(CP).—Mr. Justice Charles Percy Fullerton, prominent in legal and railway spheres of the Dominion, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. C. McMillan, here today. The 68-year old veteran of the bench had been ill since the beginning of June.

He was first stricken in Toronto and two months ago returned to Winnipeg to live with his daughter. His condition rapidly grew weaker and he died at six o'clock this morning.

He was a former member of the Manitoba court of appeal, former chairman of the board of railway commissioners and head of the board of trustees which controlled the destinies of the Canadian National Railways from 1933 until the Liberal government's appearance in 1935 when the board of directors was restored.

His death after a lengthy illness removed one of the Dominion's brilliant minds. Born in Amherst, N.S., July 18, 1870, son of William M. and Lucy Fullerton, he became lumberman, lawyer and railway chieftain.

President Steps Down

Dr. Edouard Benes is no longer president of Czechoslovakia. Before he was elevated to that position he was Minister for Foreign Affairs in the new republic. Born in Bohemia he was before the war professor of the Academy of Commerce in Prague and later lecturer at the Charles University. It was in 1915 he went abroad in company with the late Prof. T. G. Masaryk to organize the Czechoslovak movement for independence. When their aim had been accomplished they returned to their native country and Prof. Masaryk became the first president and Dr. Benes the Minister for Foreign Affairs. He became president on the death of his colleague Masaryk.

In the very nature of events Dr. Benes would have before him at all times the interests of the Czechs, Slovaks and Bohemians. He would, from force of habit and racial inclination be more interested in them than in the welfare of the German minorities. Apart from that and granting the man's sincerity, he was trying to govern a country in which the wrong people had been placed inside a national fence. The feelings of the Germans there, coupled with language and racial prejudice, were never in harmony with the new government as it had been formed in Prague, nor was the new government deeply in sympathy with these people.

When Dr. Benes travelled in United States and when with the late President Masaryk he impressed upon President Wilson the urgency of the mission to which he had set his hand, he was undoubtedly sincere. He was obsessed with a vision and he finally saw it take form. To use a homely illustration, it may be that he was in the new national house more mindful of his own national children than he was of the step-children of German extraction.

We Are Interested

Municipalities situated along the western section of No. 7 Highway have been holding a meeting in Toronto and the intention is to draw the attention of the government to this Highway. The claim is made that so much traffic after crossing the border is loaded on highways leading to Niagara Falls that the tourist enters and leaves the province quickly, having gone over only a portion of it and in many cases he does not even spend the night on this side of the border. But he goes on his way believing he has actually seen Ontario.

With the opening of the new bridge at Point Edward and Sarnia there will be more cars coming in there and No. 7 Highway is the logical route for them to take. At this end of the road we are not at all indifferent to what the western communities are doing because we know if the cars start coming in greater numbers along No. 7 the Kawartha district will ultimately get its full share because the attraction is here to bring them. There are sections of the Highway toward the Western end which have never been paved, and there are also places where a shorter distance could be established by re-routing and straightening. So although the move to call attention to greater traffic on an improved No. 7 Highway is going on some miles from here we are interested in what is being done. It is a good Highway through typical Ontario scenery and it could carry a great deal more traffic and do it with comfort and safety.

It Does Not Seem Fair

When it was announced that there would be an investigation into the working of Ontario Mental Hospitals the first step taken was the suspension of Dr. George H. Stevenson, superintendent of the hospital at London. There have been several meetings of the investigating board and at the most recent it was announced that what amounted to a "clean bill of health" had been arrived at as far as Dr. Stevenson was concerned. One of the members of the commission also stated that it would be likely the recommendations would include one saying that the deposed superintendent should be reinstated.

That may be satisfactory enough when it becomes an accomplished fact, but in the meantime it does not look like a fair way to do business. The average professional or business man has one asset which is more valuable than others, and that is his reputation. He is jealous of that and he ought to be. It is something which has taken him years to earn. When it was announced that this Dr. Stevenson had been suspended there had been no evidence heard and there had been no charges laid against the superintendent. And yet he was branded as one who had been suspended and the general public was left to draw the conclusion that there had been some good reason for it. It does look as though the element of fairness and square dealing had been left out of the situation when that step was first taken. Even the most humble individual who comes into our primary courts is not sentenced until his case has been heard.

The Heater Was Defective

While preparing to bathe her baby a mother was placing an electric heater in the bath room, and during the process of preparation the mother was electrocuted. When her husband came home he found her lying over the edge of the partly filled tub, and the baby was sitting on the floor.

Already we have heard the suggested explanation that it was the bath tub and wet hands which caused the tragedy, but that is not correct. An electrician explained and also illustrated for the Examiner just what did take place. In the first place the heater was defective and that would cause electric current to be circulating in the frame of the heater and that current would be seeking opportunity to be grounded. The woman in the bath room had her hand on the heater and the tap of the tub at the same time and that formed the complete circuit. The fact that it was a tub and had water in it had nothing to do with the fatality.

It was further explained that the Hydro Electric regulations for governing the wiring of houses forbid a plug to be placed in a bathroom for the attaching of such fixtures as electric heaters as the danger has been recognized for some time. It was also stated that an electric heater in good working condition would not cause trouble nor be a source of danger. The fatalities, of which there have been several, start with defective heaters.

Those Empty Seats

J. F. Maine of London, Ont., believes people who are members of churches ought to attend, and when he made that statement he was referring to the United Church for that is where he belongs.

The London man reduced it to a question of statistics and estimates. There are between 600,000 and 650,000 members of the United Church of Canada today, but there is only an average Sunday attendance of 250,000. When one considers that the same people in many cases attend twice it would further decrease the actual number of individuals turning out to the church service.

The figure as given by Mr. Maine is below 50 per cent.; in fact it is decidedly below. The problem on which he is working is not a monopoly of the United Church because there are preachers in a lamentably large number of large churches who face too many empty pews. The Londoner says it is necessary to increase church attendance by 250,000 and admittedly that is a large order. It will be found that church attendance and church financing are closely related one to the other. For the most part those who absent themselves from Sunday services do not give. There may be any number of reasons for the less-than-50 per cent. attendance, but primarily it is due to luke-warmness or positive indifference. If the church and all for which it stands had gripped the membership and they found that what they were drawing from it was greater than that which they were contributing then they would attend and there would be no need to urge to do so. That may be a hard-sounding explanation but we know of none other adequate to cover the case.

A Desirable Decrease

There are still too many highway fatalities in Ontario, but to date there has been a decrease of 38 per cent. as compared with last year and we can regard that as nothing short of a worthy accomplishment.

The Department of Highways has adopted a vigorous course within recent months. There has been a uniform tendency to bear down on those who drive recklessly; there has been more severe treatment for those who drive while they are drunk, coupled with mandatory impounding of their cars for a three-months period.

Added to that there has been consistent newspaper publicity by the Department, and this advertising has been well prepared. It has kept before the thousands of newspaper readers the repeated warnings and advice of the Minister of Highways, and these announcements have also singled out and illustrated practices of the road which were considered dangerous and which would have to be discontinued.

The Department of Highways with its vigorous campaign must have had something to do with that drop of 38 per cent. in 1938 traffic fatalities. It is too much to believe that such a desirable decrease would come to pass of its own will.

They Are Building Homes

Since January 1 there have been permits issued for the construction of 67 houses in Peterborough or in the immediately adjacent district. There are still three months to go and the expectation is that the number of new houses will be twice that of the year 1937.

Many of these homes are of the smaller type. They are being built for people who want a home but who also want it to conform to their ability to pay for it. And there is plenty of wisdom in such planning. If any person wants to be miserable all he has to do is undertake something too great for his financial resources.

We are informed that many of these new houses are going to be comfortable because insulation is being freely and generally used in present-day construction. It keeps the home from being excessively hot during summer and in winter it guards against much of the produced heat making its way out through walls and roofing. One gentleman who has adequate knowledge of such matters said that the ordinary brick and plaster wall would lose about two and a-half times as much heat as the insulated structure. Therefore it is now possible to instal a heating unit on a lesser scale than formerly and the heat produced will not be wasted.

The idea of owning a home is not vanishing in this city. Truth is there is evidence on all sides to show it is running strong and does not show any signs of diminishing. And we are certain that the folk who live in these modern homes of moderate size are going to enjoy doing so.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It may be a bold guess, but if there is a clash in Europe we believe it will be between Mussolini and Hitler.

Warnings have been issued to the Queen's freshmen that really mean they are being asked to behave as gentlemen and the wonder is why such advice should be considered necessary.

Mrs. Roosevelt says that photographs taken of herself do not seem to be entirely satisfactory. And of course that complaint has been in existence ever since the time of tintypes.

One U. S. employer put an extra $5 bill in the pay envelope of all his workers to mark the peace victory. The same victory actually did the same thing for a good many people who do not seem to be aware of it.

Two men out of prison are starting the publication of a magazine for circulation in U. S. prisons. That will be nice work as there will be little danger of indignant subscribers rushing off to lick the editor.

Arthur Roebuck and David Croll propose to run for seats in the Federal House it is reported and so far Premier Hepburn has taken no steps to apply for an injunction stopping them from so doing.

At a meeting of Canadian business men the suggestion was made that the Canadian governments should unite to keep down taxation. When a gathering gets on that track we can only hope that adjournment does not come too speedily.

The suggestion is made that churches should bar clergymen from offering themselves as political candidates. Whether they would reform the politicians or become contaminated themselves is the puzzle at the bottom of this contention.

Farm women in several centres have circulated petitions against the compulsory pasteurization law. You may not agree with such method, but it might be well to remember that if you were on a farm you would probably be doing that very thing.

Hitler has announced a new government loan in Germany of $600,000,000 at 4 1-2 per cent. And that means an additional $27,000,000 for interest charges alone which the German people can consider along with their Sudeten rejoicing.

Allen Pendlebury, an Englishman, is in Canada on his way on a bicycle trip round the world. He says he has gone 26,000 miles since leaving his home in Wigan, Lancashire. He has to go another 3,000 miles to return, making in all 29,000 miles. It seems they used to teach in school that it was 24,000 miles round the world, so we fear Allen has not been travelling in a straight line.

PINK SEDAN

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My pink sedan it up and stopped, I could not make it kick or go, it would not move ahead with ease nor would it even trundle slow.

¶ And I was mad as I could be and said some nasty things I know, I turned at once to find the man who sold my car ten years ago.

¶ He was a fraud, I said to him, he took good ducats out of me, and I was going to take the law and put him where he ought to be.

¶ He is a mild and goodly jay, and so he said he'd go and see, and so I rode along with him to find what trouble there might be.

¶ He had some tools along with him, he tinkered with my pink sedan, and undid this and tightened that like any well behavin' man.

¶ And then he got inside the thing and softly did he close the door, and then I heard a noise once more, the engine soon began to roar.

¶ Before he left I told him, though, that I had talked too hard to him, and that I let my temper rise and wiggle loudly at the chin.

¶ So now my pink sedan she runs and she goes either fast or slow, I think she's going about as good as what she did ten years ago.

MATHEMATICIANS REGARD the trisecting of an angle with compass and ruler to be an impossibility, yet a professor at Columbia University needed several weeks to show incorrect a "solution" to this problem sent in from Boston, by an 11-year-old Greek boy. The Teacher's College at Columbia University receives several "solutions" to this unsolvable problem every week.

It has been estimated that it would require a mathematical expert some five hours to figure out all the movements needed to catch a baseball—a thing that the mind and eye are able to do in a mere fraction of a second.

According to a report from the University of Missouri, students master math problems involving money much faster than problems having to do with abstract figures.

Fine mathematical precision is shown in the construction of the Hoosac Tunnel, completed 62 years ago in Massachusetts. The tunnel was started at opposite ends and drilled five miles through solid rock, yet when the drillers from each end met, the tunnel was but five-sixteenth of an inch out of line.

A middle-aged man living in Edinburgh has the ability to work out sums which harass the greatest mathematicians. Frequently math experts write to him, enlisting his aid, for they have come to know that his calculations are never wrong. Yet this genius is unable to do even the simplest tasks in other spheres, and cannot even feed himself.

TELESCOPES

MODERN TELESCOPES bring some three hundred trillion stars into view. Scientists from Mt. Wilson Observatory declare, however, that no telescope will ever be able to penetrate the center of the Milky Way's galaxy. At this point the clouds of heavy stellar dust obscure forever whatever lies beyond.

Galileo did not invent the telescope as popularly supposed. Hans Lippershey, a spectacle maker, is known to have made one in 1608, whereas Galileo made his first one in 1609. There is also evidence to indicate that Roger Bacon constructed one nearly 400 years before this.

The new 200-inch telescope mirror, recently made at the glass works at Corning, N. Y., was, when poured, nearly one-fifth the surface temperature of the sun. It cooled at the rate of 1.4 degrees Fahrenheit daily, and many months elapsed before heat had completely passed from it. Its diameter is 201 inches, its thickness twenty-seven inches and its weight twenty tons. This vast mirror will bring the moon within some 25 miles of the earth.

DIAMONDS

THE DIAMOND IS the hardest substance on earth, being approximately 80 times harder than any other substance. Yet a well directed blow by an expert will cleave even the hardest stone.

The diamond is pure crystal carbon, no different in substance than soot or graphite. It is the only gem that is a single element; other precious stones are composed of at least two elements. The emerald, for instance, contains eight elements.

A newly-mined diamond occasionally explodes as a result of internal strain caused by its construction.

The sale of diamonds is a good barometer in world trade of general prosperity. When the demand for diamonds falls off, general commerce is slowing down.

The diamond trade is one form of big business that is conducted in an extremely modest manner. There are no palatial diamond exchanges anywhere in the world. Generally, in Hatten Garden, London, the center of the diamond trade, men sit over cups of tea or coffee, discussing the prices of the "sparklers" that lie spilled among the breadcrumbs.

Diamonds are of extreme importance in the industrial world. They are used in making spectacles; in truing grinding wheels; in polishing billiard balls and telephone mouth-pieces; in sound recording reproduction, and so on.

Diamonds are essential in the manufacture of small engine parts for motor-cars. Some eight cents' worth of diamonds are used up in the making of an average car. Henry Ford spends some $500,000 a year on diamonds in making his cars. The color of the diamond used does not matter, but auto makers are temperamental in this respect. Nash buys sparkling gray, Cadillac a cheap gray, and Packard only a clear brown.

ARAB CHURCH IN WEST.

(Brandon Sun)

THE FIRST MOSLEM church in Canada will be at Edmonton. The building permit says the owners will be the Arabian Moslem association there. It will be a modest one storey 80x50 structure of brick veneer on 108th avenue. It will be striking to find if the congregation are all Arabs for the Moslems cover a diverse number of nationalities. Of course, even in Great Britain, there have been substantial conversions to Islam and they have their mosques, so that it is surprising Canada has not before this had some churches of that faith. Already, there are thirty differing creeds in Canada and too many perhaps in serious competition. The census says there are two thousand professing Mohammedanism in this Dominion. But Islam, founded by the prophet Mahomet about 600 A.D. at Mecca, has a world membership of 209,000,000, which is about 3,000,000 greater than that of Christian Protestantism and 125,000,000 less than Roman Catholicism.

WORKERS BETRAYED

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—This war scare has passed off, and war has been averted. Thank God. But the war at home goes on yet, of trying to make a decent living and which gets harder all the time. In war-time the country mobilizes all its resources to win the war and the government seems to find all kinds of money. But in peace time, when the fight to make a living is on, there seems to be no money at all. And there is not one step being taken by our present government to help the people make a decent living. Nobody wants relief; what they want is work at decent wages. Every day if a person goes around the local factories you will see groups of young men and girls looking for a chance to make a living which is their birthright, but getting the same answer—No help wanted.

It seems in these modern days the only thing that is lagging behind and is old fashioned is the system of government. It's high time a change was made for the better. The two old parties are through as far as making things better for the workers. The only thing that will help the workers is a Labor Party or Commonwealth Government like that in New Zealand and doing such wonderful work for the workers. All kinds of social legislation has been put in effect. Even the United States is further ahead than us. Where is the minimum wage that has been promised the workers time and again. The Unemployment Insurance, The Health Insurance. In Great Britain they are away ahead of us in these respects. In the States President Roosevelt has shown the people that the government runs the country.

His Government has brought a Minimum Wage out, and established the National Labor Relations Board, which gives the worker the rights to belong to any union of his choice and sees that the workers are not discriminated against. While over here any time a union is trying to organize it is being opposed by the manufacturers. Even a bill that was brought up in Parliament a short while ago, which protected the workers from discrimination while joining a union was turned down by our government.

CIVIL LIBERTIES

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—As a representative of a group of citizens fighting for those civil liberties which are cherished by the Canadian people, I should like to avail myself of your correspondence column to set before your readers a few facts regarding the present situation in the Province of Quebec.

Under the Padlock Act, policemen are ransacking without proper warrant the homes of private citizens. They are carrying away books, papers and other personal property. Not only are they prohibiting the free expression of opinion, though the press and by word of mouth, but they are acually driving citizens out of their homes. Recently a citizen of the city of Quebec was forced out of his house and, with his wife and children, put into the street. Denied access to their shelter and clothing and furniture, the family are destitute. Moreover, during the year the house is padlocked, the evicted are held responsible for the rent. They are convicted without trial and have no recourse in law.

The Canadian Civil Liberties Union has taken up their cause, as one in a number of test cases, after having failed in its attempt — backed by thousands of citizens in all parts of Canada—to have the Padlock Act disallowed by the Federal Government. To carry on this work we need money, and we have instituted a campaign to raise $10,000. Believing that no Canadian can be indifferent to the assault on his traditional liberties, we are making the appeal Dominion-wide. The Canadian Civil Liberties Union exists to defend the freedom of all Canadians. We ask the support of all Canadians who are zealous to defend this freedom.

Sincerely yours,
HUBERT DESAULNIERS.

• Those Who Abuse Chamberlain

(Frank R. Kent, in the Baltimore Sun.)

FOR SEVERAL WEEKS in the United States a deluge of vituperative denunciation hardly equaled in history poured over Mr. Chamberlain. Called a Judas who stabbed a friendly little nation in the back he has been depicted in cartoons and otherwise as a double-crossing coward, who sold out his ally and humiliated his own people; surrendering to a great national blackguard and bully. One extraordinary thing about the Chamberlain denunciation here is that it was most violent from those loudest in proclaiming their "liberalism."

In the past these liberal editors and orators have been our most consistent and earnest pacifists — men who have preached a strict neutrality; extreme isolationists who felt that war under any circumstances was unjustifiable and we must stay out at all costs. Yet, it was from these that the abuse of Mr. Chamberlain was most hysterical and extreme. Reading or listening to them one gathered that their hatred of Fascism was so great and their affection for the Czechs so deep that they were willing to plunge the whole world into a war from which it would emege devastated and shattered beyond hope of recovery in many generations, rather than yield an inch of Czech territory or agree to any form of compromise—which is really ridiculous.

It has been a marvelous thing to see the quiet dignity of Mr. Chamberlain's utterances. The unmistakable sincerity, candor and courage of the man make themselves so felt, not only in his own country but in this, as to dry up the torrent of abuse, which for a couple of days was almost general, and leave—on this side at least—only a few of the most extreme of the radicals spitting at him. As things stand today the feeling is overwhelmingly strong that Mr. Chamberlain's willingness to humiliate himself; his extraordinary efforts to placate Hitler: his insistence upon the Czech agreement with the original Hitler demands; his insistence that if the war came it had to be upon a greater issue than the question of Czech territory—that those things all contributed to put Hitler in a position where if war finally came his responsibility would have been so complete that his cause would have been immensely weakened and the forces against him solidified and strengthened.

In brief, however repugnant the idea of yielding anything to Hitler, of seeming to plead with him instead of hitting him in the face, there are few clear-headed persons today not willing to concede that Mr. Chamberlain's course of putting Hitler so wholly, openly and indefensibly in the wrong was justified. The fact is that the whole world should be grateful that under such conditions the British head was a man without truculence, willing to make every possible concession to preserve peace, but who, if that were found futile, then would fight. That was exactly the sort of man he showed himself to be.

• Income Pays One-Third of Taxation

(Toronto Star)

IN THE FISCAL YEAR 1938 which ended last March, Canada collected $138,000,000 in sales tax, $120,000,000 in income tax (individual and corporation combined), and $93,500,000 in customs duties. These were her three largest sources of revenue.

In his budget speech, Mr. Dunning estimated that during the current fiscal year 1939 the income tax revenues would increase by $18,000,000 to $138,000,000, the sales tax fall by $13,000,000 to $125,000,000, and the customs duties by $11,500,000 to $82,000,000. He anticipated the two reductions because of decrease in external and internal trade. The income tax, however, is (apart from arrears) collected in 1938 on 1937 incomes, and these were well in excess of the incomes of 1936. So this tax increases despite a recession.

It is interesting to note that while Mr. Dunning budgetted for an income tax increase of $18,000,000 in the complete fiscal year, the increase in the first five months (in which most of that tax is paid) was nearly $21,000,000. It seems likely, therefore, that his hopes will be more than fulfilled, unless there is some unexpected falling off in payments during the remaining months.

Excise taxes (chiefly sales tax) have fallen off more than $5,000,000 in the first five months, and customs duties more than $5,500,000. They dropped $1,600,000 and $1,160,000 respectively in August alone, and it seems certain that the end of the fiscal year will see a total decrease in these quite as large as Mr. Dunning anticipated, if not larger. At any rate, sales tax revenue will once more take second place to income tax revenue, as it did in 1936. Canada will derive almost one-third of its total taxation revenue from the income levies.

Nobody knows yet what the 1939 deficit is likely to be. It fell from $160,000,000 in 1936 to $77,850,000 in 1937 and to $13,775,000 in 1938. Mr. Dunning suggested the probability of a deficit of $23,000,000 in the current fiscal year. But in a period of world unrest and upset trade, a finance minister cannot forecast the future with any certainty.

KEEPING IT SECRET.

(The New Yorker)

THE WIFE OF A young businessman recently went to the Sloane Hospital for the usual purpose. Why he didn't go, too, we don't know, but he didn't. He kept calling up to find out if anything had happened yet and was finally rewarded with the news that mother and child were both doing well. "What is it?" said the father. "Mother and child are both doing well," said Sloane Hospital, "No, no," he said. "I mean is it a boy or a girl?" "We can't discuss an infants sex over the telephone," the voice trilled, and rang off. The father dashed up to the hospital expecting to find assorted triplets, and was told by the floor nurse that his child was a boy. Seems that the reason they don't give out information about sex over the telephone is that once, some years ago, a distraught young man got mixed up in conversation with the hospital and gained the impression that his newborn child was a boy. He caused untold trouble to the authorities when he found his wife with a daughter — kept asking what had happened to his son and talking darkly of taking legal steps. They made up their minds at Sloane never to let that happen again.

WE NEVER EXPECTED to live to see the day when young Filipinos would be found picketing in a strike at old established American place of business, but we have witnessed it more than once during the last four years. San Franciscans of old American stock, have you lost your manhood? When Dennis Kearney began holding meetings on Nob Hill, demanding that the residences erected there should be seized by the municipality, he was thrown into jail, and his followers soon deserted him. If the San Franciscans of today had the guts that their ancestors possessed, there are a few little Dennis Kearneys of the present hour who would get thrown into jail. Some of our reads may not agree with us, but we are more and more convinced that eventually we shall all see that the only hope of preserving American democracy will be found in getting out our guns and swords and using them valiantly.

SETTLED AT GUNPOINT.

(Toronto Telegram)

THAT THE QUESTION has had to be settled at gunpoint is regrettable, but that it has been settled without another European war is something for which the nations ought to go down on their knees in gratitude. War, as is thoroughly realized now by all thinking men, settles nothing, and a new conflict, when the years of slaughter and destruction were passed, would merely present the world with new problems as baffling as those which followed the last catastrophe. It may be said with certainty that, whatever else the peacemakers did, they would not reconstitute the Czech republic as it was.

Beauty Spots Of America Do Not Surpass Autumn In Kawartha District

The beauty spots of the continent must take a back seat at the present time to the Kawartha Lakes district which is wrapped in an Autumnal gown of indescribable beauty. Nature has been lavish this year in her choice and strength of colors and the rugged, lake-studded north country between Peterborough City and the Haliburton Highlands is resplendent in a blaze of glory that is almost breath-taking.

Fred Roy of Peterborough ran out of superlatives when describing a trip he and Mrs. Roy took through the northern townships a few days ago, and suggested that a description of the route he travelled might be of value to other motorists who wish to take a one-day motor tour and enjy scenic beauty that cannot be surpassed.

The Route Taken.

From Peterborough to Apsley is 40 miles and a one-hour drive over excellent highway, beyond Apsley there is 15 miles of gravel, then one reaches the improved road running to Bancroft. From Bancroft the trip extends on to Maynooth over first class roads then north over gravel to Whitney. From this point one motors on through a new highway through Algonquin Park to Lake of Two Rivers, where there is a fire ranger's cabin, stone outdoor fireplaces and picnic tables. It is a perfect spot for the midday meal. There are no sleeping cabins here, merely facilities for cooking dinner, on the edge of the lake.

The northernmost point on the trip is Dwight and from there the traveller swings down to Dorset, the south-east past Hall's Lake, Saskatchewan Lake, Ox-Tongue River, Boskung Lake, and 12-Mile Lake to Minden. The road points south from Minden through Norland, Coboconk, Rosedale, Lindsay and home. The entire distance is 285 miles, and the Roy party left Peterborough at 7.30 in the morning and were back at 8.30 the same night. During the trip they stopped at many beauty spots to take 200 feet of pictures on color film, and for their meals.

Ever Changing Vistas.

Innumerable lakes cold, blue and still mirror the maples and fir trees which line the shores, and the traveller is greeted by ever-changing vistas. Patridges by the dozen, deer, chipmonks, black and red squirrels and hundreds of wild ducks greet the motorist as he travels through this paradise of color and tranquility. There are many hills on the route, which permit an even more beautiful view of the surrounding country, and the outcroppings of rock add much to the general picture.

The Blue Water Highway, the Ferguson Highway to Huntsville or even the finest stretches of No. 2 Highway along the St. Lawrence are commonplace by comparison to the northern roads winding through Peterborough County, Victoria County and the Haliburton Highlands at this time of the year.

Stiff frosts during the past ten days have started Nature on its annual task of painting the countryside, and the trees will look their best for at least another week.

Hastings Institute Appoints Delegate

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Oct. 6.—The October meeting of the Hastings Women's Institute held on Tuesday afternoon, was well attended and a great deal of business was transacted.

Mrs. J. A. Brown presided and Mrs. G. Fox led in the singing of the Institute Ode. Every member responded to the roll call on "How would you teach boys and girls the use of money?" Mrs. J. A. Brown answered by reading a poem on "Give Me a Penny."

Communications were read and matters pertaining to them dealt with as follows:

In response to an appeal made by a local doctor in regard to a child attending school who badly needed glasses, the institute supplied the need and a letter of gratitude was received from the mother.

The Belleville area convention was announced and will be held on Oct. 20 and 21. Mrs. R. King was appointed delegate from the branch with Mrs. J. A. Brown as alternate.

A letter from the department asking the branch if they were in favor of a national magazine for the Institute at 25 cents a copy resulted in a vote being taken. 73 per cent of the members were in favor of the paper and 66 per cent agreed to subscribe.

Plans were made to hold a 25 cent afternoon progressive euchre at the home of Mrs. Bert Preston of Asphodel on Oct. 17. All members are invited and have the privilege of inviting one or more guests. Mrs. O. Phillips as a convenor will have charge of transportation when cars will meet at the town hall at 1.45 p.m.

Mrs. G. Sine, leader of the project of buymanship, after thanking the members for chosing her as local leader, gave an instructive talk on the objective of the project, and the identification of fabrics from the standpoint of their names and appearance, also the weave and structure of fabrics.

The program in charge of Mrs. R. King, convenor, included a solo, "Pucked UP and Whistle All the While," by Mrs. G. Fox, with accompaniment on the guitar.

A recitation on "Uncle Hiram on City Life" by Mrs. Wallace Orr. Miss Flo German read a paper on "Pioneering, Past and Present", as given by Miss Bess McDermand at the 9th biennial convention of the Institute.

Mrs. Donald Pollock, a recent bride, was presented by Mrs. J. A. Brown with a cut-glass flower bowl, as a gift from the members, who present each bride from their Institute with a rememberance. Mrs. Pollock graciously thanked the ladies for their kindness before all gathered around the luncheon table for refreshments, provided by Mrs. A. V. German and Mrs. J. V. Findly.

Euchre was enjoyed during the first part of the evening and high score went to Marian Renwick who received a lovely pickle dish.

The presentation of the gifts was charmingly arranged by the hostess by a small umbrella hanging from the ceiling from which long colored streamers were attached. On the ends of these were small umbrellas, cups and saucers and bells on which a verse telling where each was.

Those present were: Mrs. A. McIntyre, Mrs. F. Elmhurst, Mrs. F. Nelson, Mrs. H. Garnet, Mrs. W. Redpath, Mrs. J. Gall, Mrs. C. McIntyre, Mrs. R. MacIntyre, Mrs. F. Graystock, Mrs. T. Hope, Mrs. C. Stone To Mark Grave Of "Beautiful Joe"

MEAFORD, Ont., Oct. 6—(CP).—Monuments and plaques have been erected around the world to great statesmen, famous cows and important historical events. Now the Meaford Women's Institute plans to mark the grave here of "Beautiful Joe," a dog.

Through the writings of Marshall Saunders, of Toronto, the story of "Beautiful Joe" became famous.

Many years ago a mongrel dog lived his span and died in Meaford. During puppyhood his ears were clipped. He was "just plain dog." Finally he found love and care so abundant that to cover up his misfortune and the tragedy of his appearance his mistress named him "Beautiful Joe."

Miss Saunders wrote about him in the book, "Beautiful Joe," and now the Women's Institute will immortalize him further. A stone will mark the resting place and a fountain will be erected where all dusty, weary dogs will be sure of a refreshing drink.

Two Ex-Ministers Seek Ottawa Seat

TORONTO, Oct. 6. — Arthur W. Roebuck, K.C., and David A. Croll, K.C., Legislature members for Toronto-Bellwoods and Windsor-Walkerville, and former members of the Hepburn Government, plan to retire from the Provincial field of politics and seek seats in the House of Commons, it was reliably reported at Queen's Park yesterday

They propose, it is said, to sit through the 1939 session of the Legislature, provided no Federal election is held before that time. Mr. Croll is being groomed, it is understood, for one of the Essex seats. Mr. Roebuck will probably contest one of the Toronto ridings now held by a Conservative, although he is said to have had offers of candidature from outside constituencies.

Press Control Laws Sterilize Soil Sustaining Democracy Sydney Newsman Contends

LONDON, Oct. 6—(CP). — Press control laws "sterilize the soil from which democracy derives its sustenance," H. P. Duchemin, K.C., managing director of Sydney Post-Record and president of The Canadian Press, said in address on "Our Free Newspapers" before the Canadian Club here to-day. Mr. Duchemin represented The Canadian Press in its successful appearance before the Privy Council against the Alberta Press Act.

That Act was described by the publisher as the most drastic Press Control Bill submitted to a British Legislature since the right of unlicensed printing was affirmed by the English House of Commons in 1695. Its provisions were "mandatory as well as prohibitive, its penal sections ruthless and crushing."

In the final analysis all press control laws involving either censorship or dictation of the printed word must be regarded as the efforts of established authority to direct and regiment the trend of human thought, Mr. Duchemin said. "It is an understatement that such laws are repugnant to democracy.....On the other hand the rigid, ruthless, effectual control of all printed publications is even more essential to a totalitarian state than the absolute command of its military forces."

Unwritten Foundation

Tracing the history of press freedom, Mr. Duchemin said in British countries liberty of the press rests solely but securely on an unwritten constitutional foundation. Press freedom was not mentioned in the bill of rights which followed the great revolution in 1689. It was not a subject of any of the Quebec resolutions which preceded Confederation, nor was it mentioned anywhere in the British North America Act.

Nevertheless, the liberty of the press was rooted in far stronger sanctions, was admittedly much more secure against attack, in the British commonwealth than in any of the countries where it was fortified by written code. This was so because it was "based on the vital postulate that representative institutions cannot exist in any country where the right of free public expression through the printed and spoken word is not conceded to every law-abiding citizen."

Nothing could be farther from the truth than the "distorted conception" that the liberty of the press means a monopoly for the newspapers, or an opportunity for protected publishers to prosecute a lucrative business.

Two Answers

"There are two conclusive answers to this," he said. "One is that the publishing business is not journalism in any more accurate sense than that the shipping business is navigation. The other is that journalists have precisely the same rights, are subject to precisely the same restrictions, in giving expression to their thoughts in public print, as belong to all their fellow citizens. The muzzling of the press might injure journalists but little and publishers not at all, but it would be subversive of a vital instrument of democracy and destructive of a priceless possession of the plain people."

News Vastly Improved

Few persons realized how wonderfully the newspapers of Canada had improved in the quality and scope of their service to the country since the years preceding the Great War. Their coverage of interprovincial news was incomparably better, more comprehensive, less discolored with the taint of propaganda, more accurate and informative than it ever was in the past. There were few papers left in Canada that could fairly be classed as party organs and still fewer, if any that did not place their sincere conception of the public weal above mere political considerations in their daily treatment of public questions.

The change for the better had been brought about by three main causes—the purge of the Great War, the trend toward newspaper mergers in small towns and the broadening influence of the cooperative exchange of news through the instrumentality of the Canadian Press.

Mr. Duchemin briefly outlined the structure and functions of The Canadian Press, explaining it is operated without any purpose of financial gain, is owned and controlled by the daily newspapers of the Dominion and is a "genuinely national institution in the most complete sense of the word."

The cooperative news gathering organziation had been in existence for 21 years as an unbroken Dominion-wide organization. it had kept step in step with the progress of the times, steadily enlarged the scope of its operations and "enabled the daily newspapers of Canada to gives a news service to the people of the country unsurpassed, if indeed equalled, in any other British dominion"

Free Radio Bulletins.

Mr. Duchemin explained that in conformity with its national character the Canadian Press supplies daily, free of charge but at considerable expense to its members, a seroes of news bulletins to the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, for emission over the national network of radio stations. It also furnishes three bulletins a day without charge to all the privately-owned stations willing to pay the very low telegraph tolls the communication companies had agreed to accept for transmission. Upwards of 25 commercial stations received this service.

"It would be difficult indeed to place anything like a just or adequate estimate on the educational value of the newspaper of Canada or to find any formula to measure the influence it exerts in the moulding of public opinion and in the building of an enlightened citizenship," he said.

"But is serves another and perhaps even higher function as the weapon of freedom among a free people. The stirring story of the long and finally triumphant struggle for liberty of the press belongs to past history. The duty of today, the task of the future, is to conserve that freedom by honoring its just limitation by cultivating that restraint which is the symbol of strength."

Policeman Blind From An Eclipse

CAPE TOWN, Oct. 6 (CP).—Suddenly going blind while on his beat a city policeman named Barnard was found by another officer groping his way along trying to find police headquarters.

Removed to hospital, the suggestion was made the case was one of "eclipse blindness," caused by watching the eclipse of the sun the day before without sufficient protection for the eyes. Blindness thus caused has often resulted in permanent loss of sight.

Fortunately, after four days' treatment, Barnard found that he could see, though imperfectly. Blindness returned at intervals of a few hours, accompanied by violent pains in the head; but after a day or two Barnard found his sight completely restored and there are hopes now that he has been permanently cured.

Black And White Markers For 1939 To Improve Visibility

TORONTO, Oct. 6. — The question of license plate visibility, subject of so many gusty storms of controversy in 1938, appears to have been ushered right out of the picture for next year at least, judging by a preview of the 1939 motor vehicle markers given by the Department of Highways yesterday.

The artistic has given way completely to the utilitarian in Ontario's selection of a color scheme for next year's markers, with white serial numbers on a jet black background replacing the current pale blue and paler rose combination. And yet in many respects the new plates are more artistic than any combination of more delicate hues in the past. They are certainly more legible.

Carry Same Gloss.

Manufactured in the shops of Guelph Reformatory, where their predecessors have been turned out for several years, the new plates will carry the same heavy enamel and high gloss of past markers. The process, it was explained, is perhaps a bit more expensive, but the extra expense is more than made up by the increased durability of the numerals, which in turn means the necessity of fewer replacements in the course of a year.

Sole concession to the arts in the 1939 marker is seen in the fact that, as in the past three years, the crown occupies a prominent place in the design. Embossed and enamelled in white, the crown appears at the top centre of the plate, flanked by the numerals "1939."

J. P. Bickell, Registrar of Motor Vehicles, who showed reporters the new plate, announced another innovation would also be introduced next year.

Doctors' Plates Treated.

Medical doctors, who in recent years have been accorded the distinction of serial numbers beginning with the letter "D," will have an extra distinction next year, for their license plates will be treated with a special sand-blasting process. By this process, small particles of glass will be blown onto the numerals until they are completely coated. Tests have indicated plates treated in this way are more easily visible at night, the glass particles serving as reflectors by catching the rays of approaching headlights.

The possibility remains that dust, collected on markers during travel over country roads, might interfere with the glass-coated numerals, and it was for this reason that all markers were not given the treatment this year. If the treated group stands up under use during the year, Mr. Bickell said, it was quite possible the process would be applied to all markers in 1940.

Motorists will not likely find 1939 markers available until much later this year than last, he said, and he intimated the new plates might not be distributed until after January 1.

Oregon Jersey Produces 1,020 Lbs. Butter Fat In Ten Months

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(AP). — A bright flag with 7 red-and-white stripes, a shield bearing three lions and a golden cow's head was hoisted high over grimy 23rd Street yesterday.

The display was by way of celebrating the feat of Sybil Tessie Lorna 996685, in producing 1,020.5 pounds of butter-fat in 10 months.

Lorna will be seven years old, come St. Valentine's Day and belongs to L. A. Hurlburt, Independence, Oregon, breeder. Her record has been certified by the Oregon State College of Agriculture.

The American Jersey Cattle Club broke out its banner to celebrate.

Lorna shattered not only the Jersey record but, the club boasted, captured the all-breed title, as well.

Testing 5.96 per cent. butter-fat, the 21.7 quarts of milk she gave each day would equal for the 10 months 3,440 pints of 50 per cent. cream, 2,652 pounds of American cheese or 7,472 quarts of ice cream.

LITTLE REST DAY OR NIGHT

Woman with Severe Neuritis

For the benefit of others who may be troubled with the complaint she suffered from, a grateful woman writes:—

"Last May I had a very severe attack of neuritis in the leg, which made it impossible for me to rest during the day, or to get regular sleep at night — to say nothing of the intense pain.

"Various medicines gave me very little relief, and a friend advised me to give Kruschen a trial, as she had derived benefit from it whilst suffering similarly. I am so thankful that I took her advice. From the very first bottle I felt relieved, and now I am quite free fron pain, and get a good night's sleep."—(Mrs.) H.C.

Neuritis, like rheumatism, lumbago, and sciatica, is often caused by needle-pointed uric acid crystals, which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs. Kruschen helps to convert those crystals into a harmless solution, which is removed through the natural channels.—Advt.

When Americans Fled From Europe

Obedient Americans who heeded the warning of U.S. Consular officials are shown on the R.R. station, Waterloo, awaiting the boat train that took them to the S.S. Queen Mary and home when war clouds became darker over Europe. Similar scenes were enacted at other European capitals, Paris, Berlin and Praha. To accommodate the rush of passengers it was necessary to set up beds in the Queen Mary's luxurious drawing room.

Campbellford Delegation Asks Granting Of No Further Land To Trent Valley Factory

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 6—Drawing the council's attention to the fact that the Trent Valley Cheese and Butter Company's plant on Mill Street operated on Sunday and was a general annoyance to them, a petition signed by a number of the neighboring residents requested that no further grants of land be made to the factory. It was urged that the erection of any further buildings on the west side of the road would not only "spoil their view of the river but would prevent the cool summer breezes which come from the water, from reaching their houses."

Reeve Calver pointed out that no further grants to Grant Anderson had been contemplated but that the motion on the books only called for a re-writing of the agreement already in force. However the matter was placed in the hands of the property committee who will bring in a full report at the next meeting.

Bylaw Is Passed

This was followed by a letter from the Bell Telephone Company asking council to invest in the chairman of the road and bridges committee full power to act on all matters pertaining to changes in poles and lines where the amount of expenditure did not exceed two hundred dollars. A draft of the necessary bylaw was enclosed, and this was duly passed after the council ammended the figure from two to one hundred dollars.

Requesting that a sewer be constructed to his residence on Ranney street, Joe Thaine asked that the levels of the existing sewer on Front street be taken in order to asctrain if it would be sufficient depth to drain his cellar. The matter was left with the road and bridges committee.

Stating that an additional eight feet on the east side and ten on the north and south sides had been graned by the department of canals for use at the Cenotaph, A. H. McKeel addressed the council saying that it was his intention to fill this additional land with about 60 yards of loam and requested the council to make a grant of $30.00 for this purpose. On motion of Councillor Donald and Reeve Calver, the request was granted.

The sewer and water main to the Separate School had been completed it was stated but the surface drainage was inadequate to carry water from the Nichol's property so the road and bridges committee were slated to conduct an investigation and make a report to the council with their recommendations.

Erect Warning Signal

Mrs. F. Cowell, Sebastopol street whose home borders on the curve which Sunday night caused a double accident, addressed the council urging that steps be taken immediately to place a more prominent warning signal on the street. But the plea, timely as it was came too late, for arrangements to purchase a new warning signal had already been made.

Orders were placed for six stop signs and two illuminated warning signals one of which is to be placed on the hazardous Sebastopol street curve.

Attacks County Council

Precipitating an outburst unprecedented in the history of the municipal council P. H. Macmillan launched an attack against the county council for failing to notify the local body of its intention to paint the bridge. Directing his remarks to the reeve he claimed that since the town would be assessed for 20 per cent of the cost the contract should have been advertised in Campbellford.

"I'm not on the road and bridge committee," replied the reeve somewhat coolly.

Still dissatisfied the councillor continued his barrage claiming that the old paint had not been properly removed nor the rust entirely scraped off nor was there any person on hand to see that the job was done properly.

Overhauling Needed

Councillor Battisby stated that another month had elapsed and asked what was the council's pleasure in the matter of retaining the services of an extra man on the police force. Although the general feeling of the council seemed to be in favor of retaining the services of both men and a motion was placed on the books authorizing the continuance of William Normington's services for the month of October, Councillor Macmillan claimed the force was in need of a thorough overhauling and suggested a special meeting be called "to go into the whole matter." Referring to what he termed "junk yards" and to the by-law which had been passed making it necessary for each to have a license he claimed that the Chief of Police should be instructed to enforce it and bring in a report in person at the next meeting.

"There are two such yards on Rear street and they are a disgrace to the town," declared Councillor Macmillan who went on to say that if they were not cleaned up "some of the citizens on Rear street are going to appear at the Court of Revision." It was at this juncture that the irate councillor turned to see a citizen in the front row of the gallery apparently smiling at his 'rhetoric'. Suspecting a lack of sympathy with his plight of living across the street from what he termed one of the "junk yards" the councillor directed a vehement tirade against the astounded citizen who was assured that it was no laughing matter and was invited to leave the chamber if he felt that way about it.

It was Mayor F. F. Long who broke the silence which fell over an equally astounded council with a reference to taxi licenses, claiming that although there were several conducting a taxi business in town there were but two who had complied with the by-law and secured licenses.

It was decided that the first meeting of the Court of Revision would be held on Oct. 24th and Mayor Long appointed Reeve C. H. Calver, Deputy Reeve Locke and Councillors Dorie, Donald and Battisby to sit on the Court.

Pussy In The Laundry

DENVER, Oct. 6 (AP)—Robert Salvato, a laundry weigher, heard a hissing snarling noise. When he opened the bag of wash at hand, out jumped a cat. Fluff, it was disclosed later by 10-year-old Jo Ann Hoffman, had been missing since a driver called for the Hoffman's laundry—three days before.

Newlyweds Honored By Bethany A.Y.P.A.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, Oct. 6. — The first meeting of the season of St. Mary's A.Y.P.A. Manvers parish was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ward, 8th Line on Tuesday evening, the Rev. A. R. Holden presiding.

It was decided to take cake and sandwiches to the visiting delegates to the provincial conference at Peterborough on the 20th.

The members agreed to pay the caretaker and also the interest and principal owing on the driving shed.

The retiring president, Ben Page, was presented a past president's gold A.Y.P.A. pin. The election of officers then took place as follows: President, Robert Reid; vice-president, Harold Page; treasurer, Gordon W. Smith; secretary, Marjorie Page.

The major item of interest was a very pleasing ceremony, when Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Staples were presented with a beautiful silver cake dish as a gift from the members of the A.Y.P.A. in honor of their recent marriage. It was particularly interesting as Lawrence, the young groom, was the first president of the society and his bride was the first secretary.

Ben Page read a very suitable address and Robert Sisson presented the gift.

Mr. Lawrence was completely taken by surprise but made a suitable acknowledgment of the lovely gift for himself and on behalf of his bride.

A contest on farming was won by Marjory Page and Robert Sisson.

A hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. and Mrs. Ward, and responded to by Mr. Ward who said a standing welcome would always be extended to the young people.

Auld Lang Syne was sung, concluding a very enjoyable meeting. The society will hold the next meeting at the Rectory on Oct. 19.

Railway Runs Again

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP).—Service on the Chicago, North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad was resumed today for the first time since August 16, when a strike caused suspension of operations. The electric line employs 1,300 persons and serves more than a score of suburbs between Chicago and Milwaukee. Operating employees quit work in protest against a 15 per cent. wage cut ordered by A. A. Sprague, receiver for the road.

Millbrook To Hear Lecture On Bulbs

MILLBROOK, Oct. 6.—Officers and directors of the Millbrook Horticultural Society met on Saturday evening at the home of their president, Mrs. W. C. Thorndyke. Mrs. G. F. Harrington, the secretary, read a letter from Mr. C. A. Cruickshanks of Toronto. The letter was in the form of an offer to address the local society on the culture of bulbs, and it was decided to have Mr. Cruickshanks lecture to them in the next month or so. The visit of Mr. J. Clark, lecturer from the Provincial Horticultural Society, will be postponed until the early spring.

The society are very proud of their junior team, which won the T. Eaton trophy at the district flower show, held at Newcastle, August 12th and the secretary was instructed to pay the sum of two dollars for the meals of the team while at Newcastle, on the motions of Miss Sutton and Mr. Kerr.

Moved by Mr. Kerr and seconded by Miss Needham that Mrs. Thorndyke, Mrs. H. Harrington and Miss J. Sutton be appointed as a comittee to oversee replanting and changing of the perennial beds was carried.

The kind offer of Mr. C. Lane of Valencia was accepted and the truck for the perennials offered by him free will be sent in a week or so. Arrangements were made for a meeting again this month.

Corn For Relief

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6 (AP). — Officials said today the United States Surplus Commodities Corporation would buy several million bushels of corn this fall and winter for processing into meal and other food products for relief families. The corn will be bought both in the open market and from the Commodity Credit Corporation, they said.

Czechs Sacrifice Lesson In Mind Loyalists Will Fight To End

BARCELONA, Oct. 6 (A.P.). — Julio Alvarez del Vayo, Spanish Government Foreign Minister, declared to-day that Government Spain was determined to avoid the fate of Czechoslovakia and to fight until the country is "free from foreign invasion."

In an address prepared for international broadcast Alvarez del Vayo asserted:

"The terrible and monstrous experience of what has taken place in Europe within the last few days has increased the Spanish people's resolution not to permit Spain to be sacrificed to the policy of capitulation."

This policy of capitulation, he said "menaces the existence of small nations and place European democracies in ever increasing danger of disappearing."

Two-Nation Plan Rejected.

(Spanish Government spokesmen in Paris said a plan to divide Spain into two nations, one a democracy and the other a dictatorship, had been broached to the Government, and rejected.

(The plan, which they indicated was brought up at the four-Power Munich accord which decided on partition of Czechoslovakia, was said to have been a part of international discussions aimed at ending the Spanish War as part of a general European settlement.)

Alvarez del Vayo said any permanent European peace must not be "obtained for some at the expense of the rest. Not a peace which one day gives away Austria and another Czechoslovakia and thus in succession all small countries to satisfy the insatiable appetite of aggressor state."

The Foreign Minister stated that "we are about to enter an extremely hard winter" and that "without generous aid from abroad thousands of women and children" will go hungry.

Time To Smile

LETHBRIDGE, Alta., Oct. 6—(CP).—J. H. Vaughn of the Jefferson district south of Lethbridge wore a broad smile to-day. Last June 6 a hailstorm laid low his crop when it stood knee-high and promised a good yield. Time passed and rain came with good growing weather. Now Vaughn has finished threshing and the once-hailed field yielded 41 bushels to the acre of No. 1 Northern wheat.

Get Wise to Constipation!

When you're constipated, it's a great temptation to be satisfied with quick relief. But physics may become a habit. And they don't keep constipation from returning. It's so much better to get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat what most people do, chances are the only thing the matter is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean how much you eat. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

What to do? Eat a little Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. This crunchy toasted cereal is not only rich in "bulk"—it also contains the natural intestinal tonic, vitamin B_1. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Sold by every grocer.

The treasurer's report showed the receipts of the Institute tag day to be $16.05. There was no report from the relief committee. Mrs. Williams gave the report of the sick and visiting committee.

The needlecraft course was postponed until Nov. 21 to 25th, due to the illness of the instructress, Miss Frisch.

Milk For School Pupils

The Institute decided to resume the practice of supplying milk to lower classes in the Havelock Public School, beginning on November 1.

A motion picture record of the Institute meeting and the executive was made during the afternoon by Frank Carlton and son of Toronto, who are at present taking pictures in the village and surrounding district.

A very interesting program was presented under the convenorship of Mrs. A. Anderson. Interesting current events were described by Mrs. H. W. Roche, touching on the subjects, "Sunday Observance," "The Queen's Voice," and paying tribute to Prime Minister Chamberlain.

The short course in "care of clothing" project, was given by Mrs. Clare Price, with suitable demonstrations and showing of various clothing necessities. A very delightful vocal solo, entitled "Thanks Be To God" was rendered by Miss Edith Roberts, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. George Iles.

Mrs. Anderson gave a very fine paper on Thanksgiving concluding with an appropriate verse entitled, "A Woman Counts Her Blessings."

Refreshments were afterwards served by Mrs. R. F. Covert, convenor, assisted by Mesdames Thompson, Roche, Williams and Brown.

Strikes Up Pole

ANDERSON, Ind., Oct. 6 (AP).—J. G. Stafford, wandering steeplejack, was on a sitdown strike against Madison County commissioners on a flagpole on top of the courthouse here today, 250 feet above the street. He shouted to about 100 persons looking up from the public square that the commissioners had cheated him out of $150 of $350 they had contracted to pay him for painting the courthouse dome and clock last June.

Berries Thriving

GALT, Ont., Oct. 6—(CP).—Raspberries of the "Bronx" type are always in season, but Robert Kerr can't understand why the real thing is growing so well at this time of the year. He picked a branch in his garden with a cluster of 14 on the tip, and half of them were good to eat.

MILLBROOK

Presentation Made To Pearl Burnham

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 6. — To honor one of the village's most outstanding citizens, Miss Pearl Burnham, bride-elect for early this month, thirty Millbrook ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. J. McKnight, Tupper Street, on Tuesday afternoon. Their hostess, Mrs. McKnight, received in the hall, assisted by Mrs. F. J. Smith, who ushered the guests into the living-room, where Mrs. McKnight's mother, Mrs. L. E. Locke, greeted them.

The guest of honor was asked to sit in a satin-beribboned chair under the huge wedding bell in the centre of the room, and an address was read by Mrs. F. J. Smith, and the presentation of the tri-light floor lamp in bronze and cream was made by Mrs. J. McKnight.

Miss Burnham feelingly expressed her gratitude for their gift and good wishes. Good wishes were expressed by Mrs. L. H. Rea, Mrs. A. L. Sisco, Miss J. R. Eakins, Mrs. P. Stinson, Mrs. C. Westmacott, and Miss Blanche Clarry.

Dainty refreshments were then served in the dining-room from the table, a picture of silver and lace, centered by a basket of asters, flanked by tall white tapers. Mrs. L. E. Locke poured from the beautiful silver service, with Mrs. F. J. Smith and Mrs. J. H. McKnight assisting in the serving. A pleasant social hour was spent before the departure for home.

Daily Family Worship In Homes Far From General United Church Rally Is Told

The percentage of Christian families who say grace before their meals and have family prayers daily is ridiculously small, Rev. George S. Easton of Trinity United Church declared in a brief inaugural address to delegates attending the Presbytery meeting of United Churches of Peterborough at St. Andrew's church Wednesday afternoon.

He explained that the special sessions were being held to begin the "Quarter Million Fellowship", which seeks to enroll that number in a fellowship of worship, prayer and service for the next ten weeks of the year. He pointed out that day about one sixth of the congregation of each church, contributed to the support of the church, the missions and also that the percentage who attended public worship regularly was very small.

At three in the afternoon a brief business session was held presided over by the chairman of the Presbytery, Rev. M. C. Parr, and with the Rev. J. R. Trumpour as secretary. Rev. Andrew McLauchlin of Havelock, press secretary of the Bay of Quinte Conference was appointed to a smilar position in the Presbytery. An application to enter the Ministry of the United Church of Canada was received from Rev. M. I. Johnson, pastor of the Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, Kankakee in the Illinois Conference, who is a Canadian having taken part of his training at Victoria College, Toronto. The application was referred to the Pastory Relations Committee.

Three speakers gave ten minute talks on the three phases of the crusade, worship, Prayer and service. Rev. F. W. Newell said no church can be effective if only half of its members are attending. One of the elements most sadly lacking today is the joy of worship, said the speaker. We have a host who attend church because they feel it a duty but they fail to display much reverence or enthusiasm." The church is still the place of religious privilege and not just a place for spectators.

Rev. C. L. Brown of Springville spoke on prayer and declared that nothing was impossible if the 600 million Christians in the world united in prayer for a common cause, and added this was borne out by the peaceful solution of the European crisis. He pointed to the fact that in the United church there were 700,000 members who could do great good if they entered wholeheartedly into the crusade.

Lee Copp, school inspector, spoke on service and giving and said that harmony in the church is the first step towards more generous giving. He described the extent and manifold activities of the workers in the mission fields and said if people were aware of what missionary work entailed they would be far more generous in making contributions.

Sixty people attended the banquet held in the basement of the Sunday School building in the evening and Dr. J. E. Middleton, chairman. In introducing the crusade to the men and women he stated, "We are all debtors to the church and we should repay this debt by supporting the church." He made a plea that every parent make an enthusiastic contribution to the crusade by putting the teachings of the church to work in the home, and by acquainting themselves thoroughly with the work the church is doing.

Rev. George S. Easton, said "It is time the people were putting their shoes on Sunday morning instead of their slippers." He outlined the purposes of the crusade and said the best work would only be accompanied by a house to house canvass of the entire congregation.

Following the supper meeting the members adjourned to the church where Rev. E. W. Young, conducted a worship service, after Rev. Max Parr, of George Street United church, who held a short public meeting.

The first speaker on the evening program was the Rev. T. T. Faichney, M.A., B.D., Tientsin, China, who gave a remarkable address on the heroic struggles being made by the courageous missionaries in war torn China and among the masses of India.

"Chiang Kai Shek, number one warlord of China is fast becoming China's number one Christian, and has asked the missionaries to find God for his people." This scholar and soldier according to the speaker spends one hour each day along with his wife in prayer and worship and recently two books both written by the Rev. Stanley Jones, a missionary were flown to Chiang at his request. They were "Christ and Suffering" and "Victorious Lining."

"Thirty universities and high schools in China have been bombed burned or otherwise destroyed by the advancing Japanese troops. The Japs are attempting to kill all of the Christian Chinese so that only the hewers of wood and drawers of water will be left, he said. The teaching personnel and many students from the ruined universities have gone to the University at Chentu where they are being housed and cared for by the United Church of Canada.

He described an incident in which a large Chinese congregation left a church, and each carried the Bible open in their hands, reading it as they left the building, because they expected to be slaughtered by the Japs who had taken the city. The invaders however were impressed by this display of religious fervor and spared the Chinese. This incident took place in Honan province.

The missionaries stay behind with the Chinese people in the areas occupied by the Japs, and because the soldiers flee and the clergymen remain to safeguard the lives of their charges, the church is making great progress. "Our difficulty is not in getting Christians but of choosing the most desirable to baptize and instruct," he declared.

"The time is ripe when we should mobilize our forces to extend the Kingdom of God."

Referring to conditions in India, Rev. Faichney said, "There is a golden opportunity to triple the membership of the church by converting the millions of "untouchables" in India." Three missionaries should be sent out there at once, but instead of this, the missionary department heads in India get repeated instructions to reduce their expenditures."

In stressing the great need for missionaries in India, the speaker explained in detail the philosophy of this race prior to being Christianized, and said in part: "Those who have accepted Christianity have shown three marked changes, first, they have obtained freedom from superstition, second they have voluntarily given up drinking and gambling and last they realize that life at last has a purpose. "There is a bumper crop, but the reapers are few," he said in conclusion.

Rev. A. D. McKinnon, Ph.D., D.D., of Caribou, B.C., spoke briefly following the banquet in humorous vein and was the last speaker on the evening program.

He made an appeal for more support of the United Church missions and described the work of the clergymen and students on Canada's north-western frontier. He has spent the past eighteen years in Caribou, a district 250 miles north of Vancouver in the interior of British Columbia and his territory consists of 45,000 square miles of wild country. Three churches have been built and many school buildings are utilized as places of worship in centres where this is the only suitable building.

Clergymen who attended the session are as follows: Revs. C. L. Brown, F. W. Craik, G. S. Easton, C. H. Ferguson, F. Horton, G. F. Kelly H M. Malcolm, F. S. Ferguson, A. McLauchlin, R. M. McMullin, F. W. Newell, E. W. Rowland, A. L Sisco, J. R. Trumpour, H. Wilkinson, J. W. Wilkinson, E. W. Young, and V. E. R. Zufelt.

Defence Called In Settler's Murder Trial

COCHRANE, Ont., Oct. 6.—(CP).—Defence testimony will be heard by Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier and a Supreme Court jury here today in the case of Danny O'Keefe, 65-year-old Calder township farmer, charged with the murder of Felix Couture, a fellow settler, last April 6.

The Crown wound up its case late yesterday afted two witnesses had testified O'Keefe had shot Couture with a charge from a 16-gauge shotgun during an altercation over removal of wood from a timber lot near Driftwood, 18 miles west of Cochrane. Medical evidence was that Couture had died of loss of blood.

From Paul Szwedo, with Couture at the time he was shot, the jury heard that O'Keefe lifted the gun from the woodpile and shot Couture after exclaiming: "I will give you something now." Willard Anderson, at the scene with O'Keefe, testified his friend fired the gun after saying: "If you don't stop, I'll stop you."

According to the evidence Couture, teamster for a pulpwood buyer and merchant at Driftwood, J. M. Charpentier, arrived at the timber lot on the morning of the shooting with a team of horses to draw wood. O'Keefe previously had a sub-contract for the work let by Charpentier.

Anderson testified O'Keefe had warned Couture three times not to take any of the wood. Couture was 15 feet away from O'Keefe when the shot was fired, he said, adding that when he saw the wounded man drop he thought he had only been frightened. Couture staggered 170 yards before he dropped.

Benes Resigns To Aid New Regime Confident Better Era Ahead

PRAGUE, Oct. 6.—(AP).—Eduard Benes' letter resigning the presidency of Czechoslovakia, read to the nation in a broadcast yesterday by Premier Jan Syrovy, follows:

The eventful three years of my presidency have culminated in the very sad events of these last few days.

They have weighed upon our spirits and our hearts but they have not broken our faith or our ideals toward our people, our nation and our state—ideals which have inspired and which always will inspire our people.

These historic events have changed the whole basis of our existence. I have played such a large part in these developments that I have had to consider seriously what should be my duty under the changed conditions.

I came to office under circumstances which were entirely different and I must take this fact into account. Circumstances have changed so completely that I feel that my remaining in office might constitute an obstacle to the new conditions which now confront this State.

This is chiefly in regard to the international situation and with a view to rapid development of a collaboration with our neighbors.

Sure Regime To Succeed.

We have now constituted a new government which will be a government of calm, of order, of economic efforts and of social reconstruction—a government which will aim chiefly at internal development and I am convinced it will succeed in its efforts.

But I realize that in these new conditions it is essential for me to withdraw from office. That does not mean that I evade my responsibility in this difficult situation or that I am leaving a vessel that is in a storm.

I only wish to facilitate the development of the policy of the government, both in external and internal affairs.

That is why I place my resignation in your hands, Mr. Prime Minister, in order that you may take the necessary steps which the situation calls for.

I thank you and your colleagues for your collaboration and I wish you every success. I am fully convinced that a better period is before us, a period of successful labor and of prosperity for the new state and for all our Czechoslovak people.

Pays 22-Year Bill

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa., Oct 6 (A. P.). — A woman walked into Milton Jaffe's store and paid a bill she had owed 22 years. Jaffe had forgotten the account, but the woman reminded him it was for painting her house. "It troubled my soul," she said, "but now—I'm really happy."

Canadian Painting Show To Go On

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(CP).—Because the leaders of Europe's four great powers decided against war over the Czechoslovak question, an exhibition of 200 Canadian paintings will go on at the Tate Gallery in London Oct. 15.

For a while there was fear in art and official circles in London that the "five tons" of paintings from the Dominion would be exposed to bombardment from the skies, it was disclosed here to-day.

Arthur Lismer, distinguished Canadian painter who recently left a post as educational director of the Art Gallery of Toronto to become Professor of Fine Arts at Teachers' College, Columbia University, relayed the information to the Canadian Press.

Mrs. Lismer received the report from an official of the National Gallery at Ottawa, who told of the reluctance of the Duke of Kent to officially open the Canadian Art Show, if by doing so he might mark the exhibit for destruction by enemy bombing planes. After the Munich accord, however, fear passed away.

More than 11,000 tons of peat briquettes were made in Denmark this year.

Building activities in the provinces of Lituania have given work to the idle from towns.

In Kick Formation How To Place Your Men To Protect The Kicker

By LEW HAYMAN

KICK FORMATION

In today's diagram for the kick formation the positions shown are those taken up by the players at the start of the play. The line is balanced with the outsides spread. I am assuming one of the halfbacks is doing the kicking. If the kicker should be one of the linemen, one of the halfs will naturally take his place in the line. But with a half kicking, the quarter, three halfs and flying wing, take the position numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5.

The front backs (1 and 2) take their positions behind the middles and fairly close to the line. The front back on the right (2) is responsible for the first man through on the outside of his own middle. As the ball is snapped he moves forward with his inside foot, and then pivots out, making sort of an extended broken line. He must make sure an opponent does not come through between the line and himself. ALWAYS FORCE THE RUSHER TO TAKE AN OUTSIDE COURSE. Stay inside your opponent and use a shoulder block to deflect him outwardly and KEEP HIM AWAY FROM THE KICKING LANE. The kicking lane is shown in the diagram by the dotted lines extending back from the outside of the inside wings. Opponents MUST BE KEPT OUT of this territory.

The back man on the right (4) is responsible for the second man that comes in outside his own middle. He takes a position immediately behind the foot of No. 2 that is nearest him. As the ball is snapped he too takes a step with his inside foot and then pivots out. DON'T BACK UP. You may get in the path of the kicker. It is important to watch that you don't go too far out of your original position or an opponent may slip in between you and the other man blocking on your side.

The front back on the left (1), stations himself behind his own left middle and looks after the opponent opposite his own middle, who goes down under the kick. The arrows show that the left middle and the two outsides do no blocking, but go down under the kick.

The back blocker on the left (3), is responsible for the first man to the left of his own middle, stepping in and blocking outwardly, always keeping in mind that the KICKING LANE MUST BE KEPT CLEAR.

Where the opposition is ganging any particular area it is up to the kicker to move his blockers to meet the situation. Sometimes it may be necessary to have three backs block on one side and only one on the other. At all time however, the BLOCKING IS FROM THE INSIDE OUT, so as to make your opponents go around the kicking lane.

With the snapping of the ball the outsides and left middle go down the field to make the tackle. Linemen block in their positions, NEVER LEAVING THE GROUND ON WHICH THEY STAND. This prevents being pulled out of position by a decoy so as to allow another player to get at the kicker.

Don't leave to go down the field until the ball has been kicked.

The important job is to protect the kicker so his kick will not be hurried or blocked. Once the ball is kicked everyone goes down for the tackle, the safety man remaining behind for a return kick.

Lets look at the placement kick diagram now. The important point is to get the kick away. A placement that goes for a field goal can't be run back, so protecting the kicker is the only thing that has to be done.

The backs block in the same way as for an ordinary kick formation, except that one man is required to hold the ball. Therefore two men are left on the right side if your kicker hoofs with his right foot, two on the left if he hoofs with his left.

On the line, everyone plays tight and blocks, even the outsides. A solid wall must be maintained from end to end until the ball is in its flight. Keep those men out of the kicking lane!

TOMORROW I'll go over the forward pass...how to throw it.

Ball Playoffs Here Saturday

The Ontario Baseball Association senior finals open here in Peterborough this Saturday afternoon at three o'clock in Riverside Park with Stratford Nationals meeting the Petes. Return game will be in Stratford on Monday, third tilt (if it's necessary) being decided upon later. A record crowd of fans from the city, district and throughout Central Ontario, is expected here Saturday to see the Petes' bid for a provincial championship — their first one — in the final local ball game of the season. It should be a highly exciting and important contest between the two finalists after a long season of campaigning throughout Ontario.

It is possible that the Nationals will start their lefthander, who trounced Toronto handily at home in the first of their semi-final series. They also have a good righthand veteran slabsman. It is uncertain what pitcher Manager Eddie Murphy will pick for this fray, four of the local twirlers being ready to go in. Lefty McNally or Russ Kitchen appear the most likely, but Gunner Whitehill and Joe Jakafby are also possibilities. With the Nats not being considered good curve-ball clouters, Kitchen might get the call. Both teams will be at full strength for the championship series.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

OSHAWA and P.C.I. senior school gridders tangle here at two o'clock Saturday aft in the Exhibition Grounds. Looks like the P.C.I. rugbyists have no luck at all, and they are starting right where they left off last year as far as having to buck rival sports attractions here goes. Their last local game was in December of '37 when they won the Ontario title, and they had to play it at the Oval—owing to the Orfuns' game at Riverside that day. Now they open the '38 home season at the Ex., as the Petes have a ball game at Riverside Park. But, as it's at two, fans can see half the grid opener and still take in the ball fray, if they wish. It should be a fine football fixture, wide-open and full of exciting action. The junior P.C.I.-ers tackle Oshawa in the morn at 10 in the Exhibition Grounds, too.

ORFUNS will take a squad of about 25 players to Montreal for their O.R.F.U. senior opener on Thanksgiving Day. The gang will leave the local "Y" by bus at three Sunday afternoon, eating in Port Hope and taking the 5.14 C.N.R. for the French-Canadian metropolis. Arrive there around 10.30 or so that night, and will park at the Queen's Hotel. After the game Monday afternoon, they will leave about 11.30 at night and get home around seven Tuesday morning. A lengthy and expensive journey, with another long one to Sarnia on Nov. 12th.

It Looks Quite Rude

SPEAKING of Sarnia's move to do away with the huddle in rugby, the Ottawa Journal columnist strikes a responsive cord in our ticker with this: "Our own objections to the huddle are primarily based on aesthetic grounds. There may be other less beautiful sights in sport than a dozen broad-beamed athletes bent over in a collective keyhole attitude but if so we've missed them. There's something shame-faced in this secret head-to-head session and, sitting back in the stands, you have the feeling that when players pull out of it they're wearing slyly apologetic expressions marching back into position. It's a preliminary out of tune with a jarring line smash or a swift clean end sweep."

SO MUCH GOING ON in local sports—for the supposedly quiet autumn season—that our old think-tank will hardly turn over. Guess the battery—like that of the Cubs—is run down. We'd get it charged up, but our credit is getting wobbly. Maybe we'd better place a fin or so on the Petes to take Stratford here Saturday and in the O.B.A. final series. It looks like a good bet to us, with Lefty McNally the probable starting pitcher for the Murphyites. Should be a great ball game, with a record crowd witnessing the locals' bid for an Ontario senior ball title. The Nats have a southpaw and a righthand hurler, so we dunno which one will start. Second game is in Stratford Monday, third being decided upon later, if necessary.

The Yanks Are Coming

OVER 40,000 BASEBALL FANATICS froze and fumed—quite a stunt at the same time—in Chicago yesterday i nthe huge house built on profits from chewing gum as N'Yawk Yankees took a 3-1 World Series opener from the Cubs. Looks like the Yanks all the way and the series should never go the limit of seven games, regardless of today's result. Diz Dean and Goofy Gomez—two high-soundin' nicknames, what?—were slated to take the slabs today. Yesterday's fray sounded like a good one, with the Yanks having an edge in fielding, hitting, pitching and luck. A narrow edge. The Cubs have not enough baseball brains to worry the great diamond machine which the Ruppert beer dividends put together. Red Ruffing had a little twirling margin on General Lee Wednesday, and Bill Dickey got four hits for the Yanks as Hack hammered out three for the Cubs. Tomorrow is an open day in the playoff schedule. Wonder what ball fans would say if most of the teams in each of the Big Leagues were worked in on a Stanley Cup serial!

LACROSSE FANS here will now be treated to the unusual but highly gratifying sight of an Ontario final series in Peterborough. And it starts tomorrow eve at 8.30 in the George St. arena between Wallaceburg and the Petes. Second game will be Monday (unless it is switched) in the Western Ontario town and third, if necessary, to be decided upon later. It is for the 1938 O.L.A. senior "B" championship, these teams being the lone survivors of a long, gruelling season in the gutted stick sport. A huge crowd of fans will be on deck to see the local gamesters as they whirl into action in the last series to cop a provincial pennant. Some of our lads are limping painfully and many are bearing bruises and cuts, but it is expected a full team will be on hand Friday eve. Dunno how good the Wallaceburg squad is, but you can't make Ontario finals without something.

So Now It Gives Finals

PETES WIPED OUT the Inglewood-Caledon Combines in Lindsay last gloaming before about a thousand cash customers, and they earned the nod all the way. Had to battle hard in a fast, exciting and good display of senior "B" lacrosse, but the gang from here showed superiority. Coach Frank Randle shook up the team somewhat and handled his substitutes in efficient manner to get the most out of his battle-scarred gallants. They turned in a whale of an effort, with Red Creighton, Buster Whitton, Mike Loucks, Chute and Westonfelt our choices—though all were good. Referees solemnly measured all sticks before the fray, accompanied by the ribald remarks of a partisan crowd. 'Twas a better game than the Brooklin final.

• • • • • •

A MOST SERIOUS ACCIDENT almost befell Red Creighton, the Petes' starry lacrosse goalie, during the second half of the joust last e'en. After blocking a bunch of hot blasts, the local pepper-pot suddenly pounded up the floor in one of his pulsating and colorful rushes that always yanks yells from tired tonsils. Red had passed the centre of the field when he suddenly stopped dead, let the ball trickle away and made a frantic stab at his back—just in the nick of time as his pants threatened to fall off! There was a stunned silence around and a startled look on Red's pan and then, as he hurriedly repaired to the players' bench for repairs, gales of laughter swept the place. The reinforced Red remained in his little cord citadel the rest of the fray —and he will never come closer to a calamity before a mixed audience than he was last eve!

Lakefield High Downs Grove 27-5 In First 6-Man Rugby Tilt

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 6.— The first game of six man football to be played in this district was fought out between the recently organized Lakefield High School team and a Grove squad, on the gridiron at the Lakefield Preparatory School on Wednesday afternoon.

The Lakefield High School team, which is coached by W. F. Munro, assisted by E. H. Brohman, and which is attempting to introduce 'six man' football in the district, showed the effects of consistent practice since the beginning of the school term, and defeated the Grove School team, who are less familiar with the new game, by a score of 27 to 5.

The slippery condition of the field on Wednesday made playing conditions very poor, more particularly since the new game substitutes running shoes for the cleated rugby boots, so that it was impossible to use running plays to any extent. The High School's forward pass plays clicked very well despite the slipperiness.

Don Yale, a new member on Lakefield's team, scored four touchdowns during the game. One of these counters was tallied when he caught a punt on his own 20 yard line and ran the length of the field for a touch.

Francis Loyst did some forward passing of a high calibre, and his placement kicks were consistently good. Yale kicked several single points for the High School.

The linemen performed their duties in good fashion.

Particularly noticeable was the outstanding play of the new members of the High School team, in a game when the whole team put on a creditable showing.

Potts and Pease played a good game for the Grove school, who put up a valiant struggle.

Playing Two Games.

"We cannot hope to go into six man football intensively this year," Mr. G. W. Smith, coach of the Grove, told the Examiner, "because we must keep up our rugby practice in order to compete in the usual inter-school games with Trinity College Schools and St. Andrew's Collegiate, who as yet are sticking to the older game."

"Our lads are keen on the game," Mr. W. F. Munro, the High School coach, reports. "It is a game designed to bring along young and promising talent because of the great number of running and passing plays," he continued. "It teaches the recruits the importance of the fundamentals of the game, tackling, blocking and kicking. Because the game is played in running shoes, injuries are cut down tremendously, which is one of the main reasons for the popularity of the game in the United States, where it was given birth in 1934. Six man football was first introduced into Eastern Canada in 1937, by the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union, after it had proved itself very popular across the American border.

"Four twelve minute periods, each separated by a five minute rest period, make up a game, and four alternates are all allowed on a team. Because the game is somewhat faster than rugby the five minute rest period between cantos is essential."

"We are looking forward to meeting a Peterborough team in the near future," Mr. Munro said in conclusion.

The line-up follows:

Lakefield High School—

Bob Brown—Snap.

Geo. Tanner, Chester Windsor—Ends.

F. Loyst—Quarter-back.

Grads Hold Cup In Conquest Of Thurstons

EDMONTON, Oct. 6.—(CP)—Edmonton Grads' hold on the Underwood International Women's Basketball trophy they have retained since 1923 is safe for another year following their conquest of Wichita Thurstons in straight games.

Grade came from behind in the fourth quarter last night to defeat the Kansans 33-29 in the third game of the best-of-five series. Grads won the first 41-27 and the second 43-22 in making their fourth successful defence of the trophy this year. No other challenges are pending.

Fear Grads would have to disband was banished by Coach J. Percy Page after the game. Mr. Page, who two weeks ago warned his team was not getting sufficient financial support, told the biggest crowd to watch his team play this year.

LOCAL LACROSSERS RUB OUT THE COMBINES BY AN 11-5 SCORE

Petes Win Deciding Game Over Inglewood-Caledon To Enter Ontario Finals

The Petes pranced into the O.L.A. senior "B" finals last night in Lindsay when they eliminated the Inglewood-Caledon by an 11-5 score before a thousand noisy fans. It was the deciding game of their two-in-three group playoffs, and the local lacrossers now meet Wallaceburg. The first of this three-game series for the title is here Friday night.

After a tight first frame, the Peterborough gang swept to the fore and added a little to their lead in each succeeding stanza. They looked superior on the night's play, but had to battle hard throughout. It was a speedy, exciting match—better than the last Brooklin game—with good lacrosse shown and some hard checking in every heat. Only eight penalties were handed out, mostly for slashing.

Fast-breaking combination plays gave the winners their margin, as both sides covered their checks efficiently and both goalies were hard to beat. The score was 4-3 for Coach Randle's bunch in the initial inning, 7-3 for them at halftime and 10-4 going into the fourth chukker. The Petes took it easy in the final frame, keeping possession of the ball a good part of the time.

Look Battered

It was a battered looking bunch of Petes that went into this crucial contest, with Don Crowe and Norm Worthy limping on bad legs, Pete King an absentee, and most of the regulars wearing bandages over cuts from their gruelling games previous to last night. But they had the spirit and always looked like winners, while the other squad fought back gamely and made it most interesting but hadn't the same ginger to their play. The referees measured the sticks of both teams before the tilt began.

Outstanding for the Petes in this fray were Red Creighton, Jack Westonfelt, Buster Whitton, Mike Loucks and Rowan Chute. These players turned in a fine performance when they were on, both defensively and on the attack. The rest of the squad were close behind in efficiency, all the players looking good. Puckering was an individual standout for the losers, with Chambers in goal, Walsh, Raeburn and the Harris boys all dangerous throughout. The fans booed the losers regularly, remembering the trickery used—because of sticks not according to regulation—in the second game of the series.

The teams:

Combines: Goal, Chambers; defence, Wilson and Puckering; centre, Walsh; wings, Jones and Patterson rover, Raeburn; alternates, H. Harris, G. Harris, Gowland, Hall, Nelson, Coulter, McConnell.

Petes: Goal, R. Creighton; defence, Westonfelt and G. Creighton; centre, Dundas; wings, Whitton and Loucks; rover, Worthy; alternates, Magee, Crowe, Vitarelli, Reid, E. Creighton, Chute and Miller.

Referees, G. Thoms and B. Leighton.

Gabby Orders Diz To Square Series But The Great Dean Is Mum After Seeing Yanks Turn On Power

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 — (AP). — Knocked silly by Yankee power and stifled by Yankee pitching in the opening game of the World Series, Chicago Cubs place what little trust they have left today in the ailing right arm of the once-great Dizzy Dean.

If Dizzy, a world series hero back in 1934, can summon for one more afternoon the wizardry that once belonged to him, there is a thin chance that the Cubs can beat this great Yankee machine and make a fight of the championship.

But it is not a proposition to bet on. Even the verbose Dizzy was shocked into comparative silence when manager Gabby Hartnett told him last night that he would send him out there to silence the Yankee bats and square the series. For once, Dizzy who opposes Lefty Gomez today, wasn't making any predictions.

Dizzy got an impressive eye-full of the Yankees as they slugged 12 hits in taking the opener, 3-1.

Dean faces them today with a fighting heart still as big as a gallon jug, and there is something a little exciting about his being out there trying to hold down one of the most murderous collections of hitters in history with only his control and a fair curve ball.

Gomez Out Today

What chance the Cubs had of beating the Yanks was tied up in Lee. Now it looks more or less hopeless, barring a collapse of the American leaguers, and that is difficult to imagine. In Lefty Gomez they have a pitcher for today's game who has won five straight world series starts, and for the third game on Saturday in Yankee Stadium they have Monte Pearson, who was good enough to fling a no-hit, no runner a short time back. However, Dean fares today, the Cubs must call upon Clay Bryant, a speedy but nervous young righthander in the third tussle.

The Yankees are enough to make a pitcher sick. If they aren't the best all-round ball club there ever was, you couldn't prove it by the 43,642 chilled fans who watched them perform yesterday. It wasn't that Lee didn't pitch good ball, or that the Cubs didn't field brilliantly for the most part and go down swinging from their boot-straps. It was just that the Yankees were a little better in every department.

Rufus "Red" Ruffing was touched for nine hits, which is not exactly phenomenal pitching. Yet it seemed that every time the Cubs got a man on base and looked like they might do something, either Frankie Crosetti, the Yankee shortstop, or Joe Gordon the champions' great rookie second-baseman, would come up with a dazzling stop and throw to spike the rally. Gordon, playing his first world series game, hit a double and a single and made one stop off Rip Collins that was sheer robbery.

The Turning Point

National league partisans, second-guessing today, claimed that the failure of Phil Cavaretta, Cubs right-fielder, to peg the ball in to second after Dickey hit the first of his four singles in the second inning, instead of making a futile attempt to head Lou Gehrig off at third, was the turning point of the game.

If he had thrown out Dickey at second base, they point out, then two Yankees would have been retired and only Gehrig would have scored when Bill Herman booted Selkirk's grounder and Gordon singled on the next two plays. However, that sounds like quibbling, for the Yankees counted again on Tommy Henrich's double and Dickey's single in the sixth, and that would have made the final score 2-1, anyway.

Stan Hack, leading hitter of the Chicago team, lived up to his record by collecting three singles, seco[nd] of which drove across Rip Collins with the lone run for the losers. Gabby Hartnett, playing with two painfully damaged fingers, supplied the home fans with their biggest thrill when his drive into right field got past Henrich for a three-bagger.

About the only consolation the Cubs had was that they stopped Joe Dimaggio without a hit. Bucky Harris, manager of the Washington nats, noted the fact and whistled: "Boy, I'll bet that made Joe sore. Watch what he does to them from here on."

Just a Few Laughs The Cubs Gave Eavesdroppers

Chicago, Oct. 6 (AP)

EAVESDROPPING on the Chicago Cubs as they prepared to square off against the New York Yankees in the second game of the World Series:

Dizzy Dean—"I'll flatten 'em."

Gabby Hartnett — "They're afraid of us now, gang. We will have them on the run."

Bill Lee—"I'll get 'em next time —right in their own ball yard."

(Smiles and chuckles were the Yanks' form of comment.)

Blues Win 9 to 8 Over Bears In Fourth Game

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 6.—(AP).—It will be a case of "1st George do it" when Kansas City Blues seek to break a two-all deadlock by winning the fifth game of the Little World series from Newark Bears to-night.

Husky George Washburn pitched to just one Newark batter last night, but was credited with the 9-8 Blue victory which squared the series, and Manager Bill Meyer is going to let George try to make it two in a row to-night.

A paid crowd of 15,272 was treated to all varieties of baseball in the first game on the Blue lot last night, and when the firing had ceased a total of 28 hits, including nine doubles, one triple and one home run, had bounced from the bats of the two clubs; six errors had blotted the box score, and seven pitchers had passed in review.

For six innings it was an air-tight ball game, with Kemp Wicker of the Blues and Atley Donald of Newark keeping everything pretty well under control.

Things began to happen in the seventh, and they never stopped until Joe Gallagher puffed his way over the plate for the winning run with two down in the last of the ninth.

Donald was through at the end of the sixth. Wicker lasted nearly eight, and to fill out the rest of the brackets page, Strincevich and Stine worked for the Bears, with Stine the losing hurler and Maksosky and Washburn saw duty for Kansas city.

Nationals Make Grid Debut In Strong Team

Stressing interference and timing, Coach Hoddy Foster began his last week of instructions and drill before the Montreal Nationals open their O.R.F.U. schedule against Peterborough Orphans here next Monday.

Nats have been without competition for the past week and Coach Foster says the boys will have to bear down to be in top condition for the league opening.

Foster was quite happy at last nights' workout at Alexandra Park when Len Hutton who has been out for some time with an arm injury, turned out in heavy clothes.

Dave Ryan, who has been on the sidelines with a muscular ailment for the past few days, also turned out for drill along with Jimmy Riddell and Harry Walker.

Tall Tommy Burns and Ed Barnabe were missing from last night's workout. Barnabe is out with a bruised thigh, while Burns had been given a day's rest. Jimmy Riddell replaced Barnabe, and put the squad through a long session of plays with Coach Foster pointing out mistakes.

pointment as Labor minister, the former speaker of the Legislature was re-elected by acclamation.

The legislative standing now is: Liberals, 65; Conservatives, 23; Independent, 1; United Farmers of Ontario, 1; total, 90.

Mr. Stewart, 49-year-old president of a Toronto undertaking establishment, was elected to a seat W. H. Price, former Conservative attorney-general, held for 25 years. Mr. Price did not run in last October's general election and Mr. McBrien was elected with a plurality of 127 over his closest opponent, Aubrey Bond, Liberal candidate.

Mr. Bond was nominated as official Liberal candidate in the by-election but withdrew when Premier Hepburn requested Mr. Stewart be given an acclamation. In a statement after the results were known last night, Mr. Stewart said he was grateful to the premier "for endeavoring to get me an acclamation."

A Czech Pavilion

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (A.P.). — Despite its difficulties, Czechoslovakia will participate in the 1939 World's Fair as scheduled, the nation's Consulate-General has informed Fair officials. A contract for the Czechoslovak pavilion was signed on September 10. The exhibit may be reduced in size because some industries in the Sudeten area, ceded to Germany, were to have participated.

MORE ABOUT—

Britain Will Rue

"Britain should have declared a long time beforehand she would join with others to protect Czechoslovakia against unprovoked aggression. The Government refused to give a guarantee when it would have saved the situation, yet they gave it too late and for the future renewed it when they had not the slightest power to make it good.

Untrustworthy Friend.

"You have to consider the character of the Nazi movement and the rule which it applies. A power which burns Christian ethics, which cheers its onward progress by barbarous paganism and vaunts a spirit of aggression and conquest, which derives strength and pleasure from perverted persecution and uses threats of murderous force—that power cannot ever be the trusted friend of British democracy.

"The people should know there has been gross neglect in our defences and that we suffered defeat without war, the consequences of which will travel far with us along the road. The people should know we have passed an awful milestone; that the whole equilibrium of Europe has been changed....."

Mr. Churchill urged concentration on the rearmament program in an effort to retrieve Britain's prestige, defensively and diplomatically. Industry should be mobilized immediately. There must be supremacy in the air.

A Branded Woman

Richard Acland (Liberal) who returned yesterday from Czechoslovakia told the House "I saw in Prague a young Czech woman with the mark of a swastika branded on her chest with a red hot iron, and a doctor who was with me told me he had treated that morning an eight months old baby with the sign of the swastika the size of a shilling branded on its face."

"Those are the devils to whom you have handed over these decent, innocent people," he shouted across at the government benches.

Mr. Acland also claimed British diplomacy sank to a new low level when the British ambassador in Poland was "told to go to hell. It was said in Polish but that was what was meant."

Sir Stafford Cripps from his place on the Labor benches taunted the government for adopting a policy of "the dove of peace sharpening its claws." To him "we now have been reduced to relying not on what is right and just but upon the word of Herr Hitler which is not likely to fill Jews, Social Democrats, Catholics, trade unionists, co-operators or any decent man or woman with any degree of confidence or hope for the future."

Harold Nicolson, National Labor member who has been a severe critic of the government, branded the Munich settlement as "one of the most disastrous things that has occurred in our history. By that capitulation we allowed Herr Hitler to make it perfectly clear to the whole world that the dominant power in Europe today is not Britain but Germany."

He predicted that within a few months Germany would have trade in central and eastern Europe in a stranglehold, including the Rumanian oil fields.

He was followed by A. R. Wise, Conservative, who asked if the difference between the Anglo-French proposals and the Munich agreement was worth 1,000,000 British lives.

A Black Outlook

Arthur Greenwood in moving the Labor amendment declared the only constructive proposal Mr. Chamberlain had made was feverish intensification of rearmament.

"Such an outlook was bleak and grim," he said.

Referring to Chancellor Hitler's declaration he had no further territorial demands in Europe, Mr. Greenwood asked "whether there was any guarantee that the words of one who has repeatedly broken solemn promises in the past will be kept sacred in the future."

Richard Butler, foreign undersecretary, combatted the argument that the small European states were opposed to the Munich terms. He quoted prime minister Spaak of Belgium, president Motta of Switzerland and the British minister to Rumania in support of his contention that the small nations welcomed the peace terms and were grateful to the prime minister "for his indefatigable determination to achieve a peace settlement."

"Does that sound as if there is no appreciation from the smaller nations?" Mr. Butler asked. "We know what scenes have occurred in the French chamber and tomorrow we will show the world with no uncertain voice that we shal ladopt a similar decision (confidence in the government.) We know what a satisfactory effect has been produced on public opinion of the United States."

Just before the House adjourned until today, Geoffrey Mander, Liberal, asked the government for an explanation of reports the foreign office had brought pressure to bear on the film industry to cut newsreels because they presented "a picture of Czechoslovakia quite different from what the government wished the people of this country to believe."

Mr. Mander demanded he receive an answer today.

Oldest Resident Of Otonabee Dead 99th Year

(By Staff Reporter.)

KEENE, Oct. 6. — Henry Humphries, the last surviving pupil of the first school established in Asphodel Township, died here this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Peter Gillespie, Keene. He was 98 years 6 months old, and by far the oldest resident of Otonabee Township.

Born near Hastings in 1840, he was one of a family of ten children, nine boys and a girl. His parents, Robert Humphries and Catherine Maguire, were married at Windsor, Nova Scotia, and then lived for several years with the Quakers in Pennsylvania before moving to Ontario to settle on a farm three miles west of Hastings and beautifully situated along the Trent River. The 200 acres were purchased at three shillings an acre.

The first school in the district was opened on the Humphries homestead, and Henry was the last survivor to attend that school.

In 1867 he married Janet Drummond, who died eleven years ago, and of nine children that blessed their union, four are still living.

A Long Lived Family.

The late Mr. Humphries came from a long lived family, his father attaining the age of 94 and his mother being 91 when death came to her. Mr. Humphries was a Liberal in politics, a member of the United Church, and one who always took a very keen interest in the affairs of the municipality.

He is one of the few remaining veterans of the Fenian Raids, and has lived under five British Monarchs. Right up to the time of his death he was exceptionally bright except for a little deafness and the illness which caused his death was brief.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Mackay, Los Angeles, Mrs. Armstrong of Armstrong, B.C., and Mrs. P. Gillespie of Keene. One son Walter Humphries of Keene, also survives. He retired from active farming a quarter of a century ago.

A private funeral will be held from the family residence in Keene, Ontario, on Saturday afternoon, with the Rev. J. S. Ferguson, of Keene United Church, conducting the burial service. Interment in Keene Cemetery.

Two Robberies Reported At Westwood

Provincial Constable David Silvester is investigating two robberies which occurred at Westwood early this morning. Thieves broke the lock off gasoline pumps at the Manley's service station and stole eight gallons of gas and then drove to the refreshment booth owned by Mrs. Lobb and broke into the place, stealing goods to value of $35. The loot included candies, chocolate bars, tobacco, nine loaves of bread, seven pounds of weiners and a quantity of butter.

30-Pound Muskie Is Landed From Rice Lake

BILL KENNEDY, proprietor of Kennedy's Hotel at Bewdley with two American guests kept Rice Lake in the race for top honors of muskie fishing yesterday when they battled a thirty pound lunge for forty minutes and successfully landed it.

The fish was exactly fifty inches long, weighed an even thirty pounds and was the largest and the longest caught in Rice Lake this season. Many others have come close to this weight but the veterans all agree that so far this lunge is the champion. He is the second largest caught in the district, a 42 pounder having been caught in the Moira River.

The fish was hooked by George Ravier and it smashed his steel rod in two pieces before being subdued. His brother Melville Ravier was in the party and Kennedy was piloting the boat and acting as guide. Both men are from Bradford, Pennsylvania and have been regular visitors to the Bewdley district.

Bus Services Extended, Plan Belt Line

One of the advantages to the residents of Auburn of the paving of Armour Road north of Park Hill Road has been the extension of the bus-line service from the Nicholls Oval gate or the old finger post to Bell's Store, about one-third of a mile.

The policy of the City Council of recent years has been to improve the streets into the sections of the city which the Peterborough Bus Lines was trying to serve. During the mayoralty of R. Denne it was felt that the bus lines could be assisted at least to that extent. They had not received any subsidy from the city and actually hadn't asked for it.

L. R. Mitchell, manager of the company, told the Examiner today that the company would establish a belt line in the south end as soon as one of the streets, McKellar or King George, between Lock and Park Streets, is paved.

"All that is holding back a belt line service to the people living along Park Street South is the paving of a cross road," Mr. Mitchell said. "That section of North Monaghan is growing steadily, and it is in the interests of the community that an adequate transportation service should be given. We extended the Nicholls Oval route a third of a mile or more up to Bell's store in the centre of Auburn just as soon as the paving of Armour Road was completed. There is quite a community of citizens in that neighborhood, and the only reason they have had to walk beyond Park Hill Road was because the surface of Armour Road into Auburn was too full of ruts and holes to send the buses over them."

Mr. Mitchell hinted that the Border Transit, Ltd., do not say much about their service, but that it was reaching to all parts of the city, and would like to add some more mileage to the North Monaghan route if the roads were satisfactory.

Lewis Call Blasts Hopes Of Peace

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 6—(AP).—John L. Lewis' formal call for a Committee for Industrial Organization constitutional convention was interpreted generally in high American Federation of Labor sources to-day as exploding all immediate hopes for an end to the A.F. of L-C.I.O. war.

The C.I.O chairman's announcement that his new industrial union movement would seek to establish itself as a permanent organization at a meeting in Pittsburgh November 14 came soon after President Roosevelt, in a message to the A.F. of L. annual convention here, had appealed for Labor peace.

William Green, Federation president, indicated he considered Lewis' action as a rebuff to the President's first publicly voiced hope that organized Labor leaders would make and keep the peace to save the workers from the reaction that might follow continued strife.

Green's latest blast at the C.I.O. came yesterday, when he demanded that the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress "purge" itself of C.I.O. affiliates in the Dominion. The federation, he said later, would withdraw from the Canadian organization unless it expelled such Lewis unions as the United Mine Workers, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and the United Automobile Workers.

Two Veterans Of C.G.E. Are Honored

Fitting tribute to long service, kind words of appreciation and a bit of shop talk of lighter nature marked a presentation dinner tendered at the Kawartha Club on Wednesday evening to Fred A. Shannon, who retired as paymaster of the Canadian General Electric and to Frank Pakenham, supervisor of the Transportation and Custom department, who started with the Peterborough plant in December of 1895. Mr. Pakenham was for a number of years an outstanding lacrosse player.

Stanley O. Shields was master of ceremonies at a gathering which drew representatives from virtually all departments of the C.G.E. Owing to the unavoidable absence of C. A. Salmonsen, the appreciation for long service was fittingly expressed by Ian McRae. T. H. Glover recalled many incidents in connection with the service of Mr. Shannon, mentioning also the fairness with which he had always dealt with others, and on behalf of the Foreman's Association and other friends presented Mr. Shannon with a Peterborough-made outboard motor. Mr. Shannon, in reply, mentioned that he spent most of his summer months at Balsam Lake, and assured his associates that this new bit of equipment could be considered as being at their service whenever they cared to call for its use.

Second Presentation.

Another presentation was made to Mr. Shannon by Alfred Day, speaking on behalf of the Benefit Association, of which Mr. Shannon had been the efficient secretary. In handing the recipient a gold watch Mr. Day thanked him for the way in which he had served that organization for so many years.

Mr. Pakenham was not able to attend the dinner, but the presentation proceeded in his absence. Fred Reed went back through the years to recall the services and the worth of Frank Pakenham, even to the nature and insecurity of the old chair which he used in the early days. He expressed regret at his absence, and a handsome easy chair, the gift of his friends, will be delivered to Mr. Pakenham at his home.

A. R. Kennedy of The Examiner was the speaker for the evening and reviewed the history of several of the European nations, particularly that of Czechoslovakia, and recounted a number of the interesting places to be seen in that land which he described as having been the northern frontier of the Roman Empire and the place where incursions of the Turks and Tartars from the east had been checked. Reference was also made to unusual customs in France, Germany and other countries. A vote of thanks was given by W. English, and "Auld Lang Syne" concluded a most enjoyable evening.

3 Cars Stolen In 24 Hours Owners Report

Peterborough has been hit by an epidemic of car thefts in the past twenty-four hours, three automobiles having been stolen during last night and this morning. One of the machines was recovered later in a badly damaged condition.

The owner who got his car back was Charles B. Westbrook, 268 London Street, whose automobile was taken from the laneway at that address during the night. Thieves had pushed it out on to the street before starting the engine. The car was found abandoned on Dublin Street, west of Reid Street, this morning, with the engine badly damaged by reckless driving.

Early today a car belonging to Jesse Aarirless was stolen from in front of his home on Reid Street and it is thought that the thieves who took the Westbrook machine left it after engine trouble developed and stole the Airriess car.

The third automobile in the stolen list to-day is the property of Chris. G. Graham of the Empress Hotel and it was driven off from there where it had been parked this morning on Water Stret, near the hotel.

Thieves broke into the Park Hill Service Station at Parkhill Road and Water Street during the night and got away with an adding machine. Entrance to the place was effected by smashing a window with an automobile crank which was left at the scene of the break-in. The thieves got no cash for their trouble and nothing else was missing except the adding machine.

Striking Steeplejack Grabs a Snooze And Sheriff's Posse Grabs Him

Anderson, Ind., Oct. 6 (AP)

A SHERIFF'S POSSE put a forcible end early today to the 16-hour sitdown strike of J. G. Stafford, itinerant steeplejack, on the Madison County courthouse dome here.

Stafford climbed the flagpole on the dome, 250 feet above the public square, yesterday morning and shouted to spectators below that he would stay there until county commissioners agreed to pay $150 they owed him for painting the dome.

This morning Deputy Sheriff Fred Gossett and five helpers slipped up on Stafford as he rested, half asleep, inside the steeple just beneath the dome. He had moved down from the pole shortly after midnight.

They seized him and carried him down to his automobile trailer dwelling. He made no effort to go back to the courthouse.

Central Ontario Organization Finds Plans Dislocated By No. 7 Highway Association

Behind the scenes the directors of the Central Ontario Highways Association, the original proponents of the Ottawa-Sarnia highway have encountered cross-currents tending to dislocate the plans they had advanced almost to the final stage of assurance that the new transprovincial highway would be completed along the route they suggested.

Peterborough's desire for a short cut to Toronto especially avoiding the congested traffic along the lake shore No. 2 driveway inspired the Port Perry link which gradually became visualized as an important and central link in a highway connecting Ottawa and Sarnia and thereby providing an integral section of a highway virtually finished between Montreal and Chicago.

When James Dutton and his associates regarded with a great satisfaction that their years of promotional work had accomplished the ends to which they had devoted so much effort and time and felt their job was completed having aroused public opinion across a broad expense of the province and at the same time directed the Department of Highway's attention to their cause and appeal, at that stage certain developments from other sources have arisen.

A new Association.

Probably it was sharp news to Alderman Dutton and his co-promoters to learn of the organization in Toronto Tuesday of the Number Seven Highway Association. These strangers bursting upon the scene have elected officers, decided which towns Number 7 should traverse, elected officers, and announced that later directors would be appointed from Brampton, Collingwood, Peterborough and Lindsay.

If anybody could imagine Alderman Dutton using slang, they might have imagined his remarks to his Port Perry, Bethany, Uxbridge, confederates, "Ain't that something."

At any rate western Ontario hasn't entirely ignored the Peterborough section.

One of the decisions of this new organization is to the effect that No. 7 shall pass through Lindsay, that is the old round about route from Brooklin through Lindsay to Peterborough. That road is practically completed now, and doesn't enter into the thoughts of the Dutton-Letcher crowd. So that is one of the cross currents. It ignores the work that has already been done to secure a short cut west of Peterborough.

The old Central Ontario Highways Association had concluded that everybody was in favor of the proposed Peterborough-Port Perry link but of late there have been unofficial but incisive rumors that the route was to be from Peterborough to Brooklin, as straight as a bee line. That perturbing news has cropped up from time to time even while the Association through Dr. Hamilton of Bethany, Reeve Cummiskey of Manvers, Reeve Arthur Wood of Cavan and others were urging the Cavan-Bethany-Port Perry route.

The rumors have been taking on more substance and edge of late even to the flat assertion that the engineering group of the Ontario Department of Highways have pronounced against the Port Perry route.

That statement is not official. There is no memorandum at all from the Department to the officers of the Central Ontario Highways Association; but there is this intimation, stronger than a rumor, that the engineers have marked out their preferred route southwest through Cavan to Brooklin, cutting across farms and following as straight a course as possible.

"Number seven highway should never have gone around by Lindsay," the engineers are reported to have affirmed. "If a highway across the province is to be of any use to the people who want short cuts it should go in a straight line, not wander all over here and there. The Lindsay deviation was a mistake and we don't want to repeat it."

That's the official engineering attitude, it is said. If the rumor is true that the Department wants that crow's flight short cut from Peterborough to Brooklin where is that going to leave the Dr. Hamilton-Letcher stalwarts who co-operated so faithfully with Peterborough in presenting the case of the Peterborough-Port Perry link and the Ottawa-Sarnia highway, now being assumed by the new organization in the west end of the province.

Briefly, the Central Ontario Highways Association seems to have been conked from two directions, and a lot of new worries must be facing Alderman Dutton as he and his helpers are threatened with being eclipsed.

A year ago and even later the Dutton Association concluded that their work was virtually done. The Peterborough-Port Perry road was assumed as a provincial highway with assurance that construction would be begun this year if possible. It has been considerably improved, it is true, but now comes the old one-two clouts, the rumor that the engineers are decidedly opposed to anything but the diagonal route from Peterborough to Brooklin, and the formation of the new Number Seven Association which is setting out to dictate the No. 7 route as they consider it.

FICTION AND FEATURES

AFRAID TO MARRY

By HELEN WELSHIMER

Written for and Released by CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, obtains a job as a model shortly after her father loses his fortune in a financial crash. The same day she learns that Craig Denby, the man she loves, has married another girl. Afraid of marriage, Judy had put him off once too often. Her father goes west with her stepmother, her own mother, remarried, is abroad and Judy moves to a small hotel. She finds solace in the company of Ronald Birrell, brilliant young attorney from Tennessee who has just joined the firm of her father's lawyers. When Judy calls her best friend, Marjorie Barton, Craig answers the phone. Judy submits some dress designs to the wholesale house where she is modeling. When another employee steals them, she appeals to Ronald for advice. Judy wonders if she is becoming interested in Ronald. She tries to go it alone, even avoiding Ronald, but he locates her and arranges to take her out for the evening.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 12

Judy discovered, to her surprise, that she was singing under her breath as she drew her bath, brushed her chestnut hair until it shone, dusted her face with powder, outlined her lips with deeper scarlet to match the velvet dinner frock she chose.

Tonight she felt like Judy Rogers, the popular heiress, about to go some place, with—Craig.

At thought of that name she put the silver-backed brush down very carefully. Must it come before her always to dim whatever unimportant pleasure offered? Why hadn't she guessed, in those other years, that life would hold no savor when he did not meet her?

She had been so afraid to trust love.

"But I was right," she mused out loud. "Craig didn't love me. Or if he did, he got over it. It's foolish to be so hurt over something that you understand so well. I know love doesn't last! And I always knew it, so why don't I get better?"

The wide brown eyes in the mirror couldn't tell her. So she picked up the brush and began to arrange her hair.

Mechanically she turned the dial on the radio. Every room in the hotel had one, a little box that made part of a table.

She paid no heed to the program until she heard an announcer say:

"Ladies and gentlemen of Radioland, we have the pleasure this evening of listening to Miss Mary Banner, who is singing for you from the . . ."

Mary Banner. The accompanist played a few bars of music. Then a sweet, low voice began to sing. It was natural, plaintive, pleading. It did not lilt. It cried a little.

Judy listened in perplexity. The voice wasn't happy! Why, the girl should be exulted. She had Craig. What more did she ask of life?

She had been promoted, too. Here she was, doing a solo number, when bits had been her share before. Judy wondered from where Mary Banner was singing. The station signed off and she could not learn. She noticed the number on the dial. Tomorrow night she would tune in on this program early.

She gathered up her brief cape that was part of the dinner frock, an evening bag that her mother had paid a ridiculous price to obtain for her as a Christmas present one year, gloves and a real lace handkerchief. She was ready before her telephone rang.

"You didn't run away," Ronald greeted her. "I was afraid you would."

"I never thought about it," she answered, the party mood fitting over her. She had felt that mood in the old days—felt it sliding over her shoulders, adjusting itself at the waist, just like a dress.

It had been a long time since she had worn it.

They took a taxicab far up the river where the water looked cold and gray in the autumn night. They swung across the slim steel bridge which carried them to the Jersey side where a famous night spot lifted its bright lights to the sky above the Palisades.

They laughed, talked, ate, applauded the floor show, and became old friends for the space of three hours.

Then Ronald severed the spell.

"Judy, I think you should tell Marjorie Barton where you live."

"You've talked about me to her?" Judy was on the defensive in an instant.

"No, but she has mentioned you to me. I know she is frightfully worried. I made no sign that I knew you. That night you telephoned her apartment—"

"Yes?" Judy breathed. So he knew about the night that Craig had answered the telephone.

"When you hung up, Craig Denby tried to get the station from which you made the call. I heard he did get it, hours later, but it was a drug store so it meant nothing. I was there, you see, when the Denbys came."

The swing band was throwing music toward the sky, recklessly, brazeningly, bewitchingly, and the moon shone through the windows of the club, shedding white light that was banished by the electrical blaze. For Judy the spell had ended. She was dining with Ronald Birrell, the red-headed young attorney who was the newest member of the famous law firm which had handled her father's business. That was all. She should not have come. Well, she had made a mistake. At least, she could thank him for a good dinner, and go home.

She stood up. "It was a lovely evening until now. No one we know has seen us. Suppose we pretend it didn't happen?"

He stood up, too. "I couldn't do that."

"Why not?"

"Want to remember it. And you." They were in a cab, crossing the George Washington bridge, when he spoke again.

"I don't want to interfere but I think you should see Marjorie Barton. She's desperately worried."

"And then she will want me for a house party, and somebody else will have a week-end of shooting and hunting and after that there will be the Thanksgiving holidays on someone's estate, and I'll be a party girl—someone for whom everyone feels sorry and asks around. I can't repay them. I'll be a parasite. Remember, Ronald Birrell, you warned me of the dangers of my easy life."

"You'll not be a parasite. I'm not afraid of that. But I think your friends have a right to know where you are. You are real. You won't go under."

"You believe that?" Judy asked. "I'll tell you what I'll do. I won't tell Marjorie my address but I'll go to see her. Now—tonight."

Judy did give Marjorie her address. Listening to her genuine entreaties, realizing how much worry she had caused, Judy relented.

"After all, darling, it isn't fair to shoot off like a comet and leave us wondering if you landed on Mars or are holding on to the tail end of a meteor," Marjorie complained. "Work if you will—"

"—if I must," Judy corrected.

"—but keep in touch with some of us."

Judy laughed and solemnly gave the name of her hotel. "It's second-rate and shabby but it's home at the moment."

Ronald excused himself and went out on the terrace. Marjorie spoke reproachfully. "He never made the slightest sign that he knew you! I think he was mean, but I suppose the implication is that the lad can be trusted. He's been squiring Abbey Boling hither and yon of late."

"Abbey Boling?"

"No, you don't know her. She isn't in the Social Register. But she's capital personified. She has 87 new hats a season or something like it. And she's buying a count."

"Oh, that girl!"

"That's the way to talk! I saw Ronald at the theater with her the other night. The count's boat docks next week."

"She's phoney and Ronald is real. He couldn't like her," Judy insisted.

"Men are strange. Whoever thought Craig would like Mary? Or that Mary would like Craig so soon?"

Toscanini Bound For U.S. On Normandie

PARIS, Oct. 6—(AP). — Arturo Toscanini, the conductor who was said to have had passport difficulties with the Italian Government, took a boat train to-day less than an hour after his arrival in Paris from Rome.

He sailed aboard the Normandie with his wife and young granddaughter. Friends said he was anxious to reach the United States "as soon as possible."

(An official in Rome said yesterday that "Toscanini has his passport," as if to end the rumors of passport troubles in the past few days.)

DOROTHY DIX

Don't Be Rushed Into Marriage If You Are Not Financially Able To Properly Support a Wife; Too Many Girls Want a Meal Ticket Instead Of Love

DEAR MISS DIX—I am 23 years old and have a fair job for the first time in my life. I worked my way through high school and college. Never had time for girl friends and know very few women. My partner has a sister with whom I have been corresponding, but I have only met her a few times. I have never met her parents and know little about her. I don't know of any interests we have in common. But we are engaged to be married and she insists on giving up her job and marrying at once. Has even announced our intended marriage in the papers. She isn't willing to wait, although I am in no financial position to marry. I think I can get along with her and every one gets married some time. What is your advice?

RALPH.

ANSWER:

My advice to you is to brace up and have enough courage to refuse to let this girl rush you into marriage for which you are not ready and which is sure to end in disaster for you both. You haven't even the excuse of being so infatuated with her that you have temporarily taken leave of your senses to justify your folly in hazarding your entire future by going into a reckless marriage. So if you let her bluff you into doing it, your misfortune is on your own head.

Try to realize that with many girls getting married is nothing but a racket. They marry not for love but for a meal ticket. They are tired of supporting themselves. They are too lazy to work. They want to lie abed of a morning instead of getting up and punching the time clock at the office. They want to have their time free for dawdling around and loafing about stores and going to the movies in the afternoon instead of haying to submit to the discipline and the confinement of the office. So they fasten upon any poor saps of men who come their way and by their tears and entreaties and bluffs force them to marry them, no matter how much the men protest that they should wait until they are able to undertake the responsibilities of supporting a family.

Any girl who would urge a man to marry her against his better judgment isn't fit for a wife. If she loved the man, she would have his good at heart and she would not be willing to burden him with her support when he was trying to get a start in the world. If she had any sense, she would realize that nothing so handicaps a poor young man as having to go into debt to get married and having his mind distracted from his work by wondering how he is going to feed and clothe the wife who is hanging like a millstone around his neck. She would know they would have a thousand more chances for happiness if they waited until they could properly finance their marriage.

You say that you and this girl don't know each other well enough to know if you have anything in common. That is the best of all reasons for putting off the wedding until you can at least get acquainted, for there can be no happiness in a marriage that is not based on congeniality.

Your contention that you might as well marry because everybody else does it is too silly for serious discussion. Most people do get married and a lot of them wish they hadn't. Of course marriages that seem predestined for failure do once in a thousand times turn out happily, but it is taking a long shot at happiness.

* * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—My brother has been married for more than ten years to a wife who rules him by refusing to speak to him if he does anything to offend her. She has her family live with her and he supports them, but she has cut out all of his old friends and family so that they rarely go to the house. She will never go anywhere with him and if he even goes to visit his family without her, she and her family punish him by ostracizing him as if he had committed a crime. Last week my son, who is named for him, had a birthday, and because my brother stopped to see him the wife has passed into a silence that will last for a week or more. There was never a better man nor a better husband than my brother. Must he endure this the remainder of his life?

A WORRIED SISTER.

ANSWER:

Not unless he is a weakling who is so afraid of his wife that he would rather be henpecked than put up a fight for his rights. The man who earns the money that supports the home has the whiphand if he only has the nerve to use it.

He will only have to tell his parasitic in-laws that out they go unless they can be cheery little companions and rays of sunshine around the house. They will find their tongues fast enough when they see the prospect of being separated from the feed trough. It is bad enough for a man to have to stand a grumpy wife, but he doesn't have to stand grouchy in-laws.

The silence treatment is something left over from the Inquisition but it is a common weapon that many mean-spirited men and women hold over their cowering mates. They don't say anything when they have a grievance, for that would give the husband or wife a chance to explain and to justify themselves. Oh, no, they just sit up in a grim silence that indicts the poor victim for every crime in the calendar, and especially for their misuse of the poor, innocent, heart-broken, wronged husband or wife who is married to a brute, but who is too noble to say a word of complaint.

It sends the temperature down to a degree of coldness in which no warm-blooded creature can live and after the frost-bitten husband or wife stands it as long as he or she can, he or she grovels on his or her stomach and apologizes and is graciously forgiven for something he or she never did.

A woman I knew who had to stand this kind of treatment from a husband who would refuse to speak to her for days if he got miffed about anything, cured him by packing up and going away from home when he had one of his silent fits leaving a note behind her saying that she would return when he got in a more amiable state of mind and felt chatty. I recommend the plan to your brother.

DOROTHY DIX.

Transparent, Practical, Smart

Gifts that delight—smart cellophane cases to protect best china or prettiest lingerie!

Make them yourself in a jiffy! Use two thicknesses of clear cellophane or one thickness of laminated cellophane. Trim with gay bindings and perky bows or paint on dainty designs. To do this lay cellophane over a pleasing pattern and fill in outlines with water color paints.

For the china cover, cut a band of cellophane long and wide enough to encircle loosely your stack of plates. Cut a circle of cellophane for the top. Bind all edges with bias folds, sew side seam and whip edge of band to edge of top.

Make cases for lingerie, hosiery and handkerchiefs in the shape of envelopes, vary them with different flaps. Dimensions are 12 by 16 inches for lingerie; 8 by 12 inches for hosiery; 8 inches square for handkerchiefs.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, October 7.

A rather lively, eventful and probably dramatic day is forecast from a long chain of interesting and intriguing planetary aspects. There are treacherous conditions to manoeuvre into sound channels and away from very dangerous disturbances. Strategy and shrewdness may be brought to bear on kindred methods of attack, a case of "dog eat dog" as it were. Personally, there are splendid compensations, with much social or sentimental activity.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year of such subtle and perplexing conditions that their own intrigue, connivance and craftiness may be the only solution to menacing situations, plots or schemes. Drastic events are probable, with travel, change and disturbance. Shun recklessness and impetuosity, and seek compensations in social, domestic or romantic affiliations.

A child born on this day may have a rather dramatic way of doing things, being inclined to positive, drastic, and audacious methods. It should have much determination, courage and enthusiasm, seeking an adventurous career. Yet, it should be sociable, friendly, gentle, and have much personal appeal.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

"Ah, good-morning, my dears," Mother Goose said cheerfully as she greeted Knarf and Hanid, the shadow-children, with the turned-about names. "I haven't had a visit from you for quite a long time. Have you been very busy?"

The two shadows nodded.

"We've been staying close to the children," Hanid explained. "We've been going with them everywhere."

"Yes," said Mother Goose. "I understand how it is with you shadows. You must stay in the footsteps of the people you belong to. All shadows do that. Fortunately, in Mother Gooseland we have no shadows. You can go wherever you please. I was just going out to do my morning's shopping. Would you like to come along?"

"Good morning, my dears."

"Oh yes," Hanid answered.

"I'll carry your shopping basket," Knarf said.

So Mother Goose gave Knarf her shopping basket to carry, and Hanid carried the list of the things Mother Goose had to buy.

"It's a lovely day, isn't it?" Mother Goose said as they started down the little road toward town. Even though it was night at the children's house, the sun was shining brightly in Mother Gooseland.

First on List.

"What's first on the list, dear?" Mother Goose asked Hanid.

"The candles."

"Oh yes. Well, there's the candlestick maker's shop across the way."

"I'll run across for you and get them," Knarf put in. "You can sit down on this shady bench under the tree until I get back. I'll be back before you know it."

I guess he really meant that when he said it. But he didn't come back. And bye-and-bye Hanid said to Mother Goose: "I wonder what's keeping him?" And at that moment they heard the sound of thump-thump-thump from the shop across the way.

Looking Back On This Date

OCTOBER 6

It seems rather strange to read of a boundary dispute between Canada and New Brunswick, yet that was one of the many problems which Lord Elgin had to solve. In a letter to Lord Grey, the Colonial Secretary, written from Niagara Falls October 6, 1850, the governor-general wrote:

"I think that we have made arrangements for settling the boundary question between Canada and New Brunswick by arbitration, as suggested by you, in such a way as will be satisfactory or at least put a term to the discussion of the subject."

The previous March the government of the Province of Canada had agreed to a compromise by which "a large portion of territory" should be surrendered to New Brunswick, but it wished to defer action until the matter had been discussed in Parliament. Lord Grey recommended that this action be deferred. The dispute concerned the interpretation of the Quebec Act (1774). Lord Grey was so anxious to have the matter settled that he instructed Sir Edmund Head (then governor of New Brunswick and Elgin's successor) to go to Toronto and confer with Elgin.

Head went to Toronto, where he was welcomed by Elgin "as an old friend. The last time we met he examined me for a fellowship at Merton College, Oxford." It did not take long for the two to arrange the arbitration. He was a brother-in-law of J. A. Roebuck, the English statesman, and apparently acted in a satisfactory manner, for in August, 1851, Lord Elgin sent a cheque for £200 to be paid to Falconer for his services.

While in Toronto Head discussed with Elgin the necessity for pressing the building of the railway from Halifax to Quebec, which Elgin had urged from his first arrival at Quebec. Both agreed that such a railway must be a prelude to union of the British provinces, but both were false prophets, because union came before the railway, Confederation in 1867, and the Intercolonial not until 1876.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Choice Desserts for Cooks Who Know Their Pastry And for Willing Amateurs

A pair of health missionaries wrote an article for a popular magazine lately, entitled "Let's Slow Down"—sometime I am tempted to say, "Let's give in" to Audrey and instead of always serving fruit in its simple untouched state (because it is "good for us"—meaning the youngsters mostly) make it up into open-face pies, that beguile us into eating too much; puddings dripping with syrupy juice that threaten the waist line; tarts that mel. in your mouth but congeal farther down. Does that spoil your fun? It needn't—it is only a check to keep you from doing it too often—to prove my good faith in your judgment, look below.

Apple Pastry Diamonds

Three cups flour, 3 tablespoons sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup shortening—butter is preferable, but a half and half mixture of butter and lard is good, 3 egg yolks, 1-3 cup sour cream, 4½ cups very finely chopped apples, ¾ cup sugar, 1-3 teaspoon cinnamon, 3 tablespoons sifted cracker crumbs, 2 tablespoons white sugar.

For the rich pastry sift together the flour, the 3 tablespoons sugar and salt. Chop in the chilled shortening or butter as you would for pie paste. Beat the yolks slightly and mix with the sour cream, then add them to the dry mixture a little at a time, stirring them in with a fork, until it is all taken up. Chill this paste thoroughly.

Chop the apples finely (they can be ground if you don't mind them going brown) and immediately mix the ¾ cup sugar and cinnamon with them.

Work the chilled dough with the hands to make it strong enough to hold together and divide in two. Roll out one-half, smoothing the edges to keep them from cracking, into a rectangle and cut off rough edges and lift onto cookie sheet. Sprinkle the dough with the cracker crumbs, letting some overflow the edges to soak up the syrup when the pastry is baking. Spread apples over dough, patting them down evenly right to the edge. Roll out remainder and place over apples, cutting off rough edges. Brush the top with the unbeaten white and sprinkle with the 2 tablespoons sugar. Bake at 450 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes, until top is golden, then reduce heat to 350 deg. Fahr. to finish baking apples. Starting at upper corner of pastry with sharp knife, cut to opposite lower corner. Making these cuts about 2 inches apart, cut whole pastry in these diagonal strips—then cut in opposite directions to make diamonds. These are excellent hot and rarely last until cold, but are just as good the second day.

Triple-Decker Peach Pie

(If you make good pastry you can make this—it looks twice as sensational as a plain pie and tastes easily twice as good.)

Make your best plain paste (if you are a puff paste expert, make that, of course), cut it into rounds about 8 inches in diameter (a little smaller than a medium sized pie) and bake them flat—not on pie plates—they must be pricked with a fork before baking to prevent them puffing unmanageably. (Your pastry will puff better if well chilled before baking (after rolling) and if baked over 500 deg. Fahr.

Peach Filling

Melt ½ cup butter in top of double boiler and stir in ½ cup flour until they are blended. Mix together 1 cup corn syrup and 1½ cups boiling water and stir these into the butter mixture until it thickens, then add 2 tablespoons molasses (if you like it) and 1 tablespoon lemon juice, or vinegar. Let cook for 10 minutes, stirring frequently. Beat the yolks of 2 eggs and pour about ½ cup of the cooked mixture over them, stirring; then pour this into the filling and cook 1 minute. Turn off heat, then add 2 cups sliced peaches and let stand until cold—this retarding heat is enough to cook the peaches a little. When pastry rounds are baked and cool, spread the bottom one with one-third the peach mixture, cover with second pastry round, spread it with one-third the peach filling, cover with third pastry round, spread this with remaining peach filling. Cover top with meringue made by beating 2 leftover egg whites with 6 tablespoons sugar until stiff, then add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Place in oven under broiler turned on low and bake until golden—about 30 minutes. The heat must be low to keep pie cool and prevent sogginess.

Pecan Pie (Mrs. Reese)

Beat together 3 eggs, 1 cup light brown sugar, 1 cup dark corn syrup, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Then add 1 cup whole pecans. Pour into pastry lined shallow square or rectangular cake tin (pastry should only come about ¾ inch up sides of pan. Bake at 450 for 10 minutes—then quickly reduce heat to 275 deg. Fahr. by opening oven door for a few minutes—then close door and finish baking at this low temperature until filling is firm in centre—this takes about 1 hour's baking in all. Serve cut in squares with unsweetened whipped cream. This is more of a confection than a dessert—but a small portion of it is a delicious finishing touch to a company dinner.

Manitoulin Maple Syrup Tarts.

Line small tart tins, preferably fluted, with rich plain paste about ⅛ inch thick not more. Make a filling of 1 cup maple syrup, 3 tablespoons melted butter, 1 whole egg. Beat these three things well together, and pour to within ⅛ inch of tops of tart shells. Start baking at 450 deg. Fahr.—after 7 minutes reduce heat to 350 to finish baking. These little tarts can be very simply done if when you make a pie you make enough dough for them. The next day it will roll ount nice and stiff if kept in the ice box, and the filling is ease itself.

Glamour Girl's Cocoanut Cream Pie

Twelve Graham crackers rolled very fine, ½ cup melted butter, 1-5 cup brown sugar, mix these well together and pat into pie pan to line it.

Filling—¾ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 egg yolks, 2 cups milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 8 marshmallows, 1 cup cocoanut. Mix the corn starch and sugar, then add the milk and stir over double boiler until it thickens, and then let cook 30 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from heat and add the cut up marshmallows and cocoanut, vanilla, cover and let cool. Make a meringue of the leftover whites with 2 tablespoons sugar beaten together until stiff, spread this over filling when it is in pie and bake all 40 minutes at 275 or 300 deg. Fahr. This is all the baking either the crust or meringue needs.

Note—If you use blanched Brazil nuts in place of cocoanut only ½ cup is needed and you have a pie that will make a chef take notice.

Plum Pie.

To 2 cups washed and stoned plums add 1 cup sugar and grated rind ½ lemon. Bake in ovan of 500 deg. Fahr. between 2 crusts — sprinkle top with powdered sugar and serve warm. Sour plums are best.

Forget Old Rules In Eyeshadow

When picking eye shadow (for evening only), you can forget the old rules about this particular preparation having to match the color of the eyes. Just go ahead and get something that is flattering, which makes your eyes seem larger, more luminous and the eyelids themselves soft, smooth and satiny. Even though your eyes are brown, it's possible that blue or green eye shadow will be lovely. Or that brown will, if your eyes are blue. Stand in artificial light and try several shades, then decide.

If eyelids seem very dry, lacking both in oil and moisture, you might put a bit of cream or oil on them after face powder has been applied, allowed to set and the excess whisked off.

Accessories for Fall

Rich Accents Like These Set Off the Simplest Frock

By ALICE ALDEN

More attention and ingenuity have been lavished on dress accessories this autumn than ever before. Many a smart woman sets off a simple frock or suit with rich accents—a lovely hat, an exquisite bag, a fur jacket, expensive gloves and shoes. In the accompanying photos we depict some exquisite accessories, each one of which would be the making of any costume. The rich bag, shown LEFT, is of antelope, and piping the edges and the clever rein handle are flashes of gold to match the clasp, which is tiered to show off an engraved monogram. Lucille Ball, ABOVE, chose a handsome new hat fashioned of ostrich tips in brilliant turquoise on brown velvet with a wisp of a veil. Gloves and bag are of matching brown suede.

Robert Spence Addresses Union

Miss Francis Clark, vice-president, presided at the Fellowship meeting of the Young People's Union of St. Andrew's Church, which was held Tuesday evening. The Scripture reading was given by Mr. James Harvey, and a solo by Miss Dorothy Ridyard.

Mr. Roert Spence, President of the Peterborough Presbytery Young People's Union, was guest speaker, and addressed the meeting on the "Significance of the Young People's Union." "There were many links in the chain," he said, "a local union was the smallest, but the most vital link of all." He stressed the fact that co-operation and willin gservice were necessary to success.

The Presbytery Union consists of representatives of the twenty-two societies in Peterborough County; the Conference Union represents the seven Presbyteries in the Bay of Quinte Conference; the National Union for all Canada is composed of young people from the eleven conferences of the United Church of Canada, and there is in addition a Federation of the Young People's Societies of the United States and Canada.

Business was conducted by the President, Gordon Harle, and the secretary, Harry Vass. The roll call was responded to by a verse of Scripture from each member.

Arrangements were made for ushers at Ralph Gordon's entertainment on Friday night, October 7, and for the serving of refreshments at the close of the evening.

British Women Spending More

Here is good news from the British Board of Trade Journal. Women throughout Britain last month had more money to spend.

They spent it on clothes—and sent fashions sales bounding 10.5 per cent up on last year. In the midlands and suburban London the increase was more than 18 per cent; in the West End it was I per cent.

They spent it on food—and sent up the sale of groceries and provisions in every part of the country. year.

Shops throughout Britain saw their total sales for the month rise 3.6 per cent over the same time last year.

Total sales throughout Britain for the first half of the trading year — February to July—increased by 2.6 per cent over the first half of last year.

On the debit side — furnishing sales fell everywhere except in Scotland and the north-east; the sale of perishable goods in the West End fell by 1 per cent, chiefly because of the holidays.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"My genial spirits fail;
And what can these avail
To lift the smothering weight from off my breast?
It were a vain endeavour,
Though I should gaze forever,
On that green light that lingers
in the west:
I may not hope from outward forms to win
The passion and the life whose fountains are within."
—Coleridge.

Dear Friends:

Did you ever feel melancholy? What a beastly thing it is It clouds your eyes so that you see no beauty anywhere, it dampens your spirits and makes you apprehensive of some evil that might come.

It takes your appetite away and makes you gloomy and miserable, fit company for neither man or dog. And what it is and where it comes from, none can tell us.

We search for traces of the cause of this. Have we done some wrong thing, and would it be concience laying her heavy hand on us and making us feel so miserable?

But we cannot remember any particular wrong we did, so it cannot be that. And yet we are blue as indigo, and getting bluer every minute.

All our hearts coming crowding back on us, the time this one let us down, and the other one disappointed us, the times we have seen sick, the dreams that never came true.

And we begin to question our belief in ourselves, the good we may be doing, the help we have given, all of them looking in the blue light that shines on us, so very piffling and not what we thought they were.

Well, I often think it is a state of health, for of your liver is out of kilter it will bring on melancholy quicker than anything else. And we all know that convalesence is a very depressing thing.

Or it may be that we are having too much sameness in our lives, too much of doing exactly the same day after day, week after week, so what we need to rid ourselves of these foggy vapors is a change of scene.

All mothers and wives and housekeepers know that the more they stay in the house, the more they want to stay in, and the less desire they have to go anywhere.

But, we need to mingle with our kind, we need to be josteled and feel one with humanity. Living too much to ourselves makes our thoughts turn inward. Looking inward is necessary, but we must look outward too.

It is just as if you ate one kind of food three times a day, every day, every week, every year. It would not take you long to get nauseated on that sort of diet.

And melancholy is just mental sickness with the repitition of your own thoughts. Every little thing becomes magnified, your faults, your failings, your mode of life, because your mind has sickened at a steady diet of the same thing.

So, shake yourself loose from it. Don't let it get a hold on you for any Dr. in a mental hospital will tell you that melancholy madness is the worst to cure.

After all(what do you expect of yourself? Perfection? There was only one who was perfect and they crucified Him. Stop crucifying yourself, for you are only human like the rest of us and we all fall far short of what we would like to be.

Going out for a stroll? You'll come back feeling better. Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Do You Know?

That if you chill your pie dough before you roll it out it will be easier to handle? Then roll out just enough dough for one pie crust at a time. Work quickly, and roll from the centre to the outside. Try to keep the shape as round as possible.

A nice confection is made by stuffing prunes? Remove stones from well-cooked prunes and fill cavities with dates, figs chopped fine with an equal amount of nut meats. Press prunes into shape, then roll in fine granulated sugar. Let stand several days before serving.

To-day's Churches Are Result Missionary Effort

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 6—Claiming that churches were merely the result of missionary effort, Mrs. Clayton Meiklejohn, Warkworth, guest speaker at the meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society held on Tuesday afternoon, traced the rise and growth of the society. Mrs. A. C. Connor, the president, presided, and during her review of current events, Mrs. A. G. Thompson stressed the effect of prayer as shown by the outcome of the recent European crisis. It was the leadership of men like Mr. Chamberlain which inspired people to seek refuge in prayer and the fact that these prayers were answered was an experience whereby the Women's Missionary Society might well profit.

To Pack Bale.

The bale for the West is to be packed on Thursday afternoon, according to a report of the meeting of St. John's W.M.S. on Tuesday of this week. The president, Mrs. C. K. Stephens, urged as many as possible to turn out to help prepare the bales. It was revealed that sixty-five dollars had been sent the Presbyterial treasurer and following this the group givings and attendance were taken. Twenty-four calls were made by the visiting committees during the month of September. The program which was also presided over by the president, opened with a hymn and prayer, led by Mrs. J. D. Mills. Papers of an educational nature were read by the members and on these the president conducted a quiz on their completion. The following papers were presented: "How the North Honan Mission in China was Started Fifty Years ago," by Mrs. C. E. Turner; "The Story of the First Missionary," Mrs. G. W. Hammond; "What the Missionaries Had to Endure," Miss G. Payne; "What Have the Missionaries Done in the Past Fifty Years?" Mrs. A. D. Bennett.

Mrs. Albert Lee, social convenor, assisted by her committee, served refreshments.

Interesting Havelock Wedding

A wedding of interest took place in St. John's Anglican Church, Havelock, at eleven o'clock on Tuesday morning, October 4, when Josephine Anderson, fourth daughter of Mrs. John Anderson and the late Mr. John Anderson of Round Lake, was given in marriage by her oldest brother, Mr. Isaac Anderson, to Sgt.-Int. George Alfred Farmer, C.A.F.V.S., of Camp Borden, Ontario, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. George Farmer, Birmingham, England.

The church choir preceded the bride, singing "The Voice that Breathed O'er Eden," and during the signing of the register sang "Oh Perfect Love." Miss Verna Isaac presided at the organ.

Rev. R. E. Lemon, rector of Havelock, Norood and Westwood, was the officiating clergyman.

The bride entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March, and was gowned in French violet martinized velvet. She wore a velvet turban and carried a white morocco prayer book with white streamers.

There were no attendants, and the wedding was attended by immediate relatives and friends of the bridal couple.

After the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served in the Parish Hall, where the bride's mother received in a figured dress of black silk crepe, with fur felt hat. She wore a corsage of Bettertime roses and ferns.

For travelling the bride wore a berry-wine velvet dress, and an imported grey tweed coat with natural ring-tail trimmings. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Farmer will reside in Barrie, Ont.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by
Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION.—Would you please print recipes for Almond Squares, Mystery Cake and Yum-Yums. I hope you do not think I am asking too much. . . but your page has been a great deal of help to me in the past six years and I would like to give a word of thanks to Mrs. McK. for her fruit bars—they were as she said, a tasty snack.—Mrs. B.

ANSWER.—Thank you for your kind letter; we are delighted to have been helpful to you for so long. I have the recipes for Yum-Yums and Almond Squares, but do not know what you mean by Mystery Cake. Could you describe it? Do you know it by any other name? Would other readers who are familiar with this cake send us their version of it for Mrs. B?

Almond Squares.

One cup flour, 1/3 cup butter, ¼ cup fruit sugar; 2 egg whites, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups brown sugar, 1 cup chopped almonds, ½ cup cocoanut, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, 3 tablespoons flour. Using the first three ingredients cream the butter and sugar and work in the flour. Bake in a 8 x 8 pan in an oven of 350 deg. Fahr. for 10 minutes or 15 if it still appears to be uncooked. Then make a meringue by beating the egg whites with salt until stiff. Beat in sifted brown sugar. Fold in cocoanut, almonds, baking powder and flour. Place on cooked mixture and brown in moderate oven of 350 deg. Fahr. for about 15 minute. Cut in squares while hot with wet sharp knife. This makes about 4 dozen.

Yum-Yums.

One-half cup butter, ½ cup brown sugar, 2 egg yolks, 1½ cups flour, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon vanilla. Press this mixture into pan, after mixing in order given, then sprinkle it all over with ¾ to 1 cup nut meats—walnuts, pecans or hickory nuts—beat 2 egg whites stiff and add 1 cup brown sugar. Spread this over top of batter and nuts and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. until baked and golden. In place of nuts, dates or chopped prunes may be used to spread over batter to make variations.

Write again when we can help. As soon as recipe for Mystery Cake comes in, I shall print it.

QUESTION.—Thank you for your kind answer to my enjuiry for cooked ham recipes. They look very tasty and will soon try them.

No, I do not do any more sterilizing than bringing the filled-up jars to boiling point again in over and when putting on sterile tops I fill to overflowing with boiling water and screw down at once.

We are always coming to you for all our cooking worries it seems—could you again help me? I have lost my recipe for Peach Brandy, which I clipped from your page—made from bought dried peaches, sugar, etc. . . I think the brandy was sent in by one of the readers—you commented on its cheapness, easy way of making it ,etc., if I remember correctly.—N.V.M.

ANSWER.—Thank you for your friendly letters.

Peach Brandy.

One lb. dried peaches, 4 quarts boiling water, 4 lbs. brown sugar, 1 yeast cake. Wash peaches well and pour over them the sugar and water. When it cools to body temperature dissolve the yeast in a little of the syrup, then pour back into mixture. Let stand 24 hours, then strain and bottle loosely.

QUESTION.—As there are now a lot of very nice young herring on the market I should be most obliged if you would send me a recipe for "Marinated Herring."—(Mrs.) J. R. D.

ANSWER.—Thank you for your letter.

Fish is usually marinated in a pickle, but it can also be done in oil, which is what is usually meant by marinating.

I will give you the commonly-accepted method.

Spiced Pickling Vinegar (commonly used for fish).

One quart vinegar, weakened if too strong, ½ cup whole mixed spices (specially prepared for pickling), 1/3 cup cooking oil, ¼ cup sugar, 3 tablespoons salt. Put the vinegar and spices on to boil, seasoning with salt and sugar—if you want to reduce or increase the amount of sugar do so until it suits you taste. When cold, add the oil and pour over the fish which are prepared thus:

Preparation of Fish for Pickling.

Young herring are most commonly used but smelts or sardines and the fillets of cod, haddock, mackerel are also good. With the smaller fish, cut off heads and tails and clean them, slitting them full length, then wash. Oil the steamer well, and put in fish one layer at a time, and steam over rapidly boiling water tightly covered 5 minutes—no more or they will fall apart—small fish need only 3 minutes. When done, immediately remove and put in cold crock, and pour the cold marinade over each layer as they are done. Marinade must not be hot or it will cook fish and soften them. If you are doing many fish pour ½ cup oil over top when they are in crock—do not use for 24 hours—these will keep for from 1 to 2 weeks depending on temperature.

We hope you like it and that we can help you again.

Sunshine Fudge.

Mix together 2 cups sugar, ½ cup water, ¼ cup light corn syrup in heavy saucepan, bring to boiling point quickly over fast heat and continue cooking until syrup spins double thread from side of spoon. While syrup is coming to this stage add ¼ teaspoon salt to 4 egg yolks and beat them until they are thick and lemon colored. When syrup is ready remove from heat and as soon as it stops bubbling start pouring in the yolks in a thin stream, beating the syrup with a wire whisk. After yolks are added beat all until creamy and thick enough to spread then add 2 tablespoons cream, ½ teaspoon lemon extract, and ½ teapoon orange extract. Spread on cake. If part of icing becomes too sugary to spread while you are working add an extra tablespoon cream to thin it enough to spread. When using this for a birthday cake, for an adult place orange sections for every tenth year, using strips of orange peel for each single year, in a circle about the cake. A very pretty and full flavored cake.

We hope you like it and that you will write again.

English Nurses Now Using Motorcycles

LONDON, Oct. 6—(CP)—Ideas back of the mechanization of the army have spread in England and district nurses in Southampton now are equipped with light motorcycles. Roar of the visiting angels' machines can be heard far and wide and heralds the advent of healing science with more publicity than has been given in that direction for many decades.

Nurses on cycles have their troubles but they are nothing compared to those in the educational tests for nurses which a recent meeting of the Dartford District Guardians Committee described as "absurd." It was reported at this meeting that five nurses returned from an examination "very disheartened" as a result of the arithmetic test.

Rev. J. W. Wilkinson, member of the committee, stepped into the breach and is to give tuition in sums to the nurses.

Business Woman Active

Busiest woman with a career in Britain is perhaps Miss Caroline Haslett, who besides attending two conferences in August and two in September has already attended 14 this summer.

She flew to Budapest to attend the congress of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, then to Vienna to represent the Electrical Association for Women at the World's Power Conference at Vienna.

As far as business women's problems are concerned, Miss Haslett finds the greatest is for a woman building up a new line of business to find time for leisure. Sensible and direct, stolid and handsome, Miss Haslett is a striking example of the woman in business who has a broad outlook and sane point of view. She is a director of a huge electrical association.

"Leisure is very necessary," she said, "because the people who live entirely for their job tend to become unbalanced. I find greatest relaxation when I have a free evening digging in my garden. At the week-ends, whenever possible, I go to my country cottage and lead a life as different as possible from office and London social life, wearing old clothes, sun-bathing, sea-bathing and gardening."

This type of woman would have won the approval of the great Lawrence of Arabia, according to Sir Ronald Storrs, former Governor of Jerusalem, who addressed the British Empire meeting at Cambridge. Sir Ronald said Lawrence was no woman-hater, but he resented women whom he thought did nothing at all but merely what he called "dressed and knew people."

A Woman Taxidermist

Miss Winifred Selina Mosby knows a great deal about dressing but it is of an unusual sort. As assistant curator of the new Central Library and Museum, Workshop, Miss Mosby is the only woman taxidermist in Great Britain. She has no blood-thirsty love of her art, however, but prefers animals that have died naturally or met with accidental death.

Her particular field is small animals and birds. Essential qualifications for the successful practice of taxidermy is extreme delicacy of touch, patience and an unlimited capacity for taking pains. These are qualities which Miss Mosby, young and attractive, possesses in a high degree.

Hats get "curiouser and curiouser" as the season progresses, and what a lot of fun we are having! It's amazing how becoming a surrealistic looking bit of millinery can be, when perched correctly on the proper hair-do—and it is fine tonic for jaded dispositions.

At the top is sketched a doll's pill-box, or would you call it a doll's sugar scoop? Anyway, it is black felt (and not much of it), trimmed with black grosgrain. The quilled hat is dashing, quite the Gibson girl verve—and it is greige with a big quill in natural tones. You'll see lots of gray this fall. The hat, centre, with the cocade, is also gray and its trim is purple grosgrain. (You'll see lots of purple, too).

The hat sketched at bottom looks like a Roman helmet, and except for the late 1938 on it, and the fact that it is black velvet and not metal, it is a Roman helmet in style, anyway.

Mission Worker Prizes Curios

WINNIPEG, Oct. 6 — (CP). — "Where shall I put these head hunters' aprons? And what can I do with this silk the Dowager Empress of China gave mother?" are questions Miss M. A. Campbell is deciding as she "gets settled" in her suite here.

In the course of moving, curios were turned out of trunks and cupboards, reminding Miss Campbell of experiences she and her parents had during the 46 years her father, Dr. W. Campbell, was a Presbyterian missionary in Formosa, says a writer in The Tribune.

Miss Campbell, who has lived in Winnipeg for many years, was western deputation secretary of the Zenana Bible and Medical Mission for 25 years, retiring in 1936. She was born in Formosa, and before she left for England at five years of age could speak more Chinese than English. Attending school in England for nearly 15 years, she returned to Formosa to find that she could speak English a great deal more effectively than Chinese.

"Once, meaning to tell a Chinese who had asked a question, that my sister was 13, I used the wrong words. He thought I had 13 sisters and pitied father for this awful calamity, praising him for bearing up so happily when he had been blessed with no sons and so many useless girls."

"Once all the missionary women in China sent a Bible as a gift to the Dowager Empress. In return she gave each of them a piece of fine silk. Miss Campbell has the green silk her mother received. When it was the style to wear wide belts with a big bow at the back, the Dowager Empress' silk was made into a belt. Now it is to be used for the back of a cushion in the new suite. The head hunters' aprons will make useful cushions because they are substantially-woven pieces of striped cloth with red predominating.

Miss Campbell has a carved wooden idol which a Chinese had worshipped 40 years along with other weird images. He was converted to Christianity by Miss Campbell's father and burned all his idols except this one which he gave to his friend.

WEDDINGS

McIlmoyle—Clysdale

(Examiner Correspondence.)

COTTESLOE, Oct. 6.—A wedding of great interest took place on Saturday afternoon in Cottesloe United Church, which has been built seventy-eight years and never before has witnessed such an event, when Sylvia Clydesdale, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Clysdale, became the bride of George McIlmoyle, son of Mrs. Herbert L. McIlmoyle and the late Herbert McIlmoyle of Selwyn.

The bride entered the church, which was decorated with pink and white streamers, a balsam branch arch and flowers of the season, to a wedding march played by Mrs. John Gallagher, was was given in marriage by her father.

She was charmingly gowned in white satin, toe-length, with short train, lace bodice, cut on princess lines, a veil of silk net and white accessories, carrying a bouquet of Empire Supreme pale pink roses.

Miss Daisy McIlmoyle, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, being gowned in pink sheer, cut on princess lines with robin-egg blue shoulder veil and accessories to match, and carrying dark pink roses..

Mr. William Bell acted as best man. Ushers were Messrs. Auryl Clysdale, brother of the bride, and Ivan Butler, cousin of the groom.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Gallagher gave a piano solo.

After the ceremony the bridal party repaired to the bride's home where about ninety guests were received by the mother of the bride, who was dressed in figured sheer crepe with navy blue redingote coat wearing a corsage of roses, and the groom's mother being dressed in figured sheer voil with navy redingote coat and wearing a corsage of roses.

A buffet luncheon was served after which the happy young couple left by motor to points in the United States by way of Niagara Falls. The bride travelled in old rose French sheer cut on straight lines, pearl grey coat and navy accessories.

On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Selwyn.

The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea service; to the bridesmaid, a gold necklace; to the best man, a Parker pen; to the ushers, initialed belts; and to the pianist, a frosted rose bowl.

For a vegetarian dinner we made this discovery:

Tomato, Rice and Mushroom Casserole:

Two cups cooked rice, 1 green pepper, 1½ cups tomatoes, canned or fresh; buttered crumbs, ¼ to ½ lb. mushrooms (the amount depends on whether you care to buy them specially for this dish or plan to have some leftovers from another meal), 4 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper.

Chop the peppers fine and saute them and the sliced mushrooms in the butter for 5 minutes. Then add these to the remaining ingredients and pour all into butter casserole, sprinkling the buttered crumbs on top with some additional salt and some paprika. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about half hour.

This is especially good when you wish to serve plenty of fresh salad vegetables, and when a meal must be prepared in the morning for quick serving in the evening.

No September Relief Bill In Havelock

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Oct 6.—The Havelock municipal council met on Monday evening in the council chambers with all members present and Reeve Ernest Seeney presiding.

A communication was received in reference to Havelock students that attended the Peterborough Collegiate in 1937 and took an academic course. The clerk was instructed to procure a list of subjects taken by these students for the next meeting.

The balance of the correspondence was ordered filed.

The reeve was authorized to purchase a stove for the council chamber from the Hubbel Hardware at $15.

The clerk was instructed to forward a letter to the secretary of the Havelock Badminton Club, asking them to co-operate with the caretaker of the town hall, by playing only on afternoons when the hall was not being used that evening. The club members may have the hall for extra nights during the week by making arrangements with the caretaker, at the same rental, $1.50 per night.

A notable fact made known by the presentation of accounts was that there was no relief during the past month.

The following general accounts were passed and ordered paid on motion of Councillors Squire and Wilde: W. J. Akins, salary, phone, etc., $53.95 Bank of Toronto, Hydro, town hall, $8.55; Beatrice Dewey, re Foley estate, $5; transferred to school boards, $1,900; D. Russia Breaks Alliance With France Over Czech Question

In condemnation of France's stand in the recent Czech crisis, Russia has served notice on her French ally that it does not consider the Franco-Soviet alliance as binding and that Russia no longer can consider itself as an ally of France. According to the Russian version, the breaking of the treaty will leave France with only one possible ally—Great Britain. By the abrogation of the Franco-Soviet treaty, France will lose the support of thousands of Russian soldiers in the event war should break out in Europe. Thousands of these troops are shown ABOVE, before Lenin's tomb during a recent celebration. Dictator Stalin is shown, LEFT, while Marshal Voroshiloff, head of the Russian army, is shown, RIGHT.

Missionary Slides Shown Millbrook

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Oct. 6.—On Monday evening, October 3rd, the congregation of Grace Presbyterian church, Millbrook, gathered in the church auditorium to hear Rev. Davis and his wife, missionaries (on furlough) from Manchuria. For the past week they have been lecturing in the Peterborough Presbytery.

With Rev. D. A. McKenzie as chairman, the gathering opened with an appropriate hymn, with Miss G. Johnston at the organ.

Mr. B. B. Dawson assisted Rev. Davis with the lantern slides. Part way through the showing, with interesting talks on each picture, Miss Eileen Hunker contributed a solo.

It may be interesting to note that the sum of eleven thousand dollars was received from the Presbyterian churches in the Peterborough Presbytery last year.

In Rev. Davis' field there are 60 men workers and 16 lady workers, making a total of 76 of Christ's following in the far flung lands.

Great Fish Pier Is Completed

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 6—(CP)— Gloucester's long-sought fish pier, built with more than $... 000,000 in Public Works Administration, state and city funds, has been completed. The P. W. A. provided $450,000, the state $660,000 and the city $100,000. An operating corporation will repay the state $20,000 annually over a certain period of years, then $25,000 annually.

The cold storage building, with every facility for freezing and storage of fish, is four stories high. Built of brick and concrete, it contains an ice-making plant with a daily capacity of 50 tons and storage space for 1,000 tons. A temperature of 35 degrees below zero will be maintained in the fast-freezing room.

Yelverton Enjoys Fine Anniversary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

YELVERTON, Oct. 6.—Very successful anniversary services were enjoyed at Yelverton United Church on Sunday morning and evening, a large number of friends motoring in from neighboring churches to unite with the local congregation for this annual special occasion.

The church interior was beautifully decorated, with late summer flowers. Bouquets of asters, dahlias, phlox, petunias, snapdragon, etc., were placed on the organ, the window ledges and before the pulpit, while large baskets full of flowers of varied hue adorned the Communion table.

The guest speaker for the occasion was Rev. Franklin Bannister of Bowmanville, a former college associate of Rev. C. H. Ferguson, pastor of the Yelverton church. Rev. Bannister chose timely themes for his forceful addresses, his morning text being taken from Matthew 14, verse 30, "But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid and beginning to sink, he cried saying Lord, save me."

The Yelverton choir, with Mr. Vance Wilson at the organ, and their numbers augmented for the occasion, provided excellent music, rendering a beautiful anthem in the morning and two at evening worship. Miss Reta McDougall of Peterborough was guest soloist and rendered touching numbers at each service.

The announcement was made that the annual fowl dinner in connection with the anniversary services would be held at the church property on Friday, October 7. This is the only event of this type in the community this year.

A liberal offering was received, although no special plea was made for financial assistance. The local church people deeply appreciate the interest shown by friends of other centres in their historical "White Church upon the Hill."

The choir chose as their morning anthem "O Worship the King," and Mr. and Mrs. R. Finlay very capably rendered a duet, "When I Think of His Love for Me."

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Zufelt spoke on the text, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my church," explaining the real meaning of this text. The choir sang as their evening anthem, "Great is the Lord," and Mrs. and Miss Jean Holden sang a duet, "Whispering Hope."

Sensational New "No-Scrub" Soap—

NEW HIGH-TEST OXYDOL Washes Clothes UP TO 15% WHITER

New* High-Test *OXYDOL contains a revolutionary new ingredient that makes it give up to TWICE THE SUDS even in hard water . . . safe as ever for washable colors, fabrics and hands

NOW comes a sensational new advance in soap-making to prove again that "the wonders of science never cease." An amazing new ingredient that makes High-Test OXYDOL far whiter washing, in tub or washing machine. Yet an ingredient that keeps it safe as ever for washable colors—safe for washable fabrics and hands!

Tested against old-fashioned bar and package soaps in hard water, new High-Test Oxydol does these remarkable things:—

(1) Washes white clothes up to 15% whiter, as shown by scientific Tintometer records. (2) Gives up to TWICE as much suds—suds that stand up two to three times longer.

Colors Stay Surprisingly Fresh

New High-Test Oxydol is amazingly safe for washable colored things. In laboratory tests, sheer cotton prints washed as many as 175 times in new High-Test Oxydol suds showed no perceptible sign of fading—came surprisingly fresh!

In tub washing—High-Test Oxydol soaks dirt loose in as little as 10 minutes. No scrubbing, no boiling, as with less modern soaps. Washed this way, clothes last 2 to 3 times longer from the standpoint of washday wear and tear compared with old-fashioned methods.

In washing machines—new High-Test Oxydol soaks dirt loose while the washer is running—gives you DOUBLE-ACTION wash. No need to waste time scrubbing "extra dirty" spots to get clothes really clean. Saves work—saves trouble—saves time.

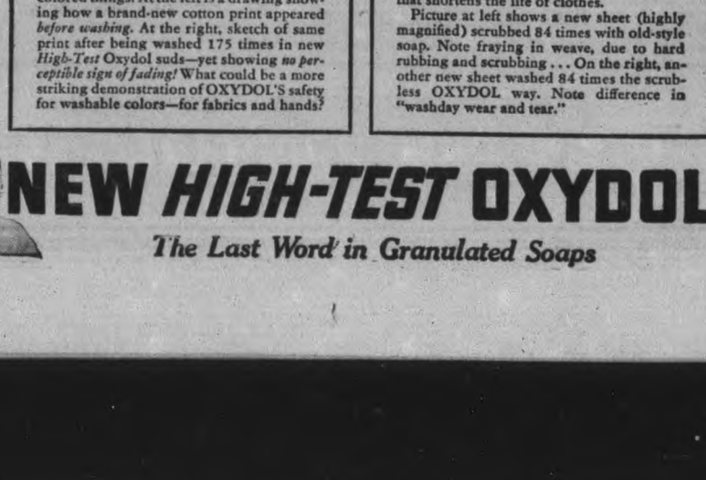
It Goes Farther, Too

Because of greater washing power, each cup of High-Test Oxydol goes up to one-fourth again as far—does up to 25% more work—than the same amount of old-fashioned soaps. So it's extremely economical, too.

You'll find High-Test OXYDOL at all dealers in the familiar orange and blue bull's-eye package. (No change in the box—the difference is in the soap.) Get a package today. Procter & Gamble.

MADE IN CANADA



GIVES WHITER WASHES THAN EVER—When the old OXYDOL was first introduced, women believed that the last word in laundry soap had been found. But now comes a remarkable new ingredient that makes new High-Test OXYDOL as much as 15% whiter washing than less modern soaps.

The two sketches above illustrate High-Test OXYDOL'S amazing safety for washable colored things. At the left is a drawing showing how a brand-new cotton print appeared before washing. At the right, sketch of same print after being washed 175 times in new High-Test Oxydol suds—yet showing no perceptible sign of fading! What could be a more striking demonstration of OXYDOL'S safety for washable colors—for fabrics and hands?

OXYDOL soaks dirt loose in as little as 10 minutes. Thus ends the washboard scrubbing that shortens the life of clothes.

Picture at left shows a new sheet (highly magnified) scrubbed 84 times with old-style soap. Note fraying in weave, due to hard rubbing and scrubbing . . . On the right, another new sheet washed 84 times the scrubless OXYDOL way. Note difference in "washday wear and tear."

Rugby Experts Dubious On Champions

The East's short football season, which makes it well nigh impossible for any team to start off on the wrong foot and still bob up champions, gets underway Saturday as the College and Big Four schedules open. The payoff usually is to a team which can win its first two games, but right now coaches are concentrating on the opening hurdle.

So far, pre-season exhibition games have allowed little to choose among three teams in the college loop—McGill Redmen, University of Toronto and University of Western Ontario. The experts have given each of these a call for college honors, ignoring the defending champion Queens outfit. In the Big Four it's been Ottawa Rough Riders and the national champion Toronto Argonauts that the boys like.

The Redmen and Western Mustangs clash at Montreal Saturday, and it's figured to be a toss-up. The Mustangs likely will be without their ace backfielder, Claude Moore, suffering a leg injury, and Snapback Osborne Cox. On the other hand the Redmen will be at full strength.

Coach Warren Stevens, prepping his Blues for their opener against Queen's at Kingston, Ont., said the team will be without Halfback Dom Mumford and Snapback Doug Turner against the Tricolor team.

The Ontario Rugby Football Union schedule opens officially next Monday, Thanksgiving Day, with Sarnia Imperials opposing Toronto Balmy Beach, and Montreal Nationals meeting Peterborough Orfuns.

Wallaceburg Here To Play Petes

Wallaceburg and the Petes meet here to-morrow (Friday) night at 8.30 o'clock in the George St. arena in the first of the three-game O.L.A. senior "B" final series. Second game is slated for the Western Ontario centre on Monday and third, if necessary, to be decided upon after the second scrap. A huge crowd of fans is expected out to-morrow evening to witness the Peterborough lacrossers make their attempt to bring an Ontario pennant here. They eliminated the Inglewood-Caledon team last night in Lindsay to win their two-group finals and qualify to meet the other provincial finalist, Wallaceburg, for the 1938 title.

Not much is known of the Wallaceburg team up this way. They won a big grouping down through the western part of the province and must have plenty of class to get so far. But they will have to be good to hold the high-stepping Petes, who have weathered a tough season, to come this distance. With all the players expected out, the Randle gang will be rarin' to go, and ready to battle to the final whistle to gain a game advantage in this crucial series. It rates a record crowd of fans.

Lakefield Team Loses To Trinity

The Lakefield Preparatory School, fourteen and under, team was defeated on Wednesday by Trinity College Junior School by 15-5 in an exciting match at Port Hope.

The T.C.S. began strongly, scoring two majors in the first half and running brilliantly for many gains. The Lakefield team picked up in the last half, scoring a major and allowing only one point against them.

The feature of the Lakefield play was the brilliant work of Moore in the line, Tilley at quarter, and Wilkes ii.'s line plunges.

For T.C.S. Campbell showed up well, and the work of the halfbacks was spectacular. The Grove team nearly scored again near the end of the game, having a great deal of the play.

P.C.I. Gridders Here Saturday

P.C.I. rugby teams open their 1938 local C.O.S.S.A. schedules with games against Oshawa High School here this Saturday, playing at the new gridiron in the Exhibition Grounds. The junior teams clash at 10 in the morning down there, while the senior teams tangle at two in the afternoon at the southend park. Efforts were made to cancel the senior struggle, owing to the ball game here that day, but they proved fruitless — so Coach H. L. Bamforth of P.C.I. put the game on for two o'clock to permit fans to see half of the senior struggle and still attend the ball game, if they wished. The two football tussles should draw a good following of fans.

The 1937 provincial championship P.C.I. team—rebuilt to a considerable extent—has one win to date, pulling out a close victory in Lindsay last Saturday. The Garnet and Gray gang should be in fine shape and ready to pull a few fancy plays in their usual speedy open style against the Motor City squad. Not much is known yet of the Oshawa senior or junior teams. Coach David's junior P.C.I. crew lost by a single point in Lindsay in their initial start but hope to break into the victory column here this Saturday.

Eastview Out To Curb Jehovah Witnesses

OTTAWA, Oct. 6.—(CP).—Council in Eastview, Ottawa suburb, today was looking for legal advice as to whether it had the right to stop automobiles equipped with signs advertising the Witnesses of Jehovah cruising around the town streets.

Police Chief Richard Manion said he had stopped the use of loudspeakers on the automobiles and sought to issue a summons to the driver of one of them for creating a nuisance. A man distributing circulars for the same group complained he was manhandled, said the Chief. The advice police gave him was to leave town.

Why should our town be disturbed by such propaganda," asked Deputy Reeve Cantin at the council meeting last night. "Why should we allow these people to interfere with our religion?"

Five Portions Of New York Yankee Dynamite Row

New York Yankees, as they move into the world series in an effort to make it three in a row, are often called the team without a weak spot in the batting order, with every man in the line-up packing a punch. Here are top five sluggers in the champions' array, each one of whom banged out 20 or more home runs during the year, the first time in history five men on one team ever accomplished the feat. LEFT, Tom Henrich, up-and-coming outfielder, who had 22 circuit blows, and RIGHT, Bill Dickey, No. 1 clutch-hitter and all-star catcher, who had 27. In the CENTRE from TOP to BOTTOM, are Joe DiMaggio, the team's leading batter and home run hitter; Lou Gehrig, iron-man first baseman, and Joe Gordon, sensational rookie second baseman. Der Mag put 32 balls out of the park, Columbia Lou 29, and Joe the Flash, 25.

Joe Gordon's Elopement Credited For His Classy Comeback

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP)—Joe Gordon is without doubt baseball's greatest walking advertisement for married life.

Whether or not his "taking the step," had anything to do with his work on the ball field isn't definitely known, but there's no denying the fact that from the day he eloped with his campus sweetheart, he changed from just another disappointing rookie to the classiest second baseman to come down the pike since Charley Gehringer.

In case you haven't heard the statistical details, he's handling the keystone sack assignment for New York Yankees, baseball's No. 1 ball club. He's 24, up from the coast league by way of Newark, can hit in the accepted theory of the Yanks —which is that you can't field a home run—and can field anything and everything in his general direction.

When Gordon started out this season his fielding was acceptable, but every pitcher in the league fooled him on a high inside pitch. So Manager Joe McCarthy, who can't stand for such goings on, benched him.

For a while it looked like curtains for our hero. So one day, to while away the time, he eloped to Elkton, Md., with his campus sweetheart in his days at the University of Oregon. Some few days later the Yanks, trailing 2-1 in a ball game, nominated Joe for a pinch-hitting job with a mate on first base in the ninth inning. The rival pitcher served up a high inside pitch, and Gordon parked it among the paying customers in the left field stands.

They put him back in the lineup the next day, and he's been there since.

The 1,750-ton submarine, Seal, is shown in this unusual head-on shot after the craft was launched at Chatham naval dockyard recently. The craft, most modern of undersea boats, is 271 feet long and said to have the most powerful armament of any submarine afloat.

Improves Her Land But Draws Fine

HALIFAX, Oct. 6—(CP)—An attempt to beautify her property on the shores of North West Arm resulted in a fine being imposed on Mrs. Byron Dauphinee of suburban Armdale.

The property owner was fined $20 by a county magistrate who convicted her of violating the Navigable Waters Protection Act by having loads of gravel dumped into the Arm near her land between high and low water marks.

Her counsel suggested that a minimum fine be imposed since Mrs. Dauphinee's land had been a pre-Confederation grant and as such, extended into the Arm as far as the low water mark. He entered a guilty plea because while his client had undertaken to improve her property, the Arm had been designated as a navigable water.

"As far as I can see, this work was an improvement," the magistrate said. "The fine seems rather severe but there is nothing I can do about it."

Western Lass Steals Show In Ladies' Open

By Ross Munro
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 6 (C.P.). — Seven women who have established themselves in the golfing world will tee off here to-day in the quarter-final of the Canadian women's open golf championship, but the tournament spotlight was on the eighth—an unpredictable Prairie youngster who has provided two consecutive upsets.

In the first and second rounds the 17-year-old Rosetown, Sask., girl, Margaret (Puddin') Esson, eliminated experienced stars by huge margins to become the toast of the tournament and the greatest sensation of any open in recent years.

She took the turn yesterday three up over Winnifred Evans of Vancouver, and finished the match on the 13th green, 7 and 5. The previous day she smothered Nan Baird of the British Curtis Cup team, 6 and 4.

For the quarter-final she will find still competition in Mrs. J. B. Walker, a persistent player and another member of the British team.

This is only the second open in which Miss Esson has competed.

Next youngest player in the quarter-final is 22-year-old Clarrie Tiernan of Dublin who meets the veteran Mrs. W. G. Fraser of Ottawa.

Two Toronto women meet in a third match with Mrs. E. H. Gooderham drawn against Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen. Jessie Anderson, Scotland, plays Evelyn Mills of Ottawa in another match.

Hunt For Heavy To Meet Louis Finds Few Candidates

By Drew Middleton
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (A.P.). — The search for a heavyweight to grapple on something like even terms with Joe Louis goes on with greater fervor and poor results.

Lou Nova, the crude but powerful Californian who stopped Gunnar Barlund on Monday night, is the only candidate to emerge from the lower strata of heavyweights.

All the other contenders have old and somewhat tarnished names. A glance at the ranking list reveals such familiar monickers as Max Baer, Tony Galento, and Tommy Farr. Jimmy Adamick, Jack Kearns' wonder boy, is out of it, assisted by Roscoe Toles, the large tough Detroit negro.

Toles is not listed among the outstanding contenders. He has beaten Adamick and on his own admission is willing to meet anyone from Louis down, but it is ring tradition that a fight between negroes seldom draws more than peanuts.

Nova gained considerable stature by eliminating Barlund. The Californian is a big, bronzed kid who fights in a "stand up" style reminiscent of the figures in British boxing prints.

It took the hottest National League race in year sto eliminate Galento from the sports pages, but the portly one will be back there swinging—and hollering—this winter. It will not be surprising if Galento eventually lands a fall shot at the champion, although the thought of what Louis' jab will do to Tony's scarred noggin causes strong men to shudder.

Juveniles Are Leaders In Many Crimes

Extracts published from the paper on juvenile delinquency which Chief Constable Samuel Newhall read before the Police Association of Ontario at last week's convention in Toronto aroused so much interest that The Examiner has secured a copy of the chief's paper and here presents it to its readers:

I am sure that every Chief Constable and every serious minded citizen of Canada is confronted with the problem of juvenile delinquency in their several municipalities and has seriously studied how best to combat increase in crime amongst the youth of our country. Something must be done to save the future men and women of Canada from drifting to lawlessness and Godlessness.

How best this may be accomplished is the problem which must be considered, not only by the police, but by every branch of Society. What must we do to make our country a land to be desired by those who want to live in peace and security?

The problem of juvenile crime is not confined to our country alone but is universal. In the United States the crime situation, especially among juveniles is alarming. Discussing crime in that country in 1935, the Christian Science Monitor stated: "Americans are challenged to study new figures which show that crime, in the United States, is to a shocking degree by youths, aged 19. Out of 90,504 arrested for crime during the first quarter of 1935, the Federal Bureau finds that 19 year olds exceeded all other groups. The seriousness of crimes committed by youthful persons is indicated by the following list of charges placed against persons under 20 years of age: Murder, 122; robbery, 749; burglary, 3,029; larceny, 3,112; auto thefts, 1,063; carrying concealed weapons, 162."

Speaking to the grand jury at Leeds, England, Justice McCarty said: 'Crime in England today is much greater than at any time during the past 60 years. The greatest feature is that the number of boys under 16 years found guilty of indictable offences is very much larger than in 1907. There has been a regrettable increase in crime by people between 16 and 21 years."

Juvenile Deliquency

For figures on juvenile delinquency in Canada I have taken those appearing in the annual report of the Chief Constable for the City of Toronto for the year 1937, and I am sure these can be taken as representative of the situation in other municipalities throughout Canada. In Toronto we find that in 1937 there were 963 charges for indictable offences laid against 714 juveniles. Of this number:

85 were charged twice, 22 were charged three times, 12 were charged four times, 9 were charged five times, 3 were charged six times, 3 were charged eight times, 1 was charged nine times, 1 was charged eleven times.

The charges in which these juveniles were involved included 133 cases of shopbreaking; 91 cases of housebreaking; 534 thefts; 15 indecent assaults; 24 cases of receiving stolen property and 25 cases of malicious damage to property. The balance of the cases included robbery, purse snatching, wounding, shoolifting, etc.

We can, therefore, accept the fact that the increase in juvenile crime is universal at least amongst English speaking nations. The question as to cause and cure is receiving the serious attention of police officers and only recently Chief Constable Draper appointed a special committee to investigate and report on this subject. He also called for a report from each senior officer of the force requesting that each one give his opinion as to the cause and what effective measures might be taken to remedy the situation. In the opinion of these officers the problem must be faced from three angles. The home the school and the church and in that order of importance. The home has the child for seven days of the week, the school five and the church possibly one day only of the week. Taken in that proportion it is quite evident that the greater responsibility rests on the parents.

The Parents' Duty

Are the parents of today taking their share of the responsibility in the task of making good citizens of the future men and women of Canada? Are they setting the proper example in those things that make for good citizenship? Are not a great many leaving the upbringing of their children to the school and the church? I am afraid that parents of today are so engrossed in the selfish desire for pleasure that they forget they have reached years of maturity and taken upon themselves the solemn responsibility of parenthood and family duties and all that these entail. They should not bring children into this world and, as it were, lay their offspring upon the doorstep of the church, the school and the police station. The old motto of our grandparents "God Bless Our Home" has been turned to the wall and in its place we have put one which says "Let's Go." It is high time we reversed these signs. Unless there is an awakening in the minds and conduct of the parents all other efforts will be of little avail, neither can we hope for any decrease in crime. Let us make our homes so happy, cheerful and merry that our children will want to spend their evenings at home instead of on the street corner, dance hall or beer parlor. Let us try this for a while and I am sure the results will be so startling that we will be overjoyed with our success.

School's Responsibility

Next in line comes our schools. Here the children spend a good portion of their time and it is here we should continue the work of preparing the youth of our country to meet and overcome every temptation to do wrong. Each teacher should see to it that nothing which he may do will lead any of his pupils to take the downward path of life. He should instil in the minds of our children nothing but respect for the rights of others, for law and order and for those whose sworn duty it is to enforce the law and protect the lives and the property of the citizens of our country. So also should the future men and women of Canada be imbued with love for their country and loyalty to our King and the greatest empire the world has ever known.

I would suggest that the minister of education set aside at least one half hour twice each week, one to teach the children the horror and the futility of crime and the other on loyalty. I am satisfied that if this program were carried out nothing but good could result.

Finally we pass the child on to the church and we must not lay too much stress on the duty of the church in the final training of our youth. Some of our churches have made wonderful advancement in their efforts to interest our boys and girls in good, clean living. Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, boys' clubs, girls' clubs, and athletic organization have ben sponsored by the churches. They have interested our service clubs in the work of providing camps and equipment as well as instructors to look after the many underprivileged children of the cities.

What I would like to see is a conference, Dominion wide, of the parents, schools, churches, and all our Service Clubs out of which should come the greatest concerted crusade ever launched against crime and the persistent criminal. When that day comes then crime amongst juveniles will be reduced to a minimum.

The parade headed by the local reeve, council, clerk and village solicitor, and made up of merchants, lodges veterans and citizens drew a great crowd despite the bad weather.

Thursday the reeve and council were photographed along with the school boards. A childrens' balloon fight was to be staged at the station. The local fire brigade also gave a demonstration for the benefit of the cameras.

On completion the full film will be shown at the town hall on Thursday. October 13, when the winners of the special screen contest will be judged and the prizes awarded.

WARKWORTH, Oct. 6.—Successful anniversary services were held in Trinity United church, Norham, Sunday. Rev. D. T. McClintock of Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, was the guest speaker. Both morning and evening services were largely attended. The altar was artistically decorated with potted plants, flowers and fruit.

In Rev. The speaker emphasized the fact to his hearers if at times when trouble arose in the daily life, that same message was followed to make peace what a different world it would be.

The choir rendered appropriate numbers with Miss Emma West at the organ and Miss Beatrice Bragg at the morning service were an as director. The numbers rendered anthem, "Hark, the Glad Creation anthem, "Hark the Glad Creation" and a solo "In the Sunshine of His Smile," by Miss Vera Plant. In the evening Mrs. W. Campbell and R. T. BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

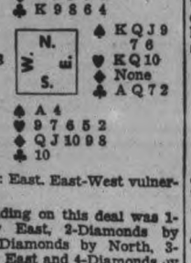
"The Authority on Authorities"

DESTROY RUFFING

WHEN YOU FEEL pretty sure, from the bidding, that the declarer expects to cross-ruff the hand, your best way to cripple him is by leading trumps. In fact, lead them as many times as you can and thus make him use up two on each trick instead of one.



(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

The bidding on this deal was 1-Spade by East, 2-Diamonds by South, 3-Diamonds by North, 3-Spades by East and 4-Diamonds by North, which East doubled.

West led the spade 10, which South took with the A. A heart was led to the A and a spade trick given up to East. East thought he had nothing better to return than another spade, on which South tossed his club and ruffed in dummy. A club was next led and trumped in the South and followed by the ruff of a heart in the North. South continued cross-ruffing back and forth with the result that he lost only the spade trick and the two high diamonds.

If West had read from the bidding that North and South held the type of hands that would be cross ruffed and had laid down his two high diamonds and followed with a third, the result would have been quite different. That play would have limited declarer to exactly seven tricks.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

How should South play to make 6-hearts after the lead of the spade 9?

Decree Powers Granted To Daladier

PARIS, Oct. 6 (AP).—Premier Edouard Daladier early Wednesday won his parliament's consent to rule France by decree until Nov. 15, after a stormy night of political manoeuvring during which he was forced to make repeated concessions to avoid overthrow of his government.

The vote, 331 to 78 with 204 deputies refusing to vote, was notably different from the 535 to 75 approval with which the chamber yesterday acclaimed Daladier as a savior of peace.

Daladier now has to push his dictatorial powers bill through the Senate, which adjourned shortly after midnight. Lengthy wrangling kept the chamber in session until dawn.

Senate approval of the Premier's demand for decree powers seemed assured when the Finance Committee of the Upper House passed the government bill with only three abstentions, including former Premier Pierre Laval, and no opposing votes.

Only by a strange combination of appeals to patriotism and shrewd trading did Daladier keep socialists from casting their 157 votes against him.

Short Rule

He was forced to cut the term of the decree powers from December 31 to the accepted November 15, to promise the chamber publicly that he would respect peoples' front social reforms, and agree to call parliament into session about Nov. 16, so the Cabinet would have no chance of passing next year's budget by decree.

The announcement that France would at once regularize her diplomatic relations with Italy, by sending an Ambassador to Rome accredited to the King as Emperor of Ethiopia, was followed by the announcement the city of Paris had invited the Crown Prince and Princess of Italy to be present when King Leopold of Belgium unveils a monument to his father Nov. 12.

Italy's Crown Princess, Marie Jose, is Leopold's sister.

Trust In League Over For Britain

LONDON, Oct. 6—(CP Cable).—Lord Rothermere's Daily Mail (Independent) to-day declared it was certain the British people never again would put "a shred of trust" in the League of Nations. "They will instead rearm."

The newspaper declared:

"As everybody now realizes too well, the political moon-rakers and busybodies of Geneva manufactured rebuff after rebuff and humiliation after humiliation for Great Britain.

"The league largely helped dig the pit from which Mr. Chamberlain's realism rescued humanity last week. . . .

"The country may be sure that Mr Chamberlain, who was one of the first statesmen to say bluntly that the league had become a gross futility will never attempt to build his peace on this rotten structure."

The Daily Herald (Labor) demanded to know why the Government was not ready to co-operate with Soviet Russia in the preservation of peace. It asked, "Does it set an ideological difference above peace?"

If that were the case, it said, "let us have the courage to say so and accept the verdict of public opinion."

The newspaper declared Labor was willing to co-operate with Fascist powers provided they genuinely wish to secure peace, and added: "Peace cannot be secured by private bargains. It can be secured by the co-operation of all nations."

Woman Captured In Baby's Murder

OTTAWA, Oct. 6—(CP)—Charged with the murder of a 10-month-old boy, Mrs. Mary Dora Mulligan, 27, of Ottawa, was remanded for a week when she appeared in police court today. Court officials said she will not be given a preliminary hearing until after an inquest into the child's death on Oct. 18. She told police the child was her adopted son.

Mrs. Mulligan was arrested at Norway Bay, Que, 30 miles northwest of Ottawa, yesterday and brought to Ottawa last night. Detectives sought her after the body of the baby was left at a hospital Sunday night. The woman who brought it disappeared and authorities were not able to locate her at the address she gave when doctors at the hospital found the child had been dead for some hours.

Hospital doctors said the child had suffered a fractured skull. The result of a post mortem examination will be given the inquest jury.

Get Oxygen in Your Blood and You'll Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These tiny pills help you make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. 4th Fire In Year Forces Move By The Kenny's

TORONTO, Oct. 6—(CP). — Another fire broke out at the home of the Matthew Kennys last night, an outbreak enlivened by Mrs. Kenny's frantic search of the smoking debris for a missing baby.

Amidst the excitement it never was satisfactorily explained which baby was missing, though it was learned from the neighbors the child was out with Pa Kenny. Of the Kennys' large brood, several are young enough to be classed as babies.

The fire was the fourth at the Kenny home within a year and the second in a month at the family's present residence, Bathurst street. As an aftermath, an immediate move on the part of the news-making Kennys appeared necessary. Only two rooms of the house remain intact and these are flooded with water.

Mrs. Kenny Appears

Mrs. Kenny, a vociferous contender in the famous Toronto stork derby, came running up the street shortly after the fire had been extinguished. Pushing her way through the crowd and blinking in the face of photographers' flash bulbs, she hurried into the house, screaming:

"My baby! My baby! where's my baby?"

The stocky little woman who settled her claims to the $500,000 derby prize for $12,500 several months ago ran from room to room of the charred residence seeking her child. Occasionally she ceased her inquiries to ask policemen and spectators who had set her house afire.

No one was at home when a neighbor of the Kennys discovered the fire which swept the kitchen, up the front staircase and into a bedroom before it was put out. Fire Marshal W. J. Scott and Prof. L. Joslyn Rogers, Provincial Analyst, and Fire Chief George Sinclair were quickly on the scene to open an investigation.

Britain's Trade Board Chief, Stanley To Stick Despite Munich Deal Views

London, Oct. 6 (CP Cable). REPORTS were current in parliamentary lobbies today that Oliver Stanley, president of the board of trade, seriously considered resigning his cabinet post over the Munich settlement of the Czech-German crisis but finally decided to remain in the government.

"A Londoner's Diary," the Evening Standard's gossip column, predicted there would be no further cabinet resignations, adding: "Last night, after there had been a great deal of coming and going behind the scenes, Mr. Stanley finally resigned himself to non-resignation."

The customary silence prevailed in official quarters concerning the reports.

See Combine In Oshawa Coal Tenders

Prices For 500 Tons Came In Same Upsetting Alderman

OSHAWA, Oct. 7—(CP).—"There is no question in my mind that there is a combine. There is no need advertising for tenders when all the bids are going to be the same," Ald. Finley Dafoe declared at last night's meeting of city council, when tenders for 500 tons of coal were opened.

The alderman unsuccessfully endeavored to have the city contact the mines direct, in an effort to "break the monopoly."

Alderman Jack Coleman said the city generally divided the business among a number of coal merchants, as their prices were the same.

Council finally decided to purchase Nova Scotia coal, if acceptable, at a price of $7.25 a ton from Bathe and McLellan.

U. S. Air Supremacy Said Threatened

WASHINGTON. Oct. 7.—(CP)—Major General Harry Arnold the United States Army Air Corps chief said today U.S. "supremacy" in developing military aircraft is threatened.

He gave no particulars, but informed persons said the air corps was concerned particularly over Germany's perfection of a fast, flexible single-seater fighter plane, the Messer-Schmidt.

Earlier models of this plane helped give General Franco an edge in the Spanish war. General Ernst Udet, world war ace, who is in charge of Germany's present production, is credited with travelling 381 miles an hour in a later model.

Great Britain's newest fighter, the Spitfire, also is reported to have attained tremendous speeds—in one instance well past 400 miles an hour, though with a following wind.

No Canadian Tie Asked In Czech Pledge

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 7 (CP Cable). — Canada will not be asked to join in the British guarantee of the territorial independence of Czechoslovakia, it was stated officially today.

The position of the British Government is that the Dominions will be excluded expressly from the terms of the guarantee when it is drafted after the boundaries of Czechoslovakia have been finally settled. Of course, if any Dominion asked to join in the guarantee, its request would be granted, but it is considered extremely unlikely here that that will be done.

Although the guarantee is now in effect it will not be incorporated in a treaty until all the boundaries have been delineated, and that may not be completed for several weeks.

Meanwhile, there was considerable conjecture in political circles as to how far Great Britain is committed by the verbal guarantee already given. In Britain's long history, this is the first territorial guarantee given in Central Europe and the average man is frankly puzzled by it.

As the session of parliament closed yesterday, the opposition asked many questions about the guarantee, most of which the government turned aside with the statement that details could not be discussed until the Czech boundaries have been officially set.

Find Rolling Widow Is An Impostor

JHANSI, India, Oct. 7. — (CP-Reuters).—Crowds gathered on the main street here when a female figure rolled into the city from Poona. The stranger, in tattered rags and near exhaustion, explained she was rolling along the ground to Bonares, Holy City of the Hindus, to carry out a command of her dead husband.

A fund was immediately collected by sympathetic onlookers and the proceeds turned over to the widow. One of the bystanders, however, had his doubts. Under questioning the "widow" turned out to be a man who made a handsome living by the imposture.

800 Refugees Invade Prague Daily

Panic Scenes Grow As German Pincher Extends

By Alvin Steinkopf
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

PRAGUE, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Hostile forces were closing in on all sides today to give this ancient capital more and more the aspect of a besieged city.

The number of fugitives is increasing. A week ago 300 daily got temporary care at the Prague Deutsches Haus. The figure has jumped to 800.

All afternoon newspapers have dwindled to a single sheet to conserve paper. The municipality decided to keep open trenches dug in parks and about public buildings.

An army postoffice was established despite partial demobilization. The provincial Bohemian government met without its Sudeten German delegates. Mail from abroad virtually has been suspended.

There were panicky scenes as the circle of German occupation approached Prague. Jews, seeking to flee, feared being caught in Sudeten zones.

The Jews were afraid that violent anti-Semitism might develop. Jewish leaders here said most of the comparatively few Jews in Sudetenland — said to number 29,000 — had fled before the German troops. Instances of mistreatment were reported to have occurred in the interval between the withdrawal of Czechoslovak troops and the arrival of the Germans.

Sold Out Again

Criticisms, resentment and anger followed receipt of news that an international commission in Berlin had added a fifth zone to the four districts a four-power conference in Munich had granted Germany.

"We were sold out once," some Czechoslovaks cried. "We are now being sold out again. Our hands are being tied. We appeal to the world to aid us against trickery at Berlin."

A propaganda ministry spokesman said the people were certain plebiscites arranged in the Munich agreement for areas of mixed population would be forgotten in the rapid surrounding of Bohemia.

The Czechs said that many mixed and questionable districts were included by the commission without asking the population what it wished to do.

It was expected that occupation of the fifth zone would cut the main railway between Prague and Budapest and that going to Brunn (Brno), 90 miles east of Prague, would mean crossing German-occupied territory.

The prospect was that Bohemia, in the west, would be pinched almost completely from the rest of the republic.

Urges Lowering Of Health Cost

WINNIPEG, Oct. 7.—(CP).—Necessity of increasing preventive medical work in Manitoba to cut the tremendous cost of hospitalization, social and medical services, was stressed in an address here by Hon. I. B. Griffiths, Minister of Health and Public Welfare.

Only a definite program can check the great outlay in expenditures and services during the past few years, Mr. Griffiths said, in analyzing the costs of services extended by his department.

More than $500,000 was spent last year on hospitalization alone, cost of which has been increasing about $30,000 annually. More than $500,000 was spent on child welfare.

The department is attempting to find methods of increasing its preventive work, Mr. Griffiths stated. At present, more than 90 cents of every dollar is spent for hospitalization, welfare and mental institutions, while only about eight cents on a dollar is going into preventive work.

Jap Army Now Only 80 Miles Off Hankow

SHANGHAI, Oct. 7 (A.P.). — Japanese forces reached a railway route to the military heart of China to-day and reported a series of gains at far-distant points of the sprawling Chinese battleground.

Chinese admitted Japanese cavalrymen had fought their way to the Peiping-Hankow Railway that leads to the nation's military capital, Hankow, culminating a 200-mile, cross-country detour drive that started four months ago.

Japanese advancing up the Yangtse River occupied Kichun, 80 miles downstream from Hankow, and, far to the north, four Japanese columns were converging on the mountain stronghold of the Eighth Army, elusive legions of Chu Teh, Chinese Red Napoleon.

The main Japanese cross-country force, Chinese said, still was a considerable distance from the railway. The cavalry detachment was admitted to have raided Liuling, 92 miles north of Hankow, and Japanese asserted the railway had been severed.

Tweedsmuir Smiles, Docking At Quebec, "Glad To Be Back In Quiet Country"

Quebec, Oct. 7 (CP)

LORD TWEEDSMUIR returned to Canada today on the liner Empress of Britain, after a three months' holiday in the United Kingdom.

"You certainly may say I am glad to be back in a quiet country," His Excellency smiling told reporters. "I am going direct to Ottawa and there really is nothing I can say just now."

Posing the Governor-General laughed heartily. "I have been out of all this for a good while," he said.

Ill himself when he left Canada, Lord Tweedsmuir asked newspapermen how the ailing Premier Mackenzie King "is feeling now." Told the Prime Minister's health had improved sufficiently to allow him to preside at a recent meeting of the cabinet, His Excellency said he was "very glad indeed."

Lord Tweedsmuir was greeted at the dock by Lieut.-Col. E. D. Mackenzie comptroller of the governor general's household.

Fooled On West's Wheat Volume C.P.R. To Cut Expenses After Traffic Rush Fails To Come

MONTREAL, Oct. 7.— (CP). — Announcement of plans to curtail expenditures in view of traffic failing to materialize to expected volume was made to-day in a statement made public by Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

The statement, on which company officials declined to elaborate, said:

Comparatively heavy expenditures were made in the first half of 1938 in expectation of a good grain yield in Western Canada, and off all traffic which would approximate in volume to that handled in the years prior to 1929. The company also had to carry the burden of the restoration of basic rates of wages which went into complete effect on April 1st, last.

The western crop, while not unsatisfactory in size, did not reach the magnitude which early prospects indicated, and general traffic has not picked up to the extent which might have been expected.

Ready For Rush That Failed.

For the balance of the year, it will be necessary to curtail expenditures, which can be done without impairment of the condition of the property, and its equipment, as everything had been put in condition for a rush of traffic which has not materialized.

We are in consultation with representatives of certain classes of employees as to distribution of available work, and it is expected that arrangements can be made to secure the absolutely essential economies without serious dislocation to the working forces of the company.

Means Layoffs

The Montreal Star said it understood the company's plan involved lay-offs for both clerical and shop workers throughout the system as from next Monday.

It also is understood the newspaper adds that details of the plan have not been completed but that clerical and salaried employees will be asked to take off a week without pay between Oct. 10 and the end of the year.

"A reduction in pay for the balance of the year will approximate 8½ per cent for them," says the Star, "because deduction of pay will be made at the rate of one day's pay from each of the half-monthly pay cheques."

Jail Mrs. Kenny After 4 Fires In Four Months

TORONTO, October 7.— C. P.).—Mrs. Matthew Kenny of stork derby fame, the stocky matron who figuratively and literally put a punch into Charles Vance Millar's fantastic race for babies and riches, can be as quiet as quiet can be when locked up behind the bars of a jail cell.

Police officers at Toronto's No 1 station—not many blocks from the Kenny home that was damaged badly by fire the other night—said today just before the French-Canadian mother was scheduled to appear in court on a charge of arson that she hardly said a word during the night.

Well, not after the first half-hour or so. Mrs. Kenny protested volubly against being arrested while being booked. But when it became apparent the $3,000 bail set for her release wasn't forthcoming, she quieted down, shrugged her shoulders and apparently treated it as another "incident" attendant upon receiving a derby "consolation prize."

After a night in the cells, Mrs. Kenny appeared in court and was remanded a week to the psychiatric hospital.

Chamberlain Resumes His Holiday Nazi Colony Demands In Mind?

LONDON, Oct. 7.—(AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain headed today for a holiday in Scotland, where he might ponder what may be the next Nazi challenge to British democracy—demands for return of former German colonies.

When Members of Parliament yesterday voted endorsement of Mr. Chamberlain's settlement with Chancellor Hitler, the situation returned largely to its pre-crisis status except in Czechoslovakia, which has vanished as an important ally of Great Britain, France and Russia.

Within the next 25 days before Parliament reconvenes Nov. 1 these problems will be studied:

1. Germany's demand that Great Britain and others return colonies taken from the Reich at the end of the Great War;

2. Italian intervention in Spain, which is holding up fulfilment of the Anglo-Italian agreement;

3. Economic re-alignment of the Danubian States, being drawn into Germany's trade orbit at the expense of Great Britain, France and Italy;

Czech Trade Lost.

4. Economic and political adjustment of Czechoslovakia, which would be lost to her former friends if Germany realizes Nazi hopes of a customs union with the dismembered republic;

5. Intensification of Britain's rearmament, described during the crisis as inadequate to cope with modern war.

One unanswered question was whether Great Britain would resist Germany's desire for colonial expansion.

The Prime Minister's holiday was interrupted before by the German-Czechoslovak crisis. Mr. Chamberlain is expected to stay in Scotland this time as long as affairs do not demand his presence in London. He is the guest of the Earl of Home at Coldstream, Berwickshire.

Before leaving, Mr. Chamerlain cancelled an address to his constituents at Birmingham, scheduled for Oct. 14.

Flung Posies Injure Hitler's Face

Dictator Immediately Bans Flowers To Sudeten Admirers

BERLIN, Oct. 7—(AP).—Chancellor Hitler was slightly injured in the face to-day when an over-enthusiastic Sudetenlander tossed a bouquet of flowers at the fuehrer, making a triumphal tour of the fourth zone of occupation.

Dispatches from the Sudetenland reporting the incident did not say just where it occurred.

As a result of the mishap the fuehrer issued a general order that Nazi party leaders henceforth will be held personally responsible for seeing to it that flowers are taken away from all persons along his line of march.

Even small bouquets in the hands of spectators must be seized.

The population also was admonished strongly by broadcast to refrain from saying it with flowers. Afternoon papers published warnings against flower throwing.

Hitler to-day visited the first part of the fourth zone of occupation, on the northern fringe of Central Czechoslovakia. The German army marched into this district yesterday and was to complete occupation today.

Field Marshal Hermann Goering accompanied the fuehrer.

Might Have Lost His Eyes

Authoritative reports said Hitler's face was scratched when he was hit squarely by a big bunch of roses. However, the injury was so slight that medical attention was not needed.

A government spokesman said the only reason for giving it publicity was the danger that the thorns on the roses might easily have injured the Fuehrer's eyes, with the possible loss of eyesight.

"Hitler always looks the crowds squarely in the face, therefore anything thrown at him is likely to hit him in the eye," he said. "It was fortunate that this time there were only slight scratches on his face."

It was explained further that the government was glad to seize on this occasion for stopping flower throwing at the Fuehrer once and for all.

"It is understandable, of course, that the people in their great enthusiasm try to give expression thereto by throwing flowers," the spokesman said. "It is hard, however, to make the people realize that they might be endangering the Fuehrer. But after this incident they will understand why in future flowers must be forbidden."

Britain Will Reply In Bren Case Monday

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, Oct. 7—(CP Cable). — The War Office will give an answer Monday to the Canadian Government's request for letters and reports bearing on the Bren gun contract which may be used at the official inquiry at Ottawa.

(The John Inglis Company of Toronto was awarded contracts to make 7,000 Bren guns for the Canadian Government and 5,000 for the British Government. Criticism of the contract between the Inglis Company and the Canadian Government led to the inquiry.)

At present all relevant documents are being examined by military and legal experts of the War Office and, at the request of Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and of the Dominions Office, the survey is being expedited.

There is no hesitation about making public the British contract with the Inglis Company, because it follows closely the Canadian contract. But there is some doubt, however, in the minds of War Office officials about making public the correspondence leading up to the contract and the technical reports on machinery tests of the guns and other information which might be valuable to a foreign government.

There is every expectation here that the War Office will accede to the request of the Canadian government and make all the information available to the commission of inquiry.

Command Returns To Quary Quetta

BOMBAY, October 7. —(C. P.-Reuters).—After three years absence the Indian Western Command, which moved to Karachi after the great Quetta earthquake of May, 1935, is returning to Quetta, now largely rebuilt, and believed to be proof against further earthquakes.

Two special trains have left Karachi for Quetta, carrying 20 officers and their families and other personnel. The command will be known from November as the Western Army Independent District, under the command of Major-General T. J. Hutton.

Forty thousand persons, including 250 Britons, lost their lives in the Quetta earthquake. The town was almost completely razed, and is now being rebuilt on "quake-proof" principles.

Tories To Name Leader December 8, 9

TORONTO, Oct. 7 (CP).—Candidates for the Ontario Conservative leadership marshalled their forces today in preparation for a party convention here December 8 and 9 to choose a successor to Hon. Earl Rowe, member of the House of Commons for Dufferin-Simcoe, who desires to relinquish the post at the "earliest opportunity."

Date of the convention was set late yesterday at a meeting of the Ontario Conservative Association. Delegates from all Provincial constituencies voted 200 to 83 in approving the December dates. They were contained in an amendment to a motion calling for an April convention, a motion sponsored by Alderman George Sloane, Ottawa.

At least two prominent candidates for the leadership have appeared, Leopold Macaulay, party legislative leader, and Col. George Drew, Toronto barrister, author and soldier, who ran unsuccessfully as an Independent Conservative in the last Provincial election. Col. Drew is a former party organizer.

Rowe Glad To Step Out.

Personally defeated in the general election, Mr. Rowe announced his resignation last July. "I would be very glad to be relieved at the earliest opportunity," he told the meeting. "It would be easier for me politically and personally and certainly not any harder financially."

Debate over the convention date occupied little more than 30 minutes. Supporters of the December date contended the party suffered without the leadership issue settled.

But in sponsoring the April-date motion, Alderman Sloane contended there was no great rush for a leader. No election was expected for two or three years, he said.

Mr. Rowe told the meeting there must be unanimity in selection of his successor, and said he did not believe there had been when he was selected two years ago. He warned delegates "not to be stampeded by too much desire for action."

A. R. Douglas, president of the Western Ontario Association, told the gathering that winter was a bad time for farmers and Northern Ontario residents. He urged the date for the convention be set in May, following the Legislature session.

Gordon Fraser, Peterborough Association president, said his association had unanimously recommended December 9, when farmers were better able to attend than during the Spring seeding chores. Boos greeted a final attempt of Mr. Sloane to have the meeting consider an April date.

Teachers Get Warned On Overwork

Inspector's Untimely Death Stirs Convention Tip

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 7—(CP).—The blame for the sudden and untimely death of Inspector J. C. Strothers was placed today by the chairman of the board of education, Dr. L. G. Cargill, directly on overwork and strain induced by a changing education program.

"Speaking as a medical man," Dr. Cargill told 1,600 teachers in conference at the technical school today, "you cannot burn the candle at both ends, so to speak of course from the mental standpoint."

"Don't forget yourselves," he warned, "it is a physical impossibility for teachers to study 12 months in the year during a lifetime. I have seen teachers leave school in June, study during their summer vacation. I have seen inspectors labor from the time school closes until it opens again. I'm sorry to say that because of this we have lost one of our best educationalists. I refer to Inspector Strothers."

50 Arab Terrorists Shot In One Day

JERUSALEM, October 7. —(A.P.)—British military authorities pushed vigorously today their campaign to wipe out terror in the Holy Land and restore order among Arabs and Jews.

Troops attempting to put down guerrilla fighting hoped to have some semblance of peace by the time the British Parliament re-assembles on November 1 in a session which is to consider proposed partition of Palestine into Jewish, Arab and British ruled sections. Jews and Arabs both claiming Palestine as a home land, have expressed opposition to the British proposal.

In an engagement of major proportions along the Lebanese border yesterday, British troops assisted by Royal Air Force planes killed 50 terrorists, bringing the total of insurgent casualties to 120 for two days.

The engagement started with the ambush of three Jewish owned trucks, in which two of the drivers were killed and one wounded. The authorities sent a large force to the zone and dispersed the guerrilla band.

Palestine awaited the outcome of conferences in London between Sir Harold MacMichael, high commissioner for Palestine, and Malcolm Macdonald, colonial secretary, which were expected to determine what immediate measures are to be taken.

Slick Trio Talk Woman Out Of $3,800 On "Secret" Television Project

TORONTO, Oct. 7 (C.P.).—Alicia Rogers told to-day in court of giving three men $3,800, including money obtained by mortgaging her home, to help finance a "secret" television project.

The Toronto woman unfolded her story when Sylvester Perry 34, alias O'Leary, William J. Pearce, 27, alias Thompson, and William Meehan, 32, alias McCarthy, appeared in Police Court and elected trial by jury after denying a fraud conspiracy charge.

Miss Rogers said she met Perry in May, 1937, who said he earned $100 weekly as a representative of an American corporation. He introduced Meehan to her as a radio executive, and they told her she would double any money she advanced toward a "secret" television project. She said she met Pearce afterward and he used to call for the money.

She turned over $3,800 without obtaining any receipts "because the company was not supposed to know I was helping financially." The "company" supposedly operated a studio in downtown Toronto.

"My crippled sister," Miss Rogers said, "was induced to part with $100. Meehan's wife was supposed to have died in Chicago and I gave him $200 for funeral expenses."

600 Million In Gold Is Shipped To U.S. During the Recent War Scare

Washington, Oct. 7 (AP)

A RECORD-BREAKING total of $204,844,905 worth of gold came into the United States in the week ending Sept. 30.

The United States commerce department said today the figure was the largest for any week on record.

Since at least temporary peace has been assured by the pact of Munich, the gold movement was abated, however, except for metal engaged for shipment prior to the settlement. Altogether, more than $600,000,000 of gold was sent to the United States during the war scare.

Shipments in the week ended Sept. 30 included $128,792,670 from England and $30,052,543 from Canada.

Slovaks To War On Communism Says First Premier Of New State

By Larry Allen
(Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

ZILANA, Czechoslovakia, Oct. 7—(AP).—Dr. Joseph Tiso, Roman Catholic priest who became the first premier of Slovakia in the Czechoslovak federal state, declared today his first goal was to maintain Slovakia's territorial integrity.

He told this correspondent, in his first interview, that he wanted Slovaks in North America to know "our first thought" was of them, "to whom we are grateful for their moral and financial support."

"I wish it were possible," he said, "for all Slovaks to come back and live with their brethren."

Before Dr. Tiso and other Slovaks leaders had left today for Prague to confer with the central government, night-long demonstrations in this stronghold of Slovak nationalism had quieted. Thousands had acclaimed Dr. Tiso, waving lanterns, torches and Slovak colors and cheering his address from a Ziland balcony.

Dr. Tiso, a parish priest of the little nearb ytown of Banovc, is 51 years old and was minister of health in the Czechoslovak cabinet in 1828. A hard-hitting, energetic speaker, he told the crowd in the Ziland market place last night:

"We Slovaks will be able to lead a foreign policy of fighting against Communism."

When the fish was drawn, preparatory to shipping it to the United States, a two pound carp was discovered in its stomach, the game overseer stated.

Pants Camouflage Horse's Sprung Legs So Cadi Rules Shanks Be Bare

New York Oct. 7 (AP)

THOSE who remember unimportant bits of miscellany may recall a remark once made in connection with a courtroom appearance of Miss Sally Rand — that some people are so pure of mind they would put pants on a horse.

It all came back today in a case which concerned purity not at all, but which did involve a horse with pants on.

The horse's owner, Lorenzo Lopopalo told Magistrate Sylvester Sabbatino: "I like my children. I like my horse. I put pants on my children. I put pants on my horse."

Patrolman Joseph Ryan disrupted the picture of equine sartorial splendor with an assertion that the pants in question concealed the fact the horse was so poorly shod that his forelegs were sprung and that to drive a horse in such condition was cruelty to the horse.

"It's all right for you to love your children and keep pants on them," the magistrate told Lorenzo, "but it you love your horse, keep pants off him understand? Case dismissed."

Kiwanis Hears Ralph Gordon Poet, Lecturer

"Hitherto I have always preferred Irish Stew to Potpourri, but henceforth my allegiance is altered," declared Kiwanis President Louis J. Pettit when he thanked Ralph Gordon, poet and lecturer, who addressed lunching Kiwanians to-day.

The speaker said he preferred his remarks to be considered as potpourri rather than as an address built up period by period. "I'll fly off at tangents and I may not come back to the circle at all," he warned.

"It's not my fault I'm so old," he apologized at the opening of his speech. "It's because I'm so healthy." He said that although he was no mind reader, he could tell that many were wondering what "such an old fellow" could have to say.

Hard to Amuse.

Hardest of all audiences to amuse is a hard-headed group of business men "like you people," the speaker said. "You find it so difficult to get business out of your heads. Oh, yes, you come here and call each other 'Fred' and 'Bill' and 'Jack,' but back of it all you are still thinking of business."

The lecturer and poet interspersed his address with selections of his own poetry, told tales of a varied experience, introduced a homely philosophy that kept attention at high pitch. Introducing a poem he had written on Thanksgiving, he reminded his listeners that the day of Thanksgiving is next Monday, said "Pretty soon you'll probably be out shooting something to show how thankful you are."

He propounded homely philosophy that appealed to his audience. All men, regardless of the social position they hold, can meet on the common ground of boyhood memories; all men, no matter how successful they may become, are subject to spells of depression or despair; no man's life is made of one act, but of thousands upon thousands of small scenes and one should "never despise small things" were some of his beliefs.

The speaker was introduced by Rev. Dr. A. T. Young of St. Andrew's United Church, where he is speaking this evening. Dr. C. B. Waite moved a vote of thanks at the conclusion of the address, said the speaker's philosophy was much like the aims of the Kiwanis Club.

$3,848 for Dream House.

Kiwanian Tom Mark reported to the club that funds now collected in connection with the Dream House totalled $3,848. Vern Morphet gave the total net proceeds from the Kiwanis Karnival as being about $660 after all bills have been paid. On hand now is $873.89, he said.

Dr. J. J. Craig was selected chairman of the Nominating Committee appointed at a special meeting of the club last night. Other members are also past presidents of the club, J. I. Allen, J. McKone, A. Gates. They will bring in a proposed slate of officers for next year.

It was a cool, damp day, but not too damp, despite intermittent showers, to dampen the ardor of the bowlers, who came here from Stirling, Hastings and Havelock. Other winners were H. Matheson and Rae William of Havelock, who took the second prize for two wins; R. Patterson and Tom Solmes of Stirling, and E. Fairman and C. Baker of Hastings.

Sailing Family Reported Safe

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Oct. 7.—(CP Cable).—Philip Osmond, unemployed Toronto carpenter, and his three children were sailing down the east coast towards Carbonear to-day in their make-shift boat Lydia.

The four were at Port Union Wednesday. Reports of their arrival in the Bonavista port ended anxiety for the family which set out down the St. Lawrence river last May. A week ago Osmond's son, John, in Toronto, had reported them eight weeks overdue on the voyage to Newfoundland.

Finding it hard to get along, the Newfoundland-born father built the little craft of adds and ends, and sailed for his native country with three sons and a daughter aboard. John Osmond left them at Quebec and returned to Toronto.

Trucker Is Fined On Unusual Count

Donald McNaughton, a Young's Point trucker, was fined $20 and $7.75 costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning when he pleaded guilty to an unusual charge, namely that while his liquor permit was permanently suspended by the Liquor Control Board he had applied for another permit.

McNaughton told the magistrate that he had been away from home when the notice of his license being suspended had been received and that he had been under the assumption that the suspension was only for a year.

Provincial Constable Silvester explained that McNaughton's permit had been suspended permanently and that the man had applied for here and had received a one-day permit on the authority of which he had purchased a six ounce bottle of liquor at the local vendor's store.

"The fine may be anything from $10 to $500," remarked Magistrate Langley as he imposed a fine of $20 and costs upon the accused.

In some bushes near where Palmer was arrested police found $500 worth of sterling silver, a fur coat, a typewriter and jewelery.

122 Teachers Meeting In Convention

One hundred and twenty-two teachers from the Peterborough County Public, Continuation, High and Separate Schools and in the inspectorates of Leo Copp and R. F. Downey which includes a portion of Victoria County met at the Normal School Thursday for the annual convention. The sessions will conclude Friday with a banquet in the Trinity Church basement and an address by A. Mowatt, B.A.

Thursday morning session opened with a devotional period conducted by Rev. M. C. Parr, of George Street United Church who brought greetings from the Peterborough Ministerial Association and a message of encouragement. William Rome, B.A. president of the Teacher's Association occupied the chair, and the first item on the agenda was the appointment of a nominating committee and a resolutions committee. The treasurer's report showed a balance $32.52.

Warsaw School Band entertained the teachers, and demonstrated the fine musical talent which exists among the pupils of the public schools. The band consists of thirteen musicians including a conductor and they play harmonicas, guitars and banjos.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

Mr. Rome, the president took as his subject "An Indian Reserve." He explained how Indian affairs were managed by the Dominion Government and went on to describe Indian life and Indian characteristics. "Indians as a whole are not good farmers but do well at gardening and poultry-raising," he said.

Contact with white men have lessened their ability to remain self-reliant and self-sufficient because hunting and trapping freely are prohibited. In school it is difficult to get the child to speak English always. The pupils are poor in arithmetic but very wise in the knowledge of nature.

The Indians have organizations such as Ladies' Aid and C.G.I.T. groups and attend church.

Dr. Stothers, Public School Inspector of Prince Edward County then gave an address on "Manuscript Writing" in which he traced the development of manuscript writing, or "print" writing, from its introduction into this continent in 1922 up to the present, with particular reference to the work done in schools of his Inspectorate. He stated it was as fast as cursive writing and showed samples of work done by pupils which was much neater than that of pupils using cursive writing. He also showed a school paper prepared and edited by Public School pupils based on the style of the ordinary daily paper.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The afternoon session opened with a talk and demonstration on "Murals and Morionettes," by Dr. Stothers, who had previously spoken in the forenoon.

Dr. Stothers exhibited a fine copy of a school newspaper edited and printed by the pupils of a rural school. Each child had been responsible for some work in the production of the paper. School news, community affairs, obituaries, marriages, births and current events kept it apace with any of the popular papers. In fact, it had an advantage over these in as much that it contained no crime or tragedy. Dr. Stothers stated that this newspaper upon completion went into children's homes. One difficulty was that the single copy could not be circulated fast enough to meet the demand.

Dr. Stothers exhibited a walking marionette, the cow that jumped over the moon, several animals and heads of mummies moulded from various materials. To prove this was practical Dr. Stothers capably demonstrated the moulding of masks and puppet heads. He ended his lecture with a talk on a display of murals, depicting scenes from social studies.

Miss Daisy Walker, representative of the Lady Teachers' Federation, spoke briefly on the work of the organization which she represented. Mr. Rome gave a report on the 1938 convention of the O.E.A.

In the evening the teachers and friends were entertained by the pupils of Milburn's school under the direction of their former teacher, Miss Hart, by a two-act play. The forty-five members of the cast did credit to themselves and their teacher. Some were princes, butterflies, couriers, princesses, kings, queens, witches, fairies and dancers, each taking his or her part exceptionally well.

Rome Negotiations Progressing Fine

LONDON, Oct. 7—(CP Cable).—The British government regards the Rome conversations toward improving Anglo-Italian relations as progressing "very satisfactorily."

"It is almost impossible for the Anglo-Italian agreement, which has been lying dormant for six months pending ratification, to come into operation before parliament reassembles. Prime Minister Chamberlain promised the House of Commons the members would be consulted before this was done.

Meanwhile, it would not surprise London to see Premier Mussolini withdraw some of his fighting forces which have been campaigning for General Franco in the Spanish civil war. This may come comparatively soon and might involve 10,000 men.

Such a move would be an attempt by Mussolini to demonstrate his good will to Great Britain, which all along has demanded settlement of the Spanish volunteer question before it would bring the treaty into operation.

Czech Army Urged To Accept Situation

PRAGUE, Oct. 7—(AP).—Premier Jan Syrovy appealed to the army today not to commit any act that might "bring on intervention more cruel that the present situation" for what is left of Czechoslovakia.

"There is nothing to do," he told the troops, "but to reconcile ourselves to our fate.

"The government has decided to be loyal to the Munich agreement so as to be sure to save territory which remains. So forget your debates and useless quarrels and support those in front to work for reconstruction."

Dr. Joseph Tiso, new premier of Slovakia, and eight representatives of the most important Slovak political parties, came here to discuss the Slovaks' role as an autonomous unit in the Czechoslovak federal state. They came from Zilana, where the cheering Slovak populace celebrated its new autonomy within the republic.

The government announced it was uncertain when parliament would be summoned to elect a successor to resigned president Eduard Benes. It explained the republic's shrunken frontiers still were not definitely fixed and it was impossible as yet to tell who remain in parliament and what deputies would be entitled to vote.

Jail Mrs. Kenny

incidents since Mr. Justice W. E. Middleton ruled early last spring Mrs. Kenny was ineligible to share in the $500,000 pot of gold Millar, eccentric lawyer, bequeathed to the Toronto mother bearing the most children in the 10 years following his death in 1926 The money was divided among four mothers.

Among the incidents were four fires in four months in houses inhabited by the large Kenny family. Each broke out when no one was at home. The latest occurred last Tuesday night in the present Kenny residence on Bathurst Street, purchased with some $1,300 of the $12,500 Mrs. Kenny received from the derby winners in halting protracted court proceedings.

Police visited the Kenny home last night. She was absent. It developed she was taxi-ing around the neighbourhood with her children and when she returned the officers sought to arrest her in the house.

But they couldn't do that to Mrs. Kenny. Shouting imprecations, the 35-year-old mother raced out a back door and sprinted 75 yards down a lane before the constables caught up to her. They got her into a cruiser car and whisked her off to a cell.

A bewildered Pa Kenny observed the goings-on with amazement. Repeatedly he exclaimed: "It's more than I can make out. "It's more than I can make out."

The late Miss Campbell who resided in Campbellford until 1935 was best remembered as librarian, a position she filled faithfully for sixteen years. Countless beautiful floral tributes bore mute testimony of the esteem in which this fine lady was held.

May Peace Go With You, Wires Queen As Legion Leaves To Police Czechland

London Oct. 7 (CP-Havas)

THE QUEEN today sent a farewell message to members of the British Legion due to leave this week-end for Czechoslovakia to police the forthcoming minority plebiscites.

Her Majesty telegraphed from Balmoral Castle: "May peace and friendship go with you."

The women's section of the British Legion has been preparing special kits for the volunteers. Each man will be presented when he leaves with chocolate, a tin of 50 cigarettes and a fountain pen.

Mobilizing of the volunteers has been practically completed.

Questioned regarding the possibility that the plebiscites may not take place, obviating the need for Legion policing, Sir Francis Fetherston-Godley, president of the Legion, today declared: "We have heard nothing of any alteration in our arrangements and we are carrying on."

FLEMINGTON, N. J., October 7. —(A. P.) — The threat of technological unemployment increased today for many New Jersey bulls as artificial breeding of dairy cattle spread throughout the State

The management committe of the State Holstein-Friesian Association's artificial breeding unit No. 1 met last night and completed plans for expansion of the unit to serve 2,400 cows in three counties.

The State Unit, pioneer in the United States for artificial breeding of cattle on a cooperative basis, reported the 2,400 cows to be encompassed in the expanded endeavors would more than double the number enrolled when the unit started work in May. Detroiters Strike For 32-Hour Week

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—(AP).—Plans of the United Auto Workers of America to seek a 32-hour week were translated into action today when approximately 3,000 union men remained outside the gates of the Plymouth Motor Corporation main plant and refused to enter for work.

C. G. Edelen, chief shop steward of the U.A.W. Plymouth local, affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, said the demonstration was not a strike and that the men would return to work Monday morning at the regular hour. He said they did not intend to work more than 32 hours a week, however.

Union president Homer Martin announced early this week in Washington that the 32-hour week would be sought.

British Press Uneasy Over Outlook

LONDON, Oct. 7.—(CP Cable.)—London morning papers to-day reviewed the four-day emergency session of parliament and expressed these editorial opinions:

"The Daily Mail (Independent): "The Prime Minister emerges from these four days of debate as the dominating national figure, an undisputed leader to whom our people must turn with a trust that equals their gratitude.

"National unity is what the Premier wants—unity that will enable Britain to put forth those great efforts that may, he said, be required of all of us in the months to come.

"The most practical gratitude Britain can offer is to rally to the government and labor night and day not only to fill the serious gaps now admitted in our defences, but to render this island immune to every threat."

The Daily Express, Independent, demanded conscription "or something tantamount to it," and declared "we need it immediately."

It recalled Chancellor Hitler's boast that Germany was safe from any air attack and aded "citizens here will not be satisfied until they can boast the same about Britain."

Sees Change Of Views.

The newspaper urged that Mr. Chamberlain "must find himself persuaded before long to change his views on conscription." (The Prime Minister told the House he was opposed to peace time compulsory service).

"Now, Mr. Chamberlain, we believe your policy is that of armed isolation," the paper added. "It cannot be otherwise. What a pity you did not come to it long ago.

"Having reached it as we are persuaded you have, rest assured that provided an immediate and successful national effort is made to fill the gaps in our defences, before the British Empire lies the greatest era of its history."

The Daily Herald (Labor) said the Government's policy combines "what in the record of Fascism seems altogether over-optimistic, confidence in Herr Hitler's good intentions with belief in the necessity for great rearmament in case that confidence should prove to be misplaced."

It objected that the government proposed to remove the causes of war through bilateral negotiations which might result in an attempt "to see how much or how little those who threaten war will take not to make war on you" or "in inevitable suspicion among those nations who are excluded from these private talks."

It added: "As a consequence, if such talks break down, one is likely to find oneself facing in isolation demands which increase all the more rapidly as the extent of that isolation is appreciated."

A National Register.

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) called for a national register to prepare the country against confusion "in a time of emergency."

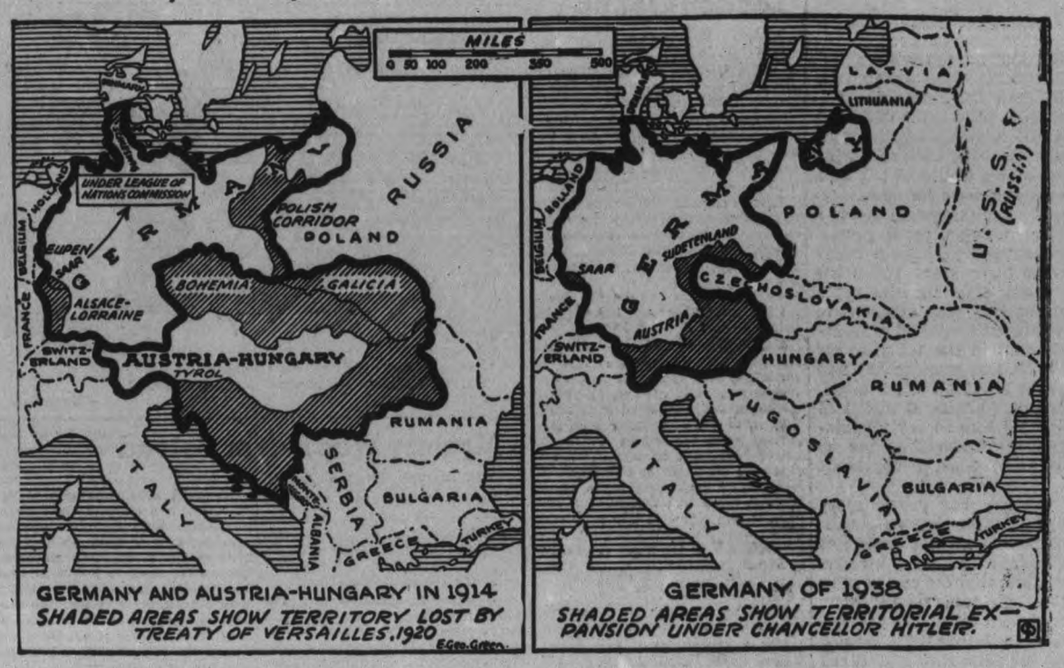
The newspaper said Mr. Chamberlain's speech "cannot dispose of all the doubts and misgivings" felt by public opinion in the wake of the recent international crisis.

"Conscription in time of peace he (Mr. Chamberlain) categorically ruled out yesterday," the paper said. "But conscription—as implying compulsory military service—is one thing. Preparation for national register which would afford necessary information to direct authorities as to reserves available and the disposition of them in the most efficient manner...."

The News-Chronicle (Liberal) held "that common resolute action by Britain, France and Russia during the summer would not only have settled the Sudeten question peacefully and preserved the integrity of Czechoslovakia, but would have saved us from ever coming to the brink of war and would have marked a turning point—perhaps decisive—in the hitherto aggressive career of the dictators...."

It added: "In the next few weeks we shall see whether the Premier's hopes of appeasement in Europe have any foundation."

How Germany Has Expanded Under Leadership of Hitler



This self-explanatory map shows how Germany has expanded under Fuehrer Adolf Hitler. The German Fuehrer has acquired the Saar Basin by plebiscite; Austria by bloodless conquest and the Sudetenland of Czechoslovakia by threat and negotiation. There are six remaining regions once a part of Germany, but German spokesmen say Hitler has no intentions of making moves to bring them back into the German fold. The six are the Polish Corridor, Eupen, Schleswig, the provinces of Alsace and Lorraine, the Tyrol area of northern Italy and the Transylvania area of Roumania. The map shows these areas.

Lakefield Anglican Congregation Enjoys Harvest Festival

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 7.—"The chief reason for meeting in the House of God—the chief reason among four major reasons—is to render thanks," Rev. G. J. Bousfield of St. Luke's Anglican Church, Peterborough told a large gathering here on Thursday evening, when he addressed the annual harvest festival at St. John's Anglican Church.

The church was most appropriately decorated with the fruits of the harvest, the rich coloring of autumn leaves and fruit standing out against a background of ripened grain to make a most effective setting for this service of thanksgiving.

Bouquets of bonze crysanthemums decorated the chancel of the church and a profusion of autumn flowers were banked against the foot of the chancel. Tall sheaves of golden grain, caught at the end of the pews, marked off the centre aisle up which the minister and choir marched in the opening processional.

Rev. H. R. Howden, pastor of St. John's Church, Lakefield, conducted the harvest festival service. After leading the congregation in a beautiful thanksgiving service of prayer and praise, he introduced Rev. Bousfield of St. Luke's Church, Peterborough, who delivered the thanksgiving message.

Time For Thanks

"We should remember that prayer is not only a request for things required, but that no prayer is complete without a message of thanksgiving.

"We should be thankful particularly for our creation and our presentation, and we should never fail to give thanks to God for them.

"How often do we pause to thank God that He brought us into this world—and at this time?. That He brought us to be sharers in this world?,

"When we pray I do not know that many of us pause to think what it means. And yet you cannot thank without thinking. Only humans can think, therefore man is the only one of God's animal creations which can return thanks.

"Thanksgiving started with our creation. Yet we are apt to overlook giving thanks, because we take our creation so much for granted. We are conscious that we have been created and those who believe in God believe it to be a great creative act of God. Other persons believe that our creation is the result of certain lanes that rule the universe being put into operation.

"This grain and fruit and these vegetables and flowers," Rev. Bousfield said, referring to the church decorations, "are not brought here only that you may enjoy the beauty of their arrangement and the harmony of color, but as still another way to praise God for His bounty."

At the conclusion of the service Miss Winifred Payne of Lakefield rendered a solo, "I Hear the Voice of Jesus Say."

Special music by the choir was accompanied by Mrs. J. Twist at the organ.

$8,000 Granted Town Council In The Past Year

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Oct. 7.—Making their final grant to the municipal council the Water and Light Commission voted to hand over $1,000 to the town treasury at their meeting held here on Wednesday. It was commissioner C. H. Davidson and Chairman J. O. Benor who sponsored the motion which authorized the treasurer to make this final contribution to the town bringing the total grant for the year up to $8,000.00.

A proposal to purchase the property now occupied by the commission from the town for the sum of $3,000.00 was placed in the form of a motion which will be communicated to the town council along with the further suggestion that the Commission lease the balance of the property known as the market square for the term of ninety-nine years at a nominal rental of one dollar per annum.

A delegation of Seymour township residents attended the meeting to take up the matter of renewal of their contract with the commission for a further period of ten years. It was mutually agreed that several new terms should be embodied in the lease.

MEN AND BATTERIES

THE BEST FRIEND that a motorist can have, from the standpoint of satisfactory operation of an automobile, is a dealer who can be depended upon when automotive service or merchandise is needed. Experienced car-owners know they cannot afford to pick service stations casually.

Selecting the right dealer is not a difficult matter. Find the man who is making a success of his business . . . he is almost certain to be dependable. His concern for his own future prompts him to offer you the kind of service and merchandise that will make you a permanent customer. There is no surer indication of an automotive dealer's interest in your satisfaction than the brand of battery he handles . . . for, unlike other kinds of merchandise, the value of a storage battery is something you cannot see. And the dealer who does not take advantage of that fact but offers you a battery of unquestionable merit, justifies your complete confidence.

You are in good hands at service stations and garages displaying the Exide sign. It is a safe guide to follow in buying automotive merchandise and service generally.

There is an Exide Battery designed to suit every car. Exide Hycap Batteries have extra high capacity for radio, heater, defroster, etc., with ample reserve for starting in any weather.

Look for the Exide Dealer sign — symbol of honest service. IIL

French Secrets Included

The Czech military officials make no pretence at trying to conceal the fact that it gives them a degree of pleasure to hand over to the Germans a series of fortifications which were built for the Czechs under the supervision of the French military engineers.

These fortifications were of secret construction and they were closely guarded by the French. The plans of such fortifications were just the sort of material which a German secret agent working in France would desire most of all to purchase, steal or secure in any other way.

And now it is said the Germans are going to come into possession of this secret knowledge of the French engineers. The Czechs it is said feel bitter over the fact that they were let down by the French; in fact they use the word "betrayed." And feeling as they do about it they will make no effort to destroy this peculiar form of fortification because they feel in handing it over to the Germans they have handed over a French military secret and that to some extent takes the sting out of evacuation.

We never could see much reason for fear in nations building fortifications because they would erect them on their own property, and they could not possibly move them. If the rest of their equipment were to be as stationary as fortifications then there would be little chance of invasion of the territory of others. But France appeared certain for years that it had perfected something new in its fortifications and it is doubtful if her engineers could see that in the Czech surrender to the Germans would be included one of her most closely-guarded secrets.

Cattle On The Highway

There have been sufficient cases decided in court to thoroughly establish the fact that the owner of cattle is responsible for damages if they break through and go on the highway. There was such a case settled yesterday in a neighboring court. The owner of a truck came upon three cattle at night and struck one and damaged his truck. The court costs were $18.30 and the owner of the cattle had to pay them.

There were several things which may have had much to do with finding the cattle owner guilty. There were witnesses to show that his fences were not in good condition, and that was taken as an indication that he had not made a serious effort to keep his cattle on his own premises. We suppose it was regarded as something like contributory negligence on his part.

We have noticed where other cases somewhat similar have not resulted in conviction because it had been shown that it was not the fault of the owner of the cattle that they had been able to leave the premises. But the tendency seems to be toward placing the responsibility more firmly upon the owner of the cattle to see that they are kept on their own premises. In view of that it is a good idea to make certain that fencing along highways is in good shape.

He Goes The Other Way

When the conference of Mayors of Ontario cities gathered this year they discussed how they could get more revenue; they desired additional income from the province. When representatives came together in the Municipal Association they talked in similar way. Always it seemed was this matter of taking in greater amounts the one thing above all else.

But the city auditor of Toronto—Scott by name—has more recently presented a report which works in the other direction. Mr. Scott has written down and numbered his recommendations and they add up to the total of an even dozen, and he is certain each of the dozen has within it the possibility of reducing the amount of money which taxpayers will have to surrender.

And that we consider about the best piece of news since it was announced there would be no war, and the fact that the recommendations are the offspring of a man named Scott gives to the suggestions a certain solidity and substance which makes them even more acceptable.

For a long time we have been waiting for some person to say something like this. Those who govern us had become somewhat obsessed with the idea that their duty and purpose in life was drilling yet another hole in the pocket of the taxpayer, and when there are many people drilling many holes in the same territory the time will come when the old pocket will go dry.

Auditor Scott comes at the right moment and on the right errand, bearing with him a dozen suggestions telling how the spending of less money is possible. Toronto should call a special meeting and have the recommendations placed before those who sit at the receipt of customs. They should also place the 12 rules in the safe keeping of a great vault lest they become lost. If Mr. Scott's one dozen rules are as good as they sound Toronto should at least name a street after him.

They Could Stop It

There are some news reports in which there is a degree of distress, but they are of the kind which are repeated so often that the distress element grows a trifle stale.

One story which comes more frequently from Toronto than elsewhere tells of the messenger boy who starts out with some trifling purchase late in the evening, and he always has with him change for a $10 bill. Then he is usually set upon by some lug and the money is taken away from him, after which the lad may get his picture in the paper and go his way knowing that at an early age he has come to grips with the world at its worst.

The last case reported tells of a woman calling a drug store in the evening for some tobacco and cigarettes and making the usual request that the boy bring along the necessary change for one of those formidable $10 bills.

People who run stores could cure the thing in short order by telling such people that they will not deliver a package of cigarettes or other trifles and they will not send out change after dark. The stores themselves have been encouraging those who delight in beating up messenger boys.

When Fish Spawn

A little girl who lives near Toledo, Ohio, spent part of the summer with her parents on a fishing trip near Burleigh Falls. In a letter which came to the Examiner, Mary Ellen—for thus she signs herself—enclosed part of a composition which was written telling what the scholars had done in their vacation. Mary Ellen wrote:

"Burleigh Falls and the country all around there is so different. There are great rocks, lakes, rivers and guides and Indians and there are fish. The biggest fish they catch is the maskinonge and some of the guides say they are going to get scarce because so many people hunt them. They say if it were not for the habit of these fish waiting and looking after their eggs until they get hatched they would have disappeared years ago."

We can only hope, Mary Ellen, that you did not get any marks taken off for that, because if you had listened carefully when you heard that story you would have found the people were talking of the bass. The maskinonge is really a poor fellow when it comes to paying any attention at all to what is going to become of the spawn (or eggs as you call them.) When the spawning season is on in spring the maskinonge moves in from deep water and places its spawn and generally does so about the time of freshets or high water, and it often happens that when water goes down the spawn is left high and dry and therefore does not hatch. Nor does the maskinonge seem to care what happens. When they are done with spawning they seem to think it time to move off toward deep water.

The male bass is the real fish who attends to business after the spawn has been laid. If Mary Ellen were to come to this district in June we are certain as can be a guide would be able to take her in a canoe to a spawning bed and then she would see something about which to write a composition. It may be necessary to wait a few moments, but the water is clear and the sun is bright and it is possible to see down to the bottom. The spawn is near a submerged stump although one cannot see it, but a sunfish or a carp knows it is there and comes close in. Right then the male bass appears and he is ready to fight all comers. If Mary Ellen's teacher allows the use of the word then the speed with which the bass moves should be called terrific. He never leaves until the young fish are hatched, and whether he gives them swimming lessons afterward is something we do not know. We are told he may afterward eat a few of his own children when searching for a meal, but he at least does what he can to make sure that the hatch is guarded. That is why the hatch from bass spawn may run as high as 25 per cent., while from the maskinonge it seldom does better than 5 per cent.

Speeding Up a Cow

A mature Holstein cow has made a record of 1,208 pounds of butter fat during a year. She produced 28,774 pounds of milk which tested 4.20 per cent. If you want to know how much butter that cow was responsible for you can work it out on the basis of four pounds of butter fat being equal to five pounds of butter. So that would make 1,510 pounds of butter from one cow in one year.

A farmer with whom the Examiner was discussing that record explained that in a contest of that kind the cow would be milked four times a day and its feed would be considerably built up. It was a case of putting more in and taking more out. He believed the result would be that the cow would be burned out much earlier in life than under the old plan of milking twice a day. Certainly a cow which was milked at 12 midnight, 6 in the morning, 12 noon and again at 6 in the evening would be subject to pressure.

And that of course is quite different to the method followed on Lot 4, Concession 10, a good many years ago. Then there was little known about butter fat. If one were going to judge a cow by results then it was a sort of rule of thumb and it was a little uncertain. When the cream rose on the shallow pans in the old stone cellar and was ready for skimming then the folks were pretty sure they could tell how the cows were getting along, but not always would they know just which cow had given the milk. There was no such thing then as having a set of books and a bottle of ink or a pencil to keep a box score for cows.

This business of milking four times a day would have brought forth protest from grandfather and perhaps a resignation from the hired man. When the milking had been done for the night and the straining had been attended to—and that was the only method of treatment used—it marked the tapering off of the day's work, and grandfather was never anxious for anything which might look like overtime. Milking at midnight would have caused him to say "Fiddlesticks!" and that is about as far as he ever progressed toward vehement language.

Of course the age has grown more scientific but grandfather knew his cows. There was one which at best could not grade higher than a fair good brindle. In the summer time that old cow used to break out with some sores on her hide. While the hired man looked in government bulletins grandfather went to work at the bench in the drive shed and mixed sulphur and lard and then for a spell he'd see to it that the brindle was kept out of the sun. But always that cow would be marked for some sort of a transfer as soon as grandfather had her looking right. He held there was no permanent cure for a cow that had such weakness. He was certain she was all right for beef, but he was always anxious that the butcher in the village or some travelling drover should pick up that brindle. She would make good beef—but for some person else.

Then there was the time now and then the cream would not churn and the women folk about the house would have the dithers. The hired man generally turned scientific as to the cause but grandfather would than take a hand and warm the cream slightly and tell them to go ahead and make butter, and often enough it worked just as he said it would.

The cow that would give 28,774 pounds of milk in a year did not exist at that time. Certainly the likes of that was never heard of on the Tenth. A cow had a rather comfortable life there and the urgency and threat of modern pressure was not put upon her. The cows there were mostly contented and we know of no good reason why they should not have been.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Australia proposes to increase her militia strength. Evidently the Commonwealth is not too sure that wars have been banished by treaty or otherwise.

President Benes of Czechoslovakia has stepped out of office, probably feeling that he should do so while there was enough of his country left to step from.

One fisherman we know always carries a camera and takes pictures of his catch. And then of course he can go home and make the enlargements.

A new ambulance being used in Paris is capable of doing seventy miles an hour, and so is in small danger of ever having to return to its depot empty.

Only about 30 per cent of the electors polled their votes in the Parkdale by-election. The rest either were content to let George do it or felt that the result was a foregone conclusion.

One U.S. commentator now asserts that at no time was there actual danger of war. It was pretty much bluff all the way through. But that does not explain why so many American residents in their anxiety to get home from Europe were willing to sleep on deck cots and eat any old place they found it possible to be served.

London Opinion Split Many Ways

LONDON — For the first time for many years there has appeared a serious division of opinion in the Tory party.

Only the course of events—and Mr. Chamberlain—can determine whether this division is healed or widens into a split.

Loyalty of many Conservative M.P.'s to the Chamberlain regime was shaken after the events leading up to the resignation of Anthony Eden, but the premier then talked over or reassured his critics. An agreement with Mussolini was reached and, though never ratified, has never been actually denounced.

But misgivings over the Eden affair were nothing to the rumpus which has been caused by recent developments. The division in public opinion is not at all along party lines. That is to say, while there is an important group of Tories which is gravely disturbed by what they regard as a surrender to Germany, yet in the labor ranks there are a number who think that Chamberlain was right to buy peace at any price and do not subscribe to the bitter hostility expressed by the National Council of Labor's manifesto.

FOR AND AGAINST

Those who are for Mr. Chamberlain divide roughly into three groups:

1. A large number of people who believe in Mr. Chamberlain, think he is playing his cards well, and are willing to accept the arrangement as the best that could be done under the circumstances.

2. A larger group of people who think anything is better—even the sacrifice of "honor"—than another world war, which they believe to have been the alternative.

3. A small handful of influential people who are definitely pro-German and pro-Hitler as also the noisy but not numerous Mosley Fascists.

Those against Mr. Chamberlain are:

1. The militant leftists who consider him a pro-Fascist and pro-Nazi.

2. The moderates, both of left and right, who think he has been "panicked" into making a surrender which they claim is not only dishonorable but will certainly not prevent, and may not even postpone, a war.

THE PRESS

Staunch supporter—and some say inspiration of Mr. Chamberlain is The Times, which it now transpires was remarkably prophetic when it dropped its bombshell in a leader suggesting that Czechoslovakia might consider the cession of the Sudeten territories to the Reich.

The premier is also backed by the Beaverbrook press with its 3,000,000 or more readers, and by the Rothermere group.

The radical News Chronicle has been in the forefront of the attack on Mr. Chamberlain, and The Manchester Guardian has also played its part.

Misgivings of the right have been hinted at in The Daily Telegraph and openly voiced only in the provincial press. Most outspoken of these was The Yorkshire Post.

More significant than the daily press itself were the hundreds of letters and even telegrams which poured into the offices of newspapers like The Daily Telegraph, protesting against Mr. Chamberlain's supposed deal with Hitler.

As things stand at present, it is safe to say that nation-wide uneasiness at the manner in which the Czech solution has been brought about may prove a political force at least as potent as nation-wide relief that war, which seemed almost certain, may have been avoided.

The upshot of the conversations at Godesberg is of vital importance not only for the future of Europe but also for the political future of Mr. Chamberlain and his party.

FRATERNIZATION

Right in the middle of the crisis, 800 German ex-service men have been visiting London.

They were given a reception by the Government at Westminster Hall, which was closed to the general public during the three days they were here.

The German party was led by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

WHERE IS IT?

Geography is not usually regarded as the Englishman's strong point. One effect of the European crisis has been a sudden interest in maps.

Those gaily colored maps of Europe which appear in the window fronts of cable offices and travel agencies are proving a big draw at the moment to passing Londoners: In front of every such map a little throng of people stands all day long, gazing.

Sometimes one leans forward to peer closer, then points a finger "There's Czecho."

POWER OF PATERNALISM.

(Buffalo Courier-Express)

DR. ARTHUR E. MORGAN'S assertion concerning the dangers of paternalism in government will not better his standing in New Deal circles. Still, inasmuch as he has no standing in those circles, the former head of the Tennesse Valley Authority will not feel badly about that.

What Dr. Morgan told members of the Controllers Institute of America at their meeting in New York was briefly that paternalism in government is creating a situation in which those in control can exercise tremendous and unwholesome power.

"AUTUMN"

'Tis Autumn and beauty descends on the dawn,
All Nature seems wrapped in a mantle of song,
I think as I gaze on the blue, green and gold
God's goodness and glory is never half told.

As wonders unfold in the heavenly skies,
All earth seems to echo that Love never dies,
Despair cannot live where a Hope has been born
The doubts of the night disappear with the morn.

—Rosa Bateman McGee.

HE LISTENED

'I suppose you didn't get his number?"
"No; but I'd know his bloomin' laugh anywhere."

—Humorist.

• Mystery Was Never Solved

EVERY HOUSE IN the Adelphi carries its own story, but none a more curious one than that of a Georgian building on the eastern side which is falling beneath the strokes of the hammer and the pick-axe in the course of demolition.

The house in question says The Manchester Guardian was the home for 20 years of George Beamire the son of a Carlisle physician, a man with wealth, a barrister without practice, and a most eccentric hermit.

For some unkown reason Beamire shut himself up in three rooms of the Adelphi house and refused to have anything to do with the outer world. He went out only at night when it was dark. He had his newspaper regularly delivered and he subscribed to the libraries, but no one was allowed to enter his apartments, not even the housekeeper, who left his meals on a tray at the door and discreetly retired after knocking.

For more than 12 months before his death he never put step over his threshold. When he had been completely silent for two days the police broke through his door and Beamire was found dead in the chair in which he had been accustomed to sleep for 20 years.

His walls were hung with pictures of value, in a state of shocking neglect. His costly furniture was covered thick with dust, his chimney-glass with cobwebs; silver spoons and candles lay about in profusion, books in disorder, and suits of clothing were piled in every corner. No fewer than 30 keys were scattered about the floor. Most curious of all, there were three large bags stuffed full of boots that had never been worn.

Beamire had even refused to use the stock of wine that his father had left to him in Carlisle; instead of drinking it he had the bottles walled up in the cellar. When it was sold after his death one bottle of rum went for 60s; some port, described as "the finest and most perfect 1820," fetched £35 a dozen, and some East Indian sherry £18 5s a dozen.

All that was 75 years ago; but why George Beamire chose to live solitary, sordid, and neglected is one of the many mysteries that have yet to be solved. All that the inquest, held on October 23, 1863, could discover was that his death was due to "exhaustion from low fever accelerated by neglect." Now his house is disappearing.

• Hardly A Second In A Year

BIG BEN, WHICH weighs 13½ tons, was hoisted to its eyrie, some 200 feet above the ground, in October, 1858. Officially named "St. Stephen", it was soon given by the public the nickname of "Big Ben", after Sir Benjamin Hall, then First Commissioner of Works, the official responsible for the care of Government buildings.

One cold, wintry day in 1923 a small group of B. B. C. engineers climbed to the roof of a nearby building and picked up the bell's voice with a microphone for the first time: a new era in Big Ben's life had begun. Later a microphone (protected against weather and against interference by pigeons) was installed in the clock tower itself, and Big Ben became a regular broadcaster to listeners at home.

On November 11, 1927, the bell was first heard by oversea listeners through the medium of G5SW, the original short-wave transmitter of the B. B. C. It would be interesting to know how its original founders would have taken the news that one day their bell would be heard in every part of the civilized world.

It is a common error to apply the bell's name to its parent clock, the most accurate as well as the largest and most powerful striking clock in the world—it keeps time so perfectly that some listeners believe it to be automatically controlled from Greenwich Observatory. Actually, the clock is not controlled or synchronized in any way, yet official records prove that it varies hardly more than a second either way throughout the year. Although it is 15 feet long and weights five tons, so perfect is the adjustment that if a penny is placed on the two-hundredweight bob of the pendulum, the clock will gain fourtenths of a second in 24 hours.

• Father of 14 Gives His Rules

(Overseas Daily Mail)

HERE IS A GUIDE to Bringing up a Family, compiled by a Man Who Knows.

The author is William Johnston, of Eastdown Park, Lewisham, S. E. He is 50, 5 feet something, slightly bald, but with no more wrinkles than most of that age.

He is the father of 14 boys and girls, including five sets of twins. The latest twins have just arrived —6lb. apiece at birth, and they're "doing fine."

Here are Mr. Johnston's guiding rules:

1. CRYING.—When children are very young they cry. It's natural. Don't pick up and nurse a child every time it starts to whimper. That's the way to breed a cry baby; and don't start the "dummy" habit.

2. CONTROL. — Fathers must be firm. If I say a thing, it is law; and there are no two ways about it. Make up your mind and stick to it. "No," should mean "No." At the same time don't say "No" if you can say "Yes".

3. PUNISHMENT. — I believe in chastisement — but in the proper manner. I have never used a stick or a strap. If you have to punish, do it with your hand. And there is a proper place . . . But if you start early you'll find little need for physical force.

4. PRAISE. — If any of the family do anything good I praise them. It wins confidence; makes them see that you're not just looking for faults.

5. MEAL TIMES. — I never allow the children to talk or to read at meal times. It disturbs digestion. After meals I make the young ones rest for a time.

6. CAREERS. — I believe in encouraging the children to pick for themselves.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston live in a five-roomed house and their average income is about £3 a week. Mr. Johnston, one time horse driver, needs a job. "But we manage pretty well all round," he said. "We don't go short."

OLD CANS ARE TOUGH.

(St. Mary's Journal)

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, we have never actually witnessed an automobile accident (though we have seen the aftermath of many). And we are not anxious to view such a spectacle! The other day as we drove into London at a slow turn the car ahead of us, an ancient chariot, wheeled head-on toward another old bus we were meeting. "Now", we ejaculated, "we are going to see something." There was a crash as of collapsing tinware. Then both cars reversed gears, but for a moment they appeared to be solidly enmeshed. Then something gave and they drew apart. We expected to see both drivers jump out to view the damage. But no, they backed up farther, turned steering wheels and set off on their respective ways. Not even stopping to give each other a nasty look. "Those old cans sure can stand a lot of punishment", our companion remarked.

BLAMES RADIO.

(Canadian School Journal)

W. J. SALTER, principal of the Collegiate Institute, St. Catharines, and immediate past president of the Ontario Educational Association, stated that 90 per cent of the students in the 12 first forms of the St. Catharines Collegiate have radios in their homes, and 55 per cent try to study while the radio is going full blast, then mothers wonder why their sons and daughters fail in their June examinations.

Dr. C. C. Goldring, superintendent of schools in Toronto, commenting on Mr. Salter's remarks, stated that there is no question as to the harm to home study of school children by radios going full blast at home. While Dr. Goldring has no information as to the percentage of children in the Toronto schools who study under these conditions, he thinks Mr. Salter's statement is not exaggerated.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

LOOK UNTO ME, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else. . . . .

To whom will ye liken me, and make me equal, and compare me, that we may be like?

They lavish gold out of the bag, and weigh silver in the balance, and hire a goldsmith; and he maketh it a god: they fall down, yea, they worship. They bear him upon the shoulder, they carry him, and set him in his place, and he standeth; from his place shall he not remove; yea, one shall cry unto him, yet can he not answer nor save him out of his trouble.

Remember this, and shew yourselves men: bring it again to mind, O ye transgressors.

Remember the former things of old: for I am God, and there is none else; I am God, and there is none like me, declaring the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the things that are not yet done, saying, My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure. . . .

Hearken unto me, ye stouthearted, that are far from righteousness: I bring near my righteousness; it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry: and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory.—Isa. xlv, 22; xlvi. 8-10, 12, 13.

PASTORS' SALARIES.

(Brantford Expositor)

A GREATER EQUALIZATION of salaries would undoubtedly remove self-seeking and wire-pulling for prominent places, which has become such an obnoxious experience of the ministry today. The fact of the matter is that the church should care just as generously for workers in weak and difficult charges as it does for those where the comforts of life are found in abundance, making adequate allowance for relative conditions and responsibilities. There will never be a happy and contented ministry until there is greater equality and justice in this regard.

Prospective Home Owners Are Able To Take Advantage Of The Dominion Housing Act

A statutory byaw passed by the council at a special meeting last night brings within the full effects and benefits of the Dominion Housing Act those citizens who have complied with its terms, or who take advantage of them in the future.

One of the provisions of the Act sets forth the Dominion government's contribution to the house builder by assuming certain municipal taxes for a period of three years. On dwelling houses costing up to $4,000, the government pays 100 per cent. of the local tax levied on the assessed values during the first year of its assessment; in the second year fifty per cent. of the assessed value of the building; and in the third year 25 per cent. of the tax.

For example if any person has built this year a dwelling that cost him $3,000 and it is listed in the assessment made this year on which the 1940 taxes will be levied, the Dominion government will pay the entire tax on the building for next year. The owner pays the tax on the property. In 1941 the government pays 50 per cent. of the tax, and in 1942 the contribution is one-quarter of the tax.

However, W. J. Henry, city assessor, has returned the assessment roll for 1940. It is now in the city clerk's office subject to any changes which the Court of Revision may order. Some houses begun this year, during midsummer or September, were probably not advanced or begun whe nthe assesment for 1940 was made. In the meantime those houses will be completed and no doubt occupied, but there will be no assessment of them until 1939, and that assesment will be for the purpose of the 1940 taxes. In those circumstances, the owner of any of these houses will not pay any taxes on his honse until 1941, for the simple reason that the government will pay his 1940 taxes on the building. In 1942 the Dominion pays half the tax, and in 1943 the contrbiution is one-quarter of the tax.

Hence, it will not be until 1945 that the owner of such a house will pay the full municipal tax on it. That is a broad explanation of the essential feature of the new Dominion Housing Act intended to assist those persons who build houses in the lower category of cost.

Apparently there is such a thing as dodging the assessor, although it couldn't be considered by the person desiring to build a house for himself and move into it as soon as possible. And from the facts as outlined above it is possible for a man to build and move into a house this year and not have to pay the entire local taxes on it until 1944.

Properties Listed

The Government also requires as conditional to the incidence of the Housing Act in Peterborough that a list of vacant lots owned by the city be offered for sale at $50 each be prepared. This list will be available to those who wish to buy lots from the city, and a copy of it must be sent with a draft of the bylaw to the Ministry of Finance.

Any person buying a city $50 lot must agree to build a house on it within one year after acquiring the property.

Fuel Bylaw Amended

On a division of 6-3 the council amended the fuel bylaw, which was adopted in 1936, permitting more than one dealer to use the one and same weigh scales. Opposition by Alderman Gordon and Alderman Bradburn in committee of the whole during the second reading, proposing that the committee rise and report progress, was supported by Alderman Stocker. Those supporting the amendment, recommended by the Property Committee, and incorporated in the bylaw were Aldermen Cotton, Wilson, McCannan, Dutton, McIntyre and Mayor Hamilton. Alderman Juby was in the chair, and Alderman Glover out of the city for a few days.

T. J. Carley addressed the council on behalf of the fuel dealers of the city, explaining their position that they had money invested in their yards, scales and other equipment, and the assessment of each of them was a benefit to the city If dealers were permitted to combine in the use of one weigh scale, it would be one less fuel yard, and consequently that much less taxes to be paid into the city treasury. The bylaw set up a certain standard of equipment with which all the dealers conformed. Now it was proposed to alter the established regulations at the request of one citizen.

The request was made by Tobias Fredenburg who had previously outlined his plans to the council Monday night. He is going to use the yard of the Scott Coal and Lumber Company and also the company's weigh scales.

Mr. Carley emphasized that the restrictions were conceived for the purpose of excluding dealers from Oshawa and other places hauling coal to Peterborough and selling it here.

Alderman Dutton supported the amendment to the bylaw asserting that in his opinion the bylaw as it was drawn up made the "coal business in Peterborough a closed corporation." Any citizen, he said, should have the right to start in business without restrictions that curbed his initiative. Ald. Dutton said that no other business that he knew was protected to that extent.

Alderman Bradburn said the amendment would allow any number of persons to use a common coal yard with scales, and the result would be that the city would lose considerable revenue in the form of taxes.

Mr. Carley had also stated that the bylaw protected the public in its clauses relating to the weighing and delivering of coal.

"Pass this amendment and you defeat the purpose of the bylaw," said Alderman Stocker.

Ald. Dutton stated that Mr. Fredenburg had lived in Peterborough all his life, was a man of good reputation, and "I think he is entitled to the same rights and privileges as other citizens. The bylaw prevents other people from competing with the coal dealers."

Mayor Hamilton—"It means one more man in the coal business. I don't think that will hurt the other dealers."

"As an old citizen of Peterborough Mr. Fredenburg is entitled to the council's consideration, and to help him get going," commented Al-McCannan. "If it was some one coming in here and making this application I wouldn't support it. I'd turn it down at once."

Alderman Wilson recalled that the scale clause was inserted in the bylaw to protect local dealers against competition from fuel men in other towns and cities.

"Does Mr. Fredenburg know that he will have to pay the $250 transient traders' license fee?" Alderman Judy enquired.

"He'll find out soon enough," Ald. Stocker said.

The motion by Alderman McCannan to advance the amendment of the bylaw through its second reading was carried on division.

The Examiner was informed today that the Government's assumption of taxes for three years applies only to buildings costing not more than $4,000 which are built to be occupied by the owner. It was further reported that the assistance is also available to houses that are financed out of private funds or otherwise; in other words, it is not necessary to obtain a Dominion Housing Act loan to get the benefit of the Government's tax assistance on houses costing not more than $4,000.

Packing the Apples For Shipment

Largest apple orchard in Northumberland is that owned by W. J. Huycke, who has 1,200 trees on his farm two miles east of Norham. Heavily laden this year, the trees bear Wealthy, MacIntosh, Snow, Spy, and Russett apples. Mr. Huycke has been shipping apples to Ottawa for the past 14 years, has had a clean sheet of inspection from the government for the past five years. In this picture, Mr. and Mrs. Huycke are seen packing apples for shipment, with their hired help.

Roast Chicken And Goose Take Place Thanksgiving Turkey

Turkey and cranberry sauce which for a century have been synonymous with Thanksgiving Day will soon be but a memory in this district and the festive board on this harvest holiday will feature roast chicken or roast goose instead of the large plump aristocrat of the barnyard, the turkey.

Switching of Thanksgiving Day from November to early October is responsible for the change in menu. At this time of the year in the Peterborough district turkeys are not ready for the table. They have had time to develop strong and big frames but have not fattened and will not be suitable for the table until the middle of November.

Year Old Birds Best

For the diehards who prefer turkey to all other fowl, there is some relief in the fact that year-old birds are very suitable for table use, and there are plenty of chilled turkeys which have been stored in refrigerators and will be on the market. This latter type is very nice to eat and only an expert can tell whether he is eating fresh or chilled turkey. Several chain stores in the city will have the chilled fowl and a few may have fresh turkeys.

The butchers however have accepted the change and instead of trying to keep turkeys to the forefront as the ideal Thanksgiving Day dish, have laid in stocks of fresh chickens, weighing from 5 to 7 pounds, and a moderate supply of well rounded geese which weigh up to thirteen pounds but mostly tip the scales at ten pounds even or thereabouts. There are only a few year-old turkeys available. Such a bird weighs from ten to thirteen pounds and a gobbler would go from 18 to 25 in weight.

Chickens 27 Cents

Crate fed chickens, that is chickens which have been kept in crates for from ten to fourteen days and fed a healthy fattening diet for that period and not allowed to run loose and run fat off, will sell at 27 cents a pound or close to it. This type of fowl is a real delicacy and the butcher shops and chain stores are well stocked to meet the demand.

Geese, plump and tender are available and will sell at between 25 and 27 cents a pound unless Saturday's market produces such a quantity that the price would be sent down.

Year old turkeys, the finest meal available in fowl at this time of the year to those who have a sweet tooth for the turkey and prefer it to chicken or goose, or even ducks, will sell at from 29 to 30 cents a pound and at the present there is only a limited supply.

There is little demand for ducks and quotations were not available. Chilled turkeys should sell around 32 to 34 cents a pound.

Since the date of Thanksgiving Day was changed there has been strong opposition to it, by all turkey breeders. They contend that the change has cost them hundreds of dollarse annually, because the turkeys are not ready for killing when the holiday occurs, and when they are in prime condition in the middle of November there is no market. This necessitates feeding the birds until Christmas when turkeys are in competition with geese, ducks and chickens. Formerly Thanksgiving Day was primarily a day for a turkey dinner and when the day came in November the turkey men reaped a harvest in profit.

Cavan Bred Cow Set New Mark In Butter Fat

During the month of September, 236 record of performance certificates were issued to Holstein breeders by the Federal Department of Agriculture. Of the 16 classes included, Ontario breeders led the nine, Quebec one and Western breeders the remaining six.

The herd of R. Ray McLaughlin, Oshawa, Ont., contributed outstanding records to lead the mature cows, the four-year-olds and the three-year-olds in the 365-day division. His mature cow, Holmview Spofford Ormsby Burke, produced 1,208 lb. fat from 28,774 lb. milk average test 4.20 per cent butter fat. This is the highest fat record made by a Canadian Holstein since 1928, and is the fifth highest ever made in Canada.

Holmview Spofford Ormsby Burke, the cow making this remarkable showing, was bread on the farm of P. B. Seymour, Lot 20, Concession 10, Cavan township.

Windsor Mayoralty Is Croll's Desire

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 7.—(CP)—David Croll, former welfare minister in Premier Mitchell Hepburn's Liberal government, announced today he would seek the Windsor mayoralty at the forthcoming civic election.

Mr. Croll resigned from the Hepburn cabinet in the spring of 1937 after a difference of opinion with Mr. Hepburn over labor policies of the administration.

Mr. Croll, who was mayor of Windsor before its amalgamation with four other municipalities, said one of his election platforms was eliminating outside control of Windsor affairs. Windsor, as a defaulting municipality, has been under supervision of the Ontario Government for several years.

Hunter Shot In Chest, Walks Half Mile Only To Die Later In Hospital

Orillia Ont., Oct. 7 (CP) CHESTER TIFFIN, 20, died in hospital here last night from chest wounds suffered when a shotgun discharged accidentally on a duck-hunting expedition. The charge went through the left shoulder from his back and emerged through the chest.

Tiffin, who left home 10 miles east of Orillia early yesterday on a hunting trip, was found walking through a farmer's field calling for help. He had walked half-a-mile from a blind where his gun later was found.

Petes Take Championship In Senior "B" Lacrosse As Wallaceburg Defaults

Peterborough won the Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior "B" championship today without playing Wallaceburg in the finals. The first of their O.L.A. two-in-three final series was slated for tonight here, but word was received this morning that the Wallaceburg finalists had dropped out for the rest of the season, defaulting the title to the Petes.

A car accident near London late Wednesday night resulted in the death of Coach Ernest Shepley of the Wallaceburg club and injuries to four of the club players. This accident caused Wallaceburg officials to drop out of further competition for this season, leaving Peterborough the automatic provincial champions of the senior "B" section. Trophy and medals will be sent here by the O.L.A. next week.

President H. S. Leybourne of the Petes announced this morning that the locals would challenge St. Catharines, Ontario senior "A" champions, for the all-Ontario trophy. At present, the St. Kitts team is playing off in the Mann Cup finals for the Canadian championship in Toronto. It is doubtful if the Saints will meet the Petes this fall.

Big Surprise

Coming with surprising suddenness, local officials and players had little to say. They expressed sorrow for the Wallacburg club, and felt that Peterborough was unfortunate in not having a chance to playoff in finals—but they felt they could have beaten Wallaceburg on the field of play, anyway. Travellers who have seen seinior "B" lacrosse games in Western Ontario this summer were of the opinion that clubs up this way played a superior brand. A number of Wallaceburg players were young fellows around 18 years old, playing both juvenile and senior "B."

No word was received by club officials here as yet whether or not the city council planned to honor the 1938 Peterborough lacrosse titleholders. A precedent was set by the council last year when the P.C.I. rugby champions of Ontario were tendered a banquet at the Empress Hotel. This is the first O.L.A. senior "B" and the first box lacrosse championship ever won by a local team.

Young Gang

A recent revival in lacrosse here saw a young bunch of officers and players take hold to put the game over The team had good success one season at the Brock St. rink, going into the finals before being put out by Brantford They played a season in the Norwood rink and then decided to build their own arena in Peterborough A fine outdoor arena was erected on George St., a block below the C.P.R. station, and the club had a fine season in 1937, going to Ontario intermediate semi-finals This year, two large groups played an interlocking schedule—this double group taking in the best senior "B" teams in Ontario. After a long, gruelling season, the Petes emerged on top.

Wayne La Master, the Dodger pitcher, wired Billy Herman to get him a pair of tickets for the Series, but Herman wouldn't do it because he said La Master gets him out too often.

As soon as the Series is over, Rip Collins will go on a six weeks' vaudeville tour with Pepper Martin's Mudcats at $300 a week....There will be more football scouts than you can count in Atlanta to-morrow when Notre Dame plays Georgia Tech....The gumshoe men want to see if what they rear about those goings on at South Bend last week is really so....Chicago scouts report the folks out there are awfully high on the Irish, but that one and all are glad Pitt is not on the schedule this year.

P.C.I. Rugbyists Here Tomorrow

Two P.C.I. football teams swing into action before their hometown fans for the first time this year at the Exhibition Grounds tomorrow (Saturday) against Oshawa squads. The first is a morning tilt between the Oshawa and Peterborough junior students at 10 o'clock, while the afternoon fixture at two o'clock sees the senior Motor City crew tackling the championship P.C.I.-ers in their first meeting of the year. Little is known of the Oshawa teams, it being their first starts of the season, but they are expected to make these games close and tough for the teams handled by Coach David and Coach Bamforth of P.C.I.

Owing to the ball game at Riverside at three in the afternoon, the rugby games.— which couldn't be postponed—were switched to the Exhibition Grounds. A fine new gridiron has been laid out there, and good followings of the school footballers' fans are expected. P.C.I. juniors lost by a single point last week in Lindsay and have improved since, while the senior P.C.I. team will be after its second straight win of the season, having nosed out a victory in Lindsay last Saturday. Both games will be well worth seeing, fast, open and exciting.

They knocked off the tough Brooklin bunch in semi-finals, as the Inglewood-Caledon Combines were erasing East York in the other semi-final bracket. The Petes had to go three games to oust the Combines for the inter-group championship, going into provincial finals. Wallaceburg defaulted to them in Ontario finals.

Among the local players who saw service this season were: Red Creighton, Jack Westonfelt, Jerry Creighton, Doug Miller, Rowan Chute, Mike Loucks, Pete King, Ira Dundas, Norm Worthy, Buster Whitton, Mick Magee, Don Crowe, Emmett Creighton, Ned Vitarelli, Red Dallin, Shorty Reid, Dutch Pammett, Oscar Sloane, Joe Meyette. With Frank Randle the coach. James Lehane and Alex Fitzgerald were two of the active officers under President H. S. Leybourne.

Two New Marks Established In Field Events

Two field records fell Thursday afternoon when P.C.I. students held their annual field day at Exhibition Park, postponed from Wednesday because of rain. A chill head wind made track men fall in their attempts to break track records, although they came close to some marks even with the handicap.

At the end of the day Don Duncan was leading for the title of senior champion with seventeen points, leading Barry Jack by two points. The title will be decided on Tuesday afternoon when the final event, the half-mile, will be run off. The half-mile event was postponed because it followed immediately after the stiff quarter mile event at the end of the meet and same competitors were entered.

But if there was any doubt as to the boys' champion, there was none at all as to the senior girls'. Eleanor Craig walked off with five firsts in five tries to capture the cup with twenty-five points. Her closest competitor was Elsie Saunders, with Helen Beatty finishing third. Miss Craig took first honors in the 75-yard dash, the 100-yard dash, the broad jump, the high jump and the shot put.

Among the intermediate boys Stroyan Leith led T. Clarke with twenty points to the latter's twelve. Bill Hall captured junior honors with twenty points. He outjumped A. Chimenti in the last event of the day, the high jump, to take Chimenti's earlier lead of one point.

Intermediate girls' champion was Jean Carter with Margaret Mason the second, Audrey Murray third. Eleanor Pue won the junior title, with Winda Jacquith second and Eileen Dauncy third.

The two new records established were in the senior high jump, when H. Cutting leaped five feet, six inches. In the junior pole vault A. Chimenti topped the bar at seven feet, ten inches to set a new mark.

SPORTS - DAY BY DAY -

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

WITH Thanksgiving Day just around the week-end, we dunno if we ought to be thankful about the heavy sports slate or not. On the whole we think we should be most grateful—on account of we got work, Peterborough is still showing centres its size the way in the athletic world, and that we aren't trying to impress a tough military officer that our limp is not a fake. So we're thankful. But give a look at the local sports Saturday and Monday. The Petes are in the ball finals here Saturday and in Stratford on the holiday. P.C.I. gridders have two tilts here tomorrow with Oshawa, junior and senior. Orfuns go to Montreal on Monday to open their senior O.R.F.U. schedule. Lacrosse may or may not be on Monday—at this writing we hadn't heard officially. And all this week there were school field days, a rugby edition to fill up, lacrosse in Lindsay, and what not. Oi, oi, oi!

• • • • • •

DON'T OVERLOOK the rugby jousts at the Exhibition Grounds on the morrow, the junior Oshawa-P.C.I. jamboree at 10 in the a.m. and the senior fray at two in the aft. They ought to be lively frays, the P.C.I. teams invariably playing a wide-open exciting brand of football. It took the senior squad through to an Ontario title last year, so it must be quite effective as well as pleasing to watch. The Oshawa outfits insisted on playing Saturday, according to schedule—regardless of a ball game here at Riverside—so these tussles will be staged regardless of rain, wind, snow, hail, high water or hurricane. .Yep, they'll be played right out.

• • • • • •

Let It Be Now, Lefty

LOOKS LIKE Lefty McNally to blaze 'em across for the Petes here tomorrow 'gainst Stratford in the first of the O.B.A. finals. Fans will flock to this ball game, as it should be a dandy, and Ontario finals are very infrequent in this man's town. Peterborough made them in 1920 and in '27, but lost out to Hamilton each time. The locals have a swell club this year and hopes are high of bringing a senior diamond provincial pennant to our thriving borough. This team threatens to make baseball history here, and few ball fans will want to miss the chance of saying in some 20 or 30 years to young whippersnappers: "Yes, I remember that October day back in '38 when the Petes knocked off Stratford in Ontario finals—our only senior championship. The yhad guys playing for them named Burton, Calladine, Kearns, Cadd, Kingdon, Murphy, Doll, Starr, Whatley, McNally, Kitchen(Whitehill, Jakafby and a few more." So don't pass this one up, folks.

• • • • • •

NOTHING NEW with the Orfuns these days. The grid huskies are drilling hard for their opener with the Nats in Montreal, and we'll know how they shape up after that game. Team is looking good defensively, and we hope the passing ofefnsive plays click okay. We'd feel a lot better if Bummer Stirling—the Sarnia ace hoofer—was living in this town, but he isn't. Uniforms are ready now and the gang will have a light picture practice Saturday pulling out the following day for the French-Canadian metropolis. Sarnia Imps open on Monday, too, against Balmy Beaches in Toronto. The following Saturday sees the Beaches here and Montreal at Sarnia.

He Might Prove Worthy

NORM WORTHY, classy lacrosser with the Petes this summer, has hopes of sticking here for the winter and making a place on the puck squad. Worthy was brought here from Brampton and aided the locals muchly with a fine performance in the rugged gutted-stick sport. He has a fair hockey record of recent years, having played on a winning Hamilton industrial team and being with the Brampton intermediates last winter when they won their group and went a piece in O.H.A. playdowns. Norm plays a wing spot and if he goes anywhere nearly as well in hockey as in lacrosse—where they carry their sticks a bit lower—he might help the Petes a lot.

THE PETES are declared Ontario senior "B" lacrosse champions. Yes, ONTARIO CHAMPIONS! Word came through from Wallaceburg this morning that the Wallaceburg finalists were defaulting in final playoffs to ePterborough, owing to a car accident in which Wallaceburg players were involved early yesterday morning near London. Coach Ernest Shepley—a former senior star in Oshawa—was killed and four players injured. These young players, who played in the juvenile and senior "B" lineups for Wallaceburg, are hors de combat for the season, so the club has dropepd out. Which leaves the other finalist, Peterborough, the automatic titleholder for 1938 in O.L.A. senior "B" competition. An unfortunate ending to the season, with the final series not concluded, but those who had seen games in Western Ontario this year were of the opinion that Peterborough had a stronger squad—and the classy local lacrossers would likely have cleaned up on Wallaceburg, anyway.

• • • • • •

Look a Championship Here!

OUR HEARTY CONGRATS to President Harold Leybourne, Coach Frank Randle and all the officers and players of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club. They are worthy champs, and a senior "B" lacrosse title coming here for the first time is a mighty fine thing. It definitely puts Peterborough on the lacrosse map. The Petes had a long, tough season in an interlocking group and any club that could emerge on top of such clubs as East York, Brooklin and the Inglewood-Caledon Combines, deserves all the laurels that go to the victor. The O.L.A. trophy and medals are being readied up and will be sent here shortly. We hope the City Council does something to honor the Petes, too. We didn't realize the other night in Lindsay, as the locals rubbed out the Combines, that we were witnessing the Petes win a title. We understand the Petes are now challenging St. Catharines, senior "A" champs, for the LeBeck Cup, emblematic of the best lacrosse club in the province. More again on this lacrosse title.

POOR OLD DIZZY DEAN'S "nothing ball" — which he is using since his famous "fog-'em-through" delivery faded with a sore arm—couldn't hold the Yanks for nine frames yesterday in the World Series, and it's now two in a row for the Ruppert Rifles. The Cubs will not likely see any more action in Chicago this year, games Saturday, Sunday and Monday being at 1.30 in the Yankee Stadium. Gomez got his sixth straight World Series win yesterday, a couple of mighty homers late in the tilt beating Dean. And now the National Leaguers know why the Yanks make it a one-team parade each season in the American League.

GRAB-BAG: P.C.I. had its big field day at the Exhibition Grounds yesterday....Jack Westonfelt, local lacrosser, learned to hold his temper as playoffs commenced and ended the season as the most improved player on the Petes' roster....Pick Hines claims Bill Calladine will play for his Baltimore puckists this winter; Bill could not be reached for a statement....Lefty McNally's dad from over the line, will be here tomorrow to see his son twirl against Stratford....World Series scores will be given out at Riverside on the morrow....Winner of the O.B.A. series is said to be drawn against Ottawa for the Eastern Canada title this month....Umpire Curzon called out a Bowmanville runner for running into a Caledonia infielder—going toward a batted ball—and that lost Bowmanville their O.B.A. intermediate "B" series....Please note Umps Kinkley and Colling....With the end of lacrosse here (unless St. Kitts agree to play), Loucks, Crowe, Magee and G. Creighton, will step right into rugby....So now we want a ball title for '38....O-di-yo-lay-hi-o-lay-di-ho, and a couple of whoops.

Mrs. Mulqueen Goes Into Series

OTTAWA, Oct. 7—(CP).—Three British golfers and one lone Canadian from Toronto matched strokes over Royal Ottawa Golf Club's rolling fairways to-day in the semi-finals of the Canadian Women's Open golf championship.

The four are al lthat are left from a field of 94 which started out last Monday in pursuit of the open title, vacated by Mrs. John Rogers of Winnipeg, who was eliminated in the first round.

Mrs. F. J. Mulqueen of Toronto, a veteran in golfing tournaments in this country, meets Mrs. J. B. Walker of Britain in one semi-final match and in the other two youthful Britons, Clarrie Tiernan of Dublin and Jessie Anderson of Perth, Scotland, clash.

Most experts at the Open concede Mrs. Mulqueen a victory over Mrs. Walker, while Miss Anderson is expected to trim Miss Tiernan, her teammate on the British Curtis Cup quintet.

It's up to city officials to decide whether Haas' place of residence is decided by his waking or sleeping abode.

Marmora Squad Defeats Tweed 20-10

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Oct. 7.—Marmora High School rugby team maintained its unbeaten record at Tweed on Thursday afternoon, winning by 20 points to 10.

In the first quarter the homesters obtained a touchdown through Cournyea. In the next quarter Marmora showed a little superiority, indulging in a series of bucks which opened up play. Touchdowns were obtained by Harris and Reynolds to give the visitors the lead.

Halfway through the third quarter, Gus Leonard, when surrounded by opponents, obtained a forward pass to run for a touchdown. Marmora again increased their lead as Richard Gale took a forward pass to get the fourth touchdown.

Towards the close of the final quarter Luffman crossed over for Tweed as he completed a forward pass.

At softball, Tweed girls took points from the Marmora team.

Lefty McNally Hurls Saturday

Frank (Lefty) McNally is expected to pitch for the Petes here tomorrow afternoon when the locals open their O.B.A. senior final series against the Stratford Nationals. Manager Eddie Murphy of the Petes stated Lefty was the logical choice, provided he looks okay in the pre-game warmup tomorrow at Riverside. No announcement has been made from the Stratford manager, who has a southpaw and a righthand veteran as his hurling mainstays. Second of the three-game series for the provincial championship will be staged in Stratford on Monday, with site of a possible third game undecided as yet.

The Petes are all in good shape and ready to make the biggest baseball bid of their lives—for the Ontario title for 1938. They have had a fine season, sailing through an abbreviated C.O.B.L. schedule in fair style, knocking off Oshawa easily in loop playoffs as they improved, rubbing out Niagara Falls handily in O.B.A. semi-finals as they hit their true form, and now set to tear into the Nationals in the final round. It ought to be a great ball game tomorrow between the finalists and will likely pack in a huge crowd of Peterborough and Central Ontario fans.

Arsenic Survives

A pair of galoshes left in the room had been melted by the summer's heat.

FACTS ABOUT FOOTBALL

Field Goals—How To Kick Placements And Drop-Kicks

By LEW HAYMAN

There is practically no defence against a field goal. Once that ball goes between the posts and over the cross-bar we have an automatic three points. Thus scoring is relatively easy for a team that possesses a good placement kicker or drop-kicker, and many victories can be scored in games where touchdowns are difficult to get. The field goal is still the commonest play for the try for point after touchdown and those single points can mean many a win or loss.

PLACEMENT KICKS

Holder's Position.

When kicking a placement the holder of the ball should be about seven, eight or nine yards back of the snap. He is responsible for the locking assignment of the rest of the players, and must make sure the ground is firm where the ball is to be placed. When everything is ready he checks with the kicker to see if he is ready. For a right-footed kicker he kneels on the kicker's right side, on his left knee, with his right leg extended toward the line of scrimmage.

When receiving the ball from the snap he extends his hand toward the latter, about two feet off the ground thus making a good target for the snap and also making it easy to go for a ball that might not be snapped properly. He catches the ball easily and INSTANTLY places it on the ground ON THE EXACT SPOT PREVIOUSLY AGREED UPON by both he and the kicker.

The ball is held in a vertical position. Laces should be turned to the front, but this is not necessary. The ball can be held steady on the ground with either one finger or more, the finger or fingers on the top points of the ball. They are not removed until the ball has been kicked.

Kicker's Position.

The kicker lines up his knick, noting the distance and direction from the ball THROUGH THE CENTRE OF THE GOAL POSTS. He relaxes and concentrates on the spot he is going to kick the ball from. As the holder is placing the ball on the ground, he takes a natural step, switching his weight to the kicking foot. The other foot is far enough to one side so that the kicking toe remains behind the ball and in direct line with the intended direction of its flight.

The ankle of the kicking foot is rigid and the knee slightly bent. Then as the toe almost reaches the ball, the leg is snapped from the knee, the knee being immediately meets the long anxis of the ball just below the middle and FOLLOWS THROUGH. The kicker should be slightly bent over with head and eyes constantly concentrated on the ball until it has been kicked.

Using a square-toed shoe is helpful to a placement kicker. Allowances should be made, of course, for the wind.

The Drop Kick.

The drop-kicker stands about 10 yards back of the snap, receives the ball in as low a position as possible, holding it with one hand on each side. The ball is dropped with the long axis perpendicular to the ground. Just as the ball hits the ground the foot is brought up to strike it in the centre, going up and through it.

Perfect timing and a true drop of the ball are absolutely necessary in drop-kicking, which naturally makes it a less certain method of kicking field goals than the placement, where the ball is placed on the ground by the holder and all the kicker has to do is kick.

TO-MORROW I'll go over the forward pass and how to throw it.

"THROWED MYSELF OUT", GALLANT DIZZY MOANS AFTER GAME

Dean Is Crushed When Yankees Win Six To Three

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—"I throwed myself out."

With these four words Dizzy Dean told the story of his gallant pitching in the chill of Wrigley Field Thursday with the Yankees lambasting him for two home runs, after he had them in check until the eighth inning.

Dean appeared to be crushed over the disaster. His face had a weary expression. He was drawn and tired. He complained his right arm pained him severely from the sixth inning, and said, it felt as if a piece of bone was sticking out of his shoulder.

Larry French, Cub lefthander, came to the clubhouse, walked silently across the room to where Dean was standing and threw his arms around him. No word was spoken; none was needed.

"I throwed myself out," Dean moaned. "I had them beat 3-2 until Crosetti hit his homer. Those things just happen and you can't help it. Those first two runs should never have been scored. The Yankees were the luckiest ball club in the last two days that I ever saw."

Yanks Lucky, Says Dean—

Dean dragged his tired body across the room, and, sitting down on a table in the rubbing room, looked back over the game.

"That hurt," he reflected. "I can understand now how the Yankees won the American League pennant. They're lucky.

"I gave them all I had—that's all I could do."

The Cubs, with Manager Gabby Hartnett among them, were silent, downcast when they entered the clubhouse.

Manager Hartnett pleaded for time to catch his breath before talking to waiting reporters. He appeared to be tremendously upset. After resting a few minutes, however, he launched into praise of Dean's pitching performance.

"Dean pitched his heart out," Hartnett said. "Even with a bad arm, he still gave me the best he had. What he couldn't do with a good arm! I'm praying that his arm comes back next season. What a guy! What a guy!"

Hartnett said Crosetti's homer in the eighth inning was a fast ball, or what was supposed to be Dean's fast ball. It came when the count was three and two on Frank.

"The one that DiMaggio hit," Gabby added, "really was a lulu. He really teed off on that one."

Hartnett said he would start Clay Bryant, big raw-boned righthander, against the Yankees in New York Saturday, and would present the same line-up that started Thursday, meaning that Joe Marty, who collected a double and two singles Thursday would play centre field and bat in clean-up spot. Young Phil Cavarretta will remain on the bench during the remaining games of the series if Marty continues hitting.

The Yankees' dressing room rang with whoops and cries of victory.

They shed their mater-of-fact attitude with their moist uniforms.

"The Dagoes did it," shouted Big Bill Dickey.

DiMaggio and Crosetti, home run heroes of the day, grinned their appreciation.

"East Side, West Side," chanted the venerable coach, Art Fletcher, and the entire team joined in the thundering "Sidewalks of New York" refrain.

Asked what was on the ball he had driven over the left field wall, DiMaggio replied:

"It was a fairly fast one—the same sort of thing he got me on before."

Bears Nab Lead As Beggs Beats Blues 6-1

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 7—(AP).—The man who put Kansas City Blues in the Little World Series tonight faces the job of keeping them there. He is Marvin Bruer, righthanded hurler who won three games from St. Paul in the American Association playoff finals. Tonight he takes the mound against Newark Bears in the sixth game of the Little World Series. If he wins, the series will be tied up at three all, if he loses, it's all over.

Joe Beggs in a masterful performance hurled Newark to a 6-1 victory in the fifth game last night to give the Bears their three to two edge.

In registering his second victory of the series, Beggs allowed only eight hits and didn't walk a man.

George Washburn didn't last quite three innings last night and in that time the Bears had scored five runs. Ernie Bonham, who succeeded him, hurled bangup ball until taken out for a pinch hitter, and Al Piechota, who finished the game, didn't do so badly, although he was nicked for a run in the ninth.

DiMaggio's Parents Dance Over Homer

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7 (A.P.).—A tiny voice answered the telephone at the home of Joe DiMaggio's parents.

"Papa and Mama DiMaggio are out in the front room." It was Betty Kron, niece of the Yankees' star outfielder and home run buster, talking. "Papa has Mama and they are dancing around the room. Papa is shouting, 'Hooray, he hit a big one.'"

Gehrig Scores, Henrich Out Stealing At First Game

Lou Gehrig, iron-man first baseman, playing his seventh world series with New York Yankees, is seen crossing the plate at the TOP, for the initial run of the series, starting the Yanks off to a 3-1 first game victory. Gehrig walked and came in on Dickey's single and Herman's error on a blow by Selkirk. BELOW, Billy Herman, Cub second baseman, puts the ball on Tom Henrich of the Yanks after taking a rifle throw from Gabby Hartnett, to prevent the attempted steal.

Choice Football Dish Ready For Fans To Down With Thanksgiving Fare As Season Cuts Open On All Fronts

By Sydney Gruson
(Canadian Press Sports Writer.)

This is the week-end when the east beats a path to the section's football stadia for the season opening. The path will be well worn by the time December's snows are falling and Toronto Argonauts are returned or dethroned as senior champions.

The football dish ready for presentation tomorrow and Monday, Thanksgiving Day, is a choice one, headed by such traditional struggles as University of Toronto against Queen's at Kingston; Hamilton Tigers' invasion into Argo home territory and Sarnia Imperials' visit to Toronto Balmy Beach.

Before Thanksgiving day is over other decisions will be known. University of Western Ontario Mustangs tackle McGill Redmen in Montreal; Montreal Cubs move into Ottawa against the burly Rough Riders and Peterborough Orfuns begin their senior career against Montreal Nationals.

The interprovincial and intercollegiate unions open tomorrow, leaving the holiday to the Ontario union gridders. There are a number of questions which will be answered at least partly in the opening skirmishes.

Argos Two Down Already

Not the least of these is whether argonauts have sufficient power to hold their national title. Two weeks ago they were pushed all over Varsity Stadium when Balmy Beach eliminated them in the first stage of the Toronto city championship series. Then, to make that defeat more humbling, University of Toronto whipped Balmy Beach last Saturday.

But Argos were without big Bob Isbister against the Beach club. Indications are that Isbister's leg injury has healed sufficiently to let him do the kicking tomorrow against the Tigers—and with Bob hoisting them the scullers should be a different club entirely. He meant that much different in the title march last year.

Whether Rocky Rocano has regained his kicking form of two seasons back is the main Ottawa question. If he has, Riders will give any team a stern fight; and if he hasn't they still rank ahead of Cubs, replacing the Indians of 1937 and rebuilt with intermediates to take the places of stars who went over to Montreal's O.R.F.U. entry, the Nationals.

Toronto Blues move right into the college champions' backyard as the logical choice over a Queen's team that resembles only slightly the one Ted Reeve piloted to the title in 1937. Graduations and academic troubles riddled the tricolor, yet observers are wary to call Toronto too strongly. Reeve's charges have pulled off too many upsets in past years.

McGill Faces Test

Touted highly on pre-season games, McGill gets a real test against Bill Storen's Mustangs. With both teams stressing passing and running among the backfielders, it should develop into a wide-open, high-scoring display. The result is a toss-up.

The annual turkey day classic between Imperials, gunning for their eighth straight union crown, and the strengthened Beaches may overshadow them all. Powerful in all departments, Beaches are being primed for their greatest assault on the Imperial dynasty.

Imperials will be without Ormond Beach, giant backfield ace killed in an explosion at a Sarnia oil refinery last month. They won two exhibition games from Big Four opposition without Beach and they still pack power with Hugh (Bummer) Stirling's punting and Mike Hedgewick's running.

National get the call over Peterborough, whose young players will be running up against tough opposition in Johnny Ferraro, Ernie Hempey, Tommy Burns and company.

Crosetti-DiMaggio Homers End Cubs Mounting Hopes Dean Could Save The Series

By Gayle Talbot
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

ENROUTE TO NEW YORK, Oct. 7 (AP)—Except for the fashionable huzzahs that will be sounded about Sunday night in Yankee Stadium the 1938 World Series appears to be all wrapped up.

The Yankees are too good. Too good for Chicago Cubs, and possibly too good for the future of baseball. As the two clubs head into New York to resume the unequal contest on Saturday with the Yankees already twice victorious, there isn't much to wonder about except whether Colonel Jake Ruppert's super team will make it four straight.

The general belief on this railway carriage is they will. When Frank Crosetti and Joe DiMaggio rapped those late inning homeruns to beat Dizzy Dean 6-3 yesterday, the most obstinate backers of the Cubs gave up. That plus the Yankees' opening 3-1 win was too much.

If the Yanks had done it sooner it wouldn't have been quite so bad. But they let Diz look like the biggest hero since Sergeant York for 7 2-3 innings. Then they reached out and slapped him down.

Yanks 20th Victory

For those who are impressed by figures, yesterday's was the 20th victory scored by the Yankees in their 23 world series games since 1927. No club ever before so dominated the game. Their weakest member, Frankie Crosetti, high lighted the opening game with his fielding and yesterday the little shortstop hit the homer that virtually settled the series.

It is a happy job pitching for the Yankees. Vernon (Lefty) Gomez yesterday became the first pitcher ever to win his sixth straight world series victory without having suffered a loss, and El Goofy was enjoying a nice warm shower at the time.

Dean's "fast ball" is enclosed in quotations because it is slow compared to the specimens Diz used to rear back and fire in other days. Nobody will ever know how he held the Yankees to three hits in seven innings.

After the game Manager Joe McCarthy patted himself over the heart and said: "That fellow Dean has one of these."

Hartnett said in the dressing room: "Diz, you gave me everything you had—and with a sore arm."

DiMaggio's mighty blow in the ninth with Henrich on base seemed an afterthought, for the game already was won and lost. The tall Italian caught the first pitch. A slow "nothing ball," and practically knocked it out of sight. By that time the crowd of 42,000 loyal Cub rooters was beyond all pain.

For tomorrow's engagement, the Yankees haven't any one to call upon except Monte Pearson, who recently pitched a no-hitter and who stopped the Giants in the third world series game a year ago.

Looking Back On This Date

This is the story of an unsolved mystery of Lake Ontario.

What became of the government schooner, Speedy, which left York, as Toronto was then called, Oct. 7, 1804?

She bore a judicial party bound for Newcastle, then the judicial centre of the district which later was served by Cobourg. Aboard were Judge Cochrane of the Court of King's Bench, Robert I. D. Gray, the first solicitor-general of Upper Canada, Angus Macdonell, counsel for the murderer whose trial was planned at Newcastle. High Bailiff Fisk of York, two Indian interpreters, Cowan and Ruggles, the accused (Ogetoniout) charged with the murder of a white, named Sharp on Walpole Island on Lake Scugog, as well as a Mr. Herchimer, a merchant of York, several witnesses and the crew, 39 persons in all.

The weather was fresh when the ship left York, later developing into a regular Lake Ontario autumn gale with heavy seas. She was sighted the following day off what is now Lakeport, but was never seen again, nor a trace of her found. Not even a spar came to land. None of the bodies were ever washed ashore, and to this day the exact fate of the Speedy is a mystery. All sorts of theories exist in traditions along the lakeshoe, some of them fantastic, but all without solid foundation.

The Indians of the accused's tribe when told of the missing ship were not surprised, for one of their "wise women" had predicted that the prisoner would not live to be hanged. She was right. The judge and lawyers were a serious loss to the legal profession of that time, when skilled lawyers were rare. Judge Cochrane had a high reputation and was sincerely mourned.

Mercury Starts 6,370-Mile Hop To Africa

DUNDEE, Scotland, October 7—(C.P. Cable).— The Mercury, British pick-a-back seaplane which two months ago made a flight to Canada, today started for Cape Town, South Africa, in an effort to break the long-distance flying record.

The Mercury took off from the back of its mothership, the Maia, at 1.20 p.m. (8.20 a.m. E.S.T.).

The present record of 6,306 miles is held by Russia for a flight from Moscow to the United States via the North Pole

Dundee was chosen for the take-off because international regulations specify that a new record must be at least 62 miles greater than the existing figure. The distance from Southampton, the Mercurys home base, to Capetown is only 5,960 air miles.

The distance between Dundee and Cape Town is 6,370 miles.

The Mercury, piloted by Captain Donald Bennett, is expected to fly over the centre of England, southward to a point in the Mediterranean East of Minorca, and then on the Great Circle course to the mouth of the Congo.

She carried 2,100 gallons of gasoline, providing an estimated range of 6,700 miles.

The Mercury arrived at Dundee September 21 and has since been delayed by unfavorable weather. The flight also was postponed for a few days during the height of the international crisis.

"Jitterburgs" Are Nothing New Conductor Claims

Vancouver, Oct. 7 (CP)

SIR Ernest McMillan of Toronto, Canadian composer and symphony conductor, claims "jitterbugs," "Jam sessions" and swing music are nothing new.

All popular present day music is derived from Negro rhythm, said Sir Ernest yesterday. He did not believe "swing music" would be permanent. "'Jittery' music is probably the result of the 'jittery' nervous life people lead today," he said.

GORDON ASKS FOR VOTE ON ABOLITION OF THE CITY TRUST

Relief Vote Is All Spent Committee Told

For the first time in the years of grief since the relief policy went into effect in the wake of the depression of 1929, Peterborough's relief administration reported a deficit.

Alderman Dutton informed the committee Thursday night that the disbursements in September wiped out the last of the council's appropriation for 1938, thrusting the relief account into the red column for $3,661.16.

The city's total relief expenditure for the year to the end of September was $99,418.59; the government's rebate $48,257.43, leaving $51,161.16 to be paid out of the city treasury.

The council's appropriation for relief for the entire twelve months was $47,500; subtract that from the amount chargable to the treasury, and the debit balance beginning October 1 was $3,661.16.

First Overdraft.

Alderman Dutton said he regretted to have to make this report to the committee, the first overdraft since the relief problem was assumed. Taxpayers who are interested in the council's financing will remember that the increased employment last year left the impression that the corner had been definitely turned; and in budgeting for this year the council reduced its estimate of relief needs for the year. However, early in the year the industrial situation went into a relapse, and considerable of the ground gained in 1937 was lost.

"I am still hoping that the government will grant us some additional assistance and that a satisfactory adjustment will be made," Alderman Dutton remarked.

A. G. Metheral, relief officer, told the committee that even with some supplementary contribution from the government the deficit in the city's relief account would be around $4,000.

Nearly $100,000 Spent.

Nine months of this year ran up a relief bill of almost $100,000. The total as indicated above was $99,418.59.

Some of the items in that aggregate were: Provisions $50,993.70; rent $15,721.15; doctors $5,270.04; milk $6,660.25; fuel $7,254.43; clothing $3,511.23, and so on.

The expenditure during September was $7,849.10 as compared with $4,597.51 last year. The number of families receiving relief last month was 313 and in September of last year 194; and the total number of persons 1,342 as against 813 in 1937; and the per capita relief cost was up from $5.65 to $5.85.

Close Competition Marks Peterboro' Collegiate Field Day

The closest competition in years featured the Collegiate Track and Field Day at Exhibition Park on Thursday afternoon after the meet had been postponed from Wednesday on account of rain. Leader in the senior boys' class was Don Duncan (1), but his claim to the title was not absolute because the half-mile is yet to be run. Speedy Stroyan Leith (2) captured the intermediate boys' championship, far outclassing his rivals in track events. He is also seen in (5) finishing well ahead of the rest of the field in the 100-yard dash. In (3) is Bill Hall, junior champion, who won his title in the last event of the day when he defeated A. Chimenti, early leader, by capturing first honors in the high jump. Winning girls are seen in (4). From LEFT to RIGHT, they are: Eleanor Craig, senior girls' champion; Eleanor Pue, junior girls' champion, and Jean Carter, intermediate girls' champion. In (6) is a close finish in one of the girls' events, showing just how keen competition was at the meet. The straining girl at the EXTREME RIGHT won the event. (Examiner Staff Photos.)

Alderman Would Put Question Up To The Ratepayers At Election On New Year's Day

A proposal by Alderman Gordon to submit to the people at the New Year's Day electons the question "Are You In Favor of the Abolition of the City Trust Commission?" was deflected into temporary suspension at Thursday night's meeting of the council on Alderman Cotton's suggestion in other words that the Commission be given another chance.

The Gordon resolution, seconded by Alderman Wilson, was changed to a notice of motion to be read at the November meeting of the council.

Alderman Gordon said the Commission had been asked to provide money to buy a paving equipment, a total of $25.000 including money for wages. If this accommodation had been placed in the council's hands quite a number of men could have been employed this fall on necessary work for the city. Alderman Gordon recalled the payments by the Commission of the award to the Ackerman Company in their court action for damages, and also the amount for the rest room on the market. The Commission could find those sums and turn them into the city treasury, he added, but when an appeal was made to help employment at this time the Commisison entirely ignored the letter from the council.

"Who would carry out their work if they were abolished?" Alderman McIntyre enquired.

Two Treasurers Now

"The city treasurer," Alderman Gordon replied. "We've got two treasurers now. This is the only municipality in Ontario which hasn't control over all its financial affairs.'

Alderman Cotton said the holiday period had intervened disrupting the usual course of affairs. He believed the Commission was more favorable now to making any contribution it could to the council than ever before. "I'd suggest we ask for an appointment and see what conclusion we can come to in regard to these matters.

Alderman is Dubious

Aldrman Gordon intimated that he was dubious about getting any satisfactory response from the City Trust, but he was willing to let the motion become a notice of motion.

Alderman Wilson said the only reply he got from any Commissioner about the councils resolution was some remark that "they should get a raise in pay."

"We ought to cut them off entirely," Alderman Gordon said.

Motorist Beats Airmail Letter With 36-Hour Start

A VISITOR to Peterborough wonders how airmail works. Tuesday morning at Newark, N.J. airport he posted a card to a friend in this city. It was to be sent by airmail and he paid 6 cents for the allegedly faster delivery.

Wednesday night at 11 p.m. he finished his business in New York, stepped into his car and drove for Peterborough, arriving about two o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The friend surprised, had not received the card.

However, promptly at 8.30 Friday morning the airmail card, special stamp and all dated Newark, Oct. 4, 9.30 a.m. was delivered at the friend's office—71 hours after stamping—and now he too wonders how airmail works.

Council Returns Cheque To Smith

By a vote of 7-2 Thursday night the council decided to return Smith township's cheque for $35 for the service of the fire department at a fire in Chemong Park last May.

Aldermen Juby and Gordon voted for acceptance, but Ald. Cotton posed the question "What about North Monaghan? How will it affect them? They pay us $50 any time the department goes to a fire in the township."

"Send it back to them," Alderman Stocker advised.

"Keep it," Alderman Juby suggested. "That's probably all you'll get."

"I have advocated all along not to let the brigade go outside the city," Ald. Wilson said. "You never know what may happen. It cost us $220 to repair the pumper after the trip to the Norwood fire, but of course they paid the bill in full."

"As long as the townships around us can call on the department they'll do nothing to help themselves," was Ald. McIntyre's remark.

Ald. McCannan said the neighboring municipalities should be treated alike, and if the charge to Monaghan was $50 it shouldn't be less to Smith. The original account to Smith was $110, but the township council wrote that they considered $35 a fair payment in view of the fact that the call was to Chemong Park.

"Maybe it is worth $3b to find out that they don't consider the service worth more than that," Ald. Dutton said. A Stocker-McCannan resolution to send the cheque back to Smith treasurer was adopted.

Fight Over Saw Is Aired In Court

Convicted of assaulting Joseph Delore in Cavendish township during the course of an argument over the ownership of a cross cut saw, Joseph Robertson, was fined $5 and $12.75 costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning.

Robertson, who pleaded not guilty, was defended by T. J. Carley, K.C., while Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., prosecuted.

On a second charge of stealing the saw over which the controversy ha darisen, there was a week's adjournment as the prosecution was not ready to proceed.

Delore, the complainant, swore that Robertson came to his shack and asked for a saw which he claimed was his. Witness had told him that if he wanted the saw he would have to go to law about it. Delore said that he was turning away from the door of his shack when Robertson hit him with his fist on the right side of the face and knocked him down. Later he said a second blow was struck and that he grabbed Robertson by the legs and threw him down on a bed.

Robert E. Duncan, employed by Delore, corroborated his story, although he said that in regard to the second blow Robertson was between him and Delore and he had not seen the latter hit although he saw Robertson's arm up.

The witness was cross-examined closely by Mr. Carley in regard to Delore's movements in connection with an axe which was in the shack and Duncan said that he had seen Delore attempt to move the axe as if he were trying to get it out of the way as the two men were scuffling.

Robertson, taking the box in his own behalf, said that when he had asked Delore about the saw, the complainant had reached for an axe which stood near the door, whereupon he had hit him. Then Delore tried to get hold of a second axe inside and witness said that he had merely pushed the other man down.

Delore, called for re-examination, denied that he had reached for an axe before Robertson had hit him the first time and said there was only one axe in the place.

Magistrate Langley said he was satisfied there had been an assault and remarked that Robertson should have gone away when he found that Delore claimed the saw which was in dispute.

Bill Calladine To Play With Baltimore

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—(CP).—Acquisition of four leading Ontario players for Baltimore Orioles of the Eastern United States' Amateur Hockey League was announced last night by W. E. (Pick) Hines, newly-appointed coach for the Orioles.

Hines said Jimmy Utman, Bill Meloche and Webb Lancyman of Cornwall Flyers, Eastern Canada Senior champions last winter, would join the Orioles, along with Bill Calladine of Peterborough. Utman and Meloche are wingmen and Lancyman a defence man, while Calladine is a high-scoring forward.

The club will begin training at Baltimore about the end of October.

Jabs and Jottings as Picked Up By Examiner Reporters

PRICES NOT CHANGED

A rumour circulating today in the city that the prices of admission to the ball game at Riverside tomorrow had been raised to seventy-five cents is denied by J. J. Dorris, secretary of the Senior Ball Club. The price will be the same as at the last playoff game, fifty cents for adults.

FLAG AT HALF MAST

The flag at the C.P.R. station was at half mast yesterday in tribute to the late Lord Shaughnessy, son of the first Baron Shaughnessy and a director of the C.P.R. Company who died in Montreal of double pneumonia. A son, Hon. William Graham Shaughnessy, age 16, succeeds to the title.

PARTRIDGE PLENTIFUL.

Protections during the past few years has resulted in a marked increase in the number of partridges in the district, particularly north of Burleigh, where it is reported the birds have been seen in considerable numbers. Farmers near the city say there appears to be many more than usual, and add that last winter was not hard on the birds.

A NICE ORDER

Jim Ellis, manager of the Peterborough Mattress Factory has just completed an order of 25 sets of innerspring mattresses and sagless bed springs for the Clifton Inn Hotel at Niagara Falls, Ontario. It is interesting to note that Ken Poole, former Peterborough man is proprietor and Charles Primeau, his brother-in-law is manager of this establishment.

A DESERVING CASE

A young married man just out of the hospital after a long illness is living in an attic room with his wife and child. The baby has a cold, and the stove they own is in a bad state of disrepair. They would appreciate having a small cookstove, regardless of its age which might tide them over the winter. Any person having such an article which they will donate, kindly telephone the operator at the Examiner office.

GET INTO TROUBLE

Two youngsters from the country, spending a holiday in Peterborough Thursday, managed to get themselves in trouble when they were caught shop lifting in a local store and turned over to the police. The two were found in possession of a number of jack knives and other articles. They will be tried in juvenile court Saturday morning.

DANFORTH MEN COMING.

Five officers of the Danforth Business Men's Association, Toronto, are being invited to attend the general meeting of the Peterborough Business Men's Association at the Chamber of Commence on Wednesday evening, October 12. They will discuss their form of organization and also their activities for the benefit of the local business men. The executive of the local association met at luncheon at Hooper's last night. They decided to hold their Santa Claus parade again this season.

TO CHOOSE DELEGATES

In order to choose fourteen delegates to attend the provincial convention on December 9 to select a new Conservative provincial leader the Peterborough County Conservative Association will hold an open meeting in the Canadian Legion Hall here on Friday, October 28, the business session to be followed by a dance.

GOES TO JAIL

Unable to pay his fine, a local man who was charged several weeks ago with illegal consumption of liquor and who has had several adjournments to give him a chance to raise some money, changed his plea to guilty in police court this morning and took the ten-day sentence that was the alternative to a $10 fine. Another man on a drunk charge who had also had several adjournments was more fortunate. He pleaded guilty and had the money to pay his fine.

Beer Is Cut Off Thirty-One Reliefers Who Refuse To Work For Food, Clothing

Thirty-one men who are getting their cookies from the relief office are going to be cut off their beer. In fact the order has already gone out, a notice and a list of names to be posted confidentially in the taprooms of the beverage spots around town. And the same warning is being sent to the liquor store, wine shop and brewery warehouse.

At the request of the city's relief committee, E. G. O'Dette, commissioner of the Liquor Control Act, agreed at once to the new prescription. The list was prepared by A. G. Metheral, relief officer and forwarded to Toronto, and copies of it have been sent to the beverage rooms. The committee concluded that if a man couldn't work for a living, and had to fall back on the public funds, he had no right to be in beverage rooms, presumably spending money which he obtained from some source or other.

So the interdicted list is to become a memory test for the beverage room employees, and a check will be made to prevent any leaks in the new restriction. Liquors, wines and beer have been cut off the supply to the thirty-one men comprising the original list. It may be revised or increased from time to time.

At last night's meeting of the committee, Alderman Dutton reported that some men on the relief list simply would not work for the food supplies they receive from the city.

Car Thefts Are Believed Work Of Gang

City and provincial police working on a series of car thefts and local and district break-ins occurring during Wednesday night are trying to decide whether the whole list was the work of one gang. Certainly the automobile thefts which started with the stealing of Charles B. Westbrook's car and wound up with the theft of an automobile belonging to Charles Tanner of Lakefield seem to link up together.

Westbrook's car was taken from a laneway of his residence and was found in a badly damaged condition near the intersection of Dublin and Reid streets. Later a car belonging to Jesse Airriess was tolen from in front of his place on Reid street and it was located Thursday afternoon a half mile from Lakefield and it also had been badly damaged through inefficient driving.

Stolen In Lakefield

About the same time it was discovered that Mr. Tanner's car had been taken during the night from the Tanner garage and the assumption is that the thieves, after the Airriess machine had been stolen walked into Lakefield and stole Mr. Tanner's car. The latter machine was found Thursday night by Provincial Constable David Silvester on the bank of the canal about Lock 20. When located the front wheels of the stolen car were over the cement wall, the switch was on and it is not known whether the automobile got in that position by accident or whether the thieves tried to drive it into the canal.

During Wednesday night there was a series of break-ins that apparently fit in with the car thefts. At Westwood a quantity of gasoline was stolen and Mrs. Lobb's booth was robbed of $35 worth of tobacco, chocolate bars and other goods. Here in Peterborough the Park Hill service station was broken into and at Lakefield, Foster's garage was entered, a till containing a number of coppers and some cigarettes were carried off while gasoline was taken from the British-American station.

THOSE NEW UNIFORMS

Peterborough citizens will have an opportunity of seeing the new uniforms of the Peterborough senior rugby club Saturday afternoon when there will be a signal practice in full uniform in front of the armouries at 1 o'clock. The outfits in burnt orange and black are decidedly picturesque. The sweaters, made in Chicago, are of duray cloth and no other Canadian club has anything like them.

The Rambling REPORTERS

FISH BAIT.

There is one woman in this city who is ready to breathe a fervent "Thank Heavens" just as soon as the fishing season is over. This woman, the mother of two boys is ready at all times to overlook certain misdemeanors of her offspring, but rues the day the two young live wires decided to become bait merchants. It was fine when they sold dew worms because they were kept outside but one Saturday night she visited the bathroom only to find about 40 healthy sized minnows cavorting in half a tub of water, and a piece of rusty screen over the bath tub plug. There is a quick sale for minnows because these disappeared the same night although probably at a loss. The next headache for the mother came several days later after a shopping trip. She entered the bathroom and was amazed to find two frisky green frogs hopping around the floor of the room. Seven or eight others in varying sizes and colors ogled at her from the bottom of the spotlessly clean tub. It is to be hoped the frogs can stand the bumps because the woman toosed the whole flock out through a second storey window. Her instructions to the young merchants about using the bathroom as a bait storehouse had the desired effect, but the boys are still looking for customers to sell dew worms.—McG.

WOULD CUT SPEED LIMIT.

Reduction of the sped limit on designated municipal streets was proposed in a resolution by Alderman Gordon, seconded by Alderman McIntyre, at last night's meeting of the Council. The present rate is 30 miles an hour. Alderman Gordon suggested 20 miles an hour or any other rate less than 30 miles. He said he understood the Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, would consider introducing amending legislation as a further effort to reduce traffic accidents, injuries, and fatalities, if the cities and towns indicated that they were in favor of the change.

Dairymen of Argentina have asked government aid in selling butter abroad.

Plan To Cross Wild And Domestic Geese

This district may soon have a new industry as the result of applications that are being made, through Hon. G. N. Gordon, K.C. to the Dominion government for licenses under the Migratory Birds' Act to breed a new type of fowl by crossing the Canada Goose with the domestic brand Dr. Arthur Johnston of Peterborough and N. Ross and D. Windover of Harvey township are three who are applying for licenses and they wish to import parents birds from Gordon Shaw of Prince Edward Island.

The selling of wild fowl is forbidden, of course, under the regulations, but the product of the crossing of the wild birds with the domestic variety is not covered by the game laws and there is a big market in the United States for the birds which are large and well-flavored.

New Zone 5 Exceeds Munich Accord And Commission Yields To Hitler's Demand Without Vote

BERLIN, Oct. 7—(AP)—Germany had permission today to occupy a new, fifth zone of Czechoslovakia and her troops marched in the fourth.

The International Sudetenland Commission marked out the new area—apparently about 5,000 square miles in extent and at one point approaching to within 30 miles of Prague—to be occupied by German forces by Monday, October 10.

A few hours later the supreme army command announced that German troops had crossed the former German-Czechoslovak frontier for occupation of the fourth zone on the schedule agreed upon by the four-power conference at Munich Sept. 30

(Berlin dispatches published in Paris said Czechoslovak and British members of the International Commission had been told by Germany that they could grant Germany the new territories or Nazi armies would take it—even at the risk of a war which the Munich accord was designed to prevent.

(These reports said the Munich accord, which had been explained to the French as a "peace with honor," had now been converted to almost exactly the terms of Hitler's Godesberg ultimatum—demanding cession of certain Sudeten territories by Oct. 1.)

Takes In More Towns

The new territory of zone five was granted Germany without the formality of a plebiscite. It deepened the zones previously marked out at Munich to take in a number of towns around the western half of Czechoslovakia.

Among important sections of the new territory were the coal basin of Dux and Bruex; the glass-manufacturing city of Gablonz and the textile centre at Reichenberg.

In area, it is approximately one-fourth of the 20,000 square-mile Sudeten area claimed by Germany.

The international commission chartered the new zone as Germany prepared to bill Czechoslovakia for "reparations" dating back to 1918 and after the commission had accepted the German contention that Oct. 18, 1918, should be the date for determining where the people will be called upon to vote on union with Germany.

Under the commission's agreement, a 51 per cent Germany population would be enough to declare any city, village or district German.

Benes Going May Aid

While the reparations demand was considered a lever to force Czechoslovakia into Germany's economic system, official and industrial circles predicted that with the resignation of president Benes of Czechoslovakia, Germany's dealings with Prague would be placed on an entirely new basis.

Benes had been the most objectionable person in the eyes of official Germany.

With his disappearance from the scene came realization of Hitler's prophetic words in the Berlin sportpalast rally of Sept. 26 referring indirectly to Benes as the possible number two statesman who would have to disappear for not heeding the Fuehrer's previous warning.

The first statesman who opposed Hitler's will—former Chancellor Kurt Von Schuschnigg of Austria—is now a prisoner in the hands of Nazi authorities.

Nazis See Czechs Squeezed Under Control

BERLIN, Oct. 7 (AP)—Nazi circles predicted confidently today that remnants of Czechoslovakia soon would have close economic bonds with Germany.

The ties would be so firm, they said, that even transfer of Czechoslovak populations on a large scale from the "wrong" side of the new borders to the "right side" might prove unnecessary.

They pointed out Czechoslovakia had lost most of its industrial areas to Germany and Poland and would become a preponderantly agrarian country.

Germany is the only nation which could buy farm products of the new little state, they said.

Some Nazis expected either Rudolf Beran or former Premier Milan Hodza—both members of the Czechoslovak agrarian republic party, Slovaks and acceptable to Germany—to become Czechoslovakia's next president in succession of Eduard Benes, who resigned Wednesday.

Clearing The Path

With a pro-German president, the Nazis said, the way would be clear for a close relationship between the two countries.

These optimistic views developed from progress of an international commission now working here to determine the remaining preponderantly German territory of Czechoslovakia to be occupied by German soldiers before Sunday.

This area, with your zones granted Germany outright under the four-power Munich accord of last week, would give Germany about 5,000 square miles.

German and Czechoslovak sources indicated the issue of Sudetenland areas with mixed populations might be settled without the plebiscite provided for in the Munich agreement.

Nazi sources believed Czechoslovakia would have no choice but to form what in due time would become a customs union with Germany. Germany will do everything possible to ecourage such a development, it was said.

"The memories of Versailles (post-war peace treaty between Germany and the Allies) are too keen with us to make us want to impress a new Versailles upon the Czechs," a foreign Office spokesman asserted.

Hungary Asks Old Border.

Hungary, it appears, desires restoration of her former frontiers which would include Bratislava and Egerau on opposite sides of the Danube River.

Bratislava, in the German view, even in the days of the Austro-Hungarian empire was never a Hungarian city, for which reason Germany favors its retention by Czechoslovakia.

Egerau, on the other hand, is claimed to be purely German and for that reason Germany prevailed upon the international commission to have it awarded to the Reich.

Pretoria Makes Own Cartridges

PRETORIA, October 7. — (C. P. Reuters). First ammunition to be manufactured in South Africa under government auspices is ready for distribution from a factory recently established in conjunction with the Pretoria branch of the Royal Mint.

Only rifle ammunition—.303 cartridges—are being manufactured and these will in due course be issued to the permanent force, the active citizen force, and the defence rifle associations. It is not expected that the government will compete in the open market with ordinary dealers in ammunition.

The cartridges manufactured up to now have not been produced from raw material, but have been processed from various component parts imported from the United Kingdom. Soon, however, the whole process of manufacture from the raw materials will be carried out at Pretoria.

Government has this year set aside another £70,000 ($316,000) for capital expenditure on its ammunition factory, which when fully equipped, will produce about 10,000,000 rounds of ammunition a year.

Slum Demolition Proved Too Fast

ABERDEEN, Scotland, October 7. —(C. P.).—Hundreds of dreary families on the outskirts of this granite city are wondering when civic authorities will take them out of their caravans and put them back in houses.

Their trouble— and Aberdeen's —started when the civic authority decided on a slum-clearance program, demolished large block of tenements and started to build new ones. The reconstruction, however, did not keep pace with the demolition, and the dispossessed families moved into "temporary" settlements of wheeled shacks. Some of them have been in caravans for more than three years.

On muddy patches of ground on the outskirts of the city families pay as much as five shillings a week for one-room caravans with leaky roofs, lacking water supply or sanitary facilities. Children are born in these dwellings while other children fight on the floor.

Mustard Gas Feared Worst In Next War

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 7 (CP)—British military authorities believe mustard gas is the main thing to fear in the next war, Lieut. R. M. Crowe of the Royal Canadian Regiment told a dinner meeting here last night of the Essex-Kent Chemical Society.

Crowe returned recently from a special course in the British army on the use of chemicals in modern warfare. "Mustard gas is the worst," Crowe said. "Because it is particularly non-volatile and remains effective in both liquid and vapor forms for weeks and even months. It raises sore blisters on the skin and causes blindness if it attacks the eyes."

Tweed Scholars Given Skin Test After Fatal Fever Case

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Oct. 7.—Dr. Hardman of the Provincial Department of Health was in Tweed on Wednesday afternoon and with Dr. M. G. Dales, local Medical Health Officer, held a clinic at the Council Chambers, the pupils of two rooms were given a skin test to see if they are immune from scarlet fever.

Those who react unfavorable to the test will be inoculated. These measures have been taken as a result of a death from scarlet fever. The school will remain closed until Tuesday.

A charge of leaving the scene of an accident was preferred against Michael Meraw, Jr., Tweed, by Chief Clare Hayes of that village Wednesday. The charge followed a motor accident in Tweed when a car, said by Chief Hayes to have been driven by Meraw, was in collision with another driven by a Mr. Dow of Shannonville on Victoria street, Tweed, and during which considerable damage was done to Dow's car.

It is alleged Meraw, after colliding with Dow continued without stopping. Meraw appeared before a Justice of the Peace and the case was enlarged until October 13.

AFRAID TO MARRY

HELEN WELSHIMER

READ THIS FIRST :

Judy Rogers, New York heiress, is looking for a job because her father has been wiped out in a financial crash. When her father goes west with her step-mother, her own mother being abroad and remarried, Judy moves to a small hotel. Heart-broken because Craig Denby, the man she loved, married another girl, she finds solace in the company of Ronald Birrell, brilliant young attorney from Tennessee, who recently joined the firm of her father's lawyers. Afraid of marriage, Judy realizes that is why she lost Craig. When she learns from her best friend, Marjorie, that Craig and Mary, his bride of a few weeks, have separated, Judy calls on Mary and phones Craig in an effort to bring them back together. A second call on Mary is necessary to bring about a reconciliation. Judy cannot find work and one evening she returns to the hotel to find herself locked out because her rent is overdue.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 16

In the following week Judy pawned a ruby ring that had been her grandmother's, paid her rent, and moved to a rooming house.

She could find no work. Had anyone told her, three months before, that jobs were so scarce she would have smiled. She might have taken a dare and tried to find one, and maybe succeeded, since life has a habit of handing favors to those with market baskets more or less crowded.

But now—

She counted her money. Enough for meals and another week's rent. It had been a good ruby. Some day she would reclaim it. At the moment some orange juice, coffee and toast would be better than a jewel as a fortification against the day's search. She slipped into the scarlet woollen frock, the brown jacket, and went to the white-tiled cafeteria on the corner. The air was cold this morning. Her fur coats, two of them, were in storage. Some repair work had been done on them and she did not have the money to reclaim them. The brown jacket, the warmest coast she had, was too thin for such a day.

Someone had left a morning paper on the table that she chose, and she scanned it idly. Her eyes focused on a small story, not more than six inches long. It concerned her father. It seemed he had well-grounded hopes that one of his investments would be successful. There were financial terms, in the article, that meant nothing to her.

One thing, though, Judy knew. She would not give up her desire to be independent, worthy of the clothes she wore and the bread she ate, no matter what boon came her way. Not until she had vanquished the obstacles that beset her path would she relax.

She smiled, recalling the mingled worry and admiration in Ronald Birrell's eyes. She would give him no opportunity to call her a quitter.

"It's funny," she mused to a strip of buttered toast. "He likes Abbey Boland, and she's a glittering parasite. Now, as for me, I'm sort of a problem case, and he thinks he has a responsibility, but he wants me to fight it through. Maybe he doesn't—maybe he wants to laugh at me. But Id better turn to the want ads."

Up and down and straight across her eyes went. Secretaries, stitchers, a teacher in a private school—nothing she could do. A box caught her eye. For a moment she studied it carefully. Then the little imps of mirth that had flashed in her eyes so merrily until a few weeks before came back.

She left the table, went to a dial telephone in the corner of the restaurant, inserted a nickle in the slot, and called a number.

"Danceland?" she asked when a sleepy voice said "hello."

"It is, lady!"

"You have an advertisement in the morning paper, saying you need hostesses to serve as dance companions for—four your guests."

"Yeah?"

"I'd like to apply."

"Come around at three this afternoon. I'm the janitor. Nobody else is in. The folks leave about three or four in the morning and don't get back till afternoon."

When Judy made her application in person, promptly at three, she found a dozen other girls waiting, too. The manager singled her out from the group, eyed her shrewdly, and hired her.

"Get here around nine," he instructed. "We close at two. What about evening gowns—got any?"

"Yes, I have."

A small smile caught the corners of her mouth, and her eyebrows lifted upward. She had a dozen evening frocks hanging on velvet-padded hangers in her wardrobe. She had looked on them as a total loss until this morning. Now they would serve a good purpose.

"Any black ones?" the man persued the subject.

"Two or three."

"Good! You're the type who can wear something quiet and give it dash. How about black tonight?"

"Black will be excellent."

She mentally scanned the wardrobe hangers. One dress was a romantic black satin with velvet bows and a padded bustle. She had worn it last to the theater with Craig. Another was a high-waisted model of black crepe, worn under a black sequin sleeveless jacket. She and Craig had been house guests at the same house party the night she first appeared in it . . . Then there was a glamorous shirred black tulle, with spreading skirts and criss-cross straps which held it in place, above a low neck.

The man scrutinized her again. "No—can the black. You're a little ritzy anyway. Too Park Avenue, but some folks like it. Black might scare 'em, though. What else have you got?"

There was nothing in the wide autumn world which could have been as remote from Judy's mind, three months earlier than sitting in the modernistic office of the proprietor of Danceland, describing her wardrobe.

She tried to keep the amusement from her voice as she mentioned frocks. There was a strapless gold chiffon, a cream satin as straight as an old Greek temple pillar, half a mile of pale green tulle that wound around hed, chrysalis fashion, and a dress with six bright gypsy colors that made a bouffant skirt which was attached to a tight orange bodice. She merely mentioned the colors, though.

"Wear anything" the man finally interrupted. He mentioned a salary, told her the customary percentage of her partners' tickets on which she could count, and dismissed her.

When she arrived at her room, there was a note telling her to get in touch with Ronald Birrell. She called him from the community pay telephone in the lower hall.

He came to the point at once. "Judy have you found your dress sketches?"

"Not a trace of them, Ronald. I've searched and searched."

"There's a dress contest for the best designs being sponsored by a national style group, and this man who took your work and passed it off for his own, is entering. I called your former boss this morning, and he let it out. Seems to think that's proof that the man is honest and talented. He's using your sketches among others."

An idea was forming in Judy's mind. "Ronald, may I have the address of the contest? I have other sketches. I think I'll try. Wouldn't it be nice if I could beat the crook?"

She knew that Ronald had something else to say to her when she had copied the address. It came at last.

"I have a job I think you'll like. Not a permanent one. But it will be easy enough, and pleasant, until you get a foothold in the fashion world."

"Two jobs in one day. I'm in luck. What do I do? Fill the ink bottles and seat the clients at your office?"

"Much more thrilling. But what's the other job?"

"You tell me first." She knew Ronald was going to object to Dance land. Maybe she wouldn't have to accept it. Now that other work was offered she realized how distasteful it had been. She had been making a golden balloon out of her hope, blowing it up as big as she could, and waving it for courage.

"It's with Abbey Boland. The Bolands are clients of the firm, you know, and I've been pretty much tied up with some law matters concerning them. Abbey's turned to me with her troubles, too—"

"So Abbey has troubles?" She made a grimace at her piquant face which was reflected in a mirror in the dusky hall. "What are they?"

"Abbey is engaged to marry Count Phillippee Alexis Von Gunderfield. He arrives in a day or two and she's swamped with plans and correspondence. She needs someone to help her see it threough— someone who knows the way. She's not afraid to pay. You'll be at the Long Island house most of the time."

Making her own way in the world was fine and challenging, Judy reflected swiftly. Serving Abbey Boland, who was preparing to marry a count, was something else again.

"Thank you, Ronald. You're a dear to think about me, but Abbey can get just as good a bargain in royal gentlemen without my help. I might coax her into marrying a good, sound American and she wouldn't like that."

"Do as you please, of course. Maybe your other offer is better."

First Year And Then The Middle Forties Are The Times When Most Marriages Go On The Rocks Because Of Disillusionments

THE two danger periods of marriage are when a husband and wife are young and when they are middle-aged. Then it is that a couple should watch their steps and pray for patience and sanity and for some miracle to be wrought that will carry them safely through the storm centers of matrimony.

The first year of marriage is peculiarly frought with peril. Why it should be called the honeymoon and be popularly supposed to be filled with sweetness and romance, nobody knows. In reality, it is a time of disillusion, strife and tears when a young couple are finding out that marriage is a chore instead of a picnic; that they have married human beings instead of angels; when the boy husband wonders a thousand times why he did it and the girl wife is on the verge of putting on her hat ten thousand times and going back to Mother.

Nothing can save a young couple from having to go through the terrible ordeal of having to adjust themselves to each other. Its sufferings are so great that it is no wonder that so many lack the courage to endure them and throw up their hands and quit. Before marriage they may have thought themselves two souls with but a single thought. After marriage they find out that no man and woman ever think alike, or have the same tastes and habits and points of view. When you add to this the difference in sex and heredity, previous environment and training, you have the makings of endless antagonisms and conflicts.

Every man believes in the magic of the wedding ring and that when he puts one on a girl's finger it turns her from whatever she was before into a meek, gentle, submissive wife who is a crackerjack cook and a thrifty manager. Every girl is sure she is marrying a great lover who will spend his time telling her how beautiful and wonderful she is, and expect nothing of her except for her to meet him with a glad sweet smile and be dressed in glamorous chiffons.

When the bridegroom discovers that after marriage Susie is just as selfish and bossy and determined to have her own way as she was before marriage, and the bride finds that Tom has dropped all love-making at the altar and takes her for granted and knocks her cooking instead of praising her eyes, it is no wonder that they think, for the time being, that they have ceased to love each other and that marriage isn't worth the price. Nor is it strange that at this time, when their very souls are sore with the abrasions caused by rubbing up against each other's peculiarities, that they seek balm for their wounds in the flatteries of other women and men.

Time is the great teacher, the great solvent of our problems, and if a couple survives the first few years of marriage they recover from their initial disappointment; they learn how to adapt themselves to each other; they acquire tact and finesse in handling each other and cease to look longingly toward the divorce court. They accept marriage and make the best of it and are happy in it.

The second danger period of marriage is when a couple reaches middle age. For the last twenty or twenty-five years the man has been so busy getting a start in business and the wife so occupied with helping him and rearing a family that they have not had time to analyze their emotions or consider whether each comes up to the other's ideal or not.

Then comes a sort of a lull in life. The man has made his fortune. The woman has finished her job with the children. They have leisure in which to think about themselves and each other and to perceive that Mary no longer looks like a Lady Love and John is no woman's ideal of a Fairy Prince. They see that youth is almost gone, that their time for romance is short. Then it is that they go haywire. The woman beats it to the beauty shop and gets her face lifted, her hair dyed and falls for any gigolo who will make love to her. The man becomes the prey of any gold-digger who tells him how much handsomer he is than any of the boys and that he is too young for his old wife.

It is the roaring forties that are really the most perilous part of the whole matrimonial voyage, but if a couple can steer safely through them they need fear no further dangers.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

"My goodness!" Hanid exclaimed to Mother Goose. "Just listen to that noise coming from the candlestick maker's shop across the way!"

They both stood very quietly and listened to the loud thimp-thump-thump. Knarf, the shadow-boy with the turned-about name, had just run across to the shop to buy some candles for Mother Goose. He had promised to come right back. But he had been there quite a long time.

So they both hurried across the street. The thump-thumps grew louder as they drew near the shop. They opened the door and went in.

Over it he went.

This is what they saw: They saw Knarf sitting in a three-legged stool while in the middle of the shop a boy with long nimble legs was jumping up and down.

"Thump, thump.....thump!" he went, each time he came down on the floor.

Must Jump Higher.

"Jump higher!" Knarf was crying. "You'll never be able to jump out it unless you jump higher!"

"Oh, so this is what's causing all the noise!" Hanid said in surprise. "Why is he jumping up and down like this?"

The boy now stopped jumping and came over while Knarf explained: "His name is Jack. He's the son of the candlestick maker. He boasted he could jump over that tall candlestick standing over there. I don't think he can do it."

But Jack didn't pay any attention to him. He ran, then suddenly, just as he reached the candlestick he sprang nimbly into the air.

Over it he went, as neatly as a bouncing ball.

"There! I knew I could do it!" he said proudly. Mother Goose smiled.

"Yes, you've done it, Jack. You're the best candlestick jumper in Mother Gooseland. And now sell me two candles for two pennies, for we haven't time to stay here any longer. I have lots of shopping to do."

And as they walked out they could hear Jack singing: "Jack be nimble, Jack be quick, Jack jump over the candlestick....hooray!"

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, October 8.

According to the astral operations for this day, there may be need of much discretion in the management of the affairs, as a great deal depends upon the sagacity with which several difficult situations or perplexing events are turned to the side of profit and security. The principal danger may come through strange influence or strange persons.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year which will call for all their fortitude, persistency, and good management of rather pressing, disappointing or sorrowful events. There is peril to finances through speculation or bad investments, through the machinations of a stranger or some unusual experience or venture. Patience, vilgance and sound judgment are urged in all directions.

A child born on this day may be impressionable, imaginative, idealistic and progressive. It may be given to deep deflection of its peculiar or rare emotional and mental propensities.

Fewer Dates?

TORONTO, Oct. 7.—(CP)— This is one time of the year freshmen and co-eds of the Ontario College of Pharmacy will not be dated up, nor will they want their friends to see them. The sophomores have decreed the freshmen must wear goatees and the co-eds must not use lipstick, powder, rouge or cosmetics in any form.

Girls, ask your brothers—

they'll tell you about

S.A.
(stocking appeal)

Brothers speak out frankly. They'll tell you how men frown at stocking faults . . . runs, ugly wrinkles, snaky seams.

Why not guard against these—rate high on S.A.*? It's easy with Lux.

SAVES ELASTICITY. Lux saves the elasticity of silk—lets threads stretch without breaking so easily, then spring back into shape. Runs are fewer—and stockings retain flattering fit.

Avoid cake-soap rubbing and soaps with harmful alkali. These weaken elasticity and rob you of S.A.*

We Noticed

....the air with which someone was wearing a new hat of plum drapped velvet that had a flurry of feathers on the centre top...it was worn smack over the forehead.

....and another fetching hat we spied the other day in a window was a diminutive thing of felt with an intriguing little veil just long enough to tickle the tip of the wearers nose!

....if hats are small, then the move toward bigger bags must be just to even things up a bit. We noticed one twin-handled affair of brown crocodile was almost as large as a shopping basket, and another, of shirred black suede, was as big and soft as a headrest pillow....so many of the bags are of suede, and they come in delectable shades to meet the demand for more and more bewitching fairy colors.

INDIAN SILK IS BECOMING

IDEAL FOR BRIDGE OR COMMUTING IS FROCK LIKE THIS MODEL

By PRUNELLA WOOD

There are six square yards of the loveliest Indian silk in this frock, every inch of a hand-blocked square. The squares, which come with a bordered design, very inspiring to the dressmaker's art, are never alike. When you get one, you can be sure that nobody else on earth has its duplicate.

An easy bodice, with restrained draping and the V neckline which is becoming to nearly every type of figure, and a flat apron front which is really an insert for the skirt, are the pattern of the garment. The sleeves are long and well fitted, and what with one detail and another, this frock looks like an ideal number for the contract player, the commuter who wants to frolic around looking well-dressed after a shopping session, and the woman who "changes" her dress of an afternoon, just in case uninvited guests drop in, or a neighbor invites her over. The dress is not expensive, but it is in excellent taste and of excellent pure silk imported fabric.

Danger Lurks In Many Corners

Tiny children know instinctively the dire things that can happen with heat, cold, or anything that hurts. What they don't know are the things they have never tried out. They don't know, for instance, that a lollypop can kill if it sticks in a throat. They don't realize that a ball left on stairs can be as dangerous a sa gun. Or that poking fingers into light plugs map be as bad as being run over by a car.

It is foolish to fill up a youngster's mind too elaborately with "bogeymans" but still it's better for them to learn enough self protection to keep them alive, than to avoid the possible scars of warning and normal fear.

It is up to parents to keep the house as safe as possible. Medicines should be too high to reach; screens placed before all open fires; windows with low sills closed below or barred; electric wires repaired when worn; gas fixtures put beyond temptation; knives and scissors made taboo. So many things. Safety means unfailing vigilance.

BLAMED HERSELF

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

cess; every detection of what is false directs us to what is true; every trial exhausts some tempting for mof error. Not only so; but scarcely any attempt is entirely a failure; scarcely any theory, the result of steady thought, is altogether false; no tempting form of error is without some latent charm derived from truth."—Professor Whewell.

Dear Friends:

In other words, there isn't just black and white, but a lot of colors in between, and instead of blackjacking ourselves because we fall now and then, we should learn from them.

Not alone learn not to commit the same fault again, but learn what led up to this, what brought it on. Many mothers know that their children become naughty when their stomach is out of order, and a dose of the right medicine clears everything up.

And, if our lives are out of order we are the more liable to do something we ought not to do. So, instead of punishing ourselves as an unwise mother would punish a child, let us find the underlying cause.

Too much worry will give you a "don't give a darn feeling" and it is when you get to that stage the devil gets in his dirty work. The devil sees you are discouraged and your spirits low, so he whispers in your ear, "Why not do so-and-so, or such-and-such? Others do it and get away with it, and they are not carrying as heavy a burden as you."

So, he gets you feeling sorry for yourself, and your foot slips and down you go. All right. Take the quotation from there: "Every failure is a step to success."

You take this failure, step on it, and hoist yourself up a bit further. Next: "Every detection of what is false directs us to what is true." This mistake is false to your ideas of what is right or wrong for you, so you look for the truth.

Then: "Every trial exhausts some tempting form of error." You have tried doing certain things, and you find they are not by any means as nice as you thought they would be before you did try.

And anyone but a fool stops doing what they get no real pleasure from, so again you are learning how to choose your means of escape from the daily grind.

And now, "Scarcely any attempt is entirely a failure." Because, if you had not tried this, it would always have had a lure for you in the back of your mind, but now you know the truth of it.

Further still: "Scarcely any theory, the result of steady thought, is altogether false." That is, the thing you thought would please you might please others, but be altogether wrong for you.

And last: "No tempting form of error is without some latent charm derived from truth." I would say that Professor Whewell is a very clever man, has studied his subject, and knows what he is talking about.

That would mean I think, that even sin or mistakes can give us some form of pleasure, even although we pay dearly afterwards for it. And going back to causes, maybe the trouble or the worry or the strain we were under, are the true cause of our mistakes.

Seems like a vicious circle, but it isn't really. This is brought on by that, that brings on something else, and it is through all these things we learn to mind our step more carefully.

A child learns to balance and stand upright by the bumps it gets. Falling means pain to it, so it tries and tries until finally it not only stands but walks.

Failure and mistakes means pain to us, so we learn to stand upright also, and walk away from temptation.

Best wishes from,
Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

But Two Coaches in Dozen Squads Confident Of Placing Their Battlers In The Finals

(By The Canadian Press.)

The melancholy men of sport, the football coaches, tucked in their ears to-day, leaned over backwards and expect to accomplish—if anything—in the Eastern campaign that starts Saturday.

The mentors fairly reeked with hope. Most of them had serious doubts. Here is what they said:

Big Four.

Lou Hayman, Toronto Argos.—"Physically the team is the same as last year when we won the Canadian title, but mentally the boys show signs of having tasted the fruits of success. The necessary spirit is lacking."

Ross Trimble, Ottawa Roughriders.—"The Big Four race looks like a fight between Argos and Ottawa with Montreal and Hamilton presenting strong, young clubs who may pull a surprise and upset all the dope."

Jerry Brock, Hamilton Tigers.—"Our progress and chances hinge entirely upon the length of time required for our youngsters to find themselves in senior company. We lack weight and experience, but have any amount of enthusiasm."

Johnny MacDonald, Montreal Cubs.—"We're just building. We're short in experience, with few men who played football in Montreal before. But we've got a lot of gumption and team spirit."

Intercollegiate.

Warren Stevens, Toronto.—"We're about in the same position as we were last year in regard to manpower. With the Intercollegiate Union much better balanced then it has been for many years every game will be a difficult task."

Ted Reeve, Queen's—"I can't predict what will happen. Our team is a new one and the matter of finding a capable kicker to succeed Johnny Munro is one of our big problems."

Bill Storen, Western—"We'll be in the playoffs. We have a great backfield division this year, and if our line holds then it might be Western's year to come out on top."

Doug. Kerr, McGill—"We have a fairly strong team with a lot of power in kicking and passing. But I don't want to say anything about our chances because the competition is pretty strong."

O. R. F. U.

Hoddy Foster, Montreal Nationals—"We'll be in there fighting and have hopes of coming out on top. —We hope we have some good ball-carriers and expect to go places."

Alex. Ponton, Toronto Balmy Beach—"We have a stronger and better-balanced team all around than last year, particularly at the ends. Plungers like Manorek, Sward and Seymour give us real power on the ground."

Art Massucci, Sarnia Imperials—"I think we'll be fair, but I wouldn't say we'll be strong. Those two exhibition victories don't mean a thing. We made enough mistakes in those two games to lose fifteen others."

Bill Irwin, Peterborough Orfuns—"We are just building this season and we're hoping for the best."

CRITCHLEYS ENTERED

WORPLESDON, England—(CP).—Brig.-Gen. A. C. Critchley, Calgary-born soldier and sportsman, and his wife, Diana Fishwick, the former British golfer, will compete in the annual open scratch mixed foursomes golf tournament here October 10.

EXETER, England—(CP). — R. Wallace, fullback with Exeter Wallace, fullback with Exeter League, is dead from an abscess on the forehead. He was 26 years old.

King Edward Boys Blank Queen Mary

Queen Mary soccer team met King Edward team in a league engagement on Thursday afternoon on King Edward Park to receive a 5 to 0 count against them. The winners were in perfect mood to make their combination productive in goal getting.

Combination Good

Queen Mary team endeavored to break through the King Edward defence time and again to find full backs solid as a rock. They were backed up by an excellent half-back line that dominated the Queen Mary attack every time that they looked dangerous. Langton opened the scoring on a pass from Jamieson. A little later, Murduff registered the second counter. On an individual rush before the interval Jamieson scored a beautiful goal. Half time, King Edward 3, Queen Mary 0.

On resuming, Queen Mary boys arranged their team to consolidate their defence to offset the fast moving league leaders thereby giving them ample time to make inroads to the winner's territory to test Curtis in goal who had difficulty in clearing. After twenty minutes of play King Edward was awarded a penalty kick that Murduff converted from the spot as it rolled inside the upright. Anderson registered the fifth counter. King Edward 5, Queen Mary 0.

King Edward—W. Curtis, goal; A. Lowes and F. Lawson, full backs; D. McGregor, W. Anderson and G. Blackwell, halves; D. Pamieson, R. Reil, C. Murduff, W. Ellis and C. Palmer, forwards; subs, C. Downer and E. Close.

Queen Mary—E. Ward, goal; R. Blonden and L. McCarthy, full backs; F. Mortimer, W. Jones and M. Dumart, halves; R. Loucks, A. Lester, B. Kinmont, G. Matthews and D. Dundas, forwards; subs, J. Bond and J. Franks.

Referee—D. Buchan; linesmen—R. Leether and D. Dalliday.

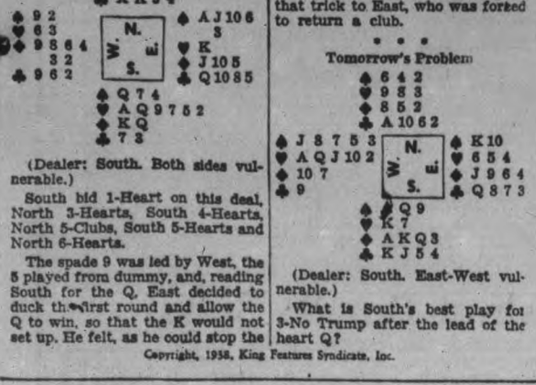
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

BIDE YOUR TIME

RUSHING AHEAD to try a dangerous finesse, which beats your contract if it fails, is not astute bridge. Much sounder considerations impel making other moves first if possible, and watching the fall of the cards. It may develop that the finesse is marked to lose, but that a squeeze or lead-throwing play will spell success. If not, you may still finesse.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South bid 1-Heart on this deal, North 3-Hearts, South 4-Hearts, North 5-Clubs, South 5-Hearts and North 6-Hearts.

The spade 9 was led by West, the 5 played from dummy, and, reading South for the Q, East decided to duck the first round and allow the Q to win, so that the K would not set up. He felt, as he could stop the club suit, that there was no danger involved.

Declarer won the first trick with the Q and played the diamond Q to the A. The heart J was led and when the K was played by East, South was relieved, as that left no guess regarding the trump suit. The remaining outstanding heart was drawn and was followed by the play of the club K, the heart 10, heart 9, heart 7, heart 5 and diamond K. East's discards, as well as the discard of the spade 2 by West, informed South that East was down to his spade A. He therefore gave that trick to East, who was forced to return a club.

What is South's best play for 3-No Trump after the lead of the heart Q?

To Seek Seats In Federal House

According to reports in Ontario provincial government circles, Arthur W. Roebuck, K.C., LEFT, and David A. Croll, K.C., RIGHT, former members of the Hepburn cabinet, who split with Premier Hepburn over the government's stand on the C.I.O. question, plan to retire from provincial politics and seek seats in the Federal House. It is reported that the two former Cabinet Ministers plan to sit through the 1939 session of the Ontario government unless a Federal election is held before that time.

Two Czech Army Classes Demobilized

PRAGUE, Oct. 7—(AP)—Immediate demobilization of two army classes was announced today by the government of dismembered Czechoslovakia.

It also ordered progressive return to civilian life of the remainder of the men called to the colors to defend the state before it was decided to submit to the German terms under French and British pressure.

The nation learned with dismay that still greater sacrifices had been demanded of it by Germany.

Terms for the occupation of a fifth Sudetenland zone were reported to the dismembered republic, already shorn of much of its richest territory by cession of four other Sudetenland zones to Germany and deprived of a trusted leader by the resignation yesterday of President Eduard Benes.

Separate Slovak State.

An internal problem, however, apparently was approaching a solution. A Slovak congress was said to have decided to organize an autonomous, federated state within the republic to attain equal status with Czechs.

The plan was said to exceed only slightly conditions already offered by the government and it was believed probable that they would be accepted. Slovakia, it was said, would have its own parliament. The plan was said also to propose a Czechoslovak Cabinet including only ministers of foreign affairs, national defence finance and justice with those portfolios equally divided between the Czechs and Slovaks.

General Jan Syrovy, Czechoslovakia's soldier-premier, yesterday indicated the government's willingness to arrange equal rank for its remaining elements.

"We shall do everything in our power to give satisfaction to the justified claims of the Slovaks and sub-Carpathian Rusians (Ruthenians)," he said. "Our state shall be based on equality of the three peoples."

Appointment of Monsignor Tisolt, leader of the Slovak autonomous party, as Minister of Slovak Affairs in the new Czechoslovak government was announced officially.

W.C.T.U. Convention Hits At Gambling

HAMILTON, Oct. 7 — (CP). — Resolutions hitting at gambling in all forms, sweepstakes, and the Liquor Control Act, were passed by the Ontario W.C.T.U. at to-day's session of the 61st annual convention in Centenary United Church. Mrs. John Wright, Brantford, was returned as president, and all other officers were also re-elected.

Another resolution approved action taken in banning a marriage ceremony at a fall fair at Leamington. Gratitude was expressed for the British Prime Minister and those associated with him in the recent crisis.

Night air mail service has just been inaugurated between Canton and Hankow, China.

Trio Wearing Glasses Never Crack Lens As Car Rolls In Fog

Brantford, Ont., Oct. 7 (CP)

C. C. WHEELER, Paris and two companions escaped unharmed from a car which burst into flames after overturning in a ditch off the Cockshutt road Wednesday night. Although all three wore eyeglasses, not a lens was shattered.

The accident occurred about four miles south of Brantford shortly before midnight. It was raining and Wheeler was driving slowly because of foggy conditions. As he rounded a turn his car skidded out of control and overturned.

Wheeler was pinned in his seat momentarily by the steering wheel, but his two companions freed him.

Revised Version Of St. John Appears

HARTFORD, Conn., October 7.—(A. P.). —Modernization and simplification of the New Testament of the Bible used by the Roman Catholic Church, now being undertaken by a group of theological scholars, was evidenced yesterday in a tentative revision of the gospel of St. John distributed among churchmen who attended the Catechetical Congress here.

The clergymen received copies of the new version of the Douaitheims New Testament, and also a revised edition o fthe Baltimore Catechism No. 2, the standard book of religious instruction for Catholic youth in the early 'teens. They were asked to offer suggestions and criticism.

While on changes in dogma have been made in the neweest version of St. John, the simplified form is marked, as, for example, by the such as "ye," "thee," "though' and Christ is before Pilate, the words "believeth." In their place have been substituted modern pronouns and the modern present tense verbs. Quotation marks have been inserted in many places.

Another notable change is the substitution of the word "wine" for "vinegar" in chapter 19, verse 29, describing the death of Christ on the Cross.

In chapter 18, verse 30, wherein Chirst is before Pilate, the words "malefactor" and "delivered" become "criminal and "handed over" respectively.

The revised version of St. John is not yet, however, official as it has not received the imprimatur of High Catholic authorities.
